FORMER TIME EXAMINER IN LAW, UNIVERSITY OF MADRAS.

"Procedure is but the machinery of law after all—the channel and means whereby law is administered and justice reached. It strangely departs from its proper office when in place of facilitating, it is permitted to obstruct and even to extinguish the legal rights and is made to operate where it ought to subserve"—Mr. Lord Denning, L.J., R. v. A.A. [1925].

"Fiat Justitia ruat cælum." Let there be justice, though the Heavens fall.

"To no man will We sell or deny or delay right or justice"—Magna Carta.

PREFACE.

THE present edition has been carefully revised and partly re-written in the light of the various decisions under the Code since the last edition in 1927. The case law has been brought up to 1st January 1930. Many important decisions which have not yet been reported any where, say for instance the recent decisions of the Madras High Court as to whether proceedings under section 144 of the Code are subject to the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court and as to the right of further cross-examination in good behaviour cases have been noted in appropriate places. The value of having the text of the Code with all amendments and alterations brought up to date cannot be overestimated. In the present edition all amendments and alterations up to date have been carefully incorporated and references are also given to the various amending Acts along with the amendments and alterations.

A large mass of general information which will be of real interest to the Bench and the Bar, see for instance the headings 'Duty of Advocate appearing for the defence' at pp. 618-619, and 'The Court of Criminal Appeal in England' at pp. 732-733, have been collected and introduced in the present edition. About 2,000 new cases have also been added and the new matter so incorporated in this edition covers about 300 pages in print. The general index has been revised and made more exhaustive by the addition of a number of new headings. The task of preparing an exhaustive and accurate list of cases cited is by no means easy and any error in citation in the body of the work is corrected in the list of cases given in the beginning of the work.

It is confidently hoped that the present edition will be as popular with the Bench and the Bar as the previous ones and will be found to be clear, concise and thoroughly exhaustive and also easy of reference, the author having always kept in mind in preparing the commentaries the exact wording of the sections of the Code.

The authorities cited herein have been verified more than once now, but in a work of this magnitude covering so extensive a field, mistakes must inevitably occur in spite of every endeavour to avoid them and for such shortcomings the indulgence of all those who have occasion to use this work is specially craved.

My sincere thanks are due to Mr. K. A. Raghunatha Iyer B.A., B.L., Advocate for his having kindly assisted me in verifying the authorities cited, in preparing the list of cases and in correcting the proofs.

S. RANGANADHAIYAR.

Although the cost of production has increased considerably, in order to put this edition within the easy reach of all, especially junior members of the Bar, the Law students, and the Subordinate Magistracy and the Police, the price of the book has not been increased and has been kept down as low as possible.

The indulgence of the Bench and the Bar is specially craved for the errors and imperfections which must inevitably creep in, in a work of this magnitude dealing with thousands of decided cases, many of which are not easily reconcilable. It is hoped that the ready appreciation which this work has enjoyed before, in the hands of the Bench and the Bar and of the students, will be extended to the present edition as well.

My sincere thanks are due to Mr. W. T. Sundararajan, B.A., B.L., High Court Vakil, who has so kindly assisted me in the preparation of this edition.

beginners. Great pains have been taken in the selection of cases; decisions which do not turn on the language of the sections of the Code, or, which merely repeat the wording of the section without any attempt to examine the same critically are ignored. As far as possible the very words used by the learned Judges in their Judgments are extracted, and to save time and unnecessary labour and also disappointment which is more important, cases which are no longer Law on account of their being overruled by later cases, or, rendered obsolete by the new amendments, are prominently given in their appropriate places. Preference is given to the latest decisions and when a case is reported in the authorised series, reference to the authorised series alone is given and no cross-references to private publications are made. This mode of citation has the great advantage of reducing the size of the volume and making it very handy. The additions and alterations newly made in the Code, are printed in italics so that the change in the Law may readily be perceived. At the beginning of the commentary to each section, the change in the law is briefly summarised and the scope and object of the important sections are explained. All the reported decisions up to the end of August, 1923, which throw any light on the interpretation of the language of the sections of the Code have been incorporated. An exhaustive Index is given at the end of the volume for ready reference

My thanks are due to Mr. W. T. Sundararajan, B.A., B.L., who has assisted me considerably in the preparation and publication of this work. * * *

I am fully conscious of the many defects and shortcomings in this work and I shall consider my labour sufficiently rewarded if the work proves useful to those for whom it is intended.

THE CODE OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE

ACT V OF 1898

An Act to consolidate and amend the law relating to Criminal Procedure.

[AS AMENDED UP TO DATE.]

THE AMENDMENTS OF 1923 AND THEREAFTER ARE PRINTED IN ITALICS.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to Criminal Procedure; it is hereby enacted as Preamble. follows:—

Preamble.—Lord Coke says "preamble is the key to open the meaning of the makers of the Act and the mischiefs it was intended 'to remedy'; although it may explain, it cannot control the enacting part which may often go beyond the preamble. It is part of the Act and may be used to explain it, 2 M.H.C.R. 232 at 234. See 55 C. 67; 9 Lah. 260. The preamble of an Act being thus a key to its understanding, it may properly be consulted in order to fix the scope or limit of a statute, 9 B. 333 at 343; 12 A. 409 at 417-18. The preamble of a Code must be understood to overlie the whole Act giving colour and controlling its provisions and by showing the intention of the Legislature supplying pro tanto the rule of interpretation of those provisions. 2 A. 74 at 90. If a section of the Act makes imperative provisions somewhat in excess of the apparent ambit of the preamble to the Act, the section must govern, 43 M. 529 (P.C.) at 538; 103 Ind. Cas. 652 (2). There can be no doubt that the preambles to statutes do not always cover in the wide and general terms in which they are necessarily couched, all the specific offences, which are to be found provided for within the enacting portions of the statute itself. It is an undoubted rule of construction that where the language of the enacting sections of a statute is clear, the terms of a preamble cannot be called in aid to restrict their operation or to cut them down. The purpose for which a preamble is framed to a statute is to indicate what in general terms was the object of the Legislature in passing the Act but it may well happen that the general terms will not indicate or cover all the mischief which in the enacting portions of the Act itself are found to be provided for, 11 A. 262 at 266; 22 B. 321 at 330-31. The preamble cannot control the enactment, 55 C. 67; 9 Lah. 260, "In construing an Act of Parliament when the intention of the Legislature is declared by a preamble, we are to give effect to that preamble to this extent, namely, that it shows what the Legislature is intending; and if the words of the preamble have a meaning which does not go beyond that preamble or which may come up to the preamble, in either case we prefer that meaning to the one showing an intention of the Legislature which would not answer the purposes of the preamble or which would go beyond them. To that extent the preamble is material"—per Lord Blackburn, in 8 A.C. at p. 338. Where the enacting part of the Statute is not exactly co-extensive with the preamble, the former, if expressed in clear and unequivocal terms, will override the latter; but if ambiguous or doubtful phraseology is used in the body of the Act, the preamble may be referred to solve the difficulty, 104 Ind. Cas. 661 following 43 M. 529 (P.C.); 45 C. 343. The preamble to an Act may be referred to in a case of ambiguity or where it is necessary to interpret the Act itself so as to give effect to its purport but it is doubtful whether the meaning of definite and unambiguous words can be strained because their natural interpretation would seem to extend the alleged scope of the Act, 50 M L J. 301=23 L.W. 233.

Consolidate and Amend.—The term 'consolidate' like the word 'Code' implies an exhaustive treatment of all matters that fall within its view, 26 A. 594 at 596. The term 'consolidation' as applied to statute law means the combination in a single measure of enactments relating to the same subject-matter, but scattered over different Acts. The object of consolidation is to collect the statutory law bearing upon a particular subject and to bring it down to date in order that it may form a useful Code applicable to the circumstances existing at the time the Consolidating Act is passed, 22 C. 788. The object of codifying a particular branch of law is that any point specifically dealt with, the law should thenceforth be ascertained by interpreting the language used in the enactment instead of as before searching in the authorities to discover what may be the law as laid down in the prior decisions. The language of the enactment must receive its natural meaning uninfluenced by any consideration derived from the previous state of the law, 23 C. 563 at 572 (P.C.). See also 23 C. 731 at 751; 28 C. 517 at 528; 20 M. 97 at 103; 1927 M.W.N. 53 at 54; 47 B. 843; 27 Bom. L R. 1023=89 Ind. Cas. 1031; 4 Lah. 367; 24 A.L.J. 945=97 Ind. Cas. 455. In a Code dealing with procedure it is the duty of the legislature to lay down in specific and clear language what the procedure is to be and not to leave it to the court and the litigant in doubt as to what it intends the procedure to be. 14 A. 226 at 229; 21 A. 391. It is a well-established principle of law that retrospective effect ought not to be given to a statute unless an intention to that effect is expressed in plain and unambiguous language, 31 C.W.N. 1007=103 Ind. Cas. 674. See also 53 M.L.J. 819 (P.C.); 1905 A.C. 369; 101 Ind. Cas. 284; 103 Ind. Cas. 662 (2). The result of consolidation is to substitute a single Code for many Acts and Regulations dealing with procedure.

Criminal Procedure.—The word 'Criminal' is used in opposition to civil as also to ecclesiastical, political, or military. It comes from the latin crimen (judgment, accusation) and means generally and simply "of or belonging to an accusation"—Blackstone. The word 'procedure' means the mode or manner of moving on, as for example in a trial from the close of a case for the prosecution to the judges summing up and applies as well to the mode in which the prosecution or the accused person is to take steps as to the mode in which the courts are to proceed in any trial or other investigation of a matter. Sir James Stephen remarked that this code is inadequately described by the name "Code of Criminal Procedure", inasmuch as it is a complete body of law in three distinct but closely related subjects—"the constitution of Criminal courts, the conduct of Criminal proceedings, and the prevention of crimes by interference beforehand." The essence of a Code is to be exhaustive on matters in respect of which it declares the law and it is not the province of a judge to disregard or to go outside the enactment according to its true construction, 29 C. 707 at 715, but where however there is no specific provision in the Code, the court is entitled and it would seem it is its duty to act according to justice, equity, and good conscience, 33 C. 927 at 931-32, 1 Lah. 339 at 341.

PART I.

PRELIMINARY.

CHAPTER I.

1. (1) This Act may be called the CODE OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE, 1898; and it shall come into force on the first day of July, 1898.

Short title, Commencement

(2) It extends to the whole of British India; but, in the absence of any specific provision to the contrary, nothing Extent. herein contained shall affect any special or local law now in force, or any special jurisdiction or power conferred, or any special form of procedure prescribed, by any other law for the time being in force, or shall apply to—

(a) the Commissioners of Police in the towns of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay, or the police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay;

(b) heads of villages in the Presidency of Fort St. George; or

(c) village police-officers in the Presidency of Bombay:

Provided that the Local Government may, if it thinks fit, by notification in the official Gazette, extend any of the provisions of this Code, with any necessary modifications, to such excepted persons.

British India—The expression "British India" is not defined in the Code, although it is frequently referred to in the Code. There are several such terms in the Code and these are defined in the General Clauses Act X of 1897. S. 3 (7) of that Act defines British India. It means "all territories and places within Her Majesty's dominions which are for the time being governed by Her Majesty through the Governor General of India or through any Governor or other Officer subordinate to the Governor-General of India." S. 15, I.P.C. defines British India thus. "British India denotes the territories which are or may become vested in Her Majesty by Statute 21 & 22 Victoria, Chapter 106 entitled an Act for the better Government of India." The Indian Legislature has given the words "British India" a much more extended meaning than at first sight they would appear to indicate. 9 B. 244 at 249. It excludes the territories of Native Princes and States in alliance with His Majesty inasmuch as the relation between the Crown and the Native Princes and States was and is, a political relation and the territories of such Princes and States are not part of British Dominions although from a political point of view, they may be subordinate to the British Crown as the paramount power, 1888 P.R. 499. So also lands assigned for the purpose of establishing a civil station in a Native State as it is not ceded with full Sovereignty to British Government, 14 Bom. L.R. 876 at 881. The Civil Military station, Bangalore, 12 M. 39, the British Cantonment of Secunderabad, 21 C. 177, the civil station of Wardhan, 14 Bom. L.R. 876, are no part of British India. So also Rajkot, 10 B. 186. The province of Kathiawar is no part of British India, 33 C. 219; 8 Bom. L.R. 129. So also Tributary Mahals, 29 C. 400. The island of Pem is part of British India, 10 B. 238. So also British Burma, 13 C. 221 at 223, but not Singapore (see Straits Settlement Act 1886, sec. 1). Any newly acquired territory is undoubtedly part of British India, 1 Boulnois, 161. As the Code extends to the whole of British India, it applies to the Scheduled Districts, unless by notification under S. 3 of Act XIV of 1874 it has been specially excluded. The Code is in force in the Scheduled Districts of Ganjam and Vizagapatam, in the Laccadive Islands, 13 M. 353, in the Andaman and Nicobar Islands, in the Sonthal Parganas, in British Baluchistan, and in Upper Burma including Shan States, but is no longer in force in the Garo, the Khasi, Jaintia, the Naga and Lusai Hills.

The Code regulates all proceedings of Criminal Courts in British India unless otherwise expressly provided. 1 B.L.R. (Or. Cr.) 1; 7 B.H.C.R. 89; 16 C. 238. The Code is also in force in places outside British India. It applies to the Hyderabad Assigned Districts, the Civil and Military Station of Bangalore, 12 M. 39, the Cantonments of Secunderabad and Quetta, and the lands occupied by certain railways passing through Native States, 23 C. 20 (P.C.); it also applies to the Persian Gulf, Zanzibar (now treated as a District in Bombay) and Muscat (Original Criminal Jurisdiction alone vests in the Bombay High Court), 24 B. 474.

Transfer of territory which formed part of British India to a Native State will not deprive British Courts of jurisdiction to hear pending cases, 33 A. 578; 34 A. 118.

It extends to the whole of British India—The Code applies to all trials held in British India subject to a saving of special or local law or any special form of procedure prescribed. For example the procedure for the trial of an offence committed on the high seas must be in accordance with the local law even though the offence charged and punishable is one under English law, 1 B.L.R. (Or. Cr.) 1; 7 B.H.C.R. (Cr. Ca.) 89; 25 B. 635, followed in 53 M.L.J. 101=38 M.L.T. 361=28 Cr. L.J. 543 (2)=102 Ind. Cas. 351 (2); similarly the trial of a seaman for an offence committed on board a British Ship on the high seas must be conducted under the Code, 21 C. 782. See also 16 C. 238.

In the absence of any specific provision to the contrary nothing herein contained shall affect special or local law.—The Code is in force in the Santhal Pergunnahs, S. 2 of Act XXXVII of 1855 vests the administration of criminal justice in that territory in an officer appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal and all sentences in Criminal Cases passed by him under S. 4 (1) of the above Act shall be final. On a revision to the High Court against the sentence passed under the Act, the High Court held that it had no revisional jurisdiction under the Code, 12 C. 536.

Special or Local Law.—A 'Special law' is a law applicable to a particular subject S. 41, I.P.C.; a 'Local law' is a law applicable to a particular part of British India S. 42, I.P.C. The expression "special law" has reference to statutory enactments and not to a local or family law. The Coroners Act IV of 1871, which is a special enactment, as this section provides remains unaffected, 31 C. 1 at 6. The phrase covers laws such as the Opium Act or the Gambling Act and not a vast system like the English common law, 4 Bur. L.J. 147. The law for suppression of outrages in Malabar, Act XX of 1859 is a local law. But proceedings held by a magistrate under the Calcutta Municipal Act, in which the question whether certain sheds put up were new or old and were liable to be demolished are not governed by the provisions of the Code 54 C 532 where 30 C.W.N. 593; 43 C.L.J. 231 and 9 C.W.N. 18 are followed.

Special Jurisdiction—Under Madras Act XXIV of 1839, S. 9, the Agents to the Governor in Vizagapatam and Ganjam have special jurisdiction within the limits of the Agency tracts in respect of the administration of Criminal justice and in the exercise of this jurisdiction they are to be guided by such rules as the Government of Madras may prescribe. This enactment created a special jurisdiction and a special procedure, 15 M. 121 at 122. See 23 M.L.J. 670=12 M.L.T. 601. See Act I of 1878, (Cattle-trespass), Ss. 20 to 23, 23 C. 300; 34 C. 926 and Indian Army Act VIII of 1911.

Special Power.—For example (1) the power of the High Courts in India as Courts of Record to punish for contempts, 10 C. 109 (P.C.); 33 C. 927; 33 B. 240; 8 B. 380; 26 M. 404; 24 M. 523 at 549; 45 A. 711; 28 Cr. L.J. 727=103 Ind. Cas. 775; 6 Lah. 528; (2) the power of the Governor-General to make rules regulating Indian Marine Courts in the exercise of their ordinary original jurisdiction under Act XIV of 1887, S. 70; (3) the power of High Court to transfer criminal cases under S. 29 of the Letters Patent, 6 M. 32; (4) power of superintendence under S. 107 of the Government of India Act.

Special Form of Procedure.—See for example the procedure prescribed by the Indian Articles of War, Act V of 1869, for trial of military offences or by the Criminal Law Amendment Act XIV of 1908 for the speedy trial of certain classes of offences under the Indian Penal Code and under the Explosive substances Act.

Police and Commissioners of Police.—The Code does not apply unless it has been specially extended to the police or to the Commissioners of police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay. See Ss. 83, 85 and 86, infra as to Commissioners of Police. But by various Acts, the Code has been extended to the Calcutta and Bombay police, 31 C. 557; the Code applies to the police in Madras but not to the Commissioner of police in the town of Madras. This section bars the application of the Code to the police in the Presidency towns, 5 Pat. 171.

Sections 42, 44, 54, 56, 69, 83 to 86, 127, 202 and Column 3 of Sch. II relating to arrests by the police with or without warrant under the Penal Code and other Laws, are made applicable to the police of Calcutta and Bombay, 15 C. 595 ; 21 B. 455.

Heads of Villages in Madras.—This section says inter alia that nothing contained in the Code shall apply to Heads of villages in the Presidency of Fort St. George which means that in their official capacity as Village Headmen, in proceedings as Village Magistrates, they are not governed by the Code. The conduct of proceedings in Village Courts should be "untrammelled by any special procedure, the weight of their authority being virtually dependent upon the fact that they sit coram populo and that their verdicts are supported by the common knowledge of the villagers." It was certainly never intended that the procedure of a Village Magistrate should be open to such criticism as would be appropriate in the case of higher courts, 53 M.L.J. 516 at 527=25 L.W. 555=39 M.L.T. 450 at 452 citing G.O. No. 283 (Jud.) dated 25-2-1907. This has nothing to do with their coming forward in any Criminal cases as complainants, 19 L.W. 30=(1924) M.W.N. 145=25 Cr. L.J. 221=76 Ind. Cas. 633. Under Regulation XI of 1816, Ss. 10 to 14 and Regulation IV of 1821, S. 6, Heads of villages are empowered to try cases of trivial nature, such as abusive language and inconsiderate assaults or affrays and petty thefts not attended with aggravating circumstances, and not committed by persons of notoriously bad character where the value of the property stolen does not exceed one rupee. The Code does not govern the village headman, Weir II, 1. But under S. 6 of Regulation XI of 1816, he has authority on a verbal examination either to dismiss the parties or if the offence is proved and deserves to be punished, to confine the accused in the village choultry for a period not exceeding 12 hours or if the accused belongs to any of the lower castes on whom it may not be degrading to be put in stocks, then that punishment for a period not exceeding 6 hours may be inflicted. The provisions of Ss. 480 and 482 infra do not apply to village headman, 15 M. 131 and the provisions of S. 528 are applicable to proceedings under the Regulations above referred to.

Village Police Officers in Bombay:—The Code does not apply to these officers, 19 B. 612. They are governed by Bombay Village Police Act, VIII of 1867 and Bombay Regulation XII of 1827.

2. Repealed by Act X of 1914 (The Repealing and Amending Act).

3. (1) In every enactment passed before this Code comes into force, in which reference is made to, or to any chapter or section of, the Code of Criminal Procedure, Act XXV of 1861 or Act X of 1872, or Act X of 1882, or to any other enactment hereby repealed, such reference shall, so far as may be practicable, be taken to be made to this Code or to its corresponding chapter or section:

References to Code of Criminal Procedure and other repealed enactments.

(2) In every enactment passed before this Code comes into force the expressions "Officer exercising (or 'having') the powers (or 'the full powers') of a Magistrate," "Subordinate Magistrate, first class," and "Subordinate Magistrate, second class," shall respectively be deemed to mean "Magistrate of the first class," "Magistrate of the second class" and "Magistrate of the third class," the expression "Magistrate of a division of, a district " shall be deemed to mean " Sub-divisional Magistrate," the expression " Magistrate of the district " shall be deemed to mean " District Magistrate," the expression " Magistrate of Police" shall be deemed to mean " Presidency Magistrate," and the expression " Joint Sessions Judge " shall mean " Additional Sessions Judge."

Act XXV of 1861 was the first Criminal Procedure Code which came into force on the 1st January 1862. Act X of 1872 was the second Code of Criminal Procedure but it was not applicable to the chartered High Courts and to Presidency Magistrates. To regulate the procedure of the High Court in the exercise of its ordinary Original Criminal Jurisdiction and that of the Presidency Magistrates Acts X of 1875 and IV of 1877 were passed. It was thought expedient to consolidate all the three Acts and to have a uniform law and so the third Criminal Procedure Code Act X of 1882 was enacted and it came into force on the 1st January 1882. After the Code 1882 no less than 16 amending Acts were passed from time to time and consequently it was thought expedient to consolidate and amend the law in the light of the interpretation of the code by the various High Courts and as a result, the present Code Act V of 1898 was passed which came into force on the 1st July 1898. This section enacts that all references to the Codes of 1861, 1872, and 1882 shall, so far as may be practicable, be taken to be made to this Code or to its corresponding chapter or section.

The effect of an interpretation clause is to give the meaning assigned by it to a word in all places in the Act in which the word occurs and to prevent a different meaning attached to it by any other Act of the Legislature being read into it, 12 C. 430; 30 C. 910; 32 C. 379; 40 C. 360; when the terms of an enactment admit of but one meaning, a Court is not at liberty to speculate on the intention of the Legislature and to construe them in accordance with its own notion of the subject of such enactment, 7 C. 127.

So far as may be practicable.—These words appear to limit the repeal to cases in which the provision is necessarily inconsistent with the provisions of another Act, 12 M. 94 (F.B.) at 97; see 25 C. 333.

Magistrate of Police.—This expression in S. 1 of Act XIII of 1859 (Workmen's Breach of Contract) means Presidency Magistrate, see 25 C. 637.

4. (1) In this Code the following words and expressions have the following meanings, unless a different intention appears from the subject or context :—
Definitions.

Definitions.—This section is an interpretation clause. Its legitimate function is to declare that certain words and expressions used in the Code shall wherever permissible not only have the meaning generally attached to them but such meaning as is assigned by the interpretation clause. It is not intended to annex to such words every incident which may seem to be attached to them by another Act, 91 Ind. Cas. 99. There is nothing more clear than that with respect to the Criminal Law, the construction is always to be strict..... We are not in any way to alter or construe differently the rules of Criminal Law in consequence of the supposed justice of a particular case. The rule is that such law is to be strictly construed, 7 M.I.A. 72, see also 50 B. 34; 5 Ran. 244; 8 Lah. 320; 25 A.L.J. 661 and 515; 27 Cr. L.J. 888=96 Ind. Cas. 152. "We cannot aid the Legislature's defective meaning of an Act, we cannot add and mend and by construction make up deficiencies which are left there," 6 Moore P.C. 9. "If the precise words used are plain and unambiguous be pressed into a constructive limitation upon the exercise of the express powers under the Act, 42 B. 462 (P.C.). Headings are not to be taken into consideration if the language is clear, 48 M. 395.

Marginal Notes.—Marginal notes cannot be referred to for construing the Act, 25 A. 353 at 406 (P.C.); 47 A. 637; 21 A. 391; 25 C. 858; 20 C. 609; 26 L.W. 890; 3 Luck. 244. Though the marginal notes are not part of the sections there is no reason why they should not be consistent with the sections themselves, 52 C. 463. But it is permissible to refer to marginal notes to a section to explain the ambiguity in the section, 27 Cr. L.J. 1233=98 Ind. Cas. 47; relying on, 4 A. 387; 20 C. 609 at 628; 21 C. 732 at 758, see also 31 I.A. 132=8 C.W.N. 699; 96 Ind. Cas. 93. Marginal notes cannot be looked into to understand the scope of the section, 29 Bom. L.R. 418; 28 Cr. L.J. 340=100 Ind. Cas. 820. The question whether the marginal notes can be referred to for an exposition of the meaning of the section depends on whether the note has been inserted by or under the authority of the Legislature, 51 A. 408 following L.R. 3 C.P. 511 at 519; 3 Luck. 244.

Illustrations.—Illustrations to the sections do not strictly form part of the Act, 1 A. 34 at 36 (F.B.). They are not to be construed as limiting the right given by the section, 28 M. 57 at 61. They furnish some indication as to the intention of the legislature, 15 B. 491 at 496; 48 C. 388. Ordinarily illustrations cannot control the general words of the section, 30 Bom. L.R. 315 at 318. In 43 I.A. 256, the Privy Council held that illustrations are integral part of the section and that they should therefore be accepted if they can be done as being of relevance and value in construing the Act and should be rejected as repugnant to the section only as a last resort of construction. Illustrations to sections are helpful in the working and application of the Act and it is for the Court to accept them as being both relevant and valuable in construing the section. They should not be rejected because they do not square with the idea derived from another system of jurisprudence as to the law with which the other section deals, ibid at 263. See also 21 Bom. L.R. 553 (P.C.) to the same effect. The illustrations cannot control the wide words of the section, 29 Cr. L.J. 645=109 Ind. Cas. 481. When the Court has to interpret the provisions of an enactment which comprises both the substantive provision and an illustration of the same, the Court is not justified in rejecting the illustration as a guide in the interpretation of the substantive provision. Illustrations unlike marginal notes are part and parcel of the enactment. They do not stand on the same footing as marginal notes which may not be the notes enacted by the Legislature and they cannot be locked into in construing the enactment; on the other hand illustrations are part and parcel of the enactment, 3 Luck. 244. It is the duty of the Court to accept, if that can be done illustrations given under the section as being of value in construing the text and it would require a special case to warrant their rejection on the ground of repugnance, 55 C. 154.

Proviso.—A proviso to a section of an enactment cannot extend the operative effect or the substantive enactment, 53 C. 482.

Schedule.—"A schedule to an Act is as much part of the Act as the sections by which it is preceded and in the absence of special provisions can only be altered in like manner," Illbert, Leg. Methods and Forms, pp. 267, 268.

Proceedings of the Legislature.—Proceedings of the Legislative Council cannot be referred to, to interpret the language of a section, 50 A. 343. Proceedings of the Legislature in passing a statute are excluded from consideration on the judicial construction of Statutes, 22 C. 789 (P.C.) and 1017 (F.B.); 28 C. 17; 53 C. 929; 31 C. 628; 18 B. 133; 14 A. 145. A Court is not authorized to look into the proceedings of the Legislature to see what took place during the passing of a bill which became law or what was the reason which the Legislature had in mind in enacting a particular clause for the purpose of interpreting a statute, 53 C. 929 relying on 22 C. 789 (P.C.), see also 104 Ind. Cas. 661 following 43 M. 550 (P.C.); 69 Ind. Cas. 748. So also the statement of objects and reasons attached to a bill or to the report of a select committee cannot be looked into, 31 C. 623 ; 9 Lah. 260 So also administrative despatches accompanying the proposed amendment of a statute cannot be looked into in construing an Act, 29 Bom. L.R. 498.

Where there is an inconsistency between a general Act and a special Act the provisions of the latter must override the former, 52 M. L. J. 474=101 Ind. Cas 396.

Unless a different intention appears from the subject or context.—The concluding paragraph of this section says that all words and expressions used in the Code and defined in the I.P.C., but not in the previous part of this section should be deemed to have the meaning attributed to them by the I.P.C., notwithstanding that the concluding paragraph of this section is separated by a full stop from the part of the section which contains these qualifying words, it is difficult to believe that the framers of the Code intended that paragraph was not to be taken subject to these qualifying words in the beginning, 20 M. 470 (F.B.) at 475.

Includes—The word is intended to be enumerative and not exhaustive. When it is intended to exhaust the signification of the word interpreted, the word 'mean' is used, 2 M. 5 at 7. The use of the word 'includes' suggests that persons included in the expression are persons over and above those to whom the word in its ordinary significance applied and who might but for the explanation have escaped out of the category, 1901 A.W.N. 10 ; 22 B. 235 ; 4 C. 433 (F.B.) at 493, 23 A.L.J. 545 at 552.

(a) "Advocate General" includes also a Government Advocate, or, where there is no Advocate General or Government Advocate, such officer as the Local Government may, from time to time, appoint in this behalf :

Advocate General.—The Advocate General is the chief law officer of Government whose duty it is to exhibit informations, S. 194 ; to enter nolle prosequi, S. 333. See 25 Cr. L.J. 317. It is undesirable that he should appear at the Criminal Sessions of the High Court either for the crown or for the complainant. The Advocate General is by law empowered to enter a nolle prosequi under S. 333 of the Code in any case if he thinks fit to do so. This is a function to be performed by him qua Advocate General without being induced thereto by the complainant or by the accused. He cannot be expected to discharge it in an impartial manner if he gets himself enlisted on one side beforehand. Again, having regard to the judicial function which the law assigns him when appealed to, to certify that the Judge at the Sessions has gone wrong on certain points of law he should be prohibited altogether from taking part in the trial as Counsel for the prosecution, 10 M.L.J. 341 (Jour.).

(b) "Bailable offence" means an offence shown as bailable in the second schedule, or which is made bailable by any other law for the time being in force ; and "non-bailable offence" means any other offence ;

Bail literally means either to carry or take away, deliver or give. In modern legal sense it means to deliver on trust on certain conditions. When it is said a man is let on bail, we mean he is released from the custody of the officers of law to the custody of private persons who as sureties are bound to produce him whenever called upon. The Code divides offences into two classes bailable and non bailable. See 14 A. 45 at 47 as to the necessity for granting bail. See chapter XXXIX infra, ss. 496 to 502 dealing with bail.

"Charge." (c) "charge" includes any head of charge when the charge contains more heads than one :

The word 'charge' is used in the Code both as indicating the whole series of counts or heads of charge and also as indicating a specific offence. In S. 237 infra, it is used in the former sense, 8 B. 200. A charge is a precise formulation of the specific accusation made against a person who is entitled to know its nature at the earliest stage, 28 C. 434 at 437; 26 C. 786; 5 B.H.C.R. (Cr. Ca.) 100.

(d) Repealed by Act XI of 1923, S. 3 and Sch. II.

(e) "Clerk of the Crown" includes any officer specially appointed by the Chief Justice to discharge the functions given by this Code to the Clerk of the Crown :

Clerk of the Crown—For functions of the Clerk of the Crown, See Ss. 211, 216, 218, 226, 313, 314 and 539 infra.

(f) "cognizable offence" means an offence for, and "cognizable case" means a case in, which a police-officer, with-"Cognizable offence," in or without the presidency-towns, may, in accord-
 "Cognizable case." ance with the second schedule, or under any law, for the time being in force, arrest without warrant :

The Code divides offences into cognizable and non-cognizable but when it deals with procedure it speaks not of offences but of warrant cases and summons cases, 41 M. 727 at 730. The words 'a police officer may arrest' do not mean every or any police officer, and whenever the law provides that in a particular offence a police officer of a particular rank may arrest without a warrant then the offence is a cognizable one, 27 Cr L.J. 503=93 Ind. Cas. 967 following 27 C. 144 at 150. The power to arrest without a warrant according to the definition herein given is an absolute power of arrest referable to a power of arrest in respect of and on account of the offence alleged but the power to arrest say under S. 24 of the Opium Act XIII of 1857 is not an absolute power but only conditional upon the accused not giving the required security. That power is a different thing and the case is not cognizable but non-cognizable, 24 C. 691 at 694 See also 50 B 344

"Commissioner of Police." (g) "Commissioner of Police" includes a Deputy Commissioner of Police :

(h) "Complaint" means the allegation made orally or in writing to a Magistrate, with a view to his taking action
 "Complaint." under this Code, that some person, whether known or unknown, has committed an offence, but it does not include the report of a police-officer.

Complaint.—Ordinarily a complaint implies at least three persons, a person complaining, a person against whom a complaint is made and a third person to whom the complaint is made. The implication is contained in the definition in the Code, 53 C. 350. The essence of a complaint is the statement of facts relied on as constituting the offence charged. It is sufficient if the true facts are mentioned by the complainant in his own language and that it is for the Magistrate to apply the law to those facts even in a case where a wrong section of the I.P.C. is mentioned in the complaint. That would not render the complaint in any way invalid or illegal, 9 Lah 678 where 6 Lah. 375 is referred to. A complaint ought to contain particulars of the offence with which a man is charged. Though in the Indian Procedure, there is no such thing as a regular indictment as in the English Procedure, yet a complaint ought to contain sufficient particulars as to the offence with which a man is charged. A complaint should always contain sufficient materials to enable the trying court to proceed to trial without going through a lot of records for the purpose of finding whether certain statements made are true or false, (1925) M.W.N. 470. As a general rule any person whatever can institute a complaint of an offence other than certain offences clearly specified in the Code, such as defamation, etc., 46 M. 88; 13 B. 600; 18 A. 465; 11 C.W.N. 170; 15 Cr. L.J. 369=23 Ind. Cas. 737; 41 C. 1013; 23 Cr. L.J. 117, 21 B. 636; 10 Cr. L.J. 18; 14 Cr. L.J. 409. It is an elementary principle that a criminal complaint can be brought by anybody, 30 Cr. L.J. 52=113 Ind. Cas. 63. Complaint is something anterior to and distinct from the examination on oath of a complainant by a Magistrate under S 200 infra, and such examination of the complainant cannot be regarded as part of the complaint for the purposes of S 190 infra, (1921) M.W.N. 514=13 L.W. 695. But for the purpose of ascertaining the real nature of the complaint in any particular case the sworn statement may be read with the complaint, 45 M.L.J. 543=(1323) M.W.N. 876=24 Cr. L.J. 837=74 Ind. Cas. 449. There is nothing in the Code to suggest that a complainant must have personal knowledge of the offence complained of, 21 C.W.N. 357=21 Cr. L.J. 435=61 Ind. Cas. 839; 21 Cr. L.J. 346=55 Ind. Cas. 652. A complaint which is otherwise proper cannot be treated as illegal because the complainant has no personal knowledge of the facts alleged in it nor is the naming of the accused imperative according to the definition herein given, 7 Pat. 561. A complaint can be made by a person who knows the commission of an offence but he need not necessarily be the injured party, 33 C.W.N. 576. The definition does not contain any limitation such as that the person lodging the complaint must have personal knowledge of the facts. If a complainant is not speaking from personal knowledge a Magistrate taking cognizance would exercise a wise discretion in making an inquiry under S 202 infra but he is not compelled to do so. The object of the examination under S 200 infra is that the facts constituting the offence may be well ascertained when in a written complaint they are not given, 25 C.W.N. 357=22 Cr. L.J. 455=61 Ind. Cas. 839. This clause does not prescribe that a complaint should be made to the Magistrate in person and that it may not be posted to him or that if it is posted it is not a complaint at all. If a complainant is not present to give a sworn statement under S. 200 infra the Magistrate may call upon him to appear before him for that purpose on a date to be fixed by him. For the purpose of vesting the Magistrate with jurisdiction to take cognizance on a complaint made to him, it is not essential that such complaint should be presented to him personally, 30 Cr. L.J. 732=117 Ind. Cas. 147. Letter from a Union Chairman to a Magistrate requesting him to take action against a person who, while drunk had used insulting language to him, was held to be a complaint, 17 C.W.N. 448. So also (1) a Yadast sent by a Revenue Officer to a Magistrate charging a person with disobedience of a summons issued by him, 11 M. 443 (2) a petition to a Magistrate in the course of a police inquiry questioning its propriety and praying for action being taken against persons who were alleged to have committed an offence, 33 C. 1; (3) the sending of records by an officer trying a rent suit to the Collector who was also a District Magistrate, for starting proceedings under S. 193, I.P.C.; against the plaintiff in the rent suit, 26 A. 514; (4) report by a District Judge against certain insolvents asking the Magistrate to take action for an offence under S. 421, I.P.C., 18 A L.J. 50. (5) A petition relating to a murder to the District Magistrate, under inquiry by the police impugning the police enquiry and to call for a charge sheet or to allow the petitioner an opportunity to prove the case by witnesses is a complaint within this section, 7 Pat 561. (6) The report of a police officer in a non cognizable offence containing allegations in writing to the Magistrate to take action under the Code will amount to a complaint, 49 M. 525 (F.B.); 51 B. 458; 23 Cr. L.J. 821=104 Ind. Cas. 437; 27 Cr. L.J. 405=93 Ind. Cas. 69; 9 Lah. 289. (7) The report of an excise officer is a complaint within the definition, 54 C. 374, but the following are held to be no complaints:—(1) a letter from a Civil Court Amin to the police containing allegations charging one of having committed an offence, 1804 A W N. 265=1 Cr. L.J. 1045; (2) a report from a peon who was obstructed in the execution of a warrant under the Cess Act stating what took place but contained no express or implied request to the Magistrate to take action, 17 C.W.N. 583; (3) a petition to the Collector as Agent of the Court of Wards against one of his subordinates praying for redress of grievances, 30 C. 415; (4) a petition presented to a Magistrate alleging that an offence had been committed but the petitioner did not desire to prosecute the offender, 6 C.W.N. 926; 26 M. 640; (5) a petition containing allegations against a person with a request for an order on the police to warn the wrong-doer, 15 C.W.N. 1031; (6) an order under S. 196 infra sanctioning a prosecution, 35 C. 141 at 150; (7) a letter by an Assistant Collector to the District Magistrate in which the former did not ask any action to be taken according to law but only solicited orders, 40 A. 641; (8) an application to take action under S. 107 infra is not a complaint where there is merely an allegation that a breach of the peace is likely and such an application cannot be dismissed under S. 203, infra, 25 Cr. L.J. 89=76 Ind. Cas. 25; 25 Cr. L.J. 1149; 29 Cr. L.J. 866=111 Ind. Cas. 430. (9) An endorsement by a Police Superintendent for necessary action on a report made by a Police Inspector alleging a certain person committed an offence, 27 Cr. L.J. 899 (2)=96 Ind. Cas. 211 (2). Proceedings under S. 113 of the Railways Act against a person before a Magistrate to recover excess charges and fares are not a prosecution for a Criminal offence as Magistrate can only direct the passenger to pay the fare and excess charges and if he fails to pay, then to proceed to recover the same as if it were a fine, but he has no power to impose a fine or award imprisonment in default of payment, 6 Ran. 619. A Criminal Court is not bound by all the statements in a complaint. Its duty is to find out the truth in the midst of conflicting evidence and for a conviction it is not necessary to find that the complainant's case exactly as is stated by him was proved, 14 Bom. L.R. 135=13 Cr. L.J. 300=14 Ind. Cas. 704.

Oral Complaint.—A complaint need not be in writing but may be oral, 1 Ran. 549 and it need not quote any section of the I.P.C., but only must contain a statement of the facts relied on as constituting the offence and it is for the Magistrate to determine on the facts what offence has been prima facie made out, 6 Lah. 375; 9 Lah. 678. Where the name of a person against whom sanction was accorded under S. 196 infra appeared in the sanction order but did not find a place in the written complaint filed, it was held that a subsequent application to the trying Magistrate for the issue of process against the person named in the sanction order does not amount to an oral complaint, because such an application for issue of process presupposes a valid complaint, 15 C.W.N. 98. See also 20 C. 431 and 10 C.W.N. 1029; 30 C. 910 (F.E.).

With a view to his taking action under the Code.—One of the tests to decide whether an allegation amounts to a complaint is, whether it was made to the Magistrate with a view to his taking action, 27 M. 127; 19 B. 51 at 62. A complaint is not intended to give information to the accused. A summons or warrant issued to secure the attendance of the accused need not set out all the facts on which he is to be charged and if not in them, why in the complaint? 32 M. 3 at 11. The Magistrate must be empowered under S. 190 (i) (a) infra to take cognizance of offences; the definition of offence has now been extended by Cl. (1) (c) of this section to cover acts on which proceedings under S. 20 of the Cattle-trespass Act I of 1871 may be taken. The rulings in 9 M. 102 and 374 are no longer law; the examination of a complainant by a Magistrate after taking cognizance of the offence under S. 200 infra has been held not to form part of the complaint, 13 L.W. 695= (1921) M.W.N. 514. But for the purpose of ascertaining the real nature of the complaint in any particular case, the sworn statement may be read with the complaint, 45 M.L.J. 543, (1923) M.W.N. 876=24 Cr. L.J. 837=74 Ind. Cas. 943. But various petitions to Magistrates such as applications to start security proceedings under Chapter VIII, petitions to initiate proceedings under Chapter XII, petition under S. 488 claiming maintenance, do not fall within the definition. See 16 M. 234; 6 M.L.T. 251; 11 M. 199; 6 C.W.N. 163; 27 C. 662. The mere filing of a complaint invoking jurisdiction of a Magistrate does not invest him with jurisdiction if he is otherwise incompetent to try the offence and it is open to a complainant to object to the jurisdiction even in revision stage, 45 M. 843. It is not necessary that in a complaint the names of all the accused persons should be mentioned to make it a valid complaint, 13 Cr. L.J. 883=15 Ind. Cas. 1004.

Does not include the Report of a Police Officer.—The report referred to here does not refer to reports made under Chapter XIV only, but also includes any report by a police-officer or any written or verbal information by him as such, 1 Cr.L.J. 193; written information under S. 154 received with a police report cannot be treated as a complaint given by informant, 43 C. 1152, unless informant impugns the propriety of the police-report sent to the Magistrate referring the case and claims a Magisterial inquiry, 20 Cr. L. J. 389. The report herein referred to not to be a complaint, must be some statement made by the police-officer in connection with or at least under the colour of the duty of the maker as a police officer, 32 M. 3 at 10. Thus the complaint of a Prosecuting Inspector in a non-cognizable offence, say, under S. 124 A, I.P.C., cannot be regarded as a report of a police-officer, as it is no part of the duty of a Prosecuting Inspector to make reports of such an offence, 32 M. 3 at 10. It was held in 35 C. 141, that the application of a police officer for warrants in respect of an offence under S. 124 A, I.P.C., coupled with his oral allegations not made on oath or reduced to writing amounted to a complaint. A complaint is nonetheless a complaint because it was filed by a police officer, 32 M. 3 at 10, 25 B. 150 and 22 B. 112. The Code does not prohibit a police officer from presenting a complaint in a non-cognizable case, 25 Cr. L. J. 1361=82 Ind. Cas. 753. See 47 M. 525 (F.B.) where it was held that a Magistrate may take cognizance of an offence upon a report in writing of facts which constitute such offence, made by any police officer in non-cognizable offences. Such report can be treated as a complaint by a public servant acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duties and S. 200 (a) provides that he need not be examined on oath by the Magistrate before taking cognizance of the offence. A police report in a non-cognizable offence if it contains an allegation to a Magistrate to take action under the Code against some person for having committed an offence would amount to a complaint under this clause, 51 B. 452, 49 M. 525 (F.B.); 9 Lab. 285. See also 29 Cr. L. J. 321=103 Ind. Cas. 437; 25 Cr. L. J. 1361=82 Ind. Cas. 753, 27 Cr. L. J. 405=93 Ind. Cas. 65, but the endorsement by a Superintendent of Police for necessary action on a report made by an Inspector of Police alleging that a certain person had committed an offence is no complaint, 27 Cr. L. J. 879=66 Ind. Cas. 211. A person cannot delegate to another the right to file a complaint. A District Magistrate cannot authorize the Public Prosecutor to file a complaint on his behalf, 16 Cr. L. J. 251; 31 B. 642 at 644. It is a principle of general application that criminal proceedings instituted by a private complainant abate on such person's death, 46 M. 88.

(i) "European British subject" means—

(i) any subject of His Majesty of European descent in the male line born, naturalised or domiciled in the British Islands or any Colony, or

(ii) any subject of His Majesty who is the child or grandchild of any such person by legitimate descent :

The definition, which is entirely new, was added by Act XII of 1923 Racial Distinctions. It is restricted to persons of European descent, and Colonials are also included in the definition. But persons of Indian descent have no longer any privilege by reason of their being born or domiciled in the British Islands. A person who claims the special privilege must prove (1) that he is a subject of his Majesty, (2) that he is of European descent answering the description herein given, (3) that he is a legitimate child or grandchild of such person.

Naturalised.—See 33 and 34 Vict. C. 14, S. 7, as amended by 33 and 34 Vict., C. 104 and also the Indian Naturalization Act XXX of 1852.

Domiciled.—Two things are essential to fix domicile. One is residence and the next is an intention to make it a permanent residence.

It is clear from the definition that certain rights and privileges which belong to the class are conferred upon qua such class irrespective of considerations of change of status owing to marriage. It will not be contended that a Native British Indian woman if she marries a European British subject would come under the definition although she may thereby be said to acquire his domicile nor will it be contended that a European British subject who marries a Native British Indian husband thereby ceases to be a European British subject as defined in the Code. It cannot be contended that to come within the definition it is necessary not only the person should be a European British subject by birth but should be domiciled in the British Islands or any colony. The definition cannot so be restricted and if so restricted it would exclude from its operation all European British subjects who are domiciled in British India unless British India can be said to come within the definition of a colony. Such could not have been the intention of the Legislature. The use of a ' , ' after the word born in the definition indicates that the words naturalised or domiciled which follow it are the word disjunctive of and not conjunctive with what precedes and a European British subject does not cease to be such by his or her domicile in a native state in India, 53 B. 149 at 158. Apparently under the definition the status of a European British subject can, in certain cases, be acquired by domicile in the British Islands or any colony. The definition does not contemplate the loss of the status of a European British subject by change of domicile whether by marriage or otherwise. A European British subject marrying an Indian wife the latter would acquire the domicile of her husband but it would be ridiculous to suppose that she would fall within the definition of a European British subject and obviously this is so because the wife would not be a European British subject. And even a clearer case is that a European British subject born in England and coming out to India, who by choice acquires an Indian domicile as he is perfectly competent to do by reason of his change of domicile, he undoubtedly would not lose his right as a European British subject under the Code. The definition does not contemplate a change of domicile as involving a loss of status. The section does not say so and we cannot read in the section what is not there. We must be guided by the definition as framed and no amendment was made as regards the status of a married woman and in the absence of authority to the contrary, it must be assumed that it was not the intention of the Legislature that a woman who was an European British subject by birth should lose that status for the purposes of the Code by reason of her marriage with a non-British subject, 53 B. 149 at 161-62.

As to the special provisions relating to trial of European British subjects, see the new Chapters XXXIII and XLIV and Ss. 29A and 34A infra.

(j) "High Court" means, in reference to proceedings against European British subjects or persons jointly charged with European British subjects, the High Courts of Judicature at Fort William, Madras, Bombay, Allahabad, Patna, Lahore and Rangoon and the Chief Courts of Oudh and Sind and the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of the Central Provinces :

In other cases "High Court" means the highest court of criminal appeal or revision for any local area ; or, where no such Court is established under any law for the time being in force, such officer as the Governor-General in Council may appoint in this behalf.

High Court.—The definition in the first paragraph refers to "Special Proceedings," against European and Indian British subjects under Chapter XXXIII and does not refer to proceedings generally against Europeans including proceedings in which they waive their right under the Chapter. When in any particular case the special rules contained in Chapter XXXIII do not apply, the definition in the first paragraph has no application and the definition in the second paragraph prevails. See the decision 12 B. 561 where it was held that an appeal from a conviction, by an European British subject who had waived his right and was convicted by the City Magistrate of Karachi, lay to the Sind Sadar Court and not to the Bombay High Court. See the definition in S. 266 infra. The Judicial Commissioner's Court of the Central Provinces and the Chief Courts of Oudh and Sind are High Courts for both the subjects. But when an European British subject waives his special privilege, the High Court competent to deal with him would be the one indicated for "other cases," namely, the highest Court of Criminal Appeal. It is only when an European British subject claims to be dealt with as such that the High Court for him will be the one indicated in the definition. The view taken in 12 B. 561 was followed in 45 M.L.J. 803=18 L.W. 895=(1924) M.W.N. 60=31 M.L.T. 194=25 Cr. L.J. 231=76 Ind. Cas. 695 and the contrary view of Walsh, J., in 21 Cr. L.J. 767=59 Ind. Cas. 331 was not followed. The High Court when exercising Original Criminal Jurisdiction is not a Court of Session within the meaning of the Code, 51 C. 890.

In other cases.—This includes the case of an European British subject who waives his right to be dealt with under Chapter XXXIII. See 12 B. 561; 12 Cr.L.J. 436=11 Ind. Cas. 620; 25 Cr.L.J. 231=76 Ind. C. 695.

Where no such court is established.—The Governor-General in Council, may appoint an officer to perform the functions of a High Court under this clause. For Upper Burma, the Judicial Commissioner is a High Court, Reg. V of 1892, Sch. Art 1. For Coorg, the Chief Commissioner is a High Court, Reg. 1 of 1901, S. 16; For Baluchistan the Chief Commissioner and agent to the Governor-General is a High Court, Reg. VIII of 1901, S. 6 (1) (c). For purposes of revision against acquittals from proceedings had in Santal Parganas the Commissioner of Bhagalpore is the High Court under Santal Par. Reg. S. 4 (1). 6 Pat. 83.

(k) "inquiry" includes every inquiry other than a trial conducted under this Code by a Magistrate of Court :

"Inquiry "

Inquiry.—An inquiry under the Code does not merely mean an inquiry into an offence; its meaning is considerably wider and extends into matters which are not offences. Proceedings under S. 107 or S. 145 infra are inquiries, 13 C.W.N. 420=9 Cr.L.J. 278=1 Ind. Cas. 336; 22 C. 898; 23 C. 709. So also proceedings under Ss. 98, 117 and 183 infra. The definition is not exhaustive so as to include an inquiry under the Workmen's Breach of Contract Act, 45 A. 700. The term inquiry in Ss. 436 and 437 refers to proceedings up to charge and the word trial refers to proceedings after charge, 15 C. 603 (F.B.); 9 A. 52. The distinction between an inquiry and a trial becomes very important as the benefit of S. 403 infra is available only in case the proceedings have terminated after a trial and not after an inquiry. The scheme of the Code and also the general provisions of Chapter XXIV infra relating to inquiries and trials go to show that the word 'inquiry' is used to indicate a judicial proceeding as distinguished from investigation and trial, 23 Bom. L.R. 884=22 Cr.L.J. 728=64 Ind. Cas. 40. The object of the inquiry is to take evidence in the case and to determine prima facie the truth or falsity of certain facts in order to take further action thereon. For example a Magistrate holds an inquiry as to possession under Chapter XII of the Code for passing a final order as to possession upon the result of this inquiry; an inquiry under Chapter XVIII of the Code is held by a Magistrate for passing a final order of Committal under S. 213 infra or for cancelling the charge if no prima facie case is made out, 5 Pat. L. J. 47 at 53.

Other than a Trial.—There is no definition of the word 'Trial' in the Code, 27 M. 510. See the observations of Maclean, C.J., in 25 C. 863 at 845. "Now what is a trial? To my mind it means the proceedings which commence when the case is called on with the Magistrate on the Bench, the accused in the dock and the representatives of the prosecution, and for the defence if the accused be defended, are present in Court for the hearing of the case. That is I consider the proceeding which is intended by the term 'trial'." See also the observations of Subramania Iyer, Offg. C.J., in 27 M. 510 at 511, as to the meaning of trial. See also 38 M.L.J. 370 (F.B.)=11 L.W. 435. Trial includes security proceedings under S. 107 infra, 27 M. 510 but in 50 C. 985 it was held that proceedings under Chapter VIII of the Code do not constitute a trial nor is the person proceeded against an accused person who has committed any offence. As to when a trial begins. See 32 M. 220 at 234 (F.B.).

(l) "investigation" includes all the proceedings under this Code for the collection of evidence conducted by a police-officer or by any person (other than a Magistrate) who is authorized by a Magistrate in this behalf :

The definition herein given is not exhaustive. It would be placing an undue limitation on the simple meaning of the words to hold that a police-officer who obtains a warrant of arrest under the Gaming Act and arrested and seized their account books has not taken part in the investigation, 26 B. 533. Investigation and inquiry are two different things under the Code. The object of the investigation is confined to the collection of evidence. This is evident from the definition herein given. A local investigation is merely collection of evidence on the spot, 5 Pat. L.J. 47 at 52-53.

(m) "judicial proceeding" includes any proceeding in the course of which evidence is or may be legally taken on oath :

Scope of the Definition.—We have added the words "on oath" in this definition because the power to take evidence on oath (oath under S. 3 (36) of the General Clauses Act includes affirmation and declaration)—is the characteristic test of judicial proceedings. We have omitted the new words "and it also includes every other proceeding consequential thereon," providing for consequent proceedings which the Bill as introduced proposed to add to the definition as they appear too wide. On the other hand we have altered the word 'means' at the commencement of the definition into 'includes' and have thus given to the Courts a certain latitude of construction.—Report of the Select Committee.

Judicial Proceeding.—See 12 B. 36 for the distinction between judicial and administrative proceeding. The definition herein given is clearly not exhaustive, 37 C. 642 (F.B.). See in this connection Explanation II to S. 193, 1 P.C. The following have been held to be judicial proceedings.—(1) proceedings before a Magistrate to whom a complaint was referred for inquiry and report under S. 202 infra, 35 C. 72 and 2 Cr.L.J. 118; (2) inquiry held by a Magistrate before issuing an order under S. 144 infra, 19 M. 18; (3) a preliminary inquiry under S. 476 infra with a view to take action under that section, 37 C. 52; (4) inquiry conducted by a Magistrate into the truth of an allegation against a subordinate official in a petition presented to a Deputy Commissioner, 28 A. 88; (5) execution proceedings subsequent to the determination of the civil suit, 37 C. 642 (F.B.); 19 Cr.L.J. 153 = 53 Ind. Cas. 441, (6) proceedings under the Reformatory Schools Act, S. 8, 14 B. 331; (7) proceedings under Ch. XIV of the Code, 29 M. 89; 16 M. 521. But the following are not judicial proceedings:—(1) preliminary inquiry held by a Subordinate Magistrate at the direction of the District Magistrate in regard to a complaint against the police with a view to ascertain whether the District Magistrate should grant sanction under S. 197 infra or not, 23 M. 223; (2) proceedings of a Magistrate purporting to act under S. 86 infra taking bonds from an appellant in an appeal to appear (a) before the Sub Magistrate who was directed to take further evidence by the appellate Court; (b) before the appellate Magistrate to give evidence in connection with a departmental inquiry as to the charge of corruption against a Sub-Magistrate, 29 M. 100; (3) proceedings before a District Magistrate under S. 125 infra with a view to have a bond under S. 107 infra cancelled, 37 C. 72; (4) an order of a District Magistrate directing the prosecution of a Mukhtar on a perusal of the records submitted to him by a Sub-Divisional Officer relating to the conduct of the Mukhtar in a case tried before that officer, 15 C.W.N. 260; (5) proceedings with regard to a complaint to District Magistrate as head of the District Police to prevent police-officers acting high-handedly, 33 A. 102; (6) calling for records under S. 435 of the Code, 15 M.L.J. 489; (7) inquiries by District Magistrate secretly on information that a grave crime was being or about to be committed, 4 C.L.J. 181.

"Non-cognizable offence."

"Non cognizable case"

(n) "non-cognizable offence" means an offence for, and "non-cognizable case" means a case in, which a police-officer, within or without a presidency-town, may not arrest without warrant :

The expression police-officer is not defined in the Code or in the General Clauses Act, but only an officer in charge of a police station is defined in cl. (p) infra, see Sch. II, Col. 3 as to the offences under the I.P.C., which a police-officer could arrest without warrant and the last portion of Sch. II as to his powers of arrest under other laws. A police-officer cannot arrest a person for an offence under S. 9 of the Opium Act I of 1878 as the offence is a non-cognizable one, 24 C. 691. See Ss 153 and 163 as to his powers to investigate and search in non-cognizable cases.

"Offence."

(o) "offence" means any act or omission made punishable by any law for the time being in force ;

it also includes any act in respect of which a complaint may be made under S. 20 of the Cattle-Trespass Act, 1871 :

See the definition in S. 3 (37), General Clauses Act X of 1897 and S. 40, I.P.C. See also S. 4 I.P.C. explanation which says 'offence' includes every act committed outside British India which if committed in British India, would be punishable under this Code. An offence under S. 10 of Musliman Waqf Act 1923 is an offence within this definition and S. 3 (37) General Clauses Act and is therefore triable not by the District Judge but by any Magistrate under the provision of S. 29 infra, 23 Cr.L.J. 934-105 Ind Cas. 666.

The last clause was introduced on account of certain rulings (see 9 M. 102 & 374) which laid down that an act in respect of which complaint could be laid under S. 20 of the Cattle Trespass Act was not an offence and thus superseded those rulings and make such a complaint an offence within the definition given herein, 52 M.L.J. 251-25 L.W. 282-28 Cr.L.J. 301-100 Ind. Cas. 331. A Magistrate of the second class empowered under S. 190 infra to take cognizance of offences on receiving complaints, has power to take cognizance of complaints made under S. 20 of the Cattle Trespass Act, 44 B. 42 following 34 C. 926. The word punishable is not defined but S. 53, I.P.C., mentions every kind of punishment. The demolition of an unlawfully erected work under the Municipal Act by a Magistrate is not a punishment, 54 C. 532 at 533.

(p) "Officer in charge of a police-station" includes, when the officer in charge of a police-station is absent from the station-house or unable from illness or other cause to perform his duties, the police-officer present at the station-house who is next in rank to such officer and is above the rank of constable or, when the Local Government so directs, any other police-officer so present :

"Officer in charge of a police-station"

See 42 M. 446 and (1911) 1 M.W.N. 231=9 M.L.T. 314=12 Cr. L.J. 110=10 Ind. Cas. 667, as to the meaning of the term. The aim of S. 4 (p) is to bring in more men, so that the duties of the officer may be performed without delay and not to include persons who are either permanent incumbents or who have been appointed to act for permanent incumbents. As to the powers of an officer in charge of a police station, see Ss 55, 56, 92, 94, 127, 128, 153, 154, 156, 157, 160, 173 to 175 infra. As to his duties see Ss 55, 62, 154, 160, 173, 174 and 175 infra. This clause is not applicable to the police in Calcutta and Bombay.

See S. 551 infra, which empowers superior police-officers to exercise all the powers of a station-house officer.

"Place," (q) "place" includes also a house, building, tent and vessel :

See the explanation to S. 133 infra as to the meaning of 'public place.' See 17 A. 166 as to what is a 'public place.'

(r) "pleader," used with reference to any proceeding in any Court, means a pleader or a mukhtar authorized under any law, for the time being in force, to practise in such Court, and includes (1) an advocate, a vakil and an attorney of a High Court so authorized, and (2) any other person appointed with the permission of the Court to act in such proceeding :

Under any Law.—See the Legal Practitioners Act XVII of 1879 as amended by Act IX of 1884, VI of 1900, I of 1908, XXIII of 1923 and XXXV of 1923

Practice—The Code gives every Magistrate a discretion to permit persons other than legal practitioners to practice and to act in proceedings before him. The discretion is to be exercised according to the circumstances of each individual case and in deciding whether permission is to be granted or not the character of the person is to be taken into consideration. A person of bad character or a person convicted of an offence or whose character or conduct is such that he would have been suspended or dismissed if he had been a regular practitioner, ought not to be allowed to practice. Allowing unlicensed persons to appear systematically and as a matter of course is reprehensible. Having regard to the large number of qualified practitioners now available, the discretion to permit private pleaders to appear and argue cases should be exercised as sparingly as possible and reasons for the permission should be recorded in writing. Permission is to be given only to prevent a possible miscarriage of justice. These provisions will not apply to persons practising as private pleaders prior to 18th October 1899. Rules 192—93 Mad. Cr. R. of Pr. A mere petition-writer cannot be said to practise, 18 W.R. (Cr.) 27; only those who are entitled to appear, plead or act in Court can be said to practise, 14 C. 555 at 565. The term "practitioner" in S. 32 of the Legal Practitioners Act does not connote the doing of acts habitually or often but signifies the performance of an act by a person as a professional man which could not be done by a private individual, 26 A. 330. It is the duty of a pleader accepting an engagement in a Court where he is not authorised to practise to inform the client that his appearance will be contingent on the Magistrate's permission to appear in the case and the better course is not to accept fee or engagement until the Magistrate's permission is obtained, 15 Cr.L.J. 388=23. Ind. Cas. 750. See also 12 Cr.L.J. 118=9 Ind. Cas. 717, 18 Cr.L.J. 345; 33 Ind. Cas. 729. A District Magistrate has no power in view of this sub-section to pass a general order prohibiting Mukhtars from practising in Criminal Courts and any such prohibitory order can be reviewed by the High Court under Ss. 435 and 439 infra, 29 Cr. L.J. 226=107 Ind. Cas. 56 relying on Ratanlal 1; 30 A. 66 and 38C. 488

Mukhtar.—This class of legal practitioners is recognized by the Legal Practitioners Act XVII of 1879 and S. 9 of the Act specially reserved the provisions of this Code in respect of mukhtars. They are licensed under the Act, 25 C. 735. By the new amendment (Act XXXV of 1923) they are entitled to practise in criminal Courts without special permission in each case. See 30 A. 66; 38 C. 488; 29 Eom. L.R. 1587; 29 Cr.L.J. 226=107 Ind. Cas. 56, as to their rights and status. In Madras, the position of private vakils is recognised in, 7 M.H.C.R. Appx. 37 and 6 M. 100; but in each case the Magistrate is to exercise a discretion before giving audience to the vakil and in deciding whether permission is to be granted or not. The Magistrate is to consider the private character of the vakil. A general circular prohibiting a private vakil from appearing in all cases was declared illegal in, 4 M.L.T. 91. See also the Full Bench ruling in, 12 M.L.J. 353, which refers to the previous circulars of the Madras High Court and recognized the right of private vakils to appear. Form No. 1 of Sch. V also contemplates an accused person appearing not necessarily in person but by a pleader, 50 B. 250 followed in 29 Cr. L.J. 226=107 Ind. Cas. 55.

Other persons appointed.—Parties to criminal proceedings are to have the fullest opportunity to employ whomsoever they please without reference to the mode or circumstance by which they may be influenced to do so, 1 B.H.C.R. (Cr. Ca. 16) When an accused is permitted to appear by pleader it is open to him to appoint a private person to appear for him in his stead and to do acts on his behalf and is equally open to the Court to permit the private person to represent the accused. This is a deviation from the ordinary rule that the accused should himself appear and plead personally. And when this is allowed there should really be on record something to show that the person representing the accused has been duly appointed and the Court gave its permission for the same. So it is open to an accused person to appoint his own estate manager to appear in his stead and plead for him, 50 B. 250. See S. 340 infra which recognizes the right of every accused person to be defended by a pleader as defined herein. See also S. 255 infra which gives a Magistrate discretion whenever he issues a summons to dispense with the personal attendance of the accused and permit him to appear by his pleader. A Magistrate has no power to appoint a Mukhtar to represent an accused when he was absent and did not ask for such permission, (1 23) Pat 239.

With the Permission of the Court.—The permission required is not a general one but a permission in each particular case. A private vakil would require such permission in each particular case and such permission should not be refused in an arbitrary manner, 7 C.W.N. 524; 38 C. 433; 30 A. 66; 4 M.L.T. 91, see 29 Bom. L.R. 1536 Where it was held following, 50 B. 250, that a Mukhtar in Bombay is a person appointed with the permission of the Court to act in a particular proceeding within the meaning of this sub-section and it is not competent to a District Magistrate to prohibit by a general order all Mukhtars from practicing in the Criminal Courts in the District.

(s) "police-station" means any post or place declared, generally or specially, by the Local Government to be a police-station, and includes any local area specified by the Local Government in this behalf :

"Police-station."

(t) "Public Prosecutor" means any person appointed under S. 492, and includes any person acting under the directions of a Public Prosecutor and any person conducting a prosecution on behalf of Her Majesty in any High Court in the exercise of its original criminal jurisdiction :

Public Prosecutor.—See Ss. 492, 495 and 270 infra as to the appointment, duties and powers of a Public Prosecutor. See also 42 C. 422. A private complainant may retain a pleader and the Public Prosecutor may avail himself of his services, but in doing so the Public Prosecutor does not deprive himself of the management of the case, 11 B.H. C.R. 102.

"Sub-division."

(u) "sub-division" means a sub-division of a district :

See S. 8 infra as to the power to divide district, outside Presidency-Towns into sub-divisions.

"Summons-case."

(v) "summons-case" means a case relating to an offence, and not being a warrant-case : and

"Warrant-case."

(w) "warrant-case" means a case relating to an offence punishable with death, transportation or imprisonment for a term exceeding six months.

Words referring to acts.

(2) Words which refer to acts done, extend also to illegal omissions; and all words and expressions used herein and defined in the Indian Penal Code, and not hereinbefore defined, shall be deemed to have the meanings respectively attributed to them by that Code.

Words to have same meaning as in Indian Penal Code.

The Code does not give definitions of words like 'Judge' etc., and this section adopts the definition of words given in the Indian Penal Code when they are not expressly defined in this Code, 5 Pat. 110 at 115, see Ss. 6 to 33 I.P.C. in this connection. In 20 M. 470 (F.B.) it was held that the word adultery, 'occurring in S. 483 infra should not be construed with regard to the definition in the Penal Code which may not justify a conviction under S. 497 I.P.C. but may be sufficient for the purpose of S. 488 infra. The concluding words of the section enact that any word used but not defined in that Code shall be deemed to have the meaning attributed to it in the I.P.C., but the provision is subject to the opening words of the section which say 'unless a different intention appears from the subject or context.' This limitation seems to have been overlooked by the learned Judges in 17 M. 260—per Benson, J. in 20 M. 470 at 475.

Trial of offence under Penal Code,

5. (1) All offences under the Indian Penal Code shall be investigated, inquired into, tried and otherwise dealt with according to the provisions hereinafter contained.

Trial of offences against other laws

(2) All offences under any other law shall be investigated, inquired into, tried and otherwise dealt with according to the same provisions, but subject to any enactment for the time being in force regulating the manner or place of investigating, inquiring into, trying or otherwise dealing with such offences.

Scope of the Section.—sub-section (1) provides for the trial under the Code of offences under the Penal Code, and sub-section (2) goes on to say that all offences under any other law, i.e., any law other than the Penal Code, shall be investigated, and inquired into according to the same provisions, that is, the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code. That states the general principle that the appropriate procedure for the trial of offences is to be found in the Criminal Procedure Code and a saving clause however follows to the effect that it must be subject to any enactment for the time being in force, regulating the manner or place of investigation, inquiry or trial of such offences. Then follows the next section which recognizes other Courts having jurisdiction to try criminal offences besides the High Court and the five classes of Criminal Courts mentioned therein. If any rule framed under any enactment is covered by the saving clause in sub-section (2), then there is no inconsistency between that rule and the Code, but the rule will not be an "enactment" within the meaning of sub-section (2), 48 C. 955. Under various English Statutes like 12 and 13 Vict., C. 96, Ss. 1, 23 and 24 Vict., C. 38, Ss. 1, 38 Vict. C. 27, S. 3, the Merchant Shipping Act of 1883, S. 6 and Act X of 1889, S. 55, a Magistrate in India is empowered to try an accused for an offence committed on board a British ship on the high seas. The trial shall be conducted according to the provisions of this Code and the offence charged should be one under the Indian Penal Code and conviction and the punishment should be under the Penal Code, 25 B. 635 See also notes to S. 1 supra, but a conviction both under the Penal Code and under a special law in respect of the same offence is illegal, 5 N.W.P.H.C.R. 49; 6 M. 249. See S. 26 of the General Clauses Act X of 1907. This section read with S. 520 infra gives the High Court Jurisdiction to transfer cases from the file of the village Panchayats, 49 A. 168.

All offences under the Indian Penal Code.—A contempt of the High Court by a libel published out of Court when the Court is not sitting is not included in these words, although the contempt may include defamation. Such an offence is something more than mere defamation and is of different character. It is an offence which by the Common Law of England is punishable by the High Court in a summary manner by fine or imprisonment or both. That part of the Common Law of England was introduced into the Presidency Towns when the 1st Supreme Courts were established by the Charters of Justice and the offence of contempt of the powers of the High Court for punishing it are the same as in this country, not by virtue of the Penal Code and the Criminal Procedure Code in British India but by virtue of the Common Law of England, 10 C. 109 (P.C.) at 131; 6 Lah. 529; 48 A. 711; 21 M.L.J. 832 at 833—28 Cr. L.J. 727—103 Ind. Cas. 775. The High Court has similarly Common Law jurisdiction to deal with contempts committed before an inferior Court but not under the Charter Act. Doubts having arisen as to the powers of the High Court to punish contempts of subordinate Courts, to remove that doubt, Act XII of 1926 was passed empowering the High Courts and Chief Courts to punish such contempts except when such contempt is an offence punishable under the Indian Penal Code. The jurisdiction in contempt is part of the legal system of this country and "we are as much bound to execute this part of the system as any other," 27 Cr. L.J. 1231 at 1243—98 Ind. Cas. 57.

Sub-Section (2).—This sub-section controls Chap. XIV of the Code. The police are not entitled to file a charge sheet for an offence under S. 55 of the Madras Abkari Act and on such a charge sheet a Magistrate cannot take cognizance of the case and proceed with it as by the filing of the charge sheet no valid proceedings are instituted before the Magistrate, 44 M.L.J. 231—17 L.W. 308—24 Cr. L.J. 335—72 Ind. Cas. 175 following 25 M.L.J. 577—1913 M.W.N. 1000—14 Cr. L.J. 637—21 Ind. Cas. 685. The summary process for contempt is not under any special or local law within the meaning of this section nor is it under any enactment regulating the manner or place of investigating inquiring into or trying such offence. The Code is therefore applicable to this offence not being excluded by its own provisions, 10 C. 109 (P.C.) at 127.

All offences under any other law.—These words cannot be intended to include a contempt of Court by libel published out of Court for which no provision is made by the Code and it is therefore unnecessary to consider what is the true construction of the words "any special jurisdiction or power conferred by any other law now in force" in S. 1 supra, 10 C. 109 (P.C.) at 132.

Subject to any enactment.—The Criminal Procedure Code cannot be invoked to justify any departure where a special procedure is prescribed for in a Special Act like the Bombay Gambling Act IV of 1887, S. 6. Where the Special Act is silent, the provisions of the Code would be applicable, 31 B. 439. Where a violation of a Special law is not an offence, the rule in S. 5 (2) will not apply, 37 C. 287. An Ordinance is not an Act of the regular Legislature but is nevertheless law enacted by authority with power to enact and is none the less a law because in order to distinguish it from the Acts of the Legislature it is described as an Ordinance and any infringement of its provisions is an offence. In the absence of special rules made under the powers conferred by the Ordinance, an inquiry into such an offence should be conducted in accordance with the provisions of the code, 17 Cr. L.J. 225—34 Ind. Cas. 641.

Shall be otherwise dealt with.—See S. 549 infra as to trial of military offences by a Court martial; sub-S. (2) controls Chap. XIV of the Code, 44 M.L.J. 231—17 L.W. 308—24 Cr. L.J. 335—72 Ind. Cas. 175.

PART II.

CONSTITUTION AND POWERS OF CRIMINAL COURTS AND OFFICES.

OF THE CONSTITUTION OF CRIMINAL COURTS AND OFFICES.

A.—Classes of Criminal Courts.

6. Besides the High Courts and the Courts constituted under any law other than this Code for the time being in force, there shall be five classes of Criminal Courts in British India, namely :—

Classes of Criminal Courts.

- I. Courts of Session :
- II. Presidency Magistrates :
- III. Magistrates of the first class :
- IV. Magistrates of the second class :
- V. Magistrates of the third class.

The classes of Courts here given refer to col 8 of Sch. II and the Code does not recognize any Courts other than the classes of Courts provided by this section. Thus District Magistrate's Court will, for purpose of an ordinary criminal trial, be a Court of the Magistrate of the first class, see 30 Cr. L.J. 550 at 551=116 Ind. Cas. 77. The title 'Deputy Magistrate' and 'General Deputy Magistrates' are titles unknown to the Code, 23 M.L.J. 670 at 673 =13 Cr. L.J. 850=17 Ind. Cas. 785.

High Court.—See S. 4 (4) (j) supra and notes thereunder.

Courts of Session.—This expression includes the Court of an Additional Sessions Judge and an assistant Sessions Judge. See S. 9 (3) infra; under this section Courts of Session belong to a different class of Courts from the High Court. The High Court when exercising original criminal jurisdiction is not a Court of Session within the meaning of the Code. The original criminal jurisdiction of the High Court is regulated by the Letters Patent and a distinction is maintained throughout the Code between the High Court and Court of Session, 51 C. 880.

Magistrate.—There is no definition of the term Magistrate given in the Code. The terms 'Magistrate' and 'Court' are generally, if not always, convertible, 39 C. 953 (P.C.) at 965; S. 3 (31) of Act X of 1897 (General Clauses) defines a Magistrate as including every person exercising all or any of the powers of a Magistrate under the Code of Criminal Procedure for the time being in force. See S. 10 infra for the definition of 'District Magistrate.' The Code does not recognise any particular Court as being the Court of a District Magistrate. This section and S. 32 infra show that the Magistrate's Court other than those in the Presidency Towns consist (1) Courts of Magistrate of the first class; (2) Courts of Magistrate of the second class; (3) Courts of Magistrate of the third class, 1906 A.W.N. 201=3 A L.J. 828 at 827=4 Cr. L.J. 140. A Sub-Divisional Magistrate is not mentioned as one of the Courts. He may either be a second or first class Magistrate, S. 19 infra. See 42 A. 649 at 654. There is no definition of a first class Magistrate but it is used to mean a Magistrate exercising within a particular jurisdiction the highest Magisterial powers conferred ordinarily on Magistrates, 31 B. 511.

Presidency Magistrate.—This Section differentiates Presidency Magistrates from Magistrates of the first class, 25 C. 551 and Ss. 10 and 12 show that District Magistrates and Magistrates of the first class are appointed only in districts outside the presidency-towns, 32 M. 303. A Presidency Magistrate belongs to what is generally speaking the highest class of Magistrates, 31 B. 611 at 623. See also 32 B. 10.

Courts constituted under any law other than this Code.—For example, Forest Courts under S. 71 of Act VII of 1878, Indian Marine Courts under Act XIV of 1867, Court Martial under Act V of 1869 as amended by Act XII of 1891, Courts of Cantonment Magistrate under S. 7 of Act XIII of 1889, Courts of heads of villages in Madras under Reg. XI of 1816 and IV of 1821. This section appears to recognize, that besides the High Court and the five classes of criminal Courts constituted by the Code there may be other Courts constituted under other laws meaning presumably other Courts having jurisdiction to try criminal offences, 43 C. 855. A Municipal Magistrate appointed to deal with offences against Municipal Act is a Court constituted under a law other than the Code for the time being in force and comes within this section and consequently the provisions of Ss. 435 and 439 infra apply to those proceedings, 52 C. 862 at 868.

B.—Territorial Divisions.

7. (1) Every province (excluding the presidency-towns) shall be a sessions division, or shall consist of sessions divisions: and every sessions division shall, for the purposes of this Code, be a district or consist of districts.

Sessions divisions and districts.

Power to alter divisions and districts.

(2) The local Governments may alter the limits or the number of such divisions and districts.

Existing divisions and districts maintained till altered.

(3) The sessions divisions and districts existing when this Code comes into force shall be sessions divisions and districts respectively, unless and until they are so altered.

Presidency-towns to be deemed districts.

(4) Every presidency-town shall, for the purposes of this Code, be deemed to be a district.

Province.—S. 3 (43) of the General Clauses Act defines a Province as meaning the territories for the time being administered by any Local Government.

Local Government.—S. 3 (29) of the General Clauses Act defines the term as meaning the person authorized by law to administer Executive Government in the part of British India in which the Act or Regulation containing the expression operates and shall include a Chief Commissioner.

Presidency-town—S. 3 (41) of the General Clauses Act defines the term as meaning the local limits for the time being of the ordinary original jurisdiction of the High Court of Judicature at Fort William, Madras or Bombay, as the case may be. The Presidency-town of Madras is divided into two divisions and a Presidency Magistrate's Court established for each division. Fort St. George Gazette Pt. I. p. 2377, dated 1—5—1877.

Local Government may alter the limits or number of such divisions.—Section 7 of the Code assumes the existence of a sessions division in every part of British India where the Code is in force outside the presidency-towns. It does not contemplate the constitution of sessions divisions by the Local Governments which can alter the limits of divisions or the number of divisions. Every Province is, by operation of law, a sessions division or consists of sessions divisions. There is no place, therefore, which escapes the pervading force of the section, 10 B. 274 at 282—83.

Sub-Section (2).—Under this section as amended by the Devolution of Powers Act, 1920, the Local Government with effect from and after 16th October 1923 has notified that the Agency Sessions division be abolished and in lieu thereof the old Agency Sessions division of Ganjam, Vizagapatam and Godavery be re-established. The Local Government has further notified establishing from the same date a Court of Session for each of the sessions divisions and direct that the said Courts do hold there sitting in the Towns of Chatrapur, Waltair and Coconada or in any such place within the respective Sessions Divisions and further that the Agents to the Governor in Ganjam and Vizagapatam and Government Agent Godavery are appointed Sessions Judges of the respective Courts of Sessions.

Districts existing when this Code comes into force.—"The existence of two Sessions Divisions in the same District cannot be treated as unwarranted, for the same was the case when the Code of Criminal Procedure was passed and paragraph 3 of S. 7 recognizes the legality of the existing Sessions Divisions and Districts, unless and until altered" 30 M. 136 at 137. See 28 M.L.J. 670 where it was held that the Sessions Court of Ganjam Division was not competent to hear an appeal from a Magistrate who had jurisdiction over the Agency and non-Agency tracts when the case arose in the Agency tracts but the appeal lay to the Agency Sessions Division, i.e., the District Magistrate of Ganjam.

8. (1) The Local Government may divide any district outside the presidency-towns into sub-divisions, or make any portion of any such district a sub division and may alter the limits of any sub-division.

Power to divide districts into sub-divisions.

(2) All existing sub-divisions which are now usually put under the charge of a Magistrate shall be deemed to have been made under this Code.

Existing sub-divisions maintained

A cantonment Magistrate under S. 7 of Act XIII of 1889 is to be deemed a Magistrate in charge of a division of a District, i.e., a Sub-division when appointed under S. 12 infra. Cantonment Magistrate shall be subordinate to the District Magistrate.

C.—Courts and Offices outside the Presidency towns.

9. (1) The Local Government shall establish a Court of Session for every sessions division, and appoint a Judge of such Court.

Court of Session.

(2) The Local Government may, by general or special order in the official Gazette, direct at what place or places the Court of Session shall hold its sitting; but, until such order is made, the Courts of Session shall hold their sittings as heretofore.

(3) The Local Government may also appoint Additional Sessions Judges, and Assistant Sessions Judges to exercise jurisdiction in one or more such Courts.

(4) A Sessions Judge of one sessions division may be appointed by the Local Government to be also an Additional Sessions Judge of another division, and in such case he may sit for the disposal of cases at such place or places in either division as the Local Government may direct.

(5) All Courts of Session existing when this Code comes into force shall be deemed to have been established under this Act.

Court of Session.—The term Court of Session wherever it is used in the Code means a Court established under the section. The scheme of the Code is to regard the High Court when exercising its original criminal jurisdiction as a Court of an entirely different class and character from a Court of session and the two expressions are used in the Code not as interchangeable terms and the High Court when exercising its original criminal jurisdiction is not a Court of Session as defined in this section and as understood in the Code, 51 G. 880.

Sessions Judge.—Jurisdiction is restricted to his Sessions division, 26 M. 137, but he may be appointed by the Local Government to be an Additional Sessions Judge of another division. He may pass any sentence authorized by law S. 31 (2), but any sentence of death shall be subject to the confirmation of the High Court.

Additional Sessions Judge.—The appointment of an Additional Sessions Judge does not thereby constitute an Additional Sessions Court, 1 M.L.J. 397 at 400. An Additional Sessions Judge exercises powers co-ordinate with those of a Sessions Judge, but he can exercise the powers of a Sessions Judge as a Court of revision under Ch. XXXII only in cases which may be transferred to him, S. 438 (2). A Sessions Judge under S. 17 (4) may delegate his powers to an Additional Sessions Judge. When a Sessions Judge had made over a particular appeal to be heard by an Additional Sessions Judge, but before it was dealt with by him the Sessions Judge called up the appeal to his own file and disposed of it himself, it was held that the Sessions Judge acted within his jurisdiction, 44 A. 157. He may pass any sentence authorized by law but a sentence of death is subject to the confirmation of the High Court. As to his powers to try original cases see S. 193 (2), and as to appeals to him and from his conviction, see Ss. 409 and 410 infra.

Assistant Sessions Judge.—All Assistant Sessions Judges are subordinate to the Sessions Judges in whose Court they exercise jurisdiction, and the Sessions Judge may make rules as to distribution of business among Assistant Sessions Judges, S. 17 (3). The Sessions Judge under cl. (4) of S. 17 may delegate his powers when he is unavoidably absent to an Assistant Sessions Judge. S. 31 (3) infra speaks of the sentence which may be passed by an Assistant Sessions Judge and S. 193 (2) speaks of his powers to try original cases. Appeals from the conviction of an Assistant Sessions Judge ordinarily lie to the Sessions Court, but when he is specially empowered under S. 30 and passes a sentence exceeding four years an appeal lies to the High Court. When an Assistant Sessions Judge sentences one of several accused to more than four years, and the others to lesser terms the appeal of all shall lie to the High Court even though the accused who had been sentenced to more than four years does not appeal, 37 A. 471. See S. 415-A, infra. See S. 538 (1) which empowers a Sessions Judge to withdraw cases which he had made over to an Assistant Sessions Judge. A Sessions Judge has no power to transfer an appeal filed in his Court to an Assistant Sessions Judge to hear and dispose of the same. He can only transfer cases which will not include appeals, 37 A. 236, where, 9 B. 174 and 23 A. 98 are followed.

10. (1) In every district outside the presidency-towns the Local District Magistrate. Government shall appoint a Magistrate of the first class, who shall be called the District Magistrate.

(2) The Local Government may appoint any Magistrate of the first class to be an Additional District Magistrate and such Additional District Magistrate shall have all or any of the powers of a District Magistrate under this Code or under any other law for the time being in force, as the Local Government may direct.

(3) For the purposes of sections 192, sub-section (1), 407, sub-section (2), and 528, sub-sections (2) and (3), such Additional District Magistrate shall be deemed to be subordinate to the District Magistrate.

Amendment.—In sub-section (2) "for a period not exceeding six months" is omitted and the words "under any other law for the time being in force" are added. "At present an Additional District Magistrate can only be appointed for a period not exceeding six months and it is doubtful whether such a Magistrate can exercise the powers of a District Magistrate under any law except the Code. Experience has shown that the assistance of an Additional District Magistrate is not infrequently required for a longer time and the limit of six months is therefore removed."—Statement of objects and Reasons. Sub-section (3) is new and renders obsolete, 35 C. 918, where it was held that a District Magistrate has no power to transfer a case under S. 523 infra from the file of the Additional District Magistrate to any other Magistrate. "The powers of such an officer are extended and his position vis à vis of the District Magistrate in respect of Ss. 192, 407 and 528 of the Code is defined".—Statement of Objects and Reasons

Every district outside the Presidency-Towns.—The Scheme of criminal administration embodied in the Code regards the 'District' as the general unit for purposes of Magisterial jurisdiction. Under Ss. 7 to 10 every Province must consist of a District or Districts and in every District there must be a District Magistrate. Under S. 12 infra as many Magistrates as it considers fit may be appointed in each District and unless the jurisdiction and powers of such Magistrates are specially limited, they extend throughout the District in which they are appointed 1901 P.L.R. (Gr. J.) 96 at 305 (F.B.). S. 7(4) supra says that every presidency-town shall be deemed to be a district but this section applies only to districts outside the presidency-town. So a Presidency Magistrate can never be a District Magistrate as was contended for in 24 C. 551 at 553.

District Magistrate—As defined in this section a District Magistrate is a Magistrate of the first class who is so appointed by the Local Government, and on account of his appointment under this section, he exercises certain powers which are given to him in the Code but his Court is not a Court of a District Magistrate but is only a Court of a first class Magistrate. Being a first class Magistrate he can pass a sentence of imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years under S. 32 infra and if invested with powers under S. 30 infra, he can try all offences not punishable with death but can only pass a sentence under S. 54 infra of transportation or imprisonment for a term not exceeding 7 years. Under S. 407 infra a District Magistrate hears appeals and according to S. 408 infra, a person convicted on a trial held by a District Magistrate may appeal to the Sessions Judge except in the case where he exercises powers under S. 30 infra and when he passes a sentence exceeding four years or any sentence of transportation the appeal lies to the High Court. This shows clearly that District Magistrate as such is not a Court and is only a first class Magistrate who exercises special powers with which he is invested either by the Code or by the local Government. His Court is that of a Magistrate of the first class and appeals from the appealable sentence of his Court lie to the Court of Session, 30 Gr. L.J. 550 at 551=116 Ind. Cas. 77. The ordinary powers of a District Magistrate are enumerated in Sch. III and he is empowered to invest Magistrates subordinate to him with certain powers specified in Sch. IV. A District Magistrate may also make rules or give special orders consistent with this Code as to distribution of business among Magistrates and Benches in his District, S. 17 (1) infra. An Additional District Magistrate though he may have all the powers of a District Magistrate is a Magistrate other than the District Magistrate within S. 406 infra, 43 C. 875. The powers of a District Magistrate in respect of sentences are the ordinary powers of a District Magistrate, S. 32 infra, but he may be invested with special power under S. 30 infra, by which he may pass any sentence authorized by law except a sentence of death or transportation for a term exceeding seven years or imprisonment for a term exceeding seven years, S. 30 infra. Ordinarily, the terms "District Magistrate" or "First Class Magistrate" would not include a Presidency Magistrate, 32 M. 303; 24 C. 551. For purposes of S. 476 infra a Presidency Magistrate is deemed to be a First Class Magistrate. See Act II of 1926, S. 6 (b) which omits the word 'Chief.'

Sub-Section (2).—The scope of the powers conferred under this sub-section is not limited to the ordinary powers of a District Magistrate set out in Sch. III (v) but extends to all the powers which the District Magistrate is empowered to exercise at the date of a particular notification appointing an Additional District Magistrate and conferring on him all the powers of a District Magistrate, e.g., power to grant sanction under S. 197 infra, 1923 M.W.N. 77=17 L.W. 226=24 Cr. L.J. 116=71 Ind. Cas. 244.

Sub-Section (3).—All Magistrates of whatever class within the District are subordinate to the District Magistrate, 9 B. 100; 12 C. 473 (F.B.) and the ruling in, 34 C. 918 is no longer law. It is now made clear that an Additional District Magistrate is subordinate to the District Magistrate for the purposes of Ss. 192 (1), 407 (2) and 528 (2) and (3), infra.

11. Whenever, in consequence of the office of a District Magistrate becoming vacant, any officer succeeds temporarily to the chief executive administration of the district, such officer shall, pending the orders of the Local Government, exercise all the powers and perform all the duties respectively conferred and imposed by this Code on the District Magistrate.

Officers temporarily succeeding to vacancies in office of District Magistrate.

A Magistrate of the first class while officiating for the District Magistrate commenced to try a case and continued the trial after he reverted as joint Magistrate in the same District, it was held that he had jurisdiction to do so and the trial was good, 1906 A.W.N. 201=3 A.L.J. 826=4 Cr. L.J. 140. See also 10 C.W.N. 1095. When an officer is absent on casual leave the next senior officer remains in charge of the current duties but there is no vacancy and no temporary succession within the meaning of the section, 22 Cr. L.J. 713=63 Ind. Cas. 873.

12. (1) The Local Government may appoint as many persons as it thinks fit, besides the District Magistrate, to be Magistrates of the first, second or third class in any district outside the presidency-towns; and the Local Government or the District Magistrate, subject to the control of the Local Government, may, from time to time, define local areas within which such persons may exercise all or any of the powers with which they may respectively be invested under this Code.

Subordinate Magistrates.

Local Limits of their jurisdiction.

(2) Except as otherwise provided by such definition the jurisdiction and powers of such persons shall extend throughout such district.

Local Areas.—The expression "Local area" includes sessions division, district or sub-division and cannot be restricted to mean the scene of an alleged occurrence only, 25 C. 838. "It is sufficiently clear from the language of the section that in the absence of any express enactment to the contrary the Code does not contemplate an exercise of jurisdiction outside the limits of the area called a district," 9 B. 30.

Sub-Section (2).—This sub-section declares that except as otherwise provided by such definition, that is, without an order restricting the power of any Magistrate appointed by the Local Government, the jurisdiction and powers of such persons shall extend throughout such district. Consequently unless the powers of the Magistrate had been restricted to a certain local area he has jurisdiction over the entire district, 29 C. 389; 10 C.W.N. 1095. A sub-divisional Magistrate whose jurisdiction is defined by order of the District Magistrate under this section cannot take cognizance of matter outside such local area, 19 A.L.J. 77=22 Cr. L.J. 122=59 Ind. Cas. 554, where 1906 A.W.N. 201=3 A.L.J. 826=4 C.L.J. 140 is distinguished see also 29 Cr. L.J. 124=105 Ind. Cas. 716; 21 Cr. L.J. 321 at 325=55 Ind. Cas. 593, but if the jurisdiction is not so defined under the section his jurisdiction and power would extend under sub-section (2) of this section throughout the district 22 Cr. L.J. 713=63 Ind. Cas. 873. Where a sub-divisional Magistrate in a district initiated security proceedings under S. 107 infra against one in his division, the District Magistrate transferred the case to a Deputy Magistrate of the first class at the headquarters, the Deputy Magistrate had jurisdiction to try the case or institute fresh proceedings, 29 C. 389. See also 10 C.W.N. 1095; Ratanlal 838. Where a subordinate Magistrate tried an offence committed beyond the local limits of what was regarded as his jurisdiction, it was held that as a Magistrate in the division in which the offence occurred and as a Magistrate whose powers had not been formally limited to any particular portion of the division he had jurisdiction to try the case, Weir II, 13. A Magistrate of the first class while acting as District Magistrate commenced a trial and during the pendency of the trial, he reverted as Joint Magistrate but continued the trial without any objection and concluded the case, held that he had jurisdiction to conclude the trial and his decision is valid, 1935 A.W.N. 201=3 A.L.J. 826=4 Cr. L.J. 140; 22 M. 47; 10 C.W.N. 1095; 21 Cr. L.J. 321 (2)=55 Ind. Cas. 593 Cases on the file of one Magistrate do not pass automatically to his successor in the local area merely because the former has been transferred to another local area in the same district; there is nothing in this section which supports such a procedure, 9 A.L.J. 413=13 Cr. L.J. 203=13 Ind. Cas. 203, following 42 A. 649 at 654. A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to try a case after having made over charge of his duties to his successor, 14 Cr. L.J. 239 (2) 19 A. 114; 3 A. 563 (F.B.); 50 C. 664. A Magistrate appointed for a whole district but put in charge of particular Taluks only, is not without jurisdiction if he inquires into and tries a case in another Taluk of the same district, Ratanlal 177; 21 Cr. L.J. 321=55 Ind. Cas. 593. See also Weir II, 13. The transfer of a Magistrate to another station in the same district does not take away his jurisdiction, 22 M. 47.

Magistrate in charge of sub-division.

13. (1) The Local Government may place any Magistrate of the first or second class in charge of a sub-division, and relieve him of the charge as occasion requires.

(2) Such Magistrates shall be called Sub-divisional Magistrates.

Delegation of powers to District
Magistrate.

(3) The Local Government may delegate its powers under this section to the District Magistrate.

Sub-Division.—See the definition in S. 4 (1) (u), supra.

Sub-Divisional Magistrate.—For ordinary power see Sch. III (iv) and for additional powers see S. 37, infra.

The Local Government may delegate its powers.—In Bengal, Madras, Bombay and the Punjab, the Local Government has delegated its powers. See Cal. Gas., 1873, Pt. I, p. 236; Fl. St. George Gas., 1873, p. 717; Punjab G.O. 907, dated 8-6-1874; Bom. Gas., 1873, p. 473.

14. (1) The Local Government may confer upon any person all or any of the powers conferred or conferrable by or under this Code on a Magistrate of the first, second or third class in respect to particular cases or to a particular class or particular classes of cases, or in regard to cases generally in any local area outside the presidency-towns.

(2) Such Magistrates shall be called Special Magistrates, and shall be appointed for such term as the Local Government may by general or special order direct.

(3) The Local Government may delegate, with such limitations as it thinks fit, to any officer under its control the powers conferred by sub-section (1).

(4) No powers shall be conferred under this section on any police officer below the grade of Assistant District Superintendent, and no powers shall be conferred on a police-officer except so far as may be necessary for preserving the peace, preventing crime and detecting, apprehending and detaining offenders in order to their being brought before a Magistrate, and for the performance by the officer of any other duties imposed upon him by any law for the time being in force.

In respect of particular cases.—The order of Government appointing a special Magistrate to try the "case" could not necessarily refer to a single charge. It will comprise all charges or classes of charges. In construing the order, a reasonable construction must be placed and the question asked, what was the intention of the person responsible for the order, how far that intention clearly appears, and whether there is any real ambiguity such as to mislead or prejudice any of the parties concerned. This section expressly authorises the Magistrate to try cases or classes of cases. The Magistrate had ample authority to include in the case the three charges which were legally comprised within that case. The fact that Government appointed no other Magistrate and appointed Mr. W to try the case relating to the prosecution of Mr. C. shows that Government intended that Mr. W. should try the charges against Mr. C and expressed themselves to that effect, 29 Bom. L R 556 at 1000.

Local Area.—The term "local area" is intended to include a sessions division, district or sub-division, 25 C. 853 at 862; see S. 531, infra. The term is not restricted to a local area within a specified district or sessions division but extends even to a whole Province, 19 Cr. L J 310=44 Ind. Cas. 326; 1601 P.L.R. (Cr. J.) 96 at 305 (F.B.).

Sub-Section (2)—This sub-section enables special Magistrates to be appointed for a term only. The appointment may be on probation and may be for meeting temporary emergencies.

Powers to be conferred on Police Officers.—(1) The Inspector-General of Police in Madras has been empowered under S. 7 of Act XXIV of 1859 (Madras Police) with full powers of a Magistrate throughout the Madras Presidency except the Scheduled Districts, but exercises these powers subject to the orders of the Governor-in-Council; (2) under Bombay District Police Act, VII of 1867, every Commissioner is a Magistrate of the first class throughout the district under his control and exercises his powers subject to the limitations imposed by the Governor. In Madras the term of office of Honorary Magistrates shall be five years. Rule 22 of Mad. Cr. R. of Pr.

15. (1) The Local Government may direct any two or more Magistrates in any place outside the presidency-towns to sit together as a Bench, and may by order invest such Bench with any of the powers conferred or conferrable by or under this Code on a Magistrate of the first, second or third class, and direct it to exercise such powers in such cases, or such classes of cases only, and within such local limits, as the Local Government thinks fit.

(2) Except as otherwise provided by any order under this section, every such Bench shall have the powers conferred by this Code on a Magistrate of the highest class to which any one of its members, who is present taking part in the proceedings as a member of the Bench, belongs, and as far as practicable shall, for the purposes of this Code, be deemed to be a Magistrate of such class.

Benches of Magistrates.

Powers exercisable by Bench in absence of special direction.

Scope of the Section.—The true meaning to be attached to this section is that it is open to Government to invest a Bench composed of Magistrates of a lower class with all the powers of a Magistrate of a higher class and also if it thought fit, to invest such Bench with powers conferrable on a Magistrate of such higher class, that is to say, a Bench exercising third class Magisterial powers may be invested with ordinary or additional powers of a second class Magistrate 23 Cr.L.J. 913 at 918=105 Ind. Cas. 433. The wording of this section is very wide. If this section is compared with S. 37 infra, a wider discretion appears to be given to local Government with regard to Benches than with regard to individual Magistrates and the phrase "as far as practicable" is an indication that it was not the intention of the Legislature that the local Government when empowering Benches should be obliged to adhere strictly to the provisions relating to conferring of powers on individual Magistrates, 23 Cr.L.J. 913 at 925=105 Ind. Cas. 433 (F B). The object of constituting a Bench is that the Magistrates concerned should be individually and collectively give their attention and apply their minds in the hearing of the evidence and the determination of the points at issue and arrive at an independent judgment in regard to the merits of the charge, 29 Cr. L.J. 310 at 311=107 Ind. Cas. 875.

A Bench of Magistrates is empowered to try summarily offences under I.P.C., ss. 277, 278, 279, 285, 286, 289, 290, 323, 334, 336, 341, 352, 426, 447, and 504 offences under Municipal Acts and the Conservancy clauses of Police Acts punishable only with fine or with imprisonment not exceeding one month and abetment and attempts to commit the foregoing offences when such attempts are offences and to try offences under ss. 137 and 193 of the Mad. Local Boards Act and S. 18 of Madras Registration of Births and Deaths Act and under the Madras Hackney Carriage Act. Rule 16 of Mad. Cr. R. of Pr.

As a Bench, i. e., as an aggregate body. A case triable by a Magistrate exercising the power of the first class came before a Bench of Magistrates neither of whom individually exercised those powers but sitting together the Bench was so invested. At the adjourned trial only one of those Magistrates was present, held he alone was not competent to try the case and the orders passed by him were set aside as illegal, 2 C.L.R. 343; 29 C. 483. An Honorary Magistrate is not entitled to give judgment and pass sentence in a case unless he has been a member of the Bench during the whole hearing of the case, 20 C. 870; 18 M. 394.

Such cases or classes of cases.—There is nothing in the Code which prescribes that any particular class of cases should be tried by Honorary Magistrates, 25 Cr.L.J. 556=

51 Ind. Cas. 44. A complicated and somewhat difficult case is by no means one which it is desirable to place before a Bench of Magistrates, 2 C. 23 at 32. "It is extremely undesirable that cases of this description (a complicated case under the District Municipalities Act) involving difficult questions of fact or of law should be directed to be tried by a Bench of Honorary Magistrates. They cannot ordinarily be expected to deal satisfactorily with the questions that are involved in such cases and I have had not a little amount of difficulty in understanding the judgment in the present case," 47 M. 716 at 722. While the services of Honorary Magistrates are to be highly valued there can be no gain-saying the fact that cases which are likely to be keenly contested and intricate in nature are, on the whole, likely to be more efficiently disposed of by stipendiary Magistrates than by Honorary Magistrates or at least the accused persons concerned will believe this to be the case. The former Magistrates have had a more specific and detailed technical training and, as a rule, have much more experience in the conduct of criminal cases, 23 Cr. L.J. 893=106 Ind. Cas. 216. Having regard to cl. (2) of this section, Benches have power to deal with all matters. Under the Code of 1872 a Bench had no powers to deal with miscellaneous matters, other than trials, e.g., proceedings under S. 145, infra. Unless its powers are specially restricted, power to deal with such matters exists under sub-Section (2).

See the decision in 33 M. 717 as to the legality of a conviction where all the members of a Bench which began a trial did not take part in the recording of evidence and pronouncing judgment. See also 21 M. 246; Weir II, 18; 15 A.L.J. 463; 16 A.L.J. 854=19 Cr. L.J. 1004=43 Ind. Cas. 344. But it has been held in, 33 M. 304 that where an accused was convicted by a Bench of five Magistrates, one of whom had not heard all the evidence, the conviction was held bad and a re-trial was ordered. See also 2 Lah. 237. This decision was followed in 10 L.W. 386; see also 23 Bom L.R. 832=22 Cr.L.J. 615=63 Ind.Cas. 151, S.950A has been newly introduced to legalize conviction by Benches properly constituted.

Right of Appeal.—This depends upon the class of powers vested in the Bench which tried and convicted the accused. It was held in 9 M. 36 that an appeal under S. 407 infra lay from a conviction by a Bench of Magistrates invested with second or third class powers, but no appeal lay from a summary conviction by a Bench of Magistrates. See S 414, infra.

16. The Local Government may, or, subject to the control of the Local Government, the District Magistrate may, from time to time, make rules consistent with this Code for the guidance of Magistrates' Benches in any district respecting the following subjects:—

Power to frame rules for guidance of Benches.

- (a) the classes of cases to be tried;
- (b) the times and places of sitting;
- (c) the constitution of the Bench for conducting trials;
- (d) the mode of settling differences of opinion which may arise between the Magistrates in session.

Scope of the Section.—This section authorizes the Local Government and the District Magistrate with the former's control to make rules for the constitution of Benches, to regulate time and place of sitting, but the constitution of the Bench cannot be changed during the course of the trial except under the provisions of S. 350, infra and at least so many of the Magistrates forming a quorum who commenced the hearing must continue on the Bench till the conclusion of trial and failure to have a quorum vitiates a trial 23 Cr L J 198=76 Ind. Cas. 566. Where the rules regulating a Bench of Magistrates provide a quorum of two and two Magistrates were not present when evidence was recorded, the evidence so recorded is not recorded by a competent Court and merely reading over that evidence in a Court properly constituted would not render that evidence admissible so as to justify its being acted upon, 27 Cr. L.J. 542 (2) ; 93 Ind. Cas. 1038 (2).

The Local Government may make Rules :—

For Madras, See G.O., dated 5-4-1899, 18-7-1889, 30-7-1890 and 27-8-1891, 8-3-1917, 22-10-19, 5-1-20, 27-7-23, 9-4-24.

For Bombay, Govt. Notn, No 5848, Bom. Gaz. 1885, Pt. I, p. 1262.

Magistrates' Benches.—The legislature has ordained that Benches of Honorary Magistrates shall be constituted for the decision of Criminal Cases in India. Once those Benches have been constituted, it is the duty of the superior Courts to regulate their proceedings and to prevent abuses of the law. But while exercising this power the superior Courts should keep in mind the fact that in dealing with the members of an unpaid judiciary who in many cases have had no Judicial learning and little judicial knowledge, it is not practical to set up a standard of compliance with procedure such as would be reasonably expected from stipendiary Magistrates. If too much is expected, the work of such Benches would be often at a stand still. In the trial of a large number of cases before them slight defect of procedure will be found and if on every occasion that a slight defect in procedure is discovered their proceedings be set aside, their activities will be seriously hampered and the object of the legislature in permitting the creation of such Benches will be thwarted. 15 Cr.L.J. 516 at 518=24 Ind.Cas. 604. When there is an irreconcilable difference of opinion between members of a Bench of two Honorary Magistrates, as to the guilt of the accused, they should follow the principle laid down by the Local Government for guidance of Benches though not formally issued by the Magistrate of the District under the section. A reference therefore by the Bench to the District Magistrate is not warranted by the provisions of the Code. The Code does not prescribe that any particular classes of cases alone should be tried by Benches of Magistrates. The fact that for administrative purposes the District Magistrate has allotted any particular area to a particular Bench of Magistrates does not render proceedings invalid if they try a case falling outside the area allotted to them, 25 Cr.L.J. 556 (2)=81 Ind. Cas. 34 (2) ; 16 Cr.L.J. 113=27 Ind. Cas. 177 ; 18 A.L.J. 237. In cases where the view of the Chairman of the Bench of Magistrates is opposed to that of the majority and he is not prepared to write a judgment for the majority one of the Magistrates ought to be asked to write the judgment, otherwise the chairman if he happens to differ from the majority would write only his view of the case whether it be for acquittal or conviction and the rest of the Magistrates would not be in a position to place on record the reasons for their opinion. In such cases the rule ought to be that one of the majority should be asked to write the judgment which should form part of the record to enable the High Court in revision to know the reasons for the opinion of the majority, 23 L. W. 537=27 Cr. L. J. 90=91 Ind. Cas. 394. The President of a Bench of Magistrates who thought the accused was not guilty but the majority of the Bench found the accused guilty is competent to give his casting vote, on the question of sentence, 28 Cr.L.J. 310=100 Ind. Cas. 531 (1). In a case where the President is in the minority as to conviction or acquittal, the judgment should be written by some member of the majority, 51 M 338. Differences of opinion shall be settled by votes of the majority of the Magistrates present, the chairman having the casting vote Rule 18. Mad. Cr. Ruls of Pr. Where the rules provided for a quorum of two Magistrates sitting in a Bench and in recording evidence only one Magistrate sat and the other was absent, such evidence recorded is inadmissible and cannot be acted upon, 27 Cr.L.J. 542 (2)=93 Ind. Cas. 1038 (2). Constitution of benches cannot be changed during trial except in cases falling under S. 350 infra, 25 Cr.L.J. 198=76 Ind. Cas. 566.

A Bench may be empowered under S. 190, infra to take cognizance of offences, or it may try such cases only as may be made over to it under S. 192, infra, or under S. 17, infra, the District Magistrate may make rules or give special orders consistent with this Code as to the distribution of business among Benches. In a case tried by two Bench Magistrates who are divided in opinion the benefit of doubt should be given to the accused, 9 Cr. L. Rev. 84. A reference should not be made to the District Magistrate, 16 Cr. L. J. 113=27 Ind. Cas. 177; the rule framed by Government that the view of the chairman shall prevail is ultra vires. See also 10 C.W.N. 442=3 C.L.J. 492 (F.B.)=3 Cr. L.J. 409; 3 C.W.N. 862; 16 Cr. L. J. 113=27 Ind. Cas. 177; 15 A.L.J. 463=18 Cr. L.J. 749=40 Ind. Cas. 749; 20 C. 870. To meet the decisions in 44 B. 400; 16 M. 410, a new S 350A has been added with a view to legalise conviction by Benches properly constituted.

17. (1) All Magistrates appointed under Ss. 12, 13 and 14, and all Benches constituted under section 15, shall be subordinate to the District Magistrate, and he may, for time to time, make rules or give special orders consistent with this Code as to the distribution of business among such Magistrates and Benches; and

Subordination of Magistrates and Benches to District
Magistrate.

(2) Every Magistrate (other than a Sub divisional Magistrate, and every Bench exercising powers in a sub-division shall also be subordinate to the Sub-divisional Magistrate, subject, however, to the general control of the District Magistrate.

to Sub-divisional
Magistrate.

(3) All Assistant Sessions Judges shall be subordinate to the Sessions Judge in whose Court they exercise jurisdiction, and he may, from time to time, make rules consistent with this Code as to the distribution of business among such Assistant Sessions Judges.

Subordination of Assistant Sessions
Judges to Sessions
Judge.

(4) The Sessions Judge may also, when he himself is unavoidably absent or incapable of acting, make provision for the disposal of any urgent application by an Additional or Assistant Sessions Judge or, if there be no Additional or Assistant Judge, by the District Magistrate and such Judge or Magistrate shall have jurisdiction to deal with any such application.

(5) Neither the District Magistrate nor the Magistrates or Benches appointed or constituted under sections 12, 13, 14 and 15, shall be subordinate to the Sessions Judge, except to the extent and in the manner hereinafter expressly provided.

Scope of the Section—This section enacts that all Magistrates and Benches in any district shall be subordinate to the District Magistrate who is empowered to make rules and give special orders. Rule 122, Criminal Rules of Practice, dealing with powers of supervision suggests very wide powers of superintendence over subordinate Magistrates justifying the stopping of or going on with the trial of any particular proceeding before them. But where a District Magistrate ordered stay of trial pending the disposal of a Civil suit when the complaint was one of rioting and mischief it is liable to be set aside by the High Court. 41 M.L.J. 642=17 L.W. 570=(1923) M.W.N. 276=25 Cr. L.J. 280=76 Ind. Cas. 872.

All Magistrates appointed, etc.—(1) The three classes of Magistrates appointed under S. 12, viz., Magistrates of the first, second and third class; (2) Sub-divisional Magistrates under S. 13; (3) Special Magistrates under S. 14; (4) Benches of Magistrates under S. 15 are to be subordinate to the District Magistrate.

May make rules consistent with this Code.—The rule framed by the Local Government that when the members of a Bench of Magistrates are equally divided in opinion the view of the chairman shall prevail was held not inconsistent with this Code although the Court disapproved the rule. 10 C.W.N. 642 (F.B.) = 3 C.L.J. 492 = 3 Cr.L.J. 400.

Shall be subordinate to the District Magistrate.—"It appears that the District Magistrate is clothed with superiority in respect of not only his executive but also judicial functions. Being subordinate, it is necessarily 'inferior' but it is inferior also as being statuetably incompetent to hold or exercise equal powers with the latter Court in many respects. There may be 'inferiority' without subordination, but there cannot be subordination without inferiority, as 'subordinate' means, inferior in rank"—per West, J., in 9 B. 100 at 103. "In a District all other Magistrates are by S. 17 of the Code subordinate to the Magistrate of the District and consequently inferior to him," 12 C. 473 at 476. See also 8 M. 18; 7 A 853 (F.B.). A Deputy Magistrate attached to a sub-division is subordinate to the sub-divisional officer of that sub-division, 19 Cr. L.J. 126 = 43 Ind. Cas. 414. In 14 M. 369 it was held that a Magistrate who is subordinate to a sub-divisional Magistrate is also subordinate to the District Magistrate for purpose, of S. 529 and that neither this section nor Sch II can be so construed so as to take away the Special power conferred by S. 528 infra. Under S. 435 infra, the District Magistrate has power to call for the records of any proceeding before any Magistrate in his district. As to distribution of work by the District Magistrate under this section. See 35 A. 431 where it was held that an order by the District Magistrate directing that the senior Honorary Magistrate should distribute work among other Honorary Magistrates was held to be ultra vires. There is no provision in the Code which would give the District Magistrate the power to stay proceedings in a Criminal Court subordinate to him and the High Court's power to stay such proceedings can only be exercised under its general powers of superintendence, 44 M.L.J. 642 = (1923) M.W.N. 276 = 17 L.W. 570 = 25 Cr. L.J. 280, where 23 C. 610 and 30 M. 216 are referred to, see also 5 Cr. L.J. 237 (2) = 76 Ind. Cas. 869 (2). A District Magistrate has very wide powers of superintendence over all Magistrates of his District, 23 Cr.L.J. 237 = 75 Ind. Cas. 872. For the purposes of the Code unless it is shown that there is some express provision to the contrary all Magistrates are subordinate to District Magistrates and their proceedings, e.g., taking action under 188 I.P.C. can be quashed not by the Sessions Judges but by the District Magistrates only, 6 Lat. 32.

Sub-Section (2).—This sub-section makes all Magistrates other than Sub-Divisional Magistrates and every Bench in a sub-Division also subordinate to the Sub-Divisional Magistrate subject to the general control of the District Magistrate. For definition of Sub-Divisional Magistrate, See S. 13 supra. See also 19 Cr. L.J. 126 = 43 Ind. Cas. 414.

Sub-Section (3).—This sub-section makes Assistant Sessions Judges subordinate to the Sessions Judge but not Additional Sessions Judges.

Sub-Section (4).—This sub-section provides for the disposal of urgent applications by Additional Sessions Judge or by Assistant Sessions Judge or even by the District Magistrate during the unavoidable absence or incapacity to act on the part of the Sessions Judge.

Additional and Assistant Sessions Judges.—See notes under S. 9 supra at page 37.

Sub-Section (5).—According to this section a District Magistrate is not subordinate to the Sessions Judge except to the extent and in the manner expressly provided in the Code but as a Court, a District Magistrate's Court is only a Court of a Magistrate of the first class and is subordinate to the Sessions Judge for the purposes of S. 195 (3) infra and an appeal from an order passed by a District Magistrate under S. 476A infra will lie to the Sessions Judge 20 C. L.J. 550 = 115 Ind. Cas. 77. Except as provided by the Code the District Magistrate or other Magistrates subordinate to him are not subordinate to the Sessions Judge, 26 M. 656;

7 A. 853 (F.B.). See Ss. 435 and 436 infra. A District Magistrate should comply with the requisitions made by the Sessions Judge in appealable cases and also in references to the High Court and is also bound to submit any explanations called for by the Sessions Judge. See Ss. 123, 193, 195 (3), 408, 435 to 437, where express provisions are made as to subordination of Magistrates to the Sessions Judge. The Magistrates are subordinate to the Sessions Judge for reference to the High Court in cases in which revision is required. The duty of criticising the proceedings of the Magistrates is the duty of the superior Magistrate and not of the Sessions Judge, 7 M.H.C.R. Appx. 27. The subordination of Magistrates to the Sessions Judge is strictly limited to the cases specially provided by the Code. An order therefore under the Legal Practitioners Act by the Sessions Judge declaring certain persons as touts and extending the operation of his order to the Criminal Courts in the District other than his own Sessions Court is illegal, 26 M. 596.

D.—Courts of Presidency Magistrates.

18. (1) The Local Government shall, from time to time, appoint a sufficient number of persons (hereinafter called Presidency Magistrates) to be Magistrates for each of the presidency-towns, and shall appoint one of such persons to be Chief Presidency Magistrate for each such town.

Appointment of Presidency Magistrates.

(2) The powers of a Presidency Magistrate under this Code shall be exercised by the Chief Presidency Magistrate, or by a salaried Presidency Magistrate, or by any other Presidency Magistrate empowered by the Local Government to sit singly, or by any Bench of Presidency Magistrates.

(3) A Presidency Magistrate may be appointed under this section for such term as the Local Government may, by general or special order, direct.

(4) The Local Government may appoint any person to be an Additional Chief Presidency Magistrate, and such Additional Chief Presidency Magistrate shall have all or any of the powers of a Chief Presidency Magistrate under this Code or under any other law for the time being in force, as the Local Government may direct.

Amendment.—Sub-S. (3) and (4) are newly added.

Presidency Magistrate.—The expression 'Magistrate of Police' in S. 1 of Act XIII of 1859 means a Presidency Magistrate. Under Act III of 1898 S. 7, the Commissioner of Police for the town of Madras is ex-officio Presidency Magistrate. A Presidency Magistrate has authority to convict a person for an offence under the Penal Code, the said offence having been committed in a British ship during her voyage on the high seas. The charge should be framed with reference to the Indian Penal Code, and in case of conviction the punishment should be awarded under that Code, 25 B 636 at 638.

Any Bench of Magistrates.—Since sub-S. (2) confers on a Bench of Magistrates the full powers of a Presidency Magistrate the Bench is competent to take action under S. 106 infra, 7 Bom. L.R. 833=2 Cr. L.J. 770.

Sub-Ss (3) and (4) are new. "Power is given to define the term for which a Presidency Magistrate may be appointed and provision is made for the appointment of an Additional Chief Presidency Magistrate to meet the contingency of such an officer being needed, which has been actually experienced in Calcutta"—Statement of Objects and Reasons.

Madras rules see Fort St. George Gazette, dated 3rd January, 1911, Pt. I, p. 7 and for Bengal rules see Calcutta Gazette, dated 2nd May, 1906, Pt. I, p. 80. For Bombay rules see Bom. Notification No. 2536, dated 19th May, 1901. In sub-S. (2) after the words "Presidency Magistrates" the words including Additional Chief Presidency Magistrates are newly added in consequence of the addition to S 18, supra, so as to permit the definition of the position of an Additional Chief Presidency Magistrate vis a vis the Chief Presidency Magistrate. For Madras rules for the guidance of stipendiary Magistrates see Fort St. George Gazette, 6th August, 1901, Pt. I, pp. 1414-1415.

May define the extent of their subordination.—The powers of a Chief Presidency Magistrate are the same as those of an ordinary Presidency Magistrate both as to the entertainment and disposal of cases. Both are empowered to dispose of the same class of cases and inflict the same punishments. The procedure before both is identical and each has territorial jurisdiction over the whole Presidency Town. Appeals from both lie to the same Court and under similar condition. The extent of the subordination under the subsection is to be defined by the Local Government. G. O. No. 168 dated the 2nd February 1900, directed that the subordination shall be limited to the purposes of Ss. 124 (1), 144 (4), 192 and 528 of the Code. In all other respects the Chief Presidency Magistrate and a Presidency Magistrate are of equal jurisdiction, 10 M.L.T. 518=(1911) 2 M.W.N. 59.

E.—Justices of the Peace.

22. Every Local Government, so far as regards the territories subject to its administration may by notification in the official Gazette, appoint such persons resident within British India and not being the subjects of any foreign State as it thinks fit to be Justices of the Peace within and for local area mentioned in such notification.

Justices of the Peace for the mufassal.

Scope of the section.—Before the amendment only an European British subject can be appointed a Justice of the Peace outside the Presidency-towns. Now by the amendment by repeal of S. 23, Indian British subjects are qualified to be appointed Justices of the Peace. To be appointed a J. P. it is not necessary to be an European British subject. The powers conferred on Justices of the Peace are the ordinary powers conferred on Magistrates of the first class. They do not include powers with which by virtue of S. 37 a Magistrate of the first class may be invested by one or other of the authorities mentioned in that section, 34 M. 343.

24. [Present Justices of the Peace.] Repealed by Act XII of 1923, S. 4.

25. In virtue of their respective offices, the Governor-General, Governors, Lieutenant-Governors and Chief Commissioners, the Ordinary Members of the Council of the Governor-General, and the Judges of the High Courts are Justices of the Peace within and for the whole of British India, Sessions Judges and District Magistrates are Justices of the Peace within and for the whole of the territories administered by the Local Government under which they are serving, and the

Ex-officio Justices of the Peace.

Presidency Magistrates are Justices of the Peace within and for the towns of which they are respectively Magistrates.

This section specifies who are Ex-officio Justices of the Peace.

F.—Suspension and Removal.

26. All Judges of Criminal Courts other than the High Courts established by Royal Charter, and all Magistrates may be suspended or removed from office by the Local Government :

Suspension and removal of Judges and Magistrates.

Provided that such Judges and Magistrates as now are liable to be suspended or removed from office by the Governor-General in Council only shall not be suspended or removed from office by any other authority.

The term 'removed' is used in a technical sense and implies dismissal from the Bench and does not include such administrative measures as transfers of officers from one place to another. Madras Government Notification, dated 10th August, 1874. See Act XXXVII of 1850 as amended by Act I of 1897 as to suspension and removal of Judges and Magistrates.

The appointment of Sub-Magistrates is by the Local Government under S. 12, supra, and they may be suspended or removed from office by the Local Government only under this section. The Collector of a District therefore has no power to suspend a Sub-Magistrate from his office, 30 Bom L.R. 1050 at 1068.

Suspension and removal of Justices of the Peace.

27. The Local Government may suspend or remove from office any Justice of the Peace appointed by it.

In the Code there is no special provision for judicial officers retiring from or resigning their office, 44 M.L.J. 423.

POWERS OF COURTS.

A.—Description of Offences cognizable by each Court.

28. Subject to the other provisions of this Code any offence under the Indian Penal Code may be tried—Offences under Penal Code.

(a) by the High Court, or

(b) by the Court of Session, or

(c) by any other Court by which such offence is shown in the eighth column of the second schedule to be triable.

ILLUSTRATION.

A is committed to the Sessions Court on a charge of culpable homicide. He may be convicted of voluntarily causing hurt, an offence triable by a Magistrate.

Scope of the Section.—"This section is a general section which, subject to the other provisions of the Code, gives power to the High Court and the Court of Sessions to try offences under the Indian Penal Code, and it also enacts that any offence under the Indian Penal Code may be tried by any other Court by which such offence is shown in the eighth column of the second schedule to be triable. This provision as to the other Courts does not cut down or limit the jurisdiction of the High Court or Court of Sessions"—per Edge, C.J., in 8 A. 665 at 667. Offences are elaborately scheduled within the powers of the various Magistrates precisely for the reason that the graver offences should be tried by better qualified Magistrates, 25 L.W. 86; 28 Cr. L.J. 164=99 Ind. Cas. 596. The schedule to the Code must be read along with the Code itself, 24 C. 429. The illustration to the section is intended to show that although an offence according to Sch. II appears as one triable by a Magistrate only if the case is committed to the Court of Session for a more serious offence, the Sessions Court has jurisdiction to convict the accused for a minor offence triable by the Magistrate. But see the case in 19 A. 465 where a commitment to the Court of Session by a Magistrate for an offence punishable under Opium Act I of 1878 was quashed by the Court on the ground that the offence is made punishable under the Opium Act by a Magistrate, and not by a Court of Session which is not empowered to pass sentence. Where a Magistrate and the Sessions Court have concurrent jurisdiction, the Magistrate should use his own discretion according to the circumstances, Weir II, 19. It is illegal for a Magistrate to commit even though he is empowered to try the case, 24 C. 429. Where there are aggravating circumstances the inferior Courts should not try, 7 Cr. L.J. 319 at 320, Weir II, 21. See also Weir II, 20 and Weir I, 448. No Court can clutch at jurisdiction by ignoring facts of aggravation which make the offence really cognizable by a higher tribunal, 24 M. 675; 12 M. 54; Weir II, 21; 1910 M.W.N. 852; 25 L.W. 86=28 Cr. L.J. 164=99 Ind. Cas. 596. No Court can ignore the effect of aggravation and split up a grave charge into its component parts and try the cases so split up, as by doing so it is clutching at jurisdiction and doing something not empowered by this section and Sch. II of the Code. If it exceeds its power in good faith S. 529 infra allows it a certain latitude but that section will not allow it to try an offence which it is not empowered to try. On the contrary S. 530 infra definitely avoids such proceeding, 25 L.W. 86=28 Cr. L.J. 164=99 Ind. Cas. 596.

Subject to the other provisions of the Code.—For example, except in certain cases of contempt committed in its view or presence, S. 460, infra, or of certain offences against public justice, such as perjury, forgery and other similar offences committed before himself or in contempt of his authority or is brought under his notice as such Judge or Magistrate in the course of a judicial proceeding in Court, S. 487, infra, no Court of Session can take cognizance of any offence as a Court of Original jurisdiction unless upon commitment by a competent Magistrate, S. 193, infra.

Any offence may be tried by the High Court.—For definition of High Court, see p. 4 (1) (j) supra. The High Courts are constituted by Royal Charter. A High Court may take cognizance of an offence upon a commitment to it, S. 194, infra. Such commitment in the presidency towns is to be made by a Presidency Magistrate and the accused may be an European British subject, or an Indian British subject or any subject of any country outside British India or of any State in alliance with His Majesty. The provisions of this section as to other Courts do not restrict the powers of the High Court, 8 A. 665.

By any other Court by which such offence is shown to be triable.—This section read with col. 8 of Sch. II of the Code defines the powers of each class of Magistrates to try particular offences. The powers of Magistrates under the Code may be classified as follows. (1) power to take cognizance of and try offences within certain local limits vested in Magistrates according as they are Magistrates of the first, second or third class as defined in Ss. 12 and 28 read with col. 8 of Sch. II of the Code, (2) certain incidental powers inherently vested in the several classes of Magistrates which are known as "ordinary powers" and which are set out in S. 36 read with Sch. III of the Code, (3) certain additional powers set out in Sch. IV of the Code which may expressly be conferred on any particular Magistrate according to the class to which he belongs, e.g., power to try summarily under S. 200 infra; power to pass orders under S. 562 (1) infra. The powers under classes (2) and (3) are accessory to the power under class (1) which may be called principle powers, 28 Cr. L.J. 913 at 926 (F.B.)=103 Ind. Cas. 433.

29. (1) Subject to the other provisions of this Code, any offence under any other law shall, when any Court is mentioned in this behalf in such law, be tried by such Court.

Offences under other laws.

(2) When no Court is so mentioned, it may be tried by the High Court or subject as aforesaid by any Court constituted under this Code by which such offence is shown in the eighth column of the second schedule to be triable.

Offences against other Laws.—Where a special enactment provides a special tribunal for the trial of certain offences recourse must be had to that tribunal and no other, 18 Cr. L.J. 927=42 Ind. Cas. 159. This section determines the Court by which the offence provided by S. 10 of the Musalman Wakf Act 1923 is to be tried as there is nothing which is repugnant to the definition of the offence given herein and in General Clauses Act S. 3 (37). The Wakf Act contains no provision regarding the Court by which the offences under S. 10 of the Act are to be tried and so the provisions of this section prevail and Sch. II of the Code col. (8) shows that the offences are triable by a Magistrate, 28 Cr. L.J. 954=125 Ind. Cas. 666. The last portion of Sch. II deals with offences against other laws. The schedule must be read along with the Code itself, 24 C. 429.

When any Court is mentioned, be tried by such Court.—"It is within the power of the legislature when creating a new offence to make it cognizable only by a particular tribunal, and mode of procedure and the intention of the legislature that this offence should be tried in a summary manner and punished by a Magistrate and by no other tribunal appears to be clear from the words of the section. The offence and the specifically prescribed mode of conviction and punishment to which alone the offender is liable are inseparable. Many English authorities have established the rule that where a statute makes unlawful that which was lawful before, and inseparably connects with the prohibition of offence a specific remedy, that remedy must be pursued and no other," 5 M.H.C.R. 277 at 279. Therefore a conviction at a Criminal Sessions of the Madras High Court for supplying liquor without a license made punishable by Act I of 1866 was held to be without jurisdiction as the Act which declares it illegal made it punishable by a Magistrate. See 19 A. 465 where a commitment to the Court of Sessions by a Magistrate under the Opium Act was held to be without jurisdiction as the offence made punishable by the Act was triable by a Magistrate. So also by exercising the power of transfer an offence under a special law cognizable by a Magistrate invested with special powers cannot be transferred to Magistrate exercising ordinary powers. 1886 A.W.N. 289. See also 23 C. 442; Ratanlal 126, 364 and 763. A Presidency Magistrate cannot try an offence under the Prisons Act as he is not a District Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class empowered to try the offence under the Act, 32 M. 303. See S. 184 infra which says that all offences against the provision of any law relating to Railways, Telegraphs, the Post Office or Arms and Ammunitions may be tried by a Presidency Magistrate whether the offence is stated to have been committed within the presidency town or not, provided the offender and all the witnesses for the prosecution are to be found there; see also 7 M. 347 followed in Weir II, 25 where it was held that this section does not affect the jurisdiction given to a second class Magistrate by the Registration Act to try offences under that Act. Any Magistrate authorized under the Code by the District Magistrate to take cognizance of offences generally is thereby authorized to take cognizance of an offence under a Special Act, for example, under S. 20 of Cattle Trespass Act and no special authorization is necessary, 50 M. 844.

Where no Court is mentioned.—See 9 C.W.N. 816=2 Cr.L.J. 532 (2) where it was held that a Magistrate has jurisdiction to try a landlord for an offence under S. 58 (3) of the Tenancy Act, viz., failure to prepare and retain counterfoils of rent receipts. "Reading the definition of offence in S. 4 (1) (b) with S. 20 (2) and the last entry in Sch. II of the Code, we entertain no doubt that the Magistrate had jurisdiction to try the case."

29A. No Magistrate of the second or third class shall inquire into or try any offence which is punishable otherwise than with fine not exceeding fifty rupees where the accused is an European British subject who claims to be tried as such.

Trial of European British subjects by second and third class Magistrates.

This section is new and was added by Act XII of 1923; it enables second and third class Magistrates to try European British subjects, but an European British subject who claims his privilege as such, cannot be tried except for offences punishable with fine not exceeding Rupees Fifty. All first class Magistrates are now empowered to try European British subjects.

29B. Any offence, other than one punishable with death or transportation for life, committed by any person who at the date when he appears or is brought before the Court is under the age of fifteen years, may be tried by a District Magistrate or a Chief Presidency Magistrate, or by any Magistrate specially empowered by the Local Government to exercise the powers conferred by Section 8, sub-section (1), of the Reformatory Schools Act, 1897, or, in any area in which the said Act has been wholly or in part repealed by any other law providing for the custody, trial or punishment of youthful offenders, by any Magistrate empowered by or under such law to exercise all or any of the powers conferred thereby.

Jurisdiction in the case of juveniles.

This section has been newly added for the benefit of juveniles, and provides that offence committed by children not being very serious shall be tried by District Magistrate, Chief Presidency Magistrate or by a Magistrate specially empowered under S. 8 (1), Reformatory Schools Act. See also Madras Act IV of 1920, an Act to make further provision for the custody, trial and punishment of youthful offenders and for the protection of children and young persons as amended by Madras Act VI of 1923. See also The Madras Borstal Schools Act, 1925. "The existing procedure of committal to a Court of Session is lengthy and often involves the prolonged detention of juvenile offenders as undertrial prisoners, although the offences generally committed by them seldom require to be so severely punished as to necessitate the intervention of a sessions Court the sentence or order eventually passed being often incommensurate with the time and energy expended upon a committal and Sessions trial." Statement of Objects & Reasons.

30. In the territories respectively administered by the Lieutenant-Governors of the Punjab and Burma and the Chief Commissioners of Oudh, the Central Provinces, Coorg and Assam, in Sind, and in those parts of the other Provinces in which there are Deputy Commissioners or Assistant Offences not punishable with death.

Commissioners the Local Government may, notwithstanding anything contained in S. 29, invest the District Magistrate or any Magistrate of the first class, with power to try as a Magistrate all offences not punishable with death.

Scope of the section.—This section must be read as qualifying or controlling the provisions of S 28 supra which in its turn makes reference to col. 8 of the Sch. II to the Code, 27 Cr. L. J. 728=95 Ind. Cas. 56. This section must be read with S. 34 infra. Any Magistrate so empowered can pass a sentence of imprisonment not exceeding seven years including such solitary confinement as is authorized by law. The object of conferring special powers on District Magistrates is to accelerate proceedings, by avoiding delay consequent on commitment to Sessions Court which sit only at considerable intervals and also to afford relief to those who are to attend as witnesses, 7 C.W.N. 457. He must purport to act under his special powers, 7 Cr. L. J. 46 and he is subordinate to the Session, Court, 1 Cr. L. J. 163. Where a Sessions Judge is of opinion that a Magistrate empowered under this section has in fact tried a case which he is not competent to try he should report the case to the High Court for an order that the accused be committed for trial to the Court of Session, 27 Cr. L. J. 846=95 Ind. Cas. 766.

To try as a Magistrate.—Where a Deputy Commissioner tries a case exclusively triable by a Court of Session under the special powers conferred by this section he does so as a Magistrate, 10 C.W.N. 847=4 Cr. L. J. 44.

All offences not punishable with death.—When there is evidence which if believed would sustain a charge of murder—an offence punishable with death—it is undesirable that a Magistrate should under this section try the case on a minor charge. By doing so he incurs a grave responsibility, 10 C. 85, but where the charge was under S. 302 read with 120 B, a Magistrate specially empowered under this section can try the offence if murder is not committed in pursuance of the conspiracy so that the offence was not punishable with death, 23 Cr. L. J. 1241=82 Ind. Cas. 169.

A Magistrate exercising special powers under this section should not himself try a case when there is evidence which if believed would substantiate a charge of an offence beyond his jurisdiction, 10 C. 85; 12 M. 54 at 55.

Appeal—See S. 408 infra, In 9 C. 513 at 516 it was held that the expression "District Magistrate" in S. 408 infra includes a District Magistrate specially empowered under this section.

B.—Sentences which may be passed by Courts of various classes.

31. (1) A High Court may pass any sentence authorized by law.

(2) A Sessions Judge or Additional Sessions Judge may pass any sentence authorized by law; but any sentence of death passed by any such Judge shall be subject to confirmation by the High Court.

Sentences which High Courts and Sessions Judges may pass.

(3) An Assistant Sessions Judge may pass any sentence authorized by law, except a sentence of death or of transportation for a term exceeding seven years or of imprisonment for a term exceeding seven years.

Pass any sentence authorized by law.—In all crimes except those for which the sentence of death must be pronounced, a very wide latitude in the matter of fixing the degree of punishment is allowed to the Judge who tries the case. The policy of the law as regards most of the crimes is to fix a maximum penalty which is only intended for the worst cases and to leave it to the discretion of the Judge to determine to what extent in any particular case the punishments awarded should approach to or recede from the maximum limits. The exercise of this discretion is a matter of prudence and not of law. Thus if a crime is committed which is of a kind calculated to inspire great alarm as manifesting a very mischievous disposition or is specially rife in a particular District or throughout the country, it may be necessary to award a very severe punishment. The Court in fixing the punishment in any particular case will have to take into consideration the nature of the offence the circumstances in which it was committed, the degree of deliberation shown by the offender the provocation which he had received, the antecedents of the prisoner up to the time of sentence, his age and character. Halsbury, Vol IX, paras 819-22 See also Arch. Cr. P. & Ev., p. 219 (26th Ed). It is obviously impossible to give an exhaustive list of circumstances which should be taken into consideration in determining the amount of the punishment, or to lay down any mathematical formula to measure the penalty in each case. But it is perfectly clear that the maximum punishment prescribed by the law should not automatically follow upon a conviction. When Legislature has laid down a maximum punishment for an offence or a series of offences, it is the duty of the trial Court to apportion punishment in each case after considering all the circumstances having a bearing upon it and not to shirk its responsibility by imposing the maximum penalty upon every offender, 30 Cr. L. J. 45=112 Ind. Cas. 783. The question of punishment depends upon two considerations (1) the public importance of the offence, (2) the deserts of the particular offender. A sentence passed should not be such as to be open to the criticism that it is an unmitigated exhibition of superior force unredeemed by a tinge of judicial balance, A I.R. 1928 All. 150 (F.B.). These words "pass any sentence authorized by law" so far as Sessions Judges are concerned must be read subject to S. 34A, infra So a sentence of whipping on a European British subject cannot legally be passed by a Session Judge, Additional Sessions Judge or an Assistant Sessions Judge, See S. 53, I.P.C., which gives the punishments to which the offenders are liable under the I.P.C., viz, death, transportation, penal servitude, imprisonment (simple or rigorous), forfeiture of property and fine whipping and detention in a reformatory may also be passed. If a criminal were to ask the Court to pass a sentence upon him not authorized by law instead of a sentence which the law warrants the request would not render valid a sentence otherwise unlawful—per Peacock, C.J., in 3 B.L.R. (Ap. Cr) 50 at 52. See also S. 59, I.P.C., as to commutation of a sentence of imprisonment into transportation but transportation can be awarded in lieu of a substantive term of imprisonment for a term of seven years or upwards, 5 M. 28. But transportation is to be abolished shortly, and a Bill has been introduced already, in the Legislative Assembly, six years ago.

Sentences of death—The old maxim 'life for life' has been in existence ever since the beginning of the world and is proof of the animal craving for vengeance still throbbing in the veins of man in spite of science and civilization. It is always strongly argued that capital sentence has a deterrent effect. Educative and moral aspects are subordinated and even stifled by putting an end to life. Progressive countries like Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Belgium, Holland, Italy and Austria have already set an example by abolishing capital sentence. In America in some States prisoners are not hanged by the neck till they are dead, but electrocuted by placing the condemned man in an electric chair and killed, instantaneously by electric shock but in other states it is abolished and in a member of states courts are given power to pass imprisonment for life. In England public opinion is gradually gaining ground to abolish capital sentence. In India a Bill has been introduced in the Legislative Assembly to do away with the capital sentence clearly showing thereby a natural inclination of the Indian mind to respect human life, and if the Bill is passed into law, it is bound to have an exhilarating moral effect. The Code does not indicate what reasons should be considered as sufficient for refraining from passing a sentence of death in a case of murder. Judges must not shrink from doing their duty, however painful it may be and must pass capital sentence in cases of deliberate murder, 3 L.B.R. 163-4 Cr. L J. 132. In the interest of the community, it behoves the Court to pass very severe sentences upon persons who pander to the unhealthy cravings of their fellow creatures by supplying them with drugs, 28 Cr. L J. 321 at 322-100 Ind. Cas. 703. If Judges have conscientious scruples to pass death sentences they ought to resign their office and not to throw upon the High Court the unpleasant duty of issuing notice to the accused to show cause why death sentence should not be passed and then enhancing the sentence to one of death, Cr. A. No. 335 of 1927 (M.H.C.) See 7 W.R. (c) 33. It is opposed to ordinary humane principles that a person who has not reached the legal age of discretion should be made to pay the death penalty where the law allows an alternative punishment 30 Cr. L.J. 63 at 67-113 Ind. Cas. 177. Where a body of persons go out with the deliberate intention of killing a person and in pursuance of the common object one or other kill him, it is manifest that all would be equally guilty and should receive a capital sentence even though it may not be possible to establish which of the accused struck the fatal blow. There should not be, if in fact it does exist, a practice to assume that where the particular person cannot be found to be guilty of having inflicted the fatal blow, capital sentence should not be inflicted, 27 A.L.J. 234 at 236. Mere suspicion of a wife's conduct is no extenuation for not passing the death sentence, 52 M.L.J. 147 at 150-30 L.W. 229-1929 M.W.N. 269-30 Cr. L.J. 630 -116 Ind. Cas. 142 See 53 M. 147 at 150, where it was held that where two or more persons band themselves together for taking a man's life and are found guilty of murder the Court is not justified in refraining from passing a sentence of death which would otherwise be proper merely because that it could not be found definitely which of the accused inflicted the fatal blow. In deciding as to whether some or all of a number of persons are to be sentenced to death after a conviction of all for murder it has been long settled that prima facie all the persons convicted should be sentenced to extreme penalty and it is only where special circumstances are shown in favour of any individual that the Court sentences such individual to the alternative punishment of transportation for life, 8 Pat. 181.

Sentences which Magistrates may pass.

32. (1) The Courts of Magistrates may pass the following sentences, namely :—

- | | | |
|--|---|---|
| (a) Courts of Presidency Magistrates and of Magistrates of the first class : | { | Imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, including such solitary confinement as is authorized by law ;
Fine not exceeding one thousand rupees ;
Whipping. |
| (b) Courts of Magistrates of the second class : | { | Imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, including such solitary confinement as is authorized by law ;
Fine not exceeding two hundred rupees. |
| (c) Courts of Magistrates of the third class : | { | Imprisonment for a term not exceeding one month ;
Fine not exceeding fifty rupees. |

(2) The Court of any Magistrate may pass any lawful sentence, combining any of the sentences which it is authorized by law to pass.

It is obviously impossible to give an exhaustive list of circumstances which should be taken into consideration in determining the amount of the punishment or to lay down any mathematical formula to measure the penalty in each case. But it is perfectly clear that the maximum punishment prescribed by the law should not automatically follow upon a conviction, 30 Cr.L.J. 15=112 Ind. Cas. 783. The nature and limit of sentences are generally prescribed by the law defining the offence and it is within such limits that the powers of individual Magistrates should be exercised subject to jurisdiction to try the particular offence set forth in Sch. II, col. 8 of this Code and to special local jurisdiction (Ch XV). The provisions of this section are not affected by S. 75 I.P.C. although Magistrates frequently quote wrongly S. 75 I.P.C. when passing a severer sentence. Ratanlal 688; 6 Bom L.R. 548. An Appellate Court when varying the sentence passed by the lower Court is bound by the limitation contained in this section, 45 A. 592.

Imprisonment.—No rigid rule can be laid down as to punishments for offences, each case must depend upon its own circumstances. In certain cases imprisonment may be desirable or necessary, in other cases where the offence is casually committed with a view to petty gain or to meet necessities of life infliction of a suitable fine may not be altogether inappropriate but even preferable to short term of imprisonment. It is the duty of the prosecution to place before the Court the requisite and relevant evidence indicating the measure of the guilt of the accused, 4 Mys. L.J. 132. In awarding sentence the Court should have regard to the ultimate consequences of the acts committed by the accused, 44 C.L.J. 208. An accused person is not entitled to get off with a small sentence merely because he is a person of high position and one who has done good service for the Government in the past. When such a man falls in this manner, everybody looks to see whether it is not true that there is one law for the rich and another for the poor, and a Court cannot lightly reduce the sentence in such a case to one far below that which should have been awarded to an ignorant and poverty-stricken offender who had in the same way fallen a victim to temptation, 23 Cr.L.J. 749=103 Ind. Cas. 757. In every sessions trial the reasons which guided the Judge for passing a sentence of exceptional severity or undue leniency or for awarding varying degrees of punishments on different accused convicted, of the same offence at one trial should be recorded. G.O. No. 918 Jud. dated 16-6-1910—Rule 49 Mad. Cr. Rule of Pr. Where the statute lays down that for certain offences, e.g., S. 471 or S. 193 I.P.C. the punishment shall be imprisonment, it means that the offender shall go to jail and imprisonment till the rising of the Court is a clear evasion of that intention. Possibly in rare cases where the offence is obviously technical a Court may be justified in taking the extreme step of evading the statute which it is appointed to administer. That an accused is a fairly respectable man and not a hardened litigant are not circumstances of extenuation, 1929 M.W.N. 114=30 Cr. L.J. 237=115 Ind. Cas. 234. Where an accused is convicted of an offence for which he shall be punished with imprisonment and shall also be liable to fine say S. 420 I.P.C., the sentence of imprisonment must be awarded and the Court has a discretion to add or refrain from adding a fine to the sentence of imprisonment and the word "liable" is significant, 27 A.L.J. 300. It means imprisonment of either description (i.e., rigorous or simple) as defined by S. 63 I.P.C. & S. 3(26), General Clauses Act. The period during which a person was kept in custody as an undertrial prisoner cannot count as a part of the sentence nor can the Court order it to be so considered as such, 5 Lah. L.J. 224=24 Cr.L.J. 583=68 Ind. Cas. 817. In computing the sentence of imprisonment, the day upon which the sentence is passed and the day of release both days to be included and considered as days of imprisonment. Rule 173 Mad. Cr. Rule of Pr.

Solitary Confinement.—Solitary confinement is regulated by Ss. 73 and 74, I.P.C. It is not illegal to impose solitary confinement as part of the sentence in a case tried summarily under Chap. XXII, 6 A. 83. S. 262 infra only limits the term of imprisonment but does not take away the Court's powers under S. 73, I.P.C. A Court has no jurisdiction to impose a sentence of solitary confinement when convicting an accused under S. 22 of the Criminal Tribes Act as S. 73 prescribes the punishment, 46 A. 114, nor has the Court power to award solitary confinement when convicting an accused person under a special or local law such as the Arms Act, 25 Cr. L. J. 190=76 Ind. Cas. 151.

Fine—This section gives power to a Presidency Magistrate and a Magistrate of the first class only to fine up to Rs. 1,000. The fact that several offences have been committed, and therefore the Magistrate's power to fine would extend to more than Rs. 1,000 is not affected by this section, 20 C. 676 at 631. The power of a Magistrate to pass a sentence of fine is in all cases limited to rupees thousand. The power of Sessions Court and the High Court to impose a sentence of fine is unlimited, 7 W.R. (Cr.) 37. But regard must be had to the pecuniary circumstances of the offender and to the character and magnitude of the offence. A sentence of fine which when imposed is wholly impossible for an accused to pay without ruining himself and without inflicting great hardship upon his family should not be imposed. It is useless to inflict fines which will cripple the family of the accused for years and in the end fall upon the women and children, 23 Cr. L.J. 863=104 Ind. Cas. 705. In cases of offences of an aggravated nature imprisonment is undoubtedly more suitable than fine, 24 Cr. L.J. 278=71 Ind. Cas. 918 followed in 27 Cr. L. J. 450=93 Ind. Cas. 704. A sentence of fine should never be inflicted in order that a further term of imprisonment in default should be suffered. If the substantive sentence which could be passed by a Magistrate is insufficient for the offence, the proper course is to send the case for trial to a Court which can pass an adequate sentence. An order to pay a daily fine is illegal, 27 C. 565. See also 24 A. 392, 22 B. 766. Imprisonment in default of payment of fine may be of any description, S. 66, I P.C., but when the offence is punishable with fine only, then simple imprisonment shall be imposed, S. 67, I P.C., and the imprisonment shall cease immediately the fine is either paid or levied by process of law, S. 68, I P.C. As to payment of compensation out of fine See Ss. 545 and 546, infra.

Whipping.—S. 3 of the Whipping Act VI of 1909 specifies the offences punishable with whipping in lieu of other punishments, viz., (1) theft and its aggravated forms (2) lurking house-trespass and its aggravated forms. S. 4 specifies offence punishable with whipping in lieu of, or in addition to other punishment, viz., (1) rape, its abetment or attempt, (2) unnatural offence, (3) hurt in committing or attempting robbery, (4) dacoity. S. 5 says that juvenile offenders who commit, abet or attempt offences under Chapter VI I.P.C. and Ss 153 and 503 I.P.C. and offences punishable with death (2) offences under other laws punishable with imprisonment specially notified by Governor-General in Council, may be punished with any other punishment. Where the law empowers a particular Magistrate to do a particular act or to make a certain order it should always appear upon the proceedings that the Magistrate making the order or doing the act is a Magistrate who had jurisdiction to do it, 22 W.R. (Cr.) 30. Under the Whipping Act IV of 1909 second class Magistrates are no longer competent to sentence offenders to whipping. For general instructions as to whipping, see Pro. of Govt. of India Dept. (Jud.) Home, 11-1-1892. It is competent to a Magistrate in British India to pass a sentence which should take effect after the expiration of a previous sentence in a foreign territory; e.g., Mysore, 20 M. 444. As a general proposition, it is clearly the duty of a Magistrate, when pronouncing a sentence, to define precisely the nature of the sentence, which, like a Civil Court decree, ought to be self-contained, so that the functionary who has to execute it should have no doubt as to the directions given therein, 24 M. 13.

May pass any lawful sentence—A Magistrate is entitled to release a first offender on probation of good conduct, discharge him with an admonition, to require an accused to notify his residence or change of residence after release. A sentence of imprisonment for the period an accused was in the lock up as an under trial prisoner is bad, but imprisonment till the rising of the Court is good. When a prisoner is liable to be sentenced to imprisonment and fine for a particular offence, some term of imprisonment however short should be imposed. In awarding sentence, in a case of communal riot and dacoity, it must very clearly be remembered that when the accused were smarting with indignation against outrages upon sacred places, every allowance should be made to their feelings and comparative leniency should be shown but at the same time the sentence should be adequate, 2 Luck. 264 A consolidated sentence should not be passed for a number of offences, 46 M.L.J. 311=1924 M.W.N. 238=19 L.W. 211=25 Cr. L.J. 396=77 Ind. Cas. 444.

Power of Magistrates to sentence to imprisonment in default of fine,

33. (1) The Court of any Magistrate may award such terms of imprisonment in default of payment of fine as is authorized by law in case of such default:

Provided that—(a) the term is not in excess of the Magistrate's powers under this Code; (b) in any case decided by a Magistrate where imprisonment has been awarded as part of the substantive sentence, the period of imprisonment awarded in default of payment of the fine shall not exceed one-fourth of the period of imprisonment which such Magistrate is competent to inflict as punishment for the offence otherwise than as imprisonment in default of payment of the fine.

Proviso as to certain cases.

(2) The imprisonment awarded under this section may be in addition to a substantive sentence of imprisonment for the maximum term awardable by the Magistrate under section 32.

Scope of the section.—This section does not authorize a Magistrate to pass a sentence of imprisonment in default of payment of fine in excess of the term prescribed by S. 65 I.P.O., 10 M. 155 (F.B.), and 166 (foot-note) overruling 1 M. 277. It only regulates the proceedings of Magistrates whose powers are limited, 1 A. 461 (F.B.). Thus there are two limitations as to the term of imprisonment which could be awarded—(1) that imposed by S. 66 I.P.O., (2) that imposed by cl. (1) (b) of this section and S. 32 supra. The excess fare and fare referred to in S. 113 (4) of the Indian Railways Act cannot be a fine although it can be recovered as such. Therefore a Magistrate has no power to impose imprisonment in default of payment, 18 B. 440 at 451.

As is authorized by law.—Courts are first to comply with the provisions of S. 32 supra and to conform to the provisions of Ss. 64 to 70, I.P.O. and this section only regulates the proceedings of Courts which are thus limited, 1 A. 461 (F.B.).

Imprisonment in default of payment of fine—See Ss. 64 and 65, I.P.O., as to cases where the offence is punishable with imprisonment as well as fine and Ss. 66 and 67 and S. 25 General Clauses Act, with regard to cases where the offences are punishable with fine only. In cases of simple imprisonment ordered in default of payment of fine the general rules of Ss. 32 and 33 are applicable, and the principle of S. 67, I.P.O. read with this Code is unaffected by Ch. XXII of this Code (Summary Trials), 6 A. 61. Owing to omission to notify part-payment of the fine, the full term of imprisonment was served out by the accused and even in such a case the Court had no power to order a refund of the amount paid, 3 B.H.C.R. (Cr. Ca.) 37.

Proviso (1) (b).—Where the accused were sentenced by the Presidency Magistrate under S. 58 of the Bengal Excise Act to a fine of Rs. 100 each in default to 3 months' imprisonment and also each of the accused to 6 months' imprisonment which was the maximum term that could be awarded under S. 74 of the Act, it was held that the sentence of imprisonment under S. 74 was not in excess of the Magistrate's power and would not affect the sentence under S. 58 and that the three months' imprisonment in default was a legal sentence, 80 C. 575 at 578-79.

34. The Court of a Magistrate, specially empowered under section 30, may pass any sentence authorized by law, except a sentence of death or of transportation for a term exceeding seven years or imprisonment for a term exceeding seven years.

Higher powers of certain District
Magistrates.

This section prescribes the limit to the sentence which could be passed by Magistrates exercising higher powers. As to the rules of trial see §s. 28, 29 and 30 supra. Generally cases on the border line of jurisdiction and cases of great difficulty ought to be committed to the Court of Session. Where the offence charged appears to be beyond the jurisdiction of the Magistrate the proper course is to commit to the Court of Session, e.g., if the offence disclosed was one of attempting to wage war against the King, the Magistrate should not try it as one of dacoity. See 10 C 83.

Sentences which Courts and Magistrates may pass upon European British subjects.

34A. Notwithstanding anything contained in sections 31, 32 and 34—

(a) no Court of session shall pass on any European British subject any sentence other than a sentence of death, penal servitude, or imprisonment with or without fine, or of fine, and

(b) no District Magistrate or other Magistrate of the first class shall pass on any European British subject any sentence other than imprisonment which may extend to two years, or fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or both.

This section was newly added by Act XII of 1923 and provides for sentences which could be passed on European British subjects by Courts of Session, District Magistrate, and Magistrates of the first class. Whipping as a sentence is excluded by this section. See notes to S. 30 supra. A sentence by a Magistrate acting under this section exceeding four years' imprisonment, or any sentence of transportation is appealable direct to the High Court, S. 403, proviso (b) infra. No cases in which a Magistrate exercising special powers under this section shall be tried summarily, S. 260 (1) proviso.

35. (1) When a person is convicted at one trial of two or more offences the Court may, subject to the provisions of section 71 of the Indian Penal Code, sentence him for each offence, to the several punishments prescribed therefor which such Court is competent to inflict; such punishments, when consisting of

of conviction of several offences at one

imprisonment or transportation to commence the one after the expiration of the other in such order as the Court may direct, unless the Court directs that such punishments shall run concurrently.

(2) In the case of consecutive sentences, it shall not be necessary for the Court, by reason only of the aggregate punishment for the several offences being in excess of the punishment which it is competent to inflict on conviction of a single offence, to send the offender for trial before a higher Court :

Provided as follows :—

(a) in no case shall such person be sentenced to imprisonment for a longer period than fourteen years :
 Maximum term of punishment

(b) if the case is tried by a Magistrate (other than a Magistrate acting under section 34), the aggregate punishment shall not exceed twice the amount of punishment which he is, in the exercise of his ordinary jurisdiction, competent to inflict.

(3) For the purpose of appeal, the aggregate of consecutive sentences passed under this section in case of convictions for several offences at one trial shall be deemed to be a single sentence.

Amendment—The explanation and illustration to this section are now repealed. Sub-section (1) is so amended as to make its meaning clear. For the word "aggregate" the words "aggregate of consecutive" have been substituted.

Scope of the section.—The English law is stated thus in Arch. Cr. P. and Ev. p. 225 (25th Ed.) "Where the defendant is convicted of several offences on different Courts of the same indictment or different indictments at the same assizes or sessions, the Court as a general rule has power to direct that the sentences shall run concurrently or consecutively." The object of this section is to award a specific punishment for each particular offence of which an accused person may be proved guilty, when all the charges against him are tried together, so that, in case some one or other of the charges break down on appeal, the amount of punishment to be remitted may, be known, 1 B.L.R. (Ap. Cr.) 3 at 5; 4 M.H.C.R. Appx 27. The rule as to assessment of punishment is laid down in this and Ss 71 and 72 I.P.C., 12 M. 36. Ordinarily sentences can only be ordered to run concurrently when they are passed in a single trial under the conditions laid down in this section and not in the case where the offences are not of the same kind falling within S. 234 infra punishable with different punishments, 27 Cr. L.J. 807=95 Ind. Cas. 471. This section has now been amended so as to restore the previous view of the law in 17 B. 260 to the effect that separate sentences are quite legal. The word "distinct" in sub-section (1) and the explanation to the section have now been repealed and the only qualification is that separate sentences are subject to the provisions of S. 71, I.P.C., this prevents the offender from being punished with a more severe punishment than the Court could inflict or could have awarded for any one of the offences coming within the scope of the section, 49 B. 916 at 918. This section now definitely states that it must be read subject to S. 71, I.P.C., which regulates punishment for offences and has nothing to do with procedure. The object of this section is to declare in what cases and subject to what limitations a Court may exceed its ordinary powers of passing sentence under S. 32, supra. This section is only permissive, and no Court is bound to pass separate sentences. This section is confined to separate charges against the same person, and convicted at one trial, 3 A. 305 (F.B.) ; Welr 11, 30 and 31; 5 Bom. L.R. 26. This section applies to trials only, and not to miscellaneous proceedings, 31 M. 515; 16 Cr. L.J. 622; 5 Bom. L.R. 26; 4 Bom. L.R. 876. Separate sentences can now legally be passed under this section for offences under Ss. 350 and 457, I.P.C., 41 C.L.J. 563=26 Cr. L.J. 1253=83 Ind. Cas. 927. So also for rioting and hurt when the Court finds that each accused took individual part in causing hurt, 41 C.L.J. 471=26 Cr. L.J. 1297=89 Ind. Cas. 241. It is not necessary to pass separate sentences for rioting armed with deadly weapon causing grievous hurt under S. 326, I.P.C., but the two sentences are within the power of the Court, 49 B. 916; 28 Cr. L.J. 1003=105 Ind. Cas. 517. The power to pass concurrent sentences was given decisions in 25 C. 557; 20 A. 1; 10 A. 58; 10 B. 254 are no longer law. Under the present law it is not necessary that the offences should be distinct in order to enable a Magistrate to pass consecutive sentences, 20 Bom. L.R. 383=29 Cr. L.J. 544=109 Ind. Cas. 368; 52 B 277. The amendment made in 1923 deleting the word 'distinct' before the word 'offences' renders obsolete the decisions in 3 C.W.N. 174; 8 C.W.N. 483=1 Cr. L.J. 265 and separate sentences can now be passed for offences under Ss. 323, 321 and 325 I.P.C. even though the acts in respect of which such charges were included with a charge under S. 147 I.P.C., 23 Cr. L.J. 751=103 Ind. Cas. 799 following 41 C.L.J. 563=83 Ind. Cas. 997. Where a series of acts proved against the accused establishes two distinct offences say under Ss. 366 and 376 I.P.C., the accused can be convicted separately for both the offences, 29 Cr. L.J. 243=107 Ind. Cas. 333 following 7 Lah. 334. Under this section as amended in 1923 separate sentences for rioting and hurt can legally be passed although in practice it is undoubtedly better to give a single sentence for all the offences or to order the sentences to run concurrently, 33 Cr. L.J. 575=116 Ind. Cas. 216 following 49 B. 916.

Is convicted.—The accused may be convicted under the Indian Penal Code or under any special or local law. There is no provision of law authorizing a Court to refrain from passing a sentence provided by the Code when convicting an accused, 22 C. 805.

At one trial.—The absence of a provision in the Code enabling a Judge to order a sentence in different cases to run concurrently is a casus omissus by the legislature, 21 Cr. L.J. 398 at 399=55 Ind. Cas. 1006. The section does not embrace a case of separate trials held on the same or subsequent days for separate offences committed by the same person, but has reference only to the conviction of the accused of two or more offences at one trial, Weir II, 30 followed in Weir II, 31; 22 C.W.N. 597; 24 C.L.J. 54=20 C.W.N. 1330; 13 Cr. L.J. 3=13 Ind. Cas. 169; 22 Cr. L.J. 520; 12 Bom. L.R. 129; 19 A.L.J. 310; 11 Cr. L.J. 679=8 Ind. Cas. 550; 21 C.L.J. 898; 23 Cr. L.J. 85=76 Ind. Cas. 21; 14 Cr. L.J. 388=20 Ind. Cas. 212. If the trials are separate, the sentence that a Magistrate can pass in each case is limited to his ordinary powers, 3 A. 305 (F.B.). In order to bring a case under this section so as to enable a Magistrate to exceed his ordinary powers, the accused must have been convicted of two or more distinct offences in the same trial, 23 B. 706 (F.B.). The accused must be convicted at one trial of two or more distinct offences to enable the Court to pass concurrent sentence. Sentence passed in one trial cannot be ordered to run concurrently with the sentence passed in other trials, 47 A. 59. When a person is convicted and sentenced to a term of imprisonment for an offence and is convicted again for a similar offence by another Judge, concurrent sentence cannot be passed but if the Judge who convicts for the later charge is of opinion that the previous sentence is quite adequate, he may pass a nominal sentence on the accused, 21 Cr. L.J. 346=55 Ind. Cas. 1006. The section does not authorize a Court to direct that two or more sentences shall run concurrently except when the sentences are passed in one trial, see S. 397 infra. The section applies to sentences on conviction at one trial. 22 C.W.N. 597; 27 Cr. L.J. 807 (2)=95 Ind. Cas. 471, (2) distinguishing 13 Bom. L.R. 200=12 Cr. L.J. 241=10 Ind. Cas. 769; 7 Cr. L.J. 445=4 L.B.R. 147; 18 Cr. L.J. 410=38 Ind. Cas. 970; 20 C.W.N. 1303=24 C.L.J. 54; 10 Cr. L.J. 236, and has no application to imprisonment under S. 123 infra in default of giving security for good behaviour, 5 Bom. L.R. 26. Where a person is convicted of separate offences and sentenced to pay a fine in default to suffer imprisonment for a specified period for each of the offences of which he was convicted, the sentences in default of payment of fine cannot be directed to run concurrently. This sub-section only authorizes concurrent punishment in the case of imprisonment or transportation. It does not authorize concurrent fines. A Magistrate if he wants to fine for a second offence is entitled to inflict a nominal fine considering the fine already imposed, 27 Cr. L.J. 111=91 Ind. Cas. 543 following 13 Cr. L.J. 536=15 Ind. Cas. 808. Separate sentences can now legally be passed under this section for offences under Ss. 380 and 457, I.P.C., 41 C.L.J. 563=83 Ind. Cas. 597 followed in 23 Cr. L.J. 751=103 Ind. Cas. 799. So also for rioting and hurt when the Court finds that each accused caused hurt individually, 41 C.L.J. 471. But sentences cannot be passed under Ss. 147 and 353, I.P.C., where the act which accused into members of an unlawful assembly was the same as rendered them liable to punishment under S 353 I.P.C., 27 Cr. L.J. 834=93 Ind. Cas. 754.

May sentence.—This section is permissive and no Court is bound to pass a separate sentence for each of the offences of which one is found guilty at one trial; generally it is better to pass a separate sentence for each offence.

Imprisonment or Transportation.—This section is not restricted to cases where the several punishments are all of the same kind, i.e., are all sentences of imprisonment or all sentences of transportation notwithstanding the use of the word 'or' between the words 'imprisonment' and 'transportation'; the section was intended to cover cases where one of the punishment inflicted is imprisonment while the other is transportation; otherwise the result will follow that the Legislature has made no provision for such cases, 23 C.L.J. 566.

One after the expiration of the other.—In order to this effect is necessary and if omitted the judgment will be irregular. A Magistrate in British India is competent to pass a sentence which should take effect after the expiry of a sentence in Mysore, 20 M. 445.

Unless the Court directs such punishments shall run concurrently.—These words were first introduced in the 1893 Code; the decisions, 25 C. 537 and 20 A 1 are no longer law but there must be separate conviction at one trial to pass a concurrent sentence. It is, however, permissible for a Judge, when sentencing an accused person to take into account an existing sentence passed by another Judge in another trial for passing only a nominal sentence, or pass an adequate sentence and then report the case for orders to the Local Government, 21 Cr. L.J. 393=55 Ind. Cas. 1006.

Sub-Section (2).—This sub-section enhances the sentencing power given to Magistrate under S. 32, supra. The limits of punishment fixed by this section do not apply to cases of offences committed by persons who are already undergoing sentence of imprisonment, 7 W.R. (Cr.) 1. The words "in the case of consecutive sentences" were added in the 1893 Code. This sub-section enacts that it is not necessary for the Court when the consecutive sentences passed for the several offences being in excess of the sentencing power of the Court to send the offender for trial before a higher Court. The proviso (a) makes it clear that in no case shall the offender be sentenced to imprisonment for more than fourteen years.

Sub-Section (3)—The words "for the purpose of appeal" mean for the purpose of being appealed from 1887 P.R. (Cr) 45. The ruling in 6 C. 575 is no longer law. The addition of the words "the aggregate of consecutive sentences" now removes the conflict of decisions which previously existed as to whether this clause applied to consecutive sentences also. It was held in 17 C.W.N. 72 and 15 C.W.N. 734 that the aggregate of the concurrent sentences determined the right of appeal, although taken individually, the sentence was not appealable. But in 42 C. 631; 25 C.W.N. 613; 17 C.L.J. 332 a different view was taken and in 17 C.W.N. 225; 11 Bom. L.R. 544; 35 A. 154 it was held that this clause applied only to cases of consecutive and not concurrent sentences. The decision in 3 Pat. L.J. 38 took the same view. This sub-section now makes it clear that in cases of conviction for several offences at one trial, the aggregate of sentences passed if they are made to run consecutively shall be deemed to be a single sentence for purposes of appeal, and this refers only to sentences of imprisonment, 28 Bom. L.R. 668=27 Cr. L.J. 926 (1)=98 Ind. Cas. 270 (1). The term "aggregate sentences" applies only to consecutive and not concurrent sentences; so no appeal lies to the High Court when the whole sentence did not exceed four years, 3 Pat. L.J. 138. See also 25 C.W.N. 613. Consecutive sentences are allowed to be taken in the aggregate as one sentence for purposes of appeal. The new amendment makes this quite clear. Passing of concurrent sentences of imprisonment in default of payment of fine is not warranted by this section, 27 Bom. L.R. 1351=27 Cr. L.J. 111=91 Ind. Cas. 543 following 13 Cr. L.J. 536 (1)=15 Ind. Cas. 808 (2). See S. 415 infra which explicitly excludes a sentence of imprisonment in default of payment of fine; imprisonment in default of finding security under S. 123 cannot also be taken into account. See 15 C.W.N. 734 and 17 C.W.N. 72. The offences under Ss. 147 and 225 I.P.C. are not distinct offences and so not liable to separate punishments for each offence, 37 C.L.J. 171=24 Cr. L.J. 851=74 Ind. Cas. 1043. So also separate sentences under S. 147 and S. 825/149 I.P.C. are illegal even when they are made to run concurrently, 51 C. 79, followed in 49 B. 916. See also 17 B. 250; 23 B. 708. Separate sentences can be passed for convictions under Ss. 148 and 326, I.P.C., 43 B. 216 followed in 30 Cr. L.J. 575=116 Ind. Cas. 216. See also for causing hurt under S. 323, I.P.C., and for rescuing cattle under S. 21 of the Cat. Tres. Act as force does not appear in the definition of hurt, 39 M.L.T. 543 but see 27 Cr. L.J. 333=95 Ind. Cas. 754. Separate sentences can be passed for house-breaking to commit theft under S. 457, I.P.C., and theft in a house under S. 380, I.P.C., 41 C.L.J. 563=26 Cr. L.J. 1253=88 Ind. Cas. 997. Separate sentences can be passed for the offence of possessing liquor under the Abkari Act and of possessing apparatus for manufacturing such liquor, 52 B. 277 following Ratanlal 523. Consecutive sentences can be passed when convicting an accused under S. 411, I.P.C., for receiving stolen property and also under S. 414, I.P.C., for concealing other stolen properties, 30 Bom. L.R. 383=29 Cr. L.J. 544=109 Ind. Cas. 368. Under the present law after the repeal of the explanation and illustration to the section and the omission of the word, distinct it is not even necessary that the offences should be distinct in order to enable a Magistrate to pass consecutive sentences, 30 Bom. L.R. 393; 52 B. 277. The decision in 27 Cr. L.J. 338=92 Ind. Cas. 850 of the Lahore High Court holding that separate sentences for abduction to commit rape and for committing rape cannot be awarded, is of doubtful authority as reliance is placed on a decision based on the illustration to this section which has now been repealed.

The explanation and the illustration to this section which had been added to set at rest the conflict of rulings of the Allahabad High Court have now been repealed as they occasioned considerable difficulty in construing the section, and it is now definitely stated that this section must be read subject to S. 71, I.P.C.

C.—Ordinary and Additional Powers.

36. All District Magistrates, Sub-divisional Magistrates and Magistrates of the first, second and third classes, ^{Ordinary powers of Magistrates.} have the powers hereinafter respectively conferred upon them and specified in the third schedule. Such powers are called their "ordinary powers"

Ordinary Powers—The ordinary powers are specified in the Sch. III to the Code. The section read with Sch. III defines certain incidental powers vested in the Magistrate of each class which they are required to exercise either in the course of trial before them or otherwise. These powers are referred to as 'ordinary powers' of a Magistrate as opposed to the 'Additional powers' which may be conferred on him. Both S. 28 and this section deal with powers which are conferred by the Code on each class of Magistrates, 28 Cr. L.J. 913 (F.B.)=105 Ind. Cas. 433. The term "ordinary powers" does not mean general powers of the Magistrate under the Code such as to entertain complaints, 4 L.W. 405=17 Cr. L.J. 209=31 Ind. Cas. 135; 34 M. 343 at 345; Ordinary powers are to be found in Columns 1, 2 and 3 of Schedule III. See 31 M. 315 as to power of a District Magistrate to remand a person to custody under this section read with S. 107 (4) infra.

This section is not exhaustive. See Col. 8 of Sch. II as to jurisdiction to try offences. See S. 32 as to the power of passing sentence and S. 12 and Chap. XV infra as to local jurisdiction of Magistrates.

37. In addition to his ordinary powers, any Sub-divisional Magistrate or any Magistrate of the first, second or third class may be invested by the Local Government or the District Magistrate, as the case may be with any powers specified in the fourth schedule as powers with which he may be invested by the Local Government or the District Magistrate.

Additional powers
conferable on Magistrates

Ordinary powers of Magistrates are mentioned in S. 36, supra. Additional powers may be conferred on them by the District Magistrates or by the Local Government. See S. 41 as to withdrawal of powers by the Local Government.

This section read with Sch. IV to the Code deals with 'Additional powers' which may be specially given to any particular Magistrates of each of the three classes. These powers are not conferred by the mere fact of a person being appointed as a Magistrate of any particular class but are conferable on him, 28 Cr. L.J. 913 (F.B.) = 105 Ind. Cas. 433

Control of District Magistrate's investing power.

38. The power conferred on the District Magistrate by section 37 shall be exercised subject to the control of the Local Government.

D.—Conferment, Continuance and Cancellation of Powers.

39. (1) In conferring powers under this Code the Local Government may, by order, empower persons specially by name or in virtue of their office or classes of officials generally by their official titles.

Mode of conferring powers.

(2) Every such order shall take effect from the date on which it is communicated to the person so empowered.

The Code confers powers on Courts (including Magistrates) for the purpose of the General Administration of Criminal Justice. In connection with the exercise by Magistrate of their general jurisdiction, the Code inter alia confers powers on Magistrates, 51 C. 1 at 37.

Or by virtue of their Office.—In the Madras Presidency in taluks where there are no Stationary Sub-Magistrates all second class powers are conferred on Tahsildars but in taluks where there are Stationary Sub-Magistrates all second class powers except under Ss. 190 and 206 are conferred on them: Fort St. George Gazette, 1893, Pt. I, p. 579.

Empower specially by Name or Officials generally.—This section declares that the Local Government may empower classes of officials generally or by their official titles, or persons specially by name or in virtue of their office. When therefore a class of officials is invested with powers to try certain offences it would appear that they are "generally" empowered. The word "generally" is in contrast to the word "specially" which is used in speaking of individuals, (1913) M.W.N. 269 at 270 = 17 M.L.T. 191 = 16 Cr. L.J. 268 = 28 Ind. Cas. 156.

Every order shall take effect from the date of communication.—This sub-section clears the doubt expressed in 6 C. 476. A Magistrate of the second class began a trial. But before passing sentence he was invested with first-class powers, it was held by a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court that he could pass sentence as a First Class Magistrate, 7 A. 414 (F.B.). See also 51 M. 257; 6 Pat. L.T. 554 = 1925 Pat. 420 = 26 Cr. L.J. 914 = 86 Ind. Cas. 978.

40. Whenever any person holding an office in the service of Government who has been invested with any powers under this Code throughout any local area is appointed to an equal or higher office of the same nature, within a like local area under the same Local Government, he shall, unless the Local Government otherwise directs, or has otherwise directed, exercise the same powers in the local area in which he is so appointed.

The new amendment is intended to save the powers of officers on return from leave without the formality of re-gazetting them.

Exercise the same powers in the Local Area to which he is appointed.—See Weir II 36 and 15 M. 132; Ratanlal 322. In the latter case it was held that a Sub-Registrar who was appointed Magistrate of a particular town, on transfer, could exercise in another locality the powers conferred on him unless withdrawn by the Local Government, and further when the Government order withdrawing his power was not communicated to him till he had decided certain cases the proceedings are not void. An Honorary Magistrate ceases to be a Magistrate only when his resignation is accepted by the Local Government and not when he sends in his resignation, 45 M L.J. 793; 43 M. 309.

Appointed to equal or higher office.—A Magistrate who was acting as a District Magistrate when transferred to another District not as a District Magistrate will not carry with him the powers of a District Magistrate, since he is not appointed to an equal or higher office of the same nature, 3 A. 563 (F.B.); 14 Cr. L.J. 239 (2)=19 Ind. Cas. 335 (2). But where a Head Assistant Magistrate having almost completed the trial of a criminal case was appointed to the office of Deputy Magistrate in another station in the same district and the case was transferred to him by the District Magistrate, it was held that the trial need not be commenced de novo but could be proceeded with from the point at which it was left before the transfer, 22 M. 47. See also 1906 A.W.N. 201; 3 A.L.J. 896=4 Cr L.J. 149 where it was held that when an officiating District Magistrate reverted as a Joint Magistrate in the same district during the pendency of the trial of a case and continued it after reversion without objection of the parties, he had jurisdiction to do so. Cases pending on the file of a Magistrate relieved of his charge of a sub division do not automatically pass into the hands of his successor merely because the first Magistrate is transferred to another sub division in the same District; 8 12 supra does not lay down such a rule, 42 A. 649 at 654 following 9 A.L.J. 448=13 Cr L.J. 203=14 Ind Cas 203. This section keeps alive the powers once conferred on an officer even in a case of absence on leave but if he absents himself without leave or overstays his leave, he vacates office under the rules of service and the section cannot apply, 2 Bom L.R. 536.

Same Local Government.—These words were introduced to meet the objections raised in 2 C 117 To make it clear that the power conferred by one Local Government cannot avail an officer when transferred to a province under another Local Government. See also 1894 P.R. (Cr.) 15.

41. (1) The Local Government may withdraw all or any of the powers conferred under this Code on any person by it or by any officer subordinate to it.

(2) Any powers conferred by the District Magistrate may be withdrawn by the District Magistrate.

Under sub-section (2) a District Magistrate may withdraw the powers conferred by him under 8. 13 or 37 supra on Subordinate Magistrates.

GENERAL PROVISIONS.

CHAPTER IV. .

OF AID AND INFORMATION TO THE MAGISTRATES, THE POLICE AND PERSONS MAKING ARRESTS.

42. Every person is bound to assist a Magistrate or police-officer reasonably demanding his aid, whether within or without the presidency-towns,—

(a) in the taking or preventing the escape of any other person whom such Magistrate or police-officer is authorized to arrest ;

(b) in the prevention or suppression of a breach of the peace, or in the prevention of any injury attempted to be committed to any railway, canal, telegraph or public property.

Every person is bound to assist.—This section expressly declares that every person whether an official or private citizen is bound on reasonable demand by a Magistrate or Police-officer to render personal assistance in executing processes or preventing or suppressing breaches of the peace or preventing injury to public properties. The word 'assistance' implies that the party who assists is doing something which, in the ordinary circumstances, the party assisted can do for himself, 26 M. 419 (F.B.). S. 187, I.P.O., makes an intentional omission to assist a public servant punishable. As to persons required to assist in the dispersion of unlawful assemblies, see Ss. 125 to 127, infra. See Ss. 54 to 57, 128, 151 and 157, infra as to the circumstances under which a police-officer may lawfully arrest.

Reasonably demanding aid—The assistance that can be demanded under this section is personal assistance of the individual of whom it is demanded, and not the supply of a contingent of men to assist, Weir II, 37. The refusal to comply with the demand, on the ground that it was not reasonable, might render him liable under S. 187, I.P.O., and it would then be determined whether the demand was reasonable. Where a Magistrate directed a land-holder to find a clue in a case of theft within 15 days and to assist the police, held such order was not authorized by law, and a conviction under Ss. 187 and 188 I.P.O. for disobedience of such order was not sustainable, 3 A. 201; 42 A. 314. The word "assistance" referred to in the first part of S. 187, I.P.O., is ejusdem generis with the various forms of assistance specified in the latter half of the section. The assistance must have some direct personal relation to the execution of the duty by the public officer. It was not reasonable to ask for the assistance of a member of the public to arrest a large number of unknown persons whose precise whereabouts were also unknown at the time when the request for assistance was made. Obviously the law does not intend that police officers should have a general power of calling upon members of the public to join them in doing the work for which they are paid, such as tracing out the whereabouts of an absconding criminal or collecting evidence to warrant his conviction, 42 A. 314. Similarly omission to assist the police to bury a dead body will not come within this section, 6 C.P.L.R. 45. See also 42 A. 314. Illegal escape from the custody of a private person by one lawfully arrested is also punishable under S. 223B, I.P.C., 6 C.W.N. 337.

43. When a warrant is directed to a person other than a police-officer, any other person may aid in the execution of such warrant, if the person to whom the warrant is directed be near at hand and acting in the execution of the warrant.

Aid to person, other than police-officer, executing warrant.

To a person other than a Police-officer.—See Ss. 77 and 78, infra.

May Aid.—The assistance to be given to a private person is not obligatory as in the case of a Magistrate or police-officer under S. 42, supra. For rights and liabilities of a person acting under this section, see explanation (2) to S. 99, I.P.C.

44. (1) Every person, whether within or without the presidency-towns, aware of the commission of, or of the intention of any other person to commit any offence punishable under any of the following sections of the Indian Penal Code (namely), 121, 121A, 122, 123, 124, 124A, 125, 126, 130, 143, 144, 145, 147, 148, 302, 303, 304, 382, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 402, 435, 436, 449, 450, 456, 457, 458, 459, and 460, shall, in the absence of reasonable excuse, the burden of proving which shall lie upon the person so aware, forthwith give information to the nearest Magistrate or police-officer of such commission or intention.

(2) For the purposes of this section the term "offence" includes any act committed at any place out of British India which would constitute an offence if committed in British India.

Offences specified herein are—S. 121. Waging or abetting or attempting to wage war against the king; S. 121-A. Conspiring to commit offences against the state; S. 122. Collecting arms, etc., for waging war against the king; S. 123. Concealing with intent to facilitate a design to wage war; S. 124. Assaulting Governor-General, etc., to compel them or restrain the exercise of lawful power; S. 124-A Sedition; S. 125. Waging war against any Asiatic power in alliance with the king, etc.; S. 126. Committing depredation into territory in alliance with the king; S. 130. Aiding escape of or harbouring state or war prisoners; S. 143. Being member of unlawful assembly; S. 144. Joining unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons; S. 145. Joining or continuing in an unlawful assembly ordered to disperse; S. 146. Rioting; S. 148. Rioting armed with deadly weapon; S. 302. Murder, S. 303. Murder by life convict; S. 304. Culpable homicide; S. 382. Theft after preparation to cause death or hurt; S. 392. Robbery; S. 393. Attempt at robbery; S. 394. Hurt in robbery; S. 395. Dacoity; S. 396. Murder in dacoity; S. 397. Causing death or grievous hurt in dacoity or robbery; S. 398. Attempt at dacoity or robbery armed with deadly weapon; S. 399. Preparation to commit dacoity; S. 402. Assembling to commit dacoity; S. 435. Mischief by fire, etc.; S. 436. Mischief by fire to destroy a house, etc.; S. 449. House-trespass to cause death; S. 450. Lurking house-trespass to commit offence punishable with transportation for life; S. 456. Lurking house-trespass or house-breaking by night; S. 457. Shall forthwith give information—Under this section it is the duty of a person who witnesses the commission of an offence to give information thereof to the nearest magistrate or police-officer and failure to do so renders him liable to be punished under S. 202, I.P.C., for intentionally omitting to give information, which one is legally bound to

PART III:

GENERAL PROVISIONS.

CHAPTER IV. .

OF AID AND INFORMATION TO THE MAGISTRATES, THE POLICE AND PERSONS MAKING ARRESTS.

42. Every person is bound to assist a Magistrate or police-officer reasonably demanding his aid, whether within or without the presidency-towns,—

(a) in the taking or preventing the escape of any other person whom such Magistrate or police-officer is authorized to arrest ;

(b) in the prevention or suppression of a breach of the peace, or in the prevention of any injury attempted to be committed to any railway, canal, telegraph or public property.

Every person is bound to assist.—This section expressly declares that every person whether an official or private citizen is bound on reasonable demand by a Magistrate or Police-officer to render personal assistance in executing processes or preventing or suppressing breaches of the peace or preventing injury to public properties. The word 'assistance' implies that the party who assists is doing something which, in the ordinary circumstances, the party assisted can do for himself, 26 M. 419 (F.B.). S. 187, I.P.O., makes an intentional omission to assist a public servant punishable. As to persons required to assist in the dispersion of unlawful assemblies, see Ss. 125 to 127, infra. See Ss. 54 to 57, 128, 151 and 157, infra as to the circumstances under which a police-officer may lawfully arrest.

Reasonably demanding aid—The assistance that can be demanded under this section is personal assistance of the individual of whom it is demanded, and not the supply of a contingent of men to assist, Weir II, 37. The refusal to comply with the demand, on the ground that it was not reasonable, might render him liable under S. 187, I.P.O., and it would then be determined whether the demand was reasonable. Where a Magistrate directed a land-holder to find a clue in a case of theft within 15 days and to assist the police, held such order was not authorized by law, and a conviction under Ss. 187 and 188 I.P.O. for disobedience of such order was not sustainable, 3 A. 201; 42 A. 314. The word "assistance" referred to in the first part of S. 187, I.P.O., is ejusdem generis with the various forms of assistance specified in the latter half of the section. The assistance must have some direct personal relation to the execution of the duty by the public officer. It was not reasonable to ask for the assistance of a member of the public to arrest a large number of unknown persons whose precise whereabouts were also unknown at the time when the request for assistance was made. Obviously the law does not intend that police officers should have a general power of calling upon members of the public to join them in doing the work for which they are paid, such as tracing out the whereabouts of an absconding criminal or collecting evidence to warrant his conviction, 42 A. 314. Similarly omission to assist the police to bury a dead body will not come within this section, 6 C.P.L.R. 45. See also 42 A. 315. Illegal escape from the custody of a private person by one lawfully arrested is also punishable under S. 225B, I.P.C., 5 C.W.N. 337.

43. When a warrant is directed to a person other than a police-officer, any other person may aid in the execution of such warrant, if the person to whom the warrant is directed be near at hand and acting in the execution of the warrant.

Aid to person, other than police-officer, executing warrant.

To a person other than a Police-officer.—See Ss. 77 and 78, infra.

May Aid.—The assistance to be given to a private person is not obligatory as in the case of a Magistrate or police-officer under S. 42, supra. For rights and liabilities of a person acting under this section, see explanation (2) to S. 99, I.P.C.

44. (1) Every person, whether within or without the presidency-towns, aware of the commission of, or of the intention of any other person to commit any offence punishable under any of the following sections of the Indian Penal Code (namely), 121, 121A, 122, 123, 124, 124A, 125, 126, 130, 143, 144, 145, 147, 148, 302, 303, 304, 382, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 402, 435, 436, 449, 450, 456, 457, 458, 459, and 460, shall, in the absence of reasonable excuse, the burden of proving which shall lie upon the person so aware, forthwith give information to the nearest Magistrate or police-officer of such commission or intention.

(2) For the purposes of this section the term "offence" includes any act committed at any place out of British India which would constitute an offence if committed in British India.

Offences specified herein are—S. 121. Waging or abetting or attempting to wage war against the king; S. 121-A. Conspiring to commit offences against the state; S. 122. Collecting arms, etc., for waging war against the king; S. 123. Concealing with intent to facilitate a design to wage war; S. 124. Assaulting Governor-General, etc., to compel them or restrain the exercise of lawful power; S. 124-A Sedition; S. 125. Waging war against any Asiatic power in alliance with the king, etc.; S. 126. Committing depredation into territory in alliance with the king; S. 130. Aiding escape of or harbouring state or war prisoners; S. 143. Being member of unlawful assembly; S. 144. Joining unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons; S. 145. Joining or continuing in an unlawful assembly ordered to disperse; S. 146. Rioting; S. 148. Rioting armed with deadly weapon; S. 302. Murder; S. 303. Murder by life convict; S. 304. Culpable homicide; S. 382. Theft after preparation to cause death or hurt; S. 392. Robbery; S. 393. Attempt at robbery; S. 394. Hurt in robbery; S. 395. Dacoity; S. 396. Murder in dacoity; S. 397. Causing death or grievous hurt in dacoity or robbery; S. 398. Attempt at dacoity or robbery armed with deadly weapon; S. 399. Preparation to commit dacoity; S. 402. Assembling to commit dacoity; S. 435. Mischief by fire, etc.; S. 436. Mischief by fire to destroy a house, etc.; S. 449. House-trespass to cause death; S. 450. Lurking house-trespass to commit offence punishable with transportation for life; S. 456. Lurking house-trespass or house-breaking by night; S. 457. Lurking house-trespass, etc., to commit offence punishable with imprisonment; S. 458. Lurking house trespass etc., after preparation to cause hurt; S. 459. Grievous hurt in house-trespass or house-breaking; S. 460. Death or grievous hurt by one of several persons engaged in house-breaking.

See Ss. 176 and 202, I.P.C., which make intentional omission punishable, and also S. 177, I.P.C., which makes giving false information punishable; see S. 154, I.P.C., which makes owners or occupiers of land punishable for failure to give information as to the formation of an unlawful assembly or rioting on the land.

Shall forthwith give information—Under this section it is the duty of a person who witnesses the commission of an offence to give information thereof to the nearest magistrate or police-officer and failure to do so renders him liable to be punished under S. 202, I.P.C., for intentionally omitting to give information, which one is legally bound to give, 21 Cr. L.J. 486 at 493=55 Ind. Cas. 582. Where once information of a crime has reached the authorities, the object of this section is fulfilled, and no further duty imposed by it remains, Ratanlal 674 and 778; 7 M. 436; 23 C. 316. The burden of proving that there was reasonable excuse for not giving the information is cast on the person who has the information.

Sub-section (2).—This sub-section was introduced in the 1893 Code, and extends the obligation to acts or omissions out of British India which if committed in British India would constitute an offence.

45. (1) Every village-headman, village-accountant, village-watchman, village-police-officer, owner or occupier of land, and the agent of any such owner or occupier in charge of the management of that land and every officer employed in the collection of revenue or rent of land on the part of Government or the Court of Wards, shall forthwith communicate to the nearest Magistrate or to the officer-in-charge of the nearest police-station, whichever is the nearer, any information which he may possess respecting—

Village headman, accountants, land-holders and others bound to report certain matters.

(a) the permanent or temporary residence of any notorious receiver or vendor of stolen property in any village of which he is headman, accountant, watchman or police-officer, or in which he owns or occupies land, or is agent, or collects revenue or rent;

(b) the resort to any place within, or the passage through, such village of any person whom he knows, or reasonably suspects, to be a thug, robber, escaped convict or proclaimed offender;

(c) the commission of, or intention to commit, in or near such village any non-bailable offence or any offence punishable under Sections 143, 144, 145, 147 or 148 of the Indian Penal Code;

(d) the occurrence in or near such village of any sudden or unnatural death or of any death under suspicious circumstances or the discovery in or near such village of any corpse or part of a corpse, in circumstances which lead to a reasonable suspicion that such a death has occurred or the disappearance from such village of any person in circumstances which lead to a reasonable suspicion that a non-bailable offence has been committed in respect of such person;

(e) the commission of, or intention to commit, at any place out of British India near such village any act which, if committed in British India, would be an offence punishable under any of the following sections of the Indian Penal Code, namely, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 302, 304, 382, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 402, 435, 436, 449, 450, 457, 458, 459, 460, 489A, 489B, 489C, and 489D;

(f) any matter likely to affect the maintenance of order or the prevention of crime or the safety of person or property respecting which the District Magistrate, by general or special order made with the previous sanction of the Local Government, has directed him to communicate information.

(2) In this section—

(i) "village" includes village-lands; and

(ii) the expression "proclaimed offender" includes any person proclaimed as an offender by any Court or authority established or continued by the Governor-General in Council in any part of India, in respect of any act which, if committed in British India, would be punishable under any of the following sections of the Indian Penal Code, namely, 302, 304, 382, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 402, 435, 436, 449, 450, 457, 458, 459 and 460.

(3) Subject to rules in this behalf to be made by the Local Government, the District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate may from time to time appoint one or more persons with his or their consent to perform the duties of a village-headman under this section whether a village-headman has or has not been appointed for that village under any other law.

Appointment of village-headmen by District Magistrate or Sub-Divisional Magistrate in certain cases for purposes of this section.

Amendment—In sub-section (1) the words "in charge of the management of that land" after "occupier" have been added and for the word "obtain" the word "possess" has been substituted. In sub-section (1) (d) after "suspicious circumstances" the words "the discovery of a corpse or part of a corpse in or near such village which lead to a reasonable suspicion of death or disappearance of any person, etc.," have been added. In sub-section (1) (e), Ss 231 to 238, 489-A to 489-D, I.P.C., have been added. By the amendment in sub-section (3), a Sub-divisional Magistrate is empowered to appoint a village-headman, a power till now exercised by the District Magistrate.

Object of the section.—The object of this section is to ensure that information obtained be not intentionally withheld by those, whose position in the locality renders them liable to it. Its provisions are not to be used for the purpose of vexation, 7 M. 436; 20 G. 318. The provisions of this section are not intended to be punitive in themselves but are intended to facilitate information as to the commission of an offence and thereby facilitate steps being taken in the investigation of the same, 23 Cr. L. J. 162=65 Ind. Cas. 626; 53 B. 181.

Village-Headman.—The expression village-headman in the Madras Presidency means a Village Munsif or a Village Magistrate, 32 M. 253 (F.B.) Under S. 8 of Reg. XI of 1816 every Village-headman should reciprocally communicate any information which he may receive regarding offences committed or of gangs of robbers or of suspicious characters having entered or taken refuge in each other's villages and should co-operate in apprehending them. Under S. 9 of the same regulation they are to report to a Police-officer the arrival of strangers and suspicious persons in their village. Under this section the village-headman is bound forthwith to communicate to the nearest first-class Magistrate or the officer-in charge of a police-station, whichever is the nearer, any information which he may obtain respecting certain grave offences. In point of fact in this Presidency the complaint or information to the Village Magistrate is ordinarily the first step in setting the Criminal Law in motion in the case of grave offences specified in this section, 32 M. 253 at 262 (F.B.).

Owner or Occupier of Land.—The words 'in or near such village' are now added. The section speaks of the owner or occupier of land but not of a house. Where there are houses it is expected that the place would be populous and the Police would somehow get the information. In case of land in the Muffassal there are not enough of policemen always available in the locality and hence it is necessary that the owner or occupier of the land should give such information to them, 53 B. 184. See 23 W.R. (Cr.) 60 at 61. In 12 Mad 92 it was held that the owner or occupier of a house within a village was not an owner of land within the meaning of S. 45; 53 B. 184. See also Weir I, 101. Land does not mean an irrigation tank and so a father was held by the Madras High Court (Cr. R. Case 67 of 1905) not bound to report the death of his child by drowning in such a tank under this section.

Agent of such owner or occupier.—The words "in charge of the management of such land" have been newly added. The liability of a resident agent of an owner arises when the owner is not resident and has no personal knowledge of the fact; when he has such knowledge the liability attaches to the owner, 23 W.R. (Cr.) 60 at 61. See 28 C 504, where it was held that a landlord was liable for the acts of commission and omission not only of himself but also of his agent or manager.

Forthwith—This word must be construed with reference to the object of the enactment. Where a village kulkarni gave information to the Police some 7 or 8 hours after he was aware of the occurrence, it was held that the information was not given forthwith as required by this section, Ratanlal 784

Communicate any information—Mere rumour which a Zamindar of a village and his agent had heard of a disappeared man having been killed is not information within the meaning of this section, 1900 A.W.N. 297. Where the only information which a Village Munsif had was that a jewel was missing, but it was not known whether it was stolen or lost, it was held that there was not such information of the commission of the offence which he was bound to communicate under this section, 5 M.L.T. 257=9 Cr. L.J. 224. But the provisions of this section should not be put in force against a person for purposes of vexation where the police actually obtained information from other sources, 4 C 623, followed in 20 C. 316; see 7 M 436 at 438, where it was held that these provisions of law ought not to be worked solely for the purpose of vexation, but for the purpose of insuring that information be not wilfully withheld by those whose position renders them liable to give it, and that it is not reasonable that every person other than him or those from whom such information has been actually obtained, who may possibly be bound to give the information, should be prosecuted for not having done so. See Ss. 176, 177. See 179 and 217, I.P.C., for punishment for omission to give the information. See also 23 Cr. L.J. 162=63 Ind. Cas. 626; 23 Cr L J. 345=66 Ind. Cas. 1031.

Which he may possess.—This section does not make it incumbent to communicate to the officer in charge of a police station any rumour of an occurrence on the village. It is only such information which a village headman, etc., may possess that is to be communicated. The amendment is clear as it uses the word 'possess' in the place of 'obtain' which was in the section before the amendment, 1924 Pat 181=25 Cr. L J. 973=81 Ind. Cas. 620 See also L.J. 257=9 Cr. L J 224.

Sub-section (3).—An order passed by the District Magistrate in accordance with the rules framed by Government under this sub-section, i.e., dismissing a village-headman is an executive order and is therefore not subject to the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court, 29 A. 563.

The offences mentioned herein are—S. 231. Counterfeiting coin; S. 232 Counterfeiting king's coin; S. 233 Making or selling counterfeiting instruments; S. 234. Making or selling instruments for counterfeiting king's coin; S. 235 Possession of counterfeiting instruments; S. 236. Abetting in India counterfeiting coin out of India; S. 237. Import or export of counterfeit coin; S. 238 Import or export of king's coin; S. 302. Murder; S. 304. Culpable homicide not amounting to murder; S. 382. Theft after preparation to cause death or hurt; S. 392. Robbery; S. 393. Attempt at robbery; S. 394. Hurt in robbery; S. 395. Dacoity; S. 397. Causing death or hurt in robbery or dacoity; S. 398. Attempt at robbery or dacoity armed with deadly weapon; S. 399. Preparation to commit dacoity; S. 402. Assembling to commit dacoity; S. 435. Mischief by fire, etc.; S. 436 Mischief by fire to destroy house, etc.; S. 449. House-trespass to commit offence punishable with death; S. 450. House-trespass to commit offence punishable with transportation for life; S. 457. Lurking house-trespass or house-breaking by night; S. 458. Lurking house-trespass or house-breaking by night after preparation to cause hurt, etc.; S. 459. Grievous hurt in committing lurking house-trespass or house-breaking; S. 460. Death or grievous hurt by one of several persons engaged in house-breaking, etc.; S. 489-A. Counterfeiting currency or bank notes, S. 489 B. Using as genuine forged currency or bank note; S. 489-C. Possession of forged or counterfeit currency or bank notes; S. 489-D. Making or possessing instruments for forging or counterfeiting currency or bank notes.

CHAPTER V.

OF ARREST, ESCAPE AND RETAKING.

A.—Arrest generally.

46. (1) In making an arrest the police-officer or other person making the same shall actually touch or confine the body of the person to be arrested, unless there be a submission to the custody by word or action.

(2) If such person forcibly resists the endeavour to arrest him, or attempts to evade the arrest, such police-officer or other person may use all means necessary to effect the arrest.

(3) Nothing in this section gives a right to cause the death of a person who is not accused of an offence punishable with death or with transportation for life.

Arrest—Manual detention is not essential to constitute arrest. Weir I, 203. The Court is a jealous guardian of the right of personal freedom and requires any interference with the liberty of the subject to be strictly justified, 52 C 615 at 616; see also 14 A. 45 at 47; 1885 A W.N 53 (F.B.). Any man who is being arrested has a right to ask the officer arresting him to show him what power he has to do so. If the arrest is under a warrant it has been held that the man arrested is entitled to ask that the warrant be shown to him to see that he is being properly arrested, and that, when the warrant is not shown to him and the arrest is made such an arrest will not be a legal arrest. A man is entitled to know when a constable is arresting him under what power he is acting and if the constable states that he acts under a certain power which the man knows he has not got, he is entitled to object to such arrest and to escape from such custody when arrested, 47 M. 442 at 444; See S 80, infra which lay down that if the arrest be under a warrant, the substance should be notified to the person to be arrested, and, if so required, the warrant should be shown. See Ss. 224 and 225, I.P.C. which make resistance or obstruction to lawful arrest punishable. Illegality of the arrest does not affect the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to try the offence though that fact is material in cases of prosecution for resistance to police in arresting. See 35 B. 225; 26 M. 124; 29 Cr. L.J. 1089=112 Ind. Cas. 673. A police officer who arrests a person without notifying to him the substance of the warrant under S 80 infra where efforts have been made to evade or prevent the arrest is justified in his action by the provisions of this section and such custody is lawful custody and rescue from such custody is an offence under S 225-B, I.P.C. 49 C.L.J. 264=33 C.W.N. 284=30 Cr. L.J. 703=116 Ind. Cas. 723. See Ss. 59, 66, 67, 77, and 78 infra as to arrest by private persons. See Ss. 130 and 131 as to arrest by military officers and Ss. 64 to 67 as to arrests by Magistrates.

47. If any person acting under a warrant of arrest, or any police-officer having authority to arrest, has reason to believe that the person to be arrested has entered into, or is within, any place, the person residing in, or being in charge of, such place shall, on demand of such person acting as aforesaid or such police-officer, allow him free ingress thereto, and afford all reasonable facilities for a search therein.

Under Ss. 77 and 78, infra, warrants of arrest may be directed to persons not police-officers, and Ss. 54 and 58, infra, apply to arrest by a police-officer. This section is not intended to restrict the powers of the police to enter the place to be searched. It is a provision compelling house-holders to afford the police facilities in carrying out their duties, and if any difficulty is placed in the way of a police-officer, he may use force to enter and free ingress ought to be afforded. If difficulties as to ingress and search are placed in the way of a police-officer, he may use force to obtain ingress under the next section.

48. If ingress to such place cannot be obtained under section 47 it shall be lawful in any case for a person acting under a warrant and in any case in which a warrant may issue, but cannot be obtained without affording the person to be arrested an opportunity of escape, for police-officer to enter such place and search therein, and in order to effect an entrance into such place, to break open any outer or inner door or window of any house or place, whether that of the person to be arrested or of any other person, if after notification of his authority and purpose, and demand of admittance duly made, he cannot otherwise obtain admittance:

Provided that, if any such place is an apartment in the actual occupancy of a woman (not being the person to be arrested) who, according to custom, does not appear in public, such person or police-officer shall, before entering such apartment, give notice to such woman that she is at liberty to withdraw, and shall afford her every reasonable facility for withdrawing, and may then break open the apartment and enter it.

"In all cases where the king is a party, the officer, if the doors be not open may break the party's house either to arrest him or to do other execution of the kings process if otherwise he cannot enter. But before he breaks it he ought to signify the cause of his coming and to make request to open the doors. The house of any one is not a castle or privilege but for himself and shall not extend to protect any person who flies to his house or the goods of any other which are brought or conveyed into his house to prevent a lawful execution and to escape the ordinary process of law and therefore in such cases after denial on request made the officer may break the house" Chester's Public Officers, page 6. "Having obtained admission the officer may break inner doors whether the defendant be therein at the time or not. He may also break out in order to complete the execution. Although the officer may force an entrance he is not authorized in remaining in the house more than a sufficient time to execute the warrant and in the case of an arrest if the party be away from the house he is not justified in remaining there awaiting his return" Ibid page 7.

For arresting a suspected person if the police-officer enters into a building his action would be prima facie justifiable, 36 C. 433. See S. 90 infra as to a case in which a warrant may issue when summons which may be issued may not be obeyed.

49. Any police-officer or other person authorized to make an arrest may break open any outer or inner door or window of any house or place in order to liberate himself or any other person who, having lawfully entered for the purpose of making an arrest, is detained therein.

Power to break open doors and windows for purposes of liberation.

This section empowers a police-officer who having lawfully entered a house for making an arrest finds himself locked inside and in such a case he may break open door, etc., to liberate himself.

50. The person arrested shall not be subjected to more restraint than is necessary to prevent his escape.

No unnecessary restraint.

See also Ss. 62 and 63 infra in this connection. In no case is a police-officer justified in detaining a person for a single hour except on reasonable grounds justified by the circumstances of the case, 6 W.R. (Cr.) 83; 19 W.R. (Cr.) 36. Abuse of the power conferred by this section is punishable under S. 220, I.P.O. and S. 29 of the Police Act V of 1861. Authority to arrest implies authority to detain, Ratanlal 223. A police-officer is not warranted in detaining a person pending instructions from his superior officer as to whether he should take cognizance, 24 W.R. (Cr.) 51.

51. Whenever a person is arrested by a police-officer under a warrant which does not provide for the taking of bail, or under a warrant which provides for the taking of bail, but the person arrested cannot furnish bail, and whenever a person is arrested without warrant, or by a private person under a warrant, and cannot legally be admitted to bail, or is unable to furnish bail, the officer making the arrest or, when the arrest is made by a private person, the police-officer to whom he makes over the person arrested, may search such person, and place in safe custody all articles, other than necessary wearing apparel, found upon him.

Search of arrested persons.

Under this section a private person making an arrest is not entitled to make any search. He is to make over the person arrested without delay to a police-officer who may search such person. Under S. 523, infra, the seizure of property shall be forthwith reported to the Magistrate and S. 53, infra, provides for the custody of offensive weapons taken from the arrested person.

Mode of searching women.

52. Whenever it is necessary to cause a woman to be searched, the search shall be made by another woman, with strict regard to decency.

The word 'decency' was substituted for the words 'habits and customs of the country', which occurred in the 1872 Code.

53. The officer or other person making any arrest under this Code may take from the person arrested any offensive weapons which he has about his person, and shall deliver all weapons so taken to the Court or officer before which or whom the officer or person making the arrest is required by this Code to produce the person arrested.

Power to seize
offensive weapons.

Any offensive weapons—Such as swords, daggers, rifles, guns, clubs, or the like.

arrest without warrant.

54. (1) Any police-officer may, without an order from a Magistrate and without a warrant, arrest—first, any person who has been concerned in any cognizable offence or against whom a reasonable complaint has been made or credible information has been received, or a reasonable suspicion exists of his having been so concerned ;

secondly, any person having in his possession without lawful excuse, the burden of proving which excuse shall lie on such person, any implement of house-breaking ;

thirdly, any person who has been proclaimed as an offender either under this Code or by order of the Local Government ;

fourthly, any person in whose possession anything is found which may reasonably be suspected to be stolen property and who may reasonably be suspected of having committed an offence with reference to such thing ;

fifthly, any person who obstructs a police-officer while in the execution of his duty, or who has escaped, or attempts to escape, from lawful custody ;

sixthly, any person reasonably suspected of being a deserter from Her Majesty's Army, Navy or Air Force or of belonging to Her Majesty's Indian Marine Service and being illegally absent from that service ;

seventhly, any person who has been concerned in, or against whom a reasonable complaint has been made or credible information has been received or a reasonable suspicion exists of his having been concerned in, any act committed at any place out of British India, which, if committed in British India, would have been punishable as an offence, and for which he is, under any law relating to extradition or under the Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881, or otherwise, liable to be apprehended or detained in custody in British India ;

eighthly, any released convict committing a breach of any rule made under section 565, sub-section (3) ; and ninthly, any person for whose arrest a requisition has been received from another police-officer, provided that the requisition specifies the person to be arrested and the offence or other cause for which the arrest is to be made and it appears therefrom that the person might lawfully be arrested without a warrant by the officer who issued the requisition.

(2) This section applies also to the police in the town of Calcutta.

Amendment.—CL (9) is new.

Police-officer.—In 35 C. 351 it was held that a Duffadar under Bengal Act VI of 1870 is not a police-officer. A Choudidar in the N.W.P. is not a member of the police force, and cannot arrest under this section, 14 A.L.J. 789; 3 A. 60; 2 C.W.N. 637. But a police constable deputed by his superior officer to be on the look out for one against whom a warrant has been issued was held to be a police-officer within this section, 36 A. 6. See also 40 M. 1028. The police of an adjoining Native State cannot lawfully arrest a person suspected of having committed an offence in a Native State, in British territory, 29 A. 377.

May arrest.—The word arrest literally signifies a setting, a stop or stay. Arrest is the restraining of the liberty of a man's person in order to compel obedience to the order of a Court of Justice, or to prevent the commission of a crime or to ensure that a person charged or suspected may be forthcoming to answer it" Wharton's Law Lexicon. When the person to be arrested comes within the 1st clause of this section he may be arrested without an order from a Magistrate and without a warrant. The writing out of a warrant or an order for arrest in such a case is a superfluous act and it cannot be considered as illegal, 18 Cr L J. 666 = 43 Ind. Cas. 314. Where a police-officer arrests and tells the person arrested expressly that he is doing so under a particular authority which he claims to arrest him and such arrest is resisted, it will be for the prosecution on a charge for resistance to establish that the police-officer had power to act under the authority he claimed to have and not under some other provision of law to arrest, 47 M. 442. The question whether the officer who effected the arrest was acting within or beyond his powers in making the arrest does not affect the question whether the accused was guilty or not guilty of the offence with which he was charged, 26 M. 124. Illegality of arrest does not vitiate extradition proceedings provided further the officer making the arrest or, when the arrest is made by a private person, the police-officer to whom he makes over the person arrested, may search such person, and place in safe custody all articles, other than necessary wearing apparel, found upon him.

Under this section a private person making an arrest is not entitled to make any search. He is to make over the person arrested without delay to a police-officer who may search such person. Under § 523, infra, the seizure of property shall be forthwith reported to the Magistrate and § 53, infra, provides for the custody of offensive weapons taken from the arrested person.

Mode of searching
women.

52. Whenever it is necessary to cause a woman to be searched, the search shall be made by another woman, with strict regard to decency.

The word 'decency' was substituted for the words 'habits and customs of the country', which occurred in the 1872 Code.

53. The officer or other person making any arrest under this Code may take from the person arrested any offensive weapons which he has about his person, and shall deliver all weapons so taken to the Court or officer before which or whom the officer or person making the arrest is required by this Code to produce the person arrested.

offensive weapons.

Any offensive weapons—Such as swords, daggers, rifles, guns, clubs, or the like.

Amendment.—CL (9) is new.

Police-officer.—In 35 C. 351 it was held that a Duffadar under Bengal Act VI of 1870 is not a police-officer. A Choukidar in the N.W.P. is not a member of the police force, and cannot arrest under this section, 14 A.L.J. 789; 3 A. 60; 2 C.W.N. 637. But a police constable deputed by his superior officer to be on the look out for one against whom a warrant has been issued was held to be a police-officer within this section, 38 A. 6. See also 43 M. 1023. The police of an adjoining Native State cannot lawfully arrest a person suspected of having committed an offence in a Native State, in British territory, 29 A. 377.

May arrest.—The word arrest literally signifies a setting, a stop or stay. Arrest is the restraining of the liberty of a man's person in order to compel obedience to the order of a Court of Justice, or to prevent the commission of a crime or to ensure that a person charged or suspected may be forthcoming to answer it" Wharton's Law Lexicon. When the person to be arrested comes within the 1st clause of this section he may be arrested without an order from a Magistrate and without a warrant. The writing out of a warrant or an order for arrest in such a case is a superfluous act and it cannot be considered as illegal, 13 Cr. L.J. 666= 43 Ind. Cas. 314. Where a police-officer arrests and tells the person arrested expressly that he is doing so under a particular authority which he claims to arrest him and such arrest is resisted, it will be for the prosecution on a charge for resistance to establish that the police-officer had power to act under the authority he claimed to have and not under some other provision of law to arrest, 47 M. 442. The question whether the officer who effected the arrest was acting within or beyond his powers in making the arrest does not affect the question whether the accused was guilty or not guilty of the offence with which he was charged, 25 M. 124. Illegality of arrest does not vitiate extradition proceedings provided further action was gone thoroughly, 39 C. 164. A police constable not in police uniform has authority to arrest a person suspected of having committed cognizable offence without a warrant, 21 A.L.J. 791=25 Cr. L.J. 652=81 Ind. Cas. 159. A police constable, who knew a warrant of arrest had been issued against the accused, and who was asked by his Inspector to look out for him, may arrest even though he has no warrant with him, 40 M. 1028. If a Court is competent to try case, it does not in the least matter how the accused came before the Court, whether he was legally or illegally arrested, 31 C. 557; 25 B. 225; 7 B. 369; 26 M. 124; 1906 P.R. (Cr.) 17; 29 Cr. L.J. 1089=112 Ind. Cas. 673.

Reasonable complaint or suspicion.—What is a reasonable complaint or suspicion must depend on the circumstances of each particular case, but it must at least be founded on some definite fact, tending to throw suspicion on the person arrested and not on a mere surmise or information. A general definition of what constitutes reasonableness in a complaint or suspicion or credibility of information cannot be given, but must depend upon the existence of some tangible proof within the cognizance of the arresting officer and he must judge whether it is sufficient to establish the reasonableness or credibility of the charge, information or suspicion, 52 C. 319. The complaint referred to in this section need not be made to the police constable himself who arrests the person. But it is sufficient if it was made to a Magistrate who issues a warrant of arrest. In such a case there is a reasonable complaint of the accused being concerned in a cognizable offence, and the arrest by the constable without a warrant is justified under this section, 21 A.L.J. 791; 22 Cr. L.J. 758=64 Ind. Cas. 278. Still less have the police any power to arrest the persons as they appear sometimes to do merely on the chance of something being hereafter proved against them on a complaint being made—per Markby, J., in 7 W.R. (Cr.) 3 at 5. See also 12 B. 377 as to what is reasonable suspicion. A police constable has authority to arrest under this section a person suspected of having committed a cognizable offence even though he is not in police uniform when arresting the person suspected, 1923 Pat. 181=25 Cr. L.J. 972=81 Ind. Cas. 620.

Credible information.—As to what is credible information, see 36 A. 6. As laid down in 1882 P.R. (Cr. J.) 7 (F.B.) credible information includes any information which, in the judgment of the officer to whom it is given, appears entitled to credit in the particular instance and which he believes, and it need not be sworn information, 30 Cr. L.J. 625=116 Ind. Cas. 455. Where a constable who knowing the existence of the warrant of arrest against a person for the offence of cheating, tried to arrest him, was held to have reasonable suspicion and credible information within this clause. Reasonable suspicion and credible information must be based upon definite facts which the police-officer must consider for himself before he acts under the section, 44 C. 76. Omission to notify substance of the order for arrest to the person arrested is an irregularity cured by S. 537, infra, 18 Cr. L.J. 666=40 Ind. Cas. 315.

Clause (3).—Proclamation under the Code is one made under S. 87, infra.

Clause (5)—Stolen property.—For definition of stolen property see S. 410, I.P.C. Possession of stolen property must be recent and exclusive, 8 W.R. (Cr.) 23. This clause refers only to property reasonably suspected to have been stolen and not to anything which the police may choose to imagine to have been stolen, 10 W.R. (Cr.) 20. See Ss 523 to 535 infra as to the procedure to be followed when stolen goods are found.

Clause (5).—Obstruction.—The word "obstruction" is not defined in the Indian Penal Code. In ordinary language it means impeding the progress of anything and Ss. 186, 221 and 225 I.P.C., make obstruction penal. A person who obstructs a police-officer trying to seize property which he believes to be stolen may be arrested under this section, 12 B. 377.

Escape from lawful custody.—This section permits an arrest upon reasonable suspicion of the commission of an offence, and therefore the custody is none the less legal because it is not followed by conviction or trial on the merits, 1836 A.W.N. 151, see also 28 C. 253; 21 C. 337; 29 A. 377; 19 M. 310; 11 M. 441 and 480. A detention by a village headman for an offence is lawful custody, 17 M. 103.

Clause (6).—See S. 549 infra which enables the Governor-General in Council to make rules as to cases in which persons subject to military law shall be tried by a Court to which the Code applies or by a Court-martial, and the procedure to be adopted by a Magistrate in such cases

Clause (7).—To satisfy the requirements of this clause two conditions must be present first, that the person to be arrested has been concerned in any act committed at any place out of British India which if committed in British India would have been punishable as an offence, or against the person a reasonable complaint has been made or credible information has been received or a reasonable suspicion exists of his having been concerned in such act; and second, that the person is liable for such act to be apprehended or detained in custody in British India under any law relating to extradition or under the Fugitive Offenders' Act 1881 or otherwise. The first of these requisites contemplates either the proof of a fact, viz., the fact that the person having been concerned in the act, or a reasonable complaint, or credible information or a reasonable suspicion of his having been concerned therein. The wording of this part of the clause is very similar to that of cl. (1) of the section. Under that clause it has been held (44 C 76) that it gives a police-officer personal authority which involves personal responsibility and the reasonable suspicion and credible information must be based upon definite facts which the police-officer must consider for himself before he acts under this section and that he cannot delegate his discretion or take shelter under the belief or judgment of another police-officer. The wording of the clause clearly indicates that the arresting officer has to exercise his own judgment and to form his own opinion as to whether he should or should not act and to enable him to do so he must have the necessary facts before him. What is a reasonable complaint or suspicion must depend on the circumstances of each particular case but it must be at least founded on some definite fact tending to throw suspicion on the person arrested and not a mere vague surmise or information. A general definition of what constitutes reasonableness in a complaint or suspicion or credibility of an information cannot be given but must depend upon the existence of some tangible proof within the cognizance of the arresting police-officer, and he must judge whether it is sufficient to establish the reasonableness or credibility of the charge, information or suspicion. The second requisite is that there must be a present liability for apprehension or detention and not a future possible liability for apprehension or detention. The issue of some sort of process under the law would create such a liability though the process may not have been allowed and is not available for execution. These conditions being made out and an arrest being validly and lawfully made, the police must forthwith produce a person arrested before a Magistrate, 52 C. 319 B 58 infra authorizes a police-officer to pursue any person to be arrested into any place in British India. He cannot pursue an offender into any place outside British India, say a Native State, and arrest him there, 25 C. 20 (P.C.); 1 Lah. 406. This clause authorizes the arrest in British India of a British subject committing outside British India criminal breach of trust or any one of the offences mentioned in the schedule to the Extradition Act of 1903, thus superceding the decision in 19 B. 72. The police in British India can now arrest fugitives from Native States without a warrant under this clause, 7 Bom. L.R. 453.

Clause (8).—This clause refers to rules made by Local Governments relating to notification of residence by a released convict under S. 565, infra, and any released convict committing a breach of the rule may be arrested.

Clause (9).—This clause has been newly added to provide for cases when one police-officer has to act on the requisition issued by another police-officer restricting the responsibility of the arresting police-officer to the conditions mentioned in this clause. In cases however where the clause "firstly" applies, the responsibility is that of the arresting officer himself and the principle laid down in (44 C. 76) still holds good. This new clause does not affect the provisions of "seventhly," 52 C. 319.

Arrest of vagabonds, habitual robbers, etc.

55. (1) Any officer in charge of a police-station may, in like manner, arrest or cause to be arrested—

(a) any person found taking precautions to conceal his presence within the limits of such station, under circumstances which afford reason to believe that he is taking such precautions with a view to committing a cognizable offence; or

(b) any person within the limits of such station who has no ostensible means of subsistence, or who cannot give a satisfactory account of himself; or

(c) any person who is by repute an habitual robber, house-breaker or thief, or an habitual receiver of stolen property knowing it to be stolen, or who by repute habitually commits extortion or in order to the committing of extortion habitually puts or attempts to put persons in fear of injury.

(2) This section applies also to the police in the town of Calcutta.

Scope of the section.—This section is independent of Chapter VIII, although proceedings under Chapter VIII may follow such an arrest as a natural consequence. Therefore a police-officer under this section may arrest without an order from a Magistrate any person against whom proceedings under S. 121 infra are contemplated, 33 A. 437 at 438. Where certain persons were arrested on suspicion of having been concerned in a dacoity and committed to jail on the Magistrate's warrants, and before the formal conclusion of the investigation by police officer reported to the Magistrate that there was no sufficient evidence as to their participation in the dacoity, but the Magistrate directed them to be detained in jail pending police inquiry as to their liability to be proceeded against under S. 110 and information was laid before the Magistrate some time afterwards, and an order under S. 112 passed, it was held that the detention was illegal unless and until they were re-arrested by the police under this section, 43 A. 183; 41 A. 433; 1933 A.W.N. 212. Compare the provisions of this section with S. 100, infra, and see the notes thereunder; See also 35 A. 407.

Officer in charge of police-station.—See for definition S. 4 (1) (p), supra, and also S. 550, infra, which includes officers of higher rank also in this expression. It is not any police-officer who is empowered to arrest under this section. Officers in charge of police-stations are armed with exceptional powers under this section for the purpose of restraining bad characters. They provide very strong remedies and should never be put in force either by the officer in charge of a police-station, or the Magistrate of the district without the greatest deliberation, and except upon evidence which convinces the Magistrate that in the interests of public welfare it is absolutely necessary to demand from the person before him security to be of good behaviour. Comparing this section with S. 112, infra, and the following sections, there is little doubt that this section was intended for suppression of habitual bad characters whom an officer in charge of a police station suddenly finds within his circle, or about whom he has good cause to fear that they will commit serious harm before there is time to apply to the nearest Magistrate, 14 A. 43 at 45. It is intolerable that the police should pursue the investigation of crime by defying all the provisions of law for the protection of the liberty of the subject under the colourable pretension that no actual arrest has been made, when, to all intents and purposes a person has been in their custody. Such a procedure is illegal and is a gross and unwarranted breach of the powers entrusted to the police-officers, 1895 A.W.N. 53 (F.B.) at 59. This section does not empower the police to arrest a person on suspicion of unlawful gaming, 3 Cr. L.J. 20.

In like manner.—These words refer to the previous section which applies to certain specified cases and mean without a warrant and order from a Magistrate.

Sub-Section (1) (c).—It is not sufficient that a police-officer arresting a person under this sub-section has reason to suspect that the person was concerned in several offences. It is further necessary to prove that the person was by repute a habitual offender or by repute a person habitually committing the various offences referred to herein; otherwise the arrest is illegal, 47 M. 442.

Sub-Section (2).—The police in Calcutta are empowered to act under this section, 31 C. 557.

56. (1) When any officer in charge of a police-station or any police-officer making an investigation under Chapter XIV requires any officer subordinate to him to arrest without a warrant (otherwise than in his presence) any person who may lawfully be arrested without a warrant, he shall deliver to the officer required to make the arrest an order in writing, specifying the person to be arrested and the offence or other cause for which the arrest is to be made.

The officer so required shall, before making the arrest, notify to the person to be arrested the substance of the order and, if so required by such person, shall show him the order.

(2) This section applies also to the police in the town of Calcutta.

Amendment.—By the addition of the words "any police-officer making investigation", etc., power is given also to the investigating officer to depute a subordinate to effect and arrest. The last portion of sub-section (1) is newly added

An order in writing.—An order in writing is an authority to a subordinate police-officer to make an arrest, which the superior officer, if present, would himself make on his own responsibility. The issue of an order under this section does not limit the power of the officer under S. 54 supra, 5 Pat. 533. S. 83, infra, only applies to execution of warrants, and not to an order in writing under this section, and so the officer making the arrest is not bound to show the authority under which he is acting though it may be desirable to do so, 27 C. 320, but the last portion of sub-section (1) newly introduced provides a real safeguard against abuse of powers by the Police. See 25 Cr. L.J. 563. It is to be presumed that an officer who takes action under a particular section must be deemed to have full powers until the contrary is proved; even where a police-officer who takes action is not in charge of a police-station under the provisions of this section he could have been authorized by the officer in charge of the police-station to lawfully conduct the search. It is for the defence to prove that an officer who conducted the search was not the officer in charge of the police-station at the time of the search. Whether the search was legal or illegal, when contraband articles were as a matter of fact found in the possession of the accused, no question of the legality of the search or otherwise can be raised by him, 27 A.L.J. 28 at 33 following 23 A.L.J. 364. No order in writing is necessary if the offence is a cognizable one. S. 54, supra, empowers any police-officer to arrest on his own responsibility. Where a head-constable verbally ordered a constable to arrest one suspected of dacoity which the constable did in the presence of his superior, it was held that the arrest was legal, as dacoity is an offence for which any police-officer may arrest without a warrant and the arrest was virtually made by the head-constable, 11 W.R. (Cr.) 20. It is perfectly competent to the officer in charge of the thana, if he had disposed to have issued to any constable subordinate to him an order in writing section for arresting a person. The Magistrate having issued his warrant for the arrest of the person, did not exclude the jurisdiction of the officer in charge of the thana and prevent him from issuing his written order under this section; but it might be different if the Magistrate had decided to issue a summons only. Mere writing of the names of any of the constables on the back of the copy of the warrant and the signing of that endorsement by the police-officer did not constitute the copy of the warrant "an order in writing", within the meaning of this section; but if the officer writes on the copy of the warrant "Arrest D, the person within named for the offence within named" and had put the names of the constables on the copy of the warrant and had signed such endorsement, he would have made an order in writing within the meaning of this section, 18 A. 246 at 248-49. See also Ss. 55, 92, 107 (3) and 114, infra. A chaukidar arresting under an order given by an S. H. O. is not bound to show the order unless asked to produce it, 26 Cr. L.J. 795=86 Ind Cas. 427.

Or other cause.—As to other causes for which action can be taken, See Ss. 55, 92, 107 (3) and 114 infra.

Before arresting, notify to the person to be arrested, substance of the order.—This provision has been newly added in the amendment of 1923 making it compulsory on the officer arresting if so required to notify before arresting, to the person to be arrested the substance of the order but this "section does not deprive, say a police constable of his statutory powers conferred independently of this section. The terms of S. 54 supra are very wide and authorize any police officer without an order from a Magistrate and without any warrant to arrest any one concerned in a cognizable offence, etc. The mere fact that a command certificate had been given to the officer under this section is not material as he had independently of such certificate power to make arrest and no valid plea of non-compliance with the provision of this section could be successfully raised, 27 Cr. L.J. 1310=93 Ind. Cas. 254.

57. (1) When any person who in the presence of a police-officer has committed or has been accused of committing a non-cognizable offence refuses, on demand of such officer, to give his name and residence or gives a name or residence which such officer has reason to believe to be false, he may be arrested by such officer in order that his name or residence may be ascertained.

(2) When the true name and residence of such person have been ascertained, he shall be released on his executing a bond, with or without sureties, to appear before a Magistrate if so required :

Provided that, if such person is not resident in British India, the bond shall be secured by a surety or sureties resident in British India.

(3) Should the true name and residence of such person not be ascertained within twenty-four hours from the time of arrest or should he fail to execute the bond, or, if so required, to furnish sufficient sureties, he shall forthwith be forwarded to the nearest Magistrate having jurisdiction.

Refuses on demand to give name and residence.—This is the only instance in which a police-officer is empowered to make an inquiry in a non-cognizable case, and the scope of such inquiry is limited as laid down by this section. See S. 153, infra as to procedure on receiving information in non-cognizable cases. See 5 Bom. L.R. 597 where the action of a constable who arrested one who was quarrelling on the public road and detained him till his name and address were ascertained was justified under this section. A person who was tried and acquitted of dacoity was re-arrested by the police under S. 55 and detained in custody for 12 days on the pretext that they did not know his true name and residence, held that he should have been released on his executing a bond under this section. For a police-officer or a Magistrate to detain an accused person when orders have been passed by the Sessions Judge for his immediate release is a most grave irregularity and might expose the Magistrate and a police-officer to very serious results, 41 A. 433.

Sub-Section (2).—A police-officer other than an officer in charge of a police-station may release a person on his executing a bond for appearance before a Magistrate. This and S. 59 (3) are the only two instances where an inferior police-officer is empowered to release a person arrested. S. 60 infra provides that in any other case he is bound to send the arrested person to a station house officer or to a Magistrate without unnecessary delay.

58. A police-officer may, for the purpose of arresting without warrant any person whom he is authorized to arrest under this Chapter, pursue such person into any place in British India.

Pursuit of offenders into other jurisdictions.

Arrest by a police-officer in a Native State of a person charged with an offence committed in British India is illegal, as he is only entitled to pursue and arrest in any place in British India, 25 C. 20 (P.C.) ; 1 Lah. 426.

As to arrest without a warrant see §§. 54 and 55, supra. For definition of British India, see notes to S. 1 where S. 3 (7) of the General Clauses Act is set forth.

59. (1) Any private person may arrest any person who in his view commits a non-bailable and cognizable offence, or any proclaimed offender, and, without unnecessary delay, shall make over any person so arrested to a police-officer, or, in the absence of a police-officer, take such person or cause him to be taken in custody to the nearest police-station.

Arrest by private persons and procedure on such arrest.

(2) If there is reason to believe that such person comes under the provisions of section 54, a police-officer shall re-arrest him.

(3) If there is reason to believe that he has committed a non-cognizable offence, and he refuses on the demand of a police-officer to give his name and residence, or gives a name or residence which such officer has reason to believe to be false, he shall be dealt with under the provisions of section 57. If there is no sufficient reason to believe that he has committed any offence, he shall be at once released.

Amendment.—Sub-section (1) is re-drafted, the chief alteration is "cause him to be taken." It is not now obligatory for the person arresting to take the person himself to the police-station. Any private person may arrest.

Scope of the section.—Under English Common Law all private persons are justified without a warrant, in apprehending and detaining until they can be carried before a Magistrate all persons found committing or attempting to commit a felony in the night.

Though the cases expressly refer to the night, they are sometimes cited without qualification but in cases of mere suspicion of felony and offences less than felony, a private person has no such right. Where a breach of the peace is actually being committed any private person may interfere to prevent it even though no felony be committed or attempted, after proper warning and calling upon the parties to desist Roscoe Cr. Ev. and Pr. p. 222 Now see 24 and 25 Vict., C. 96 S. 103; C. 99 S. 31; C. 97 S. 61 as to statutory power of private persons to arrest. See also 14 and 15 vict., C. 19 S. 11. It is not obligatory on a private person to make an arrest under this section. Under the Common Law of England, a private citizen has a right to arrest any person who is about to commit a breach of the peace, a power very essential to the orderly government of society and preservation of the peace. In 44 M. 913, following the common law principle it was held that a private citizen (village headman) had the right to arrest a drunken and disorderly person when there was a reasonable apprehension that he would commit a breach of the peace and be a danger to villagers as such power of arrest is very essential to the orderly government of society and the preservation of the peace. But the Full Bench decision in 46 M. 605 held the power of arrest was not by virtue of the rule of English Common Law but by reason of the provision of Ss. 81, 95 to 105, I.P.C. and the person cannot plead and invoke the aid of the Common Law of England as a defence when charged for illegal arrest. The decision in 44 M. 913 was affirmed not on the ground of the applicability of the English Common law on which the decision was based, but on the provisions of the Indian Penal Code relating to private defence. The Common Law of England relating to arrest by private individuals does not run in India. The general law on the subject is to be found in this section. This section is not happily worded but the intention of the Legislature appears to have been to restrict the right of arrest by private persons to cases in which a cognizable and non-bailable offence has been committed in the presence of the person who arrests or causes the arrest of the offender. It is not necessary that the person should himself physically arrest the offender. He may cause such offender to be arrested by another, 52 C. 615 at 618-19 where 11 M. 480 is followed and 35 C. 361 is dissented from.

In his view commits a non-bailable and cognizable offence.—Private persons are not empowered to arrest in cases which involve suspicion. In 35 C. 361 it was held that when a theft had been completed before a Duffadar came up, and the offence of theft not being a continuing offence, he had no power to arrest the thief who was carrying the stolen property. This case is dissented in 52 C. 615. See 27 C. 366; 23 Cr. L.J. 82=64 Ind. Cas. 371. The words "in his view" mean "in the presence of" "or within the sight of" and the section provides that if an offence is committed in the presence of or within the sight of such person, any private person, may arrest when he is entitled to arrest the offender if the offence is non-bailable and cognizable. To construe the words as meaning "in his opinion" is unwarranted. The Legislature did not intend to give a private person authority to arrest an offender if upon information received or from other circumstances appearing before him he is of opinion, that an offence has been committed. Consequently the person arrested by a private individual cannot be said to be in lawful custody, if no offence has been committed in the presence of the person arresting and within his sight, but was found hiding himself inside a house, 20 Cr. L.J. 1462 =89 Ind. Cas. 1030. One should not put too strained a construction on the words 'in his view'. Where out of three persons who went out to commit theft of toddy from a tree two went up the trees to bring the toddy and the third man was standing at the foot of the tree collecting the toddy in a pot which he had in his hands with a view to carry it away his arrest with toddy in his hands as a thief committing theft 'in his view' was legally justified, 18 L.W. 818=25 Cr. L.J. 792=81 Ind. Cas. 812, where 35 C. 361 and 23 Cr. L.J. 32=64 Ind. Cas. 371 are distinguished.

Take such person or cause him to be taken.—The words "cause him to be taken" are new, and it is not obligatory on the private citizen to take the arrested person himself to the nearest police station. It is in accordance with the rulings in, 11 M. 480; 23 A. 266; 29 A. 575.

Make over person so arrested to a police-officer.—Where a private person bona fide makes an arrest under this section but instead of taking him to the nearest police-station takes him to a Magistrate he is protected from a charge of wrongful confinement, 5 Pat. L.J. 123. But if he keeps in his own custody without taking the arrested person to the police or Magistrate, he is guilty of an offence under S. 342 I.P.C., 27 Cr. L.J. 1378=93 Ind. Cas. 594. The provisions of this section are not complied with, if the arrested person is made over to a Chakildar to be taken to a police-station, as the Chakildar is not a police-officer under this section and escape from his custody is not punishable, 41 C. 17; see 27 C. 356; but escape from the custody of a servant of the person who arrested while on his way to the nearest police station was held punishable, 11 M. 450. See also the new amendment, Rescue from the custody of a private person who arrested a thief while in the act of stealing is punishable under S. 225, I.P.C. 11 M. 441 and 450; see also 17 M. 103; 5 M. 22 and 29 A. 575.

Without unnecessary delay.—As a general rule the person arrested should be taken directly to the Magistrate and nothing that is avoidable will justify the non-compliance of this rule. Twenty-four hours mentioned in S. 61 infra is the maximum period of detention. A police-officer has not at all events the power to detain an arrested person for more than 24 hours. A police-officer should in no case detain an arrested person for a single hour except on reasonable grounds justified by the circumstances, Ratanlal 22; 6 W.R. (Cr.) 83; 7 W.R. (Cr.) 3; 19 W.R. (Cr.) 36.

60. A police-officer making an arrest without warrant shall, without unnecessary delay and subject to the provisions herein contained as to bail, take or send the Person arrested before a Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case, or before the officer in charge of a police-station.

Person arrested to be taken before Magistrate or officer in charge of police-station.

Scope of the section.—The precaution laid down in this and the next section is designed to secure that within not more than 24 hours of the arrest of an accused person some Magistrate shall have seisin of what is going on and some knowledge of the nature of the charges against the accused, however incomplete the information may be, 23 C.W.N. 850=25 Cr. L.J. 1233=82 Ind. Cas. 131. A police-officer arresting a person should not keep him in a place of confinement selected by him, but should send him immediately to the police-station, and thus place the arrested person in the custody of the officer in charge of the station who is the person entrusted by the Act in the conduct of the inquiry, 7 W.R. (Cr.) 3. He has no authority to detain the arrested person for 24 hours under S. 61 infra, Ratanlal 22.

Provisions herein contained as to bail.—See Ss. 63, 169, 170 (1), 496 and 497 infra which provide for the taking of bail. When the police arrest a person under S. 55 supra they are bound to give the person arrested the option of bail and that bail shall be, as the Code requires not excessive and in accordance with the position in life occupied by him.....To deprive any person of his liberty is a most serious step to take and it is hardly too much to say that every step in the process should show extreme deliberation and care and if a person has to be arrested previous to inquiry he should be given the option of release upon proper bail, 14 A. 45 at 47; 52 C. 615.

61. No police-officer shall detain in custody a person arrested without warrant for a longer period than under all the circumstances of the case is reasonable, and such period shall not, in the absence of a special order of a Magistrate under section 167, exceed Person arrested not to be detained more than twenty-four hours.

Though the cases expressly refer to the night, they are sometimes cited without qualification but in cases of mere suspicion of felony and offences less than felony, a private person has no such right. Where a breach of the peace is actually being committed any private person may interfere to prevent it even though no felony be committed or attempted, after proper warning and calling upon the parties to desist. Roscoe Cr. Ev. and Pr. p. 222 Now see 21 and 25 Vict., C. 96 S. 103; C. 99 S. 31; C. 97 S. 61 as to statutory power of private persons to arrest. See also 14 and 15 vict., C. 19 S. 11. It is not obligatory on a private person to make an arrest under this section. Under the Common Law of England, a private citizen has a right to arrest any person who is about to commit a breach of the peace a power very essential to the orderly government of society and preservation of the peace. In 44 M. 913, following the common law principle it was held that a private citizen (village headman) had the right to arrest a drunken and disorderly person when there was a reasonable apprehension that he would commit a breach of the peace and be a danger to villagers as such power of arrest is very essential to the orderly government of society and the preservation of the peace. But the Full Bench decision in 45 M. 605 held the power of arrest was not by virtue of the rule of English Common Law but by reason of the provision of Ss. 81, 95 to 105, I.P.C., and the person cannot plead and invoke the aid of the Common Law of England as a defence when charged for illegal arrest. The decision in 44 M. 913 was affirmed not on the ground of the applicability of the English Common law on which the decision was based, but on the provisions of the Indian Penal Code relating to private defence. The Common Law of England relating to arrest by private individuals does not run in India. The general law on the subject is to be found in this section. This section is not happily worded but the intention of the Legislature appears to have been to restrict the right of arrest by private persons to cases in which a cognizable and non-bailable offence has been committed in the presence of the person who arrests or causes the arrest of the offender. It is not necessary that the person should himself physically arrest the offender. He may cause such offender to be arrested by another, 52 C. 615 at 618-19 where 11 M. 430 is followed and 35 C. 361 is dissented from.

In his view commits a non-bailable and cognizable offence.—Private persons are not empowered to arrest in cases which involve suspicion. In 35 C. 361 it was held that when a theft had been completed before a Dugadar came up, and the offence of theft not being a continuing offence, he had no power to arrest the thief who was carrying the stolen property. This case is dissented in 52 C. 615. See 27 C. 366; 23 Cr. L.J. 82=64 Ind. Cas. 371. The words "in his view" mean "in the presence of" "or within the sight of" and the section provides that if an offence is committed in the presence of or within the sight of such person, any private person, may arrest when he is entitled to arrest the offender if the offence is non-bailable and cognizable. To construe the words as meaning "in his opinion" is unwarranted. The Legislature did not intend to give a private person authority to arrest an offender if upon information received or from other circumstances appearing before him he is of opinion, that an offence has been committed. Consequently the person arrested by a private individual cannot be said to be in lawful custody, if no offence has been committed in the presence of the person arresting and within his sight, but was found hiding himself inside a house, 26 Cr. L.J. 1462 = 89 Ind. Cas. 1033. One should not put too strained a construction on the words "in his view". Where out of three persons who went out to commit theft of toddy from a tree two went up the trees to bring the toddy and the third man was standing at the foot of the tree collecting the toddy in a pot which he had in his hands with a view to carry it away his arrest with toddy in his hands as a thief committing theft "in his view" was legally justified, 13 L.W. 815=25 Cr. L.J. 792=81 Ind. Cas. 812, where 35 C. 361 and 23 Cr. L.J. 32=64 Ind. Cas. 371 are distinguished.

Take such person or cause him to be taken.—The words "cause him to be taken" are new, and it is not obligatory on the private citizen to take the arrested person himself to the nearest police station. It is in accordance with the rulings in, 11 M. 450; 23 A. 266; 29 A. 573.

Take over person so arrested to a police-officer.—Where a private person bona fide makes an arrest under this section but instead of taking him to the nearest police station takes him to a Magistrate he is protected from a charge of wrongful confinement, 5 Pat. L.J. 129. But if he keeps in his own custody without taking the arrested person to the police or Magistrate, he is guilty of an offence under S. 342 I.P.C., 27 Cr. L.J. 1378=83 Ind. Cas. 591. The provisions of this section are not complied with, if the arrested person is made over to a Choudidar to be taken to a police-station, as the Choudidar is not a police officer under this section and escape from his custody is not punishable, 41 C. 17; see 27 C. 366; but escape from the custody of a servant of the person who arrested while on his way to the nearest police station was held punishable, 11 M. 430. See also the new amendment, Release from the custody of a private person who arrested a thief while in the act of stealing is punishable under S. 225, I.P.C. 11 M. 441 and 450; see also 17 M. 103; 5 M. 22 and 29 A 575.

Without unnecessary delay.—As a general rule the person arrested should be taken directly to the Magistrate and nothing that is avoidable will justify the non-compliance of this rule. Twenty-four hours mentioned in S. 61 infra is the maximum period of detention. A police-officer has not at all events the power to detain an arrested person for more than 24 hours. A police-officer should in no case detain an arrested person for a single hour except on reasonable grounds justified by the circumstances, Ratanlal 22; 6 W.R. (Cr.) 88; 7 W.R. (Cr.) 3; 19 W.R. (Cr.) 36.

60. A police-officer making an arrest without warrant shall, without unnecessary delay and subject to the provisions herein contained as to bail, take or send the Person arrested before a Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case, or before the officer in charge of a police-station.

Person arrested to be taken before Magistrate or officer in charge of police-station.

Scope of the section.—The precaution laid down in this and the next section is designed to secure that within not more than 24 hours of the arrest of an accused person some Magistrate shall have seisin of what is going on and some knowledge of the nature of the charges against the accused, however incomplete the information may be, 28 C.W.N. 850=25 Cr. L.J. 1203=82 Ind. Cas. 131. A police-officer arresting a person should not keep him in a place of confinement selected by him, but should send him immediately to the police-station, and thus place the arrested person in the custody of the officer in charge of the station who is the person entrusted by the Act in the conduct of the inquiry, 7 W.R. (Cr.) 3. He has no authority to detain the arrested person for 24 hours under S. 61 infra, Ratanlal 22.

Provisions herein contained as to bail.—See §§. 63, 169, 170 (1), 496 and 497 infra which provide for the taking of bail. When the police arrest a person under S. 55 supra they are bound to give the person arrested the option of bail and that bail shall be, as the Code requires not excessive and in accordance with the position in life occupied by him.....To deprive any person of his liberty is a most serious step to take and it is hardly too much to say that every step in the process should show extreme deliberation and care and if a person has to be arrested previous to inquiry he should be given the option of release upon proper bail, 14 A. 45 at 47; 52 C 618.

61. No police-officer shall detain in custody a person arrested without warrant for a longer period than under all the circumstances of the case is reasonable, and such period shall not, in the absence of a special order of a Magistrate under section 167, ex-twenty-four hours exclusive of the time necessary for the journey from the place of arrest to the Magistrate's Court.

Person arrested not to be detained more than twenty-four hours.

Scope of the section.—This section applies only to the case of arrest without a warrant, and S. 81 infra provides for the case of arrest under a warrant. The intention of the Legislature having regard to this section and S. 167 infra, and the requirement of justice generally is that an accused should be brought before a Magistrate competent to try or commit, with as little delay as possible, 11 M. 98. This section does not apply to the police in Calcutta, 44 C.L.J. 134=27 Cr. L.J. 1185=97 Ind. Cas. 945; though the improper exercise of such power may be corrected by the High Court under S. 491 infra. See also 44 C.L.J. 138 (F.B.).

Custody—The retaining of a person in a particular place or compelling him to go in a particular direction by force of an exterior will over-powering or suppressing in a way his own voluntary action is an imprisonment on the part of the person exercising that exterior will, 2 M.H.C.R. 396; see also 7 W.R. (Cr.) 3; 4 Bom L.R. 79.

Custody not to exceed 24 hours.—This section provides that the accused must not be kept in custody for more than 24 hours, but the law cannot mean that the number of hours an accused person is detained at a thana is to be added irrespective of the circumstances. There must be a continuous detention of 24 hours to bring the parties within the scope of this section, 1 W.R. (Cr.) 5. "Even if a person be rightly arrested, it does not rest with the discretion of the police-officer to keep the prisoner in custody wherever and as long as he pleases. Under no circumstances can he be detained without the special order of a Magistrate for more than 24 hours. At the expiration of 24 hours, unless the special order has been obtained, the prisoner must either be discharged or sent on to the Magistrate, and any longer detention is absolutely unlawful; and though the Code is not so express upon the place as the time of confinement, still, we think it is perfectly clear that it was intended that, where a police-officer arrested any person, the prisoner should not be kept in confinement in any place which the subordinate officer might select but that he should, if possible, be sent immediately to the police-station and be placed in the custody of the officer in charge of the station, who is the person entrusted by the Act with the conduct of the inquiry." 7 W.R. (Cr.) 3 at 6; see also 6 W.R. (Cr.) 88 at 89; Ratanlal 22; 19 W.R. (Cr.) 36. The 24 hour's detention and the additional time necessary to bring the accused before a Magistrate allowed by this section and the 15 days additional detention allowed under S. 167 infra, having expired, an accused person must either be released by the police under the provisions of S. 109 infra, security being taken for his appearance before a Magistrate, if and when required or the accused, must, under the provisions of S. 170 infra, be forwarded under custody to a Magistrate who is empowered to take cognizance of the offence upon a police report. The law as laid down in the sections of the Code seems to be this, that on the expiration of the maximum period of 15 days detention and the additional time necessary to bring him before the Magistrate under this section and S. 167 infra, an accused must be released by the police under S. 109, security for appearance being taken, the Magistrate empowered must either take cognizance, if he has a police report before him under S. 173 infra which makes out a prima facie case or he must release him, 28 C.W.N. 490 at 492=26 Cr. L.J. 68=83 Ind. Cas. 628. The intention of the Legislature is that an accused person should be brought before a Magistrate competent to try or to commit, with as little delay as possible, 51 C. 402. The precaution laid down in this and the previous section is designed to secure that within not more than 24 hours of the arrest a Magistrate shall have seisin of what is going on and some knowledge of the nature of the charge against the accused however incomplete the information may be, 23 C.W.N. 850=23 Cr. L.J. 1203=82 Ind. Cas. 131.

Excluding time necessary for journey.—The twenty-four hours specified herein are to be counted up to the time the arrested person leaves the police-station to the Magistrate's Court. The time occupied by the journey is not to be counted in the period but it is the duty of the Magistrate to see that the time so occupied is reasonable having regard to the distance to be traversed and other local considerations, Ratanlal 22.

Special order of a Magistrate under S. 167.—S. 167 infra fixes 15 days in the whole as the extreme period for which a Magistrate can authorize detention in police custody during investigation. The special order under S. 167 is different from an order of adjournment and remand under S. 344 or S. 247, infra. S. 344 infra also declares that the term of police custody is not to exceed 15 days at a time. A Magistrate authorizing detention in police custody under S. 167, infra should record his reasons for doing so. He can make an order only when the accused is produced before him, S B.L.R. 274; 13 W.R. (Cr.) 27; see also Weir II, 439.

62. Officers in charge of police stations shall report to the District Magistrate, or, if he so directs, to the Sub-divisional Magistrate, the cases of all persons arrested without warrant, within the limits of their respective stations, whether such persons have been admitted to bail or otherwise.

Police to report apprehensions.

Scope of the section—This section is enacted with the object of prompt exercise of judicial authority with regard to arrests by the police to see that no one is kept unnecessarily in custody and it is the duty of the District Magistrate to examine carefully the reports of arrests made under this section by the police, Ratanlal 234. See Ibid 239 and 261.

Or otherwise.—These words mean released under sub-S. (3) of S. 59, supra. Failure on the part of a police officer to report is an offence under S. 217 I.P.C.

63. No person who has been arrested by a police-officer shall be discharged except on his own bond, or on bail, or under the special order of a Magistrate.

Discharge of person apprehended.

Discharged on his own Bond or on Bail.—See Ss. 57, 59, 169, 170, 496 and 497 infra as to discharge on bond or bail.

Under special order of a Magistrate.—Compare the language of S. 61, supra; the special order contemplated is one under S. 167, infra.

64. When any offence is committed in the presence of a Magistrate within the local limits of his jurisdiction, he may himself arrest or order any person to arrest the offender, and may thereupon, subject to the provisions herein contained as to bail, commit the offender to custody.

Offence committed in Magistrate's presence.

This section is clearly not intended to trench upon the great principle embodied in S. 556, infra, and therefore the Magistrate is disqualified from exercising his judicial function in relation to the offence committed in his presence, Ratanlal 339. See Ss. 496 and 497 infra as to bail.

65. Any Magistrate may at any time arrest or direct the arrest in his presence, within the local limits of his jurisdiction, of any person for whose arrest he is competent at the time and in the circumstances to issue a warrant.

Arrest by or in presence of Magistrate.

Magistrate may arrest or direct the arrest in his presence.—When the Legislature empowers an officer to delegate an authority to do certain act to another person it necessarily implies that the original authority to do such act is fully and completely in the officer himself but that it is necessary for the exigencies of business that it should be done in the majority of cases by persons acting under authority derived from him. This principle is adopted by the Legislature in Ss. 65 and 105 of the Code. S. 65 authorizes a Magistrate to make an arrest himself, or direct an arrest in his presence in cases in which he is competent at the time and in the circumstances to issue a warrant and S. 105 provides similarly for a search by him or in his presence, 31 B. 438 at 445.

Acting under this section and S. 190 infra in respect of a complaint under S. 448, I.P.O., a Magistrate went and arrested a person hiding in a temple without making any final order on the occurrence report he had received previously. It was held that independently of the occurrence report the Magistrate's action was justified, and no action will lie against him for damages, 52 Ind. Cas. 699.

66 If a person in lawful custody escapes or is rescued, the person from whose custody he escaped or was rescued may immediately pursue and arrest him in any place in British India.

Power, on escape, to pursue and retake.

Under this section any private person who makes an arrest under S. 59, supra, is empowered on escape of the arrested person in his custody, to pursue and retake the arrested person. The expression used is "the person from whose custody he escaped," which will certainly include a private person. Escaping, rescuing and attempts to escape or rescue are punishable under Ss. 224 and 225, I.P.C. With regard to general power of arrest see S. 55, Cl. (5) supra and S. 59, supra which authorizes pursuit of offenders into other jurisdictions in British India.

67. The provisions of sections 47, 48 and 49 shall apply to arrests under section 66, although the person making any such arrest is not acting under a warrant, and is not a police-officer having authority to arrest.

Provisions of Ss. 47, 48 and 49 to apply to arrests under S. 66

Sections 47, 48 and 49.—These sections relate to search of the place entered into by the person sought to be arrested, what should be done when ingress is not obtainable and to break open doors and windows for purpose of liberation, etc.

CHAPTER VI.

OF PROCESSES TO COMPEL APPEARANCE.

A.—Summons.

68. (1) Every summons issued by a Court under this Code shall be in writing, in duplicate, signed and sealed by the presiding officer of such Court, or by such other officer as the High Court may, from time to time by rule, direct.

Form of summons

(2) Such summons shall be served by a police-officer, or, subject to such rules as the Local Government may prescribe in this behalf, by an officer of the Court issuing it or other public servant.

Summons by whom served.

(3) This section applies also to the police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay.

Scope of the section.—(1) Sub-section (1) deals with personal service where it is practicable. Personal service may be made either by delivering or tendering a copy, but that tender must be a real tender of a document which is understood by the person to be served and he must have voluntarily waived actual delivery and indicated in some way that a tender was sufficient. If the man to be served gives the server an adequate opportunity of tendering the summons, the serving officer need not deliver it. By sub-section (2), the person to whom the summons has been tendered may be required to sign a receipt on the back of one of the duplicates and if he runs away and shuts himself in his house he clearly cannot be asked to sign a receipt and he shows his intention to prevent service. Thus a person who gets away from the serving officer with the obvious intention of not allowing him to hold any communication with him at all and shuts himself in his house, is intentionally preventing service either by tender or by delivery, 26 A.L.J. 107 at 103=29 Cr. L.J. 263=107 Ind. Cas. 563; 31 C.W.N. 143. This section incorporates the form of summons which is a statutory form contained in Schedule V. There appears to be no authority as to what such summons should contain. But the statutory form contained in the Act provides that summons should give as a part of the requirement to the accused person to attend at a specified time and place to answer to charge, particulars of the offence charged. This seems but reasonable and in accordance with common sense. It is an elementary observation to point out that it is not reasonable to summon a person to answer a charge, unless he is informed of the charge he is summoned to answer. The form says 'state shortly the offence charged' that statutory requirement cannot be satisfied by a reference to a general omnibus clause which may include a variety of charges nor does it justify the omission of the place where, the date when, and the precise nature of the offence which the accused person is supposed to have committed and a summons issued by a Magistrate's Court which does not contain in the form prescribed by the statute particulars of the place where, the time when and the nature of the offence charged may be disregarded by the person summoned and proceedings taken thereon, if objected to must necessarily be invalid, 26 A.L.J. 331 at 334=29 Cr. L.J. 357=108 Ind. Cas. 230. Under this section a summons may be (a) to the accused, (b) to witness, (c) to a person to show cause against some order by a Magistrate, (d) to attend as a Juror or Assessor in a sessions trial, 1 C.W.N. cxvi. Under the 1872 Code the corresponding section related only to service of summons on the accused. The law for the service of summons in criminal cases is on the same lines as the rules for the service of summons in civil cases, 20 Cr. L.J. 816=53 Ind. Cas. 720. As to form of summons to an accused, see Bch. V, Form Nos. 1 and 12; to witnesses, see Form No. 31; to Juror or Assessor, see Form No. 33. Summons should be clear and specific as to the Court at which, the day and time of the day when the attendance of the person summoned is required, 7 M.H.C.R. Appx. 14 and 43; 5 A. 7. An accused person summoned must wait a reasonable time if he finds the Magistrate absent, 10 B. 93. So also a witness, 14 W.R. (Cr.) 20. It is not an offence to disobey a summons directing a person to appear at a place outside British India, 16 M. 465. There is no provision in the Code for the issue by a Magistrate either of summons or warrant requiring a person to appear before a police-officer, 24 C. 320.

Every summons shall be in writing.—But there is nothing illegal in a Magistrate verbally directing a person who appears on the first day to appear on a subsequent day, Welf. I, 87. Expressions referring to writing include reference to printing, lithography, photography, and other mode of representing or reproducing words in a visible form, S. 8 (38) of the General Clauses Act X of 1897.

Every summons shall be signed.—When the formalities are not strictly complied with, a conviction for disobedience of summons under S. 174, I.P.C., cannot stand, 3 A. 7; 20 M. 31; 11 C. 111. See 23 C. 896 where a warrant not signed but merely initialled was held invalid. Summonses issued from a Magistrate's Court shall ordinarily be signed by the chief ministerial officer of the Magistrate's establishment with the words 'by order of Court' invariably prefixed to the signature of the ministerial officer, M.H.C. Cir. Dis. No. 734 dated 16—10—1900.

Every summons shall be sealed.—A summons which is not sealed as required by this section is illegal and prosecution for disobeying such void summons is not sustainable, 27 M.L.J. 588=10 L.W. 554 where 42 C. 703 is referred to. See also Weir I, 99; 21 Cr. L.J. 800=55 Ind. Cas. 523.

69. (1) The summons shall, if practicable, be served personally on the person summoned, by delivering or tendering to him one of the duplicates of the summons.

Signature of receipt for summons. (2) Every person on whom a summons is so served shall, if so required by the serving officer, sign a receipt therefor on the back of the other duplicate.

(3) Service of a summons on an incorporated company or other body corporate may be effected by serving it on the secretary, local manager or other principal officer of the corporation or by registered post letter addressed to the chief officer of the corporation in British India. In such case the service shall be deemed to have been effected when the letter would arrive in ordinary course of post.

Shall be served personally.—The mere showing to a witness of a summons is not sufficient service. Either the original should be left with him or should be exhibited to him and a copy of the summons delivered or tendered to the witness, 5 B.H.C.R. (Cr. Ca.) 20. Mere tendering of summons amounts to sufficient service if the person to be served refuses to take the summons. 1836 A.W.N. 93; 28 M.L.J. 503 at 508. A process-server has no right to enter a house to serve summons without the owner's permission, 28 M.L.J. 503.

Shall sign a receipt—Mere refusal to sign a receipt is not an offence under S 173 or 180, I.P.C., 20 C. 338; 3 C. 621; 5 B.H.C.R. (Cr. Ca.) 34; 6 A.L.J. 777; 5 M. 199; Weir I, 80; 1 Ran 49. Service of a summons on the pleader of a party is not sufficient service, 6 C.W.N. 927.

70. Where the person summoned cannot by the exercise of due diligence be found, the summons may be served by leaving one of the duplicates for him with some adult male member of his family, or, in a presidency-town, with his servant residing with him; and the person with whom the summons is so left, shall, if so required by the serving officer, sign a receipt therefor on the back of the other duplicate.

Scope of the section.—This section is analogous to O. V, r. 15, C.P.O.; service on adult member of the family is considered sufficient. Unlike the provision of the C.P.O. in the presidency-town, service on a servant residing with the person sought to be served is sufficient.

Person summoned cannot be found—See the next section as to procedure when service cannot by the exercise of due diligence be effected. Not finding a man in his house when summons is taken to him is not attempt to find him, 1832 A.W.N. 170; 19 C. 201; 26 C. 101; 21 M. 419 and 324.

71. If service in the manner mentioned in sections 69 and 70 cannot by the exercise of due diligence be effected, the serving officer shall affix one of the duplicates of the summons to some conspicuous part of the house or homestead in which the person summoned ordinarily resides; and thereupon the summons shall be deemed to have been duly served.

Procedure when service cannot be effected as before provided. Scope of the section.—It is plain that the procedure which is provided by this section cannot be made use of unless service in the manner mentioned in Es. 69 and 70 supra cannot be effected by the exercise of due diligence. The return of the poon should show that first service could not be effected personally on the person summoned by delivering or tendering him one of the duplicates as provided by S. 69 and then it must be shown that service could not be effected by leaving one of the duplicates with some adult male member of the family of the person summoned and if these modes fail then only service by affixture should be resorted to under this section, 31 C.W.N. 143=43 C.L.J. 113 at 115=27 Cr.L.J. 715=94 Ind. Cas. 937. It is only when reasonable grounds exist for believing that the person summoned is keeping out of the way to avoid service or that for other reasons it cannot be served in the ordinary way that substituted service should be ordered, 29 M. 324. The law as to service of summons in criminal cases is on the same lines as the rules for service of summons in civil cases, 20 Cr. L.J. 816=53 Ind. Cas. 720. This section corresponds to O. V. r. 17 of the Q.P.C. The provision of this section should be resorted to when service in the manner mentioned in the last two preceding sections cannot be effected after due diligence. Then only, what is termed "substituted service" can be resorted to by affixing one of the duplicates to some conspicuous part of the house or homestead in which the person summoned ordinarily resides, and thereupon the summons shall be deemed to be duly served. See 23 Cr. L.J. 739=69 Ind. Cas. 627.

Shall affix one of the duplicates of summons to conspicuous part of the house.—The affixture is to be only done after proper attempts have been made to find out the person summoned; going to a man's house and not finding him there, is not attempting to find him. But the process-server should go to the house, make inquiries and if necessary follow him. Enquiry should be made to find out when he is likely to be at home, and go to the house at that time when he can be found. It must be shown that proper efforts have been made to find out when and where the man is likely to be found—not as seems to be done, in this country, to go to his house in a perfunctory way, and because he has not been found there, to affix a copy of the summons to the outer door of his house, 19 C. 201; 21 M. 419. If information obtained by the serving officer leads him to think that the person summoned will only be absent for a short time, he should wait and effect service personally, 29 M. 324.

72. (1) Where the person summoned is in the active service of the Government or of a Railway Company, the Court issuing the summons shall ordinarily send it in duplicate to the head of the office in which such person is employed; and such head shall thereupon cause the summons to be served in manner provided by section 69, and shall return it to the Court under his signature with the endorsement required by that section.

(2) Such signature shall be evidence of due service.

The words 'under his signature' occurring in sub-section (1) and sub-section (2) were added in the 1898 Code. The return should now therefore contain the signature of the head of the office where the person summoned is employed, in addition to the signature of the person summoned, and such signature shall be evidence of due service.

This section is confined to summons issued by a Court of Justice, and not to orders made by police-officers investigating a crime under Chapter XIV infra, 18 Cr. L.J. 733=40 Ind. Cas. 733=10 Cr. L. Rev. 1. See S. 90 as to procedure to be adopted if the person summoned fails to appear.

73. When a Court desires that a summons issued by it shall be served at any place outside the local limits of its jurisdiction, it shall ordinarily send such summons in duplicate to a Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the person summoned resides or is, to be there served.

Service of summons outside local limits.

Outside the limits of its jurisdiction.—The procedure prescribed by this section, viz., to send the summons in duplicate to the Magistrate within whose jurisdiction the person summoned resides is to be adopted to serve summons at any place outside the limit of the Magistrate's jurisdiction. For example service on witnesses resident in the Presidency Towns is to be effected through the Chief Presidency Magistrate not through the Commissioner of Police. The Code does not say expressly how a person say in England is to be served with summons. The section only lays down that if a summons is to be served outside the local limits of a Magistrate's jurisdiction the summons shall ordinarily be sent to the Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the person summoned resides or is. In a case where the witness was examined and cross-examined before charge and the witness had left for England the Magistrate may act under S. 33, Ind. Ev. Act, 28 Cr. L.J. 851=101 Ind. Cas. 637.

74. (1) When a summons issued by a Court is served outside the local limits of its jurisdiction, and in any case where the officer who has served a summons is not present at the hearing of the case, an affidavit, purporting to be made before a Magistrate, that such summons has been served, and a duplicate of the summons purporting to be endorsed (in manner provided by section 69 or section 70) by the person to whom it was delivered or tendered or with whom it was left, shall be admissible in evidence, and the statements made therein shall be deemed to be correct unless and until the contrary is proved.

Proof of service in such cases and when serving officer not present.

(2) The affidavit mentioned in this section may be attached to the duplicate of the summons and returned to the Court.

This is the only section in the Code for use of affidavits as evidence before a Magistrate. The affidavit may be attached to the duplicate of the summons and returned to the Court as proof of service, and the production of the affidavit dispenses with the presence of the serving officer at the hearing of the case. The provisions of Ss. 526 and 539, infra, regarding the use of affidavits are confined to the High Court.

Form of affidavit:—I, A son of B, hereby solemnly declare that I did on the day of serve son of of , with summons now shown to me and marked 'A' by delivering (tendering) a duplicate to him for by leaving a duplicate for him with an adult male member of his family residing with him or by affixing a duplicate to a conspicuous part of his house or homestead. Taken the day of 192 place. Before me. (Ed) Magistrate.

B.—Warrant of Arrest.

"A warrant may be defined as a written authority under the hand and seal of some Court or judicial or other officer authorized by law to issue the same, commanding the person or persons to whom it is addressed to arrest, or detain, or produce or release the body or to search the premises or seize or suspend execution on the goods or land of some person named therein" Chester's Public Officers, p. 3.

There is no doubt that the law is just as jealous of personal liberty in India as it is in England and that liberty cannot lightly be taken away except under circumstances which are clearly prescribed by positive law, 13 W.R. (Cr) 27; 4 B.L.R. Appx. 1. A Magistrate should arrest on personal knowledge, i.e., on sworn testimony given before him that a person has committed an offence unless and until a Magistrate has good reasons to believe that there is a real likelihood of a charge being proved. A purdah lady of good position should not ordinarily be compelled to appear in Court in person. See 8 Cr. L.J. 434.

75. (1) Every warrant of arrest issued by a Court under this Code shall be in writing, signed by the presiding officer, or in the case of a Bench of Magistrates, by any member of such Bench; and shall bear the seal of the Court.

Form of warrant of arrest.

Continuance of warrant of arrest.

(2) Every such warrant shall remain in force until it is cancelled by the Court which issued it, or until it is executed.

Every warrant of arrest—Like a summons a warrant of arrest may be for attendance (a) of an accused (b) of a witness (c) of a juror or assessor (d) of a person to show cause against a Magistrate's order. Cases falling under (b) and (c) are subject to the provisions of B. 90, infra. A summons is always addressed to a person for his attendance but a warrant is an order to the Police to arrest a person and produce him in Court if the warrant is non-bailable and take bail for appearance if bailable, 5 W.R. (Cr.) 71; 2 C.L.J. 625. See Sch. V, Form No. 2 as to form of warrant of arrest. When any Act does not provide a form of warrant, the form to be used is the ordinary one prescribed by the Code of Criminal Procedure, 18 B. 636 at 668.

To be signed by the presiding officer.—The affixing of a signature with a stamp and not with a pen was held to be more than a mere irregularity, 6 M. 396. See 23 C. 896, where a warrant of arrest not signed but initialled by the Magistrate was held to be illegal. In 2 Pat L.J. 487=17 Cr. L.J. 526=39 Ind. Cas. 494 it was held that a warrant not signed is a void document, and resistance to it is no offence. A contrary view was taken in 8 A. 293. The repeal of Illustration to S. 537 infra confirms the former view.

Shall bear the seal of the Court.—The reason for requiring the seal of the Court is that the attaching of the seal shows that the document to which it is attached has not been issued without due deliberation, as well, of course, as to prove the authenticity of the instrument, 9 B.H.C.R. 154 at 158. A warrant of arrest issued without the seal of the Court is invalid, as under this section the seal of the Court is essential to the validity of the warrant; arrest made under such a warrant is therefore illegal, 42 C. 708; 18 B. 636, omission to seal renders the warrant void and a person offering resistance to apprehension on such a warrant commits no offence, 29 Cr.L.J. 265 at 267=107 Ind. Cas. 601, following 42 C. 708 and 18 B. 636. See 37 M.L.J. 588, where the principle enunciated in 42 C. 708 was adopted in the case of a summons issued under B. 68, supra.

Sub-section (2).—A warrant once issued remains in force until it is cancelled by the Court which issued it or until it is executed even where it bears a date for its return, 7 Pat. 478. It can only be cancelled by the Court issuing it, 28 Cr.L.J. 326=103 Ind. Cas. 710. This section and S. 76 infra should be read together. If a warrant issued contained a direction as to bail and fixed a date as required by S. 76 (2) (c) at which the accused was to attend before the Court, the warrant itself will not lapse, the date fixed having passed, 13 C.W.N. 1091 at 1092=10 Cr. L.J. 479=4 Ind. Cas. 31. A warrant shall remain in force until it is executed, i.e., the warrant is exhausted. When the accused is brought before the Court, 13 W.R. (Cr.) 1=4 B.L.R. Appx. 1; 13 W.R. (Cr.) 27=5 B.L.R. 274; 17 W.R. (Cr.) 55=9 B.L.R. 354; 28 B. 129; 1 C.W.N. 650. A warrant once cancelled is at an end and cannot be re-issued, 1 C.W.N. 650.

76. (1) Any Court issuing a warrant for the arrest of any person may in its discretion direct by endorsement on the warrant that, if such person executes a bond with sufficient sureties for his attendance before the Court at a specified time and thereafter until otherwise directed by the Court, the officer to whom the warrant is directed, shall take such security and shall release such person from custody.

Court may direct security to be taken.

(2) The endorsement shall state—

- (a) the number of sureties ;
- (b) the amount in which they and the person for whose arrest the warrant is issued, are to be respectively bound ; and
- (c) the time at which he is to attend before the Court.

(3) Whenever security is taken under this section, the officer to whom the warrant is directed, shall forward the bond to the Court.

Recognizance to be forwarded.

For his attendance before the Court.—These words have been substituted for the words “to answer the complaint,” thus expressly extending the benefit of this section to witnesses as well as to accused person, Weir II, 39.

May in its discretion direct.—This sub-section is permissive, 13 C.W.N. 1091=10 Cr. L.J. 479=4 Ind. Cas. 31. The discretion allowed under this section is certainly a beneficent provision of law and should be exercised freely, especially in the case of respectable citizens who would voluntarily appear to answer any charge against them and indiscriminate arrest of such persons will certainly bring the administration of justice into contempt. Thus in a non bailable offence even a Magistrate may issue a bailable warrant especially when the accused is a man of position and the charge appears to be suspicious [1911] 2 M.W.N. 452=12 Cr.L.J. 430=11 Ind Cas 614. Unless and until a Magistrate has good reason to believe that there is strong likelihood of the charge being proved, an accused if really a purdah woman of position should not ordinarily be compelled to appear in the first instance under a warrant, 8 Cr. L.J. 454.

To take such security.—Security may be given by depositing a sum of money or Government promissory-note to the amount specified, see S. 513 infra. S. 170 infra provides for taking security by a police officer from an accused, for his appearance before a Magistrate whenever on investigation there appears to be reasonable grounds for suspicion or sufficient evidence that he has committed a cognizable and bailable offence.

To attend before the Court.—A warrant of a Magistrate must be for attendance before himself or some other Magistrate. It cannot be for attendance before a police officer conducting an investigation, 24 C. 320. For form of endorsement see Sch. V, Form 2.

77. (1) A warrant of arrest shall ordinarily be directed to one or more police-officers, and, when issued by a Presidency Magistrate, shall always be so directed; but any other Court issuing such a warrant may, if its immediate execution is necessary and no police-officer is immediately available, direct it to any other person or persons; and such person or persons shall execute the same.

Warrants to whom directed.

Warrants to several persons.

(2) When a warrant is directed to more officers or persons than one, it may be executed by all, or by any one or more of them.

Scope of the section.—The entrustment of a warrant of arrest is regulated by this section. First of all there must be the necessity to arrest and then there must be the necessity for immediate arrest and then there must be the third condition that no police-officer is immediately available. In the absence of these three conditions a Court is not justified in entrusting the warrant for execution to any person other than a police-officer, 51 M. 873. This section is directory and not mandatory. It directs that a warrant shall ordinarily be directed to one or more police-officers. It does not say that the name and designation of the police-officer is to be inserted in it. It would certainly be extremely difficult to carry on police administration if every warrant is to be directed by name to a police-officer and upon his transfer, it were to become incapable of execution until the name of some other officer is substituted in its place, 3 Pat. L.J. 433=19 Cr.L.J. 747=46 Ind. Cas. 523=1918 Pat. 269.

Warrant to be directed to a police-officer.—In 8 W.R. (Cr.) 74 the Calcutta High Court condemned the practice of issuing a warrant to a person other than a police-officer as a direct violation of the law. S. 79 infra authorizes a police-officer to whom a warrant is directed to endorse it for execution to another police-officer. But when the Magistrate could not obtain the assistance of a police-officer, and execution of the warrant is urgently required, he can issue the same to a private person, 13 W.R. (Cr.) 27=5 B.L.R. 274.

78. (1) A District Magistrate or sub-divisional Magistrate may direct a warrant to any landholder farmer, or manager of land within his district or sub-division for the arrest of any escaped convict, proclaimed offender or person who has been accused of a non-bailable offence, and who has eluded pursuit.

Warrant may be directed to landholders, etc.

(2) Such landholder, farmer or manager shall acknowledge in writing the receipt of the warrant, and shall execute it if the person for whose arrest it was issued, is in, or enters on, his land or farm, or the land under his charge.

(3) When the person against whom such warrant is issued is arrested, he shall be made over with the warrant to the nearest police-officer, who shall cause him to be taken before a Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case, unless security is taken under section 76.

Scope of the section.—This section is an exception to S. 77 infra ordinarily requiring a warrant to be issued to a police-officer and authorizes a District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate to direct a warrant for the arrest of any escaped convict or proclaimed offender or one accused of a non-bailable offence who has eluded pursuit to a landholder, farmer or manager of land within his District or sub-division and such landholder, etc., are bound to execute the warrant if the person to be arrested is present or enters upon his land or farm.

Proclaimed offender.—See S. 87 infra which provides for the issue of a proclamation for the appearance of a person against whom a warrant of arrest has been issued but cannot be executed; see also S. 54, cl. (3) supra.

79. A warrant directed to any police-officer may also be executed by any other police-officer whose name is endorsed upon the warrant by the officer to whom it is directed or endorsed.

Warrant directed to police-officer.

Scope of the section.—This section has no application to any person other than a police-officer and the endorsement of the warrant by such person in favour of another can confer no power to arrest the person named in the warrant and such person who arrests cannot be said to be executing a lawful warrant and acting in the discharge of his duty, 51 M. 873.

May be executed by other police-officer whose name is endorsed on the warrant.—The endorsement referred to therein should be regularly made by name to a certain person in order to authorize him to arrest, and when there is no endorsement by the person having authority to do so, the arrest is not legal, 4 C.W.N. 85 followed in 3 Pat. L J 493=1918 Pat. 269=19 Cr. L J. 747=45 Ind. Cas. 523. When a warrant is endorsed over to a particular officer for execution another officer who was doing temporarily the current duties during the absence of that officer cannot endorse the warrant, 27 C. 437. No person other than a police-officer is competent to execute a warrant under endorsement from a police-officer. So, arrest by process-serving peons is illegal, 27 C. 437; 18 A. 246. A special warrant must specify the officer to whom the authority is given and only that officer can execute the warrant, 10 Cr. L J. 3=2 Ind. Cas. 371.

80. The police-officer or other person executing a warrant of arrest shall notify the substance thereof to the person to be arrested, and, if so required, shall show him the warrant.

Notification of substance of warrant.

Scope of the section.—The provisions of this section should not be extended to an arrest to be made by the police on an order in writing under S. 56 supra, so as to require the officer to notify the substance of the order in writing to the person to be arrested. Such a course may be desirable, but to hold it to be obligatory before a person can be arrested is to extend the law beyond the limits laid down by the Legislature, 27 C. 320.

Shall notify the substance thereof.—The words 'shall notify the substance' are not to be taken to mean that a police-officer is to explain to the person to be arrested the reasons which prompted the order which he is carrying out. There should be no argument or altercation but the duty of the officer is only to state the substance of the order clearly and briefly and then to show a determination to carry out the order by that quiet and firm demeanour that precludes discussion. If he does not notify he is not acting in the discharge of his public function, 10 C. 18. Ordinarily a person to be arrested is entitled to ask the officer arresting him to show him the warrant under which he is arresting him, 47 M. 412 but when a police-officer entrusted with a warrant for arresting a certain person seizes the person without showing or notifying the substance of the warrant to him when he finds that there is an attempt to evade or to prevent the arrest and the arrested person is subsequently rescued from police custody, S. 46 (2) supra would empower the police-officer to arrest the person when such arrest was sought to be evaded and non-compliance with the provisions of this section would not make the arrest illegal and the rescue will fall within S. 225B, I.P.C. To say that the apprehension or custody is unlawful in such a case where efforts have been made to evade the law because of the non compliance of the provisions of this section would bring the law into ridicule. So to insist would merely give more time and opportunity to the obstructionists to effect their purpose. The police officer under the circumstances may be able to justify his action under the provisions of S. 46 (2) supra, 49 C L J 261 at 266=33 C.W.N. 221=30 Cr. L J 703=115 Ind. Cas. 723

Shall show it to the person to be arrested.—The warrant is to be shown so that the person to be arrested might read it, 26 C. 743; 27 C. 437. The person sought to be arrested is entitled to see that the person arresting has authority to do so, 10 C. 43; 13 B. 163, 23 C 836; 26 C. 743, 18 A 245. Any person who is arrested has a right to ask the officer arresting him to show him what power he has to do so and he is also entitled to ask that the warrant be shown to him to see that he is properly arrested and when the arrest is still made without showing the warrant the arrest will not be a legal arrest, 47 M. 412. A police officer should not proceed to arrest unless he has a warrant with him, 5 A. 318. See S. 46 as to how an arrest is to be made. This section requires that the substance of the warrant shall be notified to the accused, and if the accused demands it, he shall have an opportunity of reading it, so that he may know on what charge he has been arrested and before what Court he is to appear and take steps for arranging for his defence, 1918 Pat. 269=3 Pat. L J. 433=19 Cr. L J. 747=43 Ind Cas 523. A police officer executing a warrant of arrest shall notify its substance. The arresting officer must have the warrant of arrest in his possession when making the arrest, 27 A. 258 and the police-officer who arrests without a warrant in a non-cognizable case is liable to be dealt with under S. 312, I.P.C., but a police officer acting bona fide under this section is protected, 24 W.R. (Cr.) 5; 19 W.R. (Cr.) 36; 6 W.R. (Cr.) 88. A warrant specially authorizing a particular officer by name to arrest cannot be delegated, 10 Cr. L J. 3=2 Ind Cas 371. Duty to notify the substance of the warrant is imperative, and failure to do so is fatal, although the police-officer showed in his hands the warrant along with several other warrants but gave no opportunity to the person to be arrested to read the warrant, 26 C. 743=47 M 412; see also 27 C. 320, where it was held that it was obligatory on the police-officer if called upon, to show the authority under which he was acting. Resistance to a warrant which is ultra vires, illegal or has ceased to be in force is no offence, 10 C 18, 13 B. 163; 24 C. 320; 22 C. 286; 28 C 339; 33 A 103.

81. The police-officer or other person executing a warrant of arrest shall (subject to the provisions of section 76 as to security) without unnecessary delay bring the person arrested before the Court before which he is required by law to produce such person.

Person arrested to be brought before Court without delay.

Warrant of arrest.—The warrant referred to herein is not a warrant for commitment, but merely an order authorizing the police-officer to whom it is addressed to arrest the person and bring him before the Magistrate. The warrant is exhausted as soon as the person arrested is produced before the Magistrate, 13 W.R. (Cr.) 1=4 B.L.R. (Appx) 1; 13 W.R. (Cr.) 27=5 B.L.R. 273.

Bring the person arrested before the Court.—There is no provision in the Code authorizing a Magistrate to issue a warrant requiring a person to appear before a police-officer for the purpose of giving evidence at an investigation held by him. Reading S. 76 and this section together it would appear that a Magistrate is competent to issue a warrant of arrest for the production of a person before his own Court and not before the police, 24 C. 320 at 323.

Where warrant may be executed.

82. A warrant of arrest may be executed at any place in British India.

British India.—See notes under S. 1, supra at p. 15. See 44 and 45 Vict. c. 69 (Fugitive Offenders Act). Any arrest made outside British India is illegal, 25 C. 20 (P C.).

83. (1) When a warrant is to be executed outside the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court issuing the same, such Court may, instead of directing such warrant to a police-officer, forward the same by post or otherwise to any Magistrate or District Superintendent of Police or the Commissioner of Police in a presidency-town within the local limits of whose jurisdiction it is to be executed.

Warrant forwarded for execution outside jurisdiction.

(2) The Magistrate or District Superintendent or Commissioner to whom such warrant is so forwarded shall endorse his name thereon and, if practicable, cause it to be executed in manner hereinbefore provided within the local limits of his jurisdiction.

When a warrant is to be executed—There are no words in this section limiting its operation to warrants issued under this Code only. For example a warrant issued under Workmen's Breach of Contract Act, XIII of 1859, S. 1 may be executed outside the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Magistrate issuing the same, 20 M 235 followed in 20 A. 124. See also 20 M. 457.

In manner hereinbefore provided.—See Ss. 78—80, supra.

84. (1) When a warrant directed to a police-officer is to be executed beyond the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court issuing the same, he shall ordinarily take it for endorsement either to a Magistrate or to a police-officer not below the rank of an officer in charge of a station, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the warrant is to be executed.

Warrant directed to police-officer for execution outside jurisdiction.

(2) Such Magistrate or police-officer shall endorse his name thereon and such endorsement shall be sufficient authority to the police-officer to whom the warrant is directed to execute the same within such limits, and the local police shall, if so required, assist such officer in executing such warrant.

(3) Whenever there is reason to believe that the delay occasioned by obtaining the endorsement of the Magistrate or police-officer within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the warrant is to be executed, will prevent such execution, the police-officer to whom it is directed may execute the same without such endorsement in any place beyond the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which issued it.

(4) This section applies also to the police in the town of Calcutta.

Directed to be executed.—This will include a warrant endorsed to another for execution by the officer to whom it is originally issued.

85. When a warrant of arrest is executed outside the district in which it was issued, the person arrested shall, unless the Court which issued the warrant is within twenty miles of the place of arrest or is nearer than the Magistrate or District Superintendent of Police or the Commissioner of Police in a presidency-town within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the arrest was made, or unless security is taken under section 76, be taken before such Magistrate or Commissioner or District Superintendent.

Security under S 76, supra, is taken from the person arrested and released on security for his attendance before the Court at a specified time and thereafter until otherwise directed by the Court. When this is not done, the person arrested is to be produced before the nearest Magistrate, the District Superintendent of Police or the Commissioner of Police in a Presidency Town.

86. (1) Such Magistrate or District Superintendent or Commissioner shall, if the person arrested appears to be the person intended by the Court which issued the warrant, direct his removal in custody to such Court.

Provided that, if the offence is bailable, and such person is ready and willing to give bail to the satisfaction of such Magistrate, District Superintendent or Commissioner, or a direction has been endorsed under section 76 on the warrant and such person is ready and willing to give the security required by such direction, the Magistrate, District Superintendent or Commissioner shall take such bail or security, as the case may be, and forward the bond to the Court which issued the warrant.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to prevent a police-officer from taking security under section 76.

See Sch. V, form No. 3 for form of security bond. As to cases where persons arrested may be discharged on executing bonds without sureties, see S. 496, infra.

C.—Proclamation and attachment.

87. (1) If any Court has reason to believe (whether after taking evidence or not) that any person against whom a warrant has been issued by it has absconded or is concealing himself so that such warrant cannot be executed, such Court may publish a written proclamation requiring him to appear at a specified place and at a specified time not less than thirty days from the date of publishing such proclamation.

Proclamation for person absconding

(2) The proclamation shall be published as follows :—

(a) it shall be publicly read in some conspicuous place of the town or village in which such person ordinarily resides ;

(b) it shall be affixed to some conspicuous part of the house or homestead in which such person ordinarily resides or to some conspicuous place of such town or village ; and

(c) a copy thereof shall be affixed to some conspicuous part of the Court-house.

(3) A statement in writing by the Court issuing the proclamation to the effect that the proclamation was duly published on a specified day shall be conclusive evidence that the requirements of this section have been complied with, and that the proclamation was published on such day.

Scope of the section—Action under this section can be taken only when a Court has reason to believe that any person against whom a warrant has been issued has absconded or is concealing himself, so that such warrant cannot be executed, 38 Cr L J. 454=67 Ind.

whom a warrant has been issued. A Magistrate may simultaneously issue a proclamation against an absconding accused under this section and also make an order under S. 83 infra attaching his property, 29 C. 417.

Any Court.—All Magistrates are empowered to issue a proclamation under this section. See Cl (4) of Sch. III.

Has reason to believe—S. 26, I.P.C., enacts that a person is said to have reason to believe a thing if he has sufficient cause to believe that thing and not otherwise.

Whether after taking evidence or not.—These processes of proclamation and attachment are not to issue whenever a warrant fails in its effect. The officer sent to serve the warrant should be examined as to the measures adopted by him to serve it ; and if on evidence in any other manner the Magistrate is satisfied that the accused is evading justice, then and then only can the process of proclamation and attachment issue, 3 W.R. (Cr.) 63, see also 6 W.R. (Cr.) 73; 19 W.R. (Cr.) 12=10 B.L.R. Appx. 14

Warrant has been issued.—Before a proclamation under this section could be issued, a warrant must have been previously issued for the attendance of the person before the Court. The previous issue of a warrant is a condition precedent to the issue of a proclamation.

Has absconded—In order that the Court may issue a proclamation and an order of attachment under S. 83, infra, it must be satisfied on materials before it, that the person against whom the proclamation is to be issued has absconded or concealed himself for avoiding service of the warrant previously issued against him, 10 B.L.R. (Appx.) 14=19 W.R. (Cr.) 12. Absconding does not necessarily imply change of place but may be effected by concealment. The term "abscond" is not to be understood as implying necessarily that a person leaves the place in which he is. Its etymological and ordinary sense is to hide oneself and it matters not whether a person departs from a place or remains in it, if he conceals himself, nor does the term apply only to the commencement of the concealment. If a person having concealed himself before process is issued, continues to do so after it is issued, he absconds, 4 M. 393 at 397. To be deemed an absconder, it is not necessary that the person should be proclaimed as such under this section. It should also be noted that an absent person should not be assumed to be an absconder without due inquiry and notice, Weir II, 40. A person who files a petition against the order issuing a warrant against him and takes steps to procure an order of a superior Court that he should be allowed to remain on bail after such warrant has been issued, can neither be said to be absconding nor concealing himself, 23 Cr. L.J. 454=67 Ind. Cas. 726. An absconder must be dealt with under the provisions of the Code and not under S. 172, I.P.C. (absconding to avoid service of summons, etc.), as a warrant issued is not summons, notice, order, etc., within the meaning of S. 172, I.P.C., 7 N.W.P.H.C.R. 302; 9 W.R. (Cr.) 70.

Court may publish a written proclamation.—The most important part of the publication are the publishing of the proclamation in the village and the thirty days allowed by the section is to be calculated from the date of such proclamation. Magistrates when acting under this section should always make an endorsement or statement in writing validating the proclamation as contemplated by sub-section (3) of this section, 17 Cr. L.J. 414=35 Ind. Cas. 574. What is contemplated here is the act of publishing and not the mode of publishing the proclamation dealt with by sub-section (2). The act of publishing is optional but the mode of publication is compulsory under sub-section (2). For forms of proclamation see Nos. 4 and 5 of Sch. V.

Requiring him to appear.—A person against whom a proclamation has been issued must be regarded as in contempt until he has surrendered and the Court will not entertain any application on his behalf. He should first surrender, then apply to be discharged from contempt and also for the release of the property attached, 2 N.W.P.H.C.R. 441; 5 W.R. (Cr.) 71. See also 24 Cr. L.J. 240=71 Ind. Cas. 704 where the High Court refused to hear a revision petition on behalf of an accused person who was released on bail pending the hearing of the revision petition but who absconded subsequently and could not be found, S. 174, I.P.C., provides punishment for not appearing in obedience to the proclamation.

Not less than 30 days from the date of proclamation.—A proclamation under this section against an absconding person should give 30 days' time for his appearance from the date of the proclamation, when this is not done, the proceedings are illegal, 21 Cr. L.J. 210=54 Ind. Cas. 994; 17 M.L.J. 488=6 Cr. L.J. 332; 19 M. 3; 17 Cr. L.J. 414=35 Ind. Cas. 974.

Proclamation shall be published—The provisions of cl. (2) of this section are imperative and failure to comply with them will vitiate a proclamation, 21 Cr. L.J. 210=54 Ind. Cas. 994. The use of the word 'And' is significant. All the three modes contemplated by cl. (2) must be adopted, 27 A. 572; 19 M. 3. Any error, omission or irregularity in the proclamation will not vitiate the proceedings unless such error etc., has occasioned a failure of justice. See S. 537 infra.

To some conspicuous place of such town, etc.—Affixing the proclamation to the Court-house is not sufficient; it must be affixed to some conspicuous place in such town or village, 19 M. 3.

Statement in writing by Court, of due publication.—When there is no endorsement or statement by Court in writing, validating the proclamation as required by cl. (3) of this section, there is no proclamation according to law, 22 A. 216.

Sub-section (3).—An order under this sub-section stating that the proclamation was duly published, but omitting to specify the date of the publication cannot be considered as conclusive evidence of the requirements of the sections, 21 Cr. L.J. 210=54 Ind. Cas. 994. The prosecution in a case against an absconder ought to produce the statement under this sub-section to prove the fact of absconding and the accused had been duly proclaimed, 17 Cr. L.J. 78=32 Ind. Cas. 670. A proclamation is not sufficiently proved by proving attachment and sale under the next section, 7 M. 436. A Magistrate ought to preserve the proclamation and the record must be so clear as to satisfy the Court that all the legal formalities were duly complied with. Where neither the proclamation nor a copy of it is forthcoming, the vague indefinite statement of an accused as to a proclamation being issued at some indefinite date cannot be accepted as evidence sufficient to prove that all the legal formalities were complied with, 14 Bom. L.R. 163=13 Cr. L.J. 293=14 Ind. Cas. 757.

A Magistrate may in a proper case issue simultaneously a proclamation and an order of attachment, 29 C. 417.

As to punishment for absconding and failing to attend in obedience to a proclamation under this section, see Ss. 172 and 174, I.P.C.

88. (1) The Court issuing a proclamation under section 87 may at any time order the attachment of any property, moveable or immovable, or both, belonging to the proclaimed person.

Attachment of property of person absconding.

(2) Such order shall authorize the attachment of any property belonging to such person within the district in which it is made; and it shall authorize the attachment of any property belonging to such person without such district when endorsed by the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate within whose district such property is situate.

(3) If the property ordered to be attached is a debt or other moveable property, the attachment under this section shall be made—

(a) by seizure; or

(b) by the appointment of a receiver; or

(c) by an order in writing prohibiting the delivery of such property to the proclaimed person or to any one on his behalf; or

(d) by all or any two of such methods, as the Court thinks fit.

(4) If the property ordered to be attached is immovable, the attachment under this section shall, in the case of land paying revenue to Government be made through the Collector of the district in which the land is situate, and in all other cases—

(e) by taking possession; or

(f) by the appointment of a receiver; or

(g) by an order in writing prohibiting the payment of rent or delivery of property to the proclaimed person or to any one on his behalf; or

(h) by all or any two of such methods, as the Court thinks fit.

(5) If the property ordered to be attached consists of live-stock or is of a perishable nature, the Court may, if it thinks it expedient, order immediate sale thereof, and in such cases the proceeds of the sale shall abide the order of the Court.

(6) The powers, duties and liabilities of a receiver appointed under this section shall be the same as those of a receiver appointed under Chapter XXXVI of the Code of Civil Procedure.

(6A) If any claim is preferred to, or objection made to the attachment of, any property attached under this section within six months from the date of such attachment, by any person other than the proclaimed person, on the ground that the claimant or objector has an interest in such property, and that such interest is not liable to attachment under this section, the claim or objection shall be enquired into, and may be allowed or disallowed in whole or in part:

Provided that any claim preferred or objection made within the period allowed by this sub-section may, in the event of the death of the claimant or objector, be continued by his legal representative.

(6B) Claims or objections under sub-section (6A) may be preferred or made in the Court by which the order of attachment is issued or, if the claim or objection is in respect of property attached under an order endorsed by a District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate in accordance with the provision of sub-section (2), in the Court of such Magistrate.

(6C) Every such claim or objection shall be inquired into by the Court in which it is preferred or made:

Provided that, if it is preferred or made in the Court of a District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate, such Magistrate may make it over for disposal to any Magistrate of the first or second class or to any Presidency Magistrate as the case may be, subordinate to him.

(6D) Any person whose claim or objection has been disallowed in whole or in part by an order under sub-section (6A) may within a period of one year from the date of such order, institute a suit to establish the right which he claims in respect of the property in dispute; but subject to the result of such suit, if any, the order shall be conclusive.

(6E) If the proclaimed person appears within the time specified in the proclamation, the Court shall make an order releasing the property from the attachment.

(7) If the proclaimed person does not appear within the time specified in the proclamation, the property under attachment shall be at the disposal of Government; but it shall not be sold until the expiration of six months from the date of the attachment and until any claim preferred or objection made under sub-section (6A) has been disposed of under that sub-section, unless it is subject to speedy and natural decay, or the Court considers that the sale would be for the benefit of the owner, in either of which cases the Court may cause it to be sold whenever it thinks fit.

Amendment.—Sub-sections (GA) to (GE) are new and in sub-section (7) the words "until any claim preferred or objection made under sub-section (GA) has been disposed of," have been newly added.

May at any time—An order for attachment under this section made simultaneously with the issue of a proclamation under S. 57 supra is in accordance with law, 23 C. 417 at 413.

Any property belonging to such person.—The property should belong to such person and not subject to other right by an attachment of a Civil Court, 13 Cr. L.J. 563=15 Ind. Cas. 93; A prior attachment by a Civil Court took effect as against the attachment by the Magistrate under this section and the purchaser at the sale held by the Magistrate cannot successfully resist the claim for possession under a Civil Court's decree, 31 Bom. L.R. 343. In Weir II, 43 (foot-note) it was held that there was nothing in the language of this section to restrict the meaning of the word 'property' which must include the rights and interests of persons who are members of an undivided family holding jointly the family property; but a contrary opinion was expressed by Subramania Ayyar, J., in Weir II, 43, where it was held that the undivided interest of an absconding co-partner in a joint Hindu family or the undivided property itself cannot be attached. The Full Bench decision in 39 M. 831 followed the view in Weir II, 43 (foot-note) and dissented from the view of Subramania Ayyar, J., and held that the word 'property' in this section must include the rights and interests of persons who are members of an undivided family jointly entitled to the property of the family. The share of the defaulting member of the family is to be attached subject to the rights of the other members of the family and may be realized by a receiver in a suit for partition or otherwise. With regard to ancestral property, all that can be attached under this section is the interest of the absconder and on his death the property should be released in favour of his heirs, 26 Cr. L.J. 1143=89 Ind. Cas. 439.

Sub-sections (6A) and (6C) are new and they provide for continuance of proceedings by legal representatives of a claimant, who may die pending the enquiry into his claim and for the case of claims to property in another district and for the period of limitation within which proceedings in Civil Court to establish the claim disallowed by a Magistrate must be instituted. O. XXI, rr. 58-62, of the Code of Civil Procedure, Act V of 1908, provide for hearing objections and investigation of claims in respect of attached properties. Such a provision did not previously exist in this Code empowering Magistrates to do so. It was proposed at first to add a new clause similar to S. 278 of Act XIV of 1832 (Civil Procedure) conferring on Magistrates similar powers. The amendment then fell through, but has been retained in the new Act. This is a salutary provision and the needlessly cumbersome procedure of a civil suit by the injured party has been got rid of.

Sub-section (6D) provides for right of suit to a defeated claimant but an absconder cannot sue, 5 Pat. L.J. 321 at 327=21 Cr. L.J. 475=56 Ind. Cas. 507=1920 Pat. 233 and sub-section (6E) provides for an order to release the property from attachment of the proclaimed person appearing within the specified time.

Sub section (7)—The property becoming one at the disposal of government is not confiscated or sold until after the expiry of six months. When selling the property all the formalities required are to be observed, 19 M. 3; 27 A. 572. Once the sale is effected there is no provision to set aside the sale or order its restoration, 12 Cr. L.J. 142 (2)=9 Ind. Cas. 826; 27 A. 572. If the land is sold subject to a lease, the lessee's rights are unaffected, 8 Cr. L.J. 259. By the confiscation of the property after due compliance with the formalities required by this section, the title of the person who absconded has been put an end to, and he has no remedy by way of suit, 23 Bom. L.R. 228; but when a sale is illegal a suit lies, 1904 A.W.N. 159; 20 M. 83.

Revision.—An order under this section refusing to release certain property from attachment is a proceeding within the meaning of S. 435 infra and is therefore subject to the Revisional Jurisdiction of the High Court, 23 Cr. L.J. 82=76 Ind. Cas. 18 where 3 Cr. L.J. 260 is followed.

89. If, within two years from the date of the attachment, any person whose property is or has been at the disposal of Government under sub-section (7) of section 88, appears voluntarily or is apprehended and brought before the Court by whose order the property was attached, or the Court to which such Court is subordinate, and proves to the satisfaction of such Court that he did not abscond or conceal himself for the purpose of avoiding execution of the warrant, and that he had not such notice of the proclamation as to enable him to attend within the time specified therein, such property, or, if the same has been sold, the nett proceeds of the sale, or, if part only thereof has been sold, the nett proceeds of the sale and the residue of the property, shall, after satisfying thereout all costs incurred in consequence of the attachment, be delivered to him.

Scope of the section.—The terms of this section are strict. It is not only necessary to make the application but also to prove the necessary facts within two years. The applicant must prove both that he did not abscond and that he had no proper notice, before the property is restored to him, 27 Cr. L.J. 1023=96 Ind. Cas. 977 following 15 Bom. L.R. 173=14 Cr. L.J. 237=19 Ind. Cas. 333; 18 Cr. L.J. 979=42 Ind. Cas. 595; 17 Cr. L.J. 414=33 Ind. Cas. 974. From the date of attachment it cannot be said on a perusal of the language of Ss. 67 to 89 that the interest of an absconder is severed and vests in Government, 39 M. 831 (F.B.). This section prescribes a remedy where there is a good and legal publication, but offers no facility for contesting the legality of the proclamation, 22 A. 216 at 219. If no application is made for restoration of the property attached under the preceding section within two years, the High Court has no power under S. 561A infra to order its restoration, because such an order, if made, will be contrary to the provisions of this section. The proper remedy in such a case is to apply to Government for relief, 26 Bom. L.R. 719=23 Cr. L.J. 1293=82 Ind. Cas. 363. If the attachment is not valid then obviously this section cannot apply and the Court can take no action under it. This may result in hardship at times but with that the Courts are not concerned. The question whether the petitioner can induce the executive authorities to return the sale proceeds to him or whether he can, in the circumstances recover the money in the Civil Courts is a matter with which the Court is not concerned, 17 Cr. L.J. 414 at 417=35 Ind. Cas. 974.

Within two years from date of attachment.—These words qualify not only the word 'appears' but also the word 'proves' which is connected with the word "appears" by the conjunction "and" and so, proof that the accused had not absconded should be offered within two years of the date of attachment, 15 Bom. L.R. 173=14 Cr. L.J. 237=19 Ind. Cas. 333. An application made for return of property attached after two years of the attachment is barred, 17 Cr. L.J. 414=35 Ind. Cas. 974 where 22 A. 216 is referred to.

Nett proceeds of the sale and the residue of the property.—When a sale is held and purchasers have acquired title, the Court cannot set aside the sale but the owner is entitled only to the sale proceeds and not to the identical property sold, 22 A. 216; 27 A. 572. Where property has been sold and subsequently an application under this section is made and allowed, the applicant can only get the nett-proceeds of the sale of the property 24 Cr. L.J. 573=73 Ind. Cas. 269. It is not necessary that the absconder should himself personally apply for the restoration of the property. If the requirements of this section are satisfied, an application can be made by any one on his behalf, 12 Cr. L.J. 142=9 Ind. Cas. 825.

Prove to the satisfaction of such Court.—It is open to the absconder to prove that he did not abscond and that there was no publication, or defective publication, 2 Lah. L.J. 82; 21 Cr. L.J. 210=54 Ind. Cas. 994.

Appeal and revision.—Orders passed under this section are appealable under S. 405 infra and also subject to revision by the High Court, 19 M. 3; 22 A. 216; 21 Cr. L.J. 210=54 Ind. Cas. 934; 27 A. 292; 18 Cr. L.J. 979=32 Ind. Cas. 595; 14 Bom. L.R. 163=13 Cr. L.J. 293=14 Ind. Cas. 757. But appeal lies only at the instance of one whose property has been attached. After his death his legal representatives have no locus standi to have the order set aside, 10 Cr. L.J. 260; but see 15 Bom. L.R. 175=14 Cr. L.J. 237=19 Ind. Cas. 333 which held that any person may apply on behalf of the absconder for the restoration of the property, if other requirements of the section are satisfied, and appeal from the order refusing to release attachment. When an act clearly illegal has been committed viz attachment made without the issue of any warrant, it will be proper to overlook the grave irregularity and in the exercise of the inherent power to release the attachment, 27 Cr. L.J. 1025=96 Ind. Cas. 977.

D.—Other Rules regarding Processes.

90. A Court may, in any case in which it is empowered by this Code to issue a summons for the appearance of any person other than a juror or assessor, issue, after recording its reasons in writing, a warrant for his arrest—

Issue of warrant in lieu of, or in addition to summons.

(a) if, either before the issue of such summons, or after the issue of the same but before the time fixed for his appearance, the Court sees reason to believe that he has absconded or will not obey the summons; or

(b) if at such time he fails to appear and the summons is proved to have been duly served in time to admit of his appearing in accordance therewith and no reasonable excuse is offered for such failure.

Scope of the section.—The normal course to be adopted by the Court under this section is to issue a summons in the first instance; it can however issue a warrant in either of the cases mentioned in cls. (a) and (b) of this section, but in either case it can do so only after stating its reasons in writing, 33 C.L.J. 77 at 90=27 C.W.N. 857=24 Cr. L.J. 681=75 Ind. Cas. 129. The language used in this section is "any person" which will include a witness. This section empowers a Court to issue a warrant only in cases in which it is entitled to issue a summons. If the Court is not entitled to issue a summons, no warrant could be issued. A Magistrate cannot issue a warrant of arrest against a witness unless he is satisfied that the witness will disobey or has disobeyed the summons served on him, 14 W.R. (Cr.) 20; or unless due service of summons is proved, 7 W.R. (Cr.) 37. A warrant is to be issued only when the Magistrate is satisfied that the witness would not attend unless compelled to do so, 13 W.R. (Cr.) 1; a Magistrate is competent to admit such a witness to bail, Weir II, 39. Before issuing a warrant the Court must record its reasons for taking this extreme step, otherwise the warrant is illegal, 10 Cr. L.J. 306=3 Ind. Cas. 575. The adoption of stereotyped printed forms is not sufficient, 33 C. 789; 33 M. 1088; but see 18 A.L.J. 1149 and 24 Cr. L.J. 88 (F.B.) which disapproved of, 33 C. 789.

After recording reasons in writing.—In 30 M. 1088 it was decided that the failure to record reasons in writing violated a warrant under this section, and the omission to do so was not cured by B. 537, infra, as the recording of reasons was a necessary preliminary to the exercise of the jurisdiction, 33 C. 789 also took the same view. So also the decision in 19 Cr. L.J. 44=443 Ind. Cas. 871 in which the Punjab Chief Court followed the Calcutta view. The Allahabad High Court in 18 A.L.J. 1149 dissented from the Calcutta view in 33 C. 789 and the (F.B.) decision in 51 C. 1 overruled 33 C. 789 and held by a majority (Chatterjee, J., dissenting) that the words 'after recording its reasons in writing' are not mandatory but only directory and when the warrant on the face of it is good and valid it does not become invalid merely because he omitted to record separately his reasons for the issue of the warrant under this section, the warrant itself stating that the Magistrate had very good reasons for issuing the same. The principle stated in the judgment of Abbot C.J., in 3 B. & Ad. 256 at 276 which is stated thus was followed "It is obvious that if the act of the Justice issuing a warrant be invalid on the ground of such an objection as the present, all persons who act in the execution of the warrant will act without any authority; a constable who arrests and a gaoler who receives a felon, will each be trespasser; resistance to them will be lawful, everything done by either of them be unlawful; and a constable or persons aiding him, may in some possible instance become amenable even to a charge of murder, for acting under an authority which they reasonably considered themselves bound to obey, and of the invalidity whereof they are wholly ignorant. An exposition of these statutes pregnant with so much inconvenience, ought not to be made, if they will admit of any other reasonable construction". The object the legislature had in view in enacting that a Magistrate should record his reasons before exercising this particular power is to ensure due deliberation on the part of the Magistrate or the object may be to give witness after his arrest the opportunity of acquainting himself with the Magistrate's reasons and possibly of removing the Magistrate's belief that he would not have attended in obedience to a summons. Possibly the Legislature had both these objects in view, But whatever the object of the Legislature may be and however important it may be that a Magistrate who desires to inspire confidence in his administration of justice should comply with the requirements of the Code and follow strictly the procedure therein indicated, the omission to record reasons will not invalidate the warrant in the hands of the police-officer, 52 C. 1 at p. 33 (F.B.).

Absconded.—See notes under S. 87, supra, at p. 100-101.

Sub-section (b).—A warrant ought not to issue unless service of summons is proved. A warrant of arrest should not be issued in cases in which summons should ordinarily issue unless due service of summons in good time is proved and a mere police-officer's report that summons was served by him is not sufficient evidence of service of summons under this sub-section, 3 L.B. R. 116.

91. When any person for whose appearance or arrest the officer presiding in any Court is empowered to issue a summons or warrant, is present in such Court, such officer may require such person to execute a bond, with or without sureties, for his appearance in such Court.

When a Magistrate suspecting that a witness present in Court might be kept out of the way in the future by the accused, arrested and kept her in the lockup, it was held that there was no justification for a such a course, 1901 A.W.N. 35. But a bond may be taken from the witness for appearance, 6 Cr. L.J. 273

92. When any person who is bound by any bond taken under this Code to appear before a Court, does not so appear, the officer presiding in such Court may issue a warrant directing that such person be arrested and produced before him.

Arrest on breach of bond for appearance.

This section refers to the case of a person who is bound by a bond to appear in Court. It provides for a warrant only when the person does not appear at the time he is bound to appear. It does not therefore apply to a case where before the time fixed for appearance, arrest by a warrant is sought to be effected, 38 M. 1088. See S. 14, supra. The Court may also take action under S. 514 infra, for forfeiting the bond although a person may prove to the satisfaction of the Court that he was not guilty of the offence charged, yet if he fails to appear in pursuance of the bond taken from him for his attendance in Court he is bound to obey its terms even when he is found not guilty ultimately, 17 A.L.J. 503.

93. The provisions contained in this Chapter relating to a summons and warrant, and their issue, service and execution, shall, so far as may be, apply to every summons and every warrant of arrest issued under this Code.

Provisions of this Chapter generally applicable to summonses and warrants of arrest.

Provisions of this Chapter shall apply to every summons and every warrant.—Having regard to the provisions of this section and S. 76, supra, it was held that a Magistrate was competent to admit to bail a recalcitrant witness arrested under S. 90, supra, Weir II, 39.

Every warrant of arrest issued under this Code.—This section unlike S. 83 supra, is applicable only to warrant of arrest issued under this Code. S. 83 is in general terms and applies to warrants issued under other laws also.

CHAPTER VII.

OF PROCESSES TO COMPEL THE PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS AND OTHER MOVEABLE PROPERTY, AND FOR THE DISCOVERY OF PERSONS WRONGFULLY CONFINED.

A.—Summons to produce.

94. (1) Whenever any Court, or in any place beyond the limits of the towns of Calcutta and Bombay, any officer in charge of a police-station considers that the production of any document or other thing is necessary or desirable for the purposes of any investigation, inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code by or before such Court or officer, such Court may issue a summons, or such officer a written order, to the person in whose possession or power, such document or thing is believed to be, requiring him to attend and produce it, or to produce it, at the time and place stated in the summons or order.

Summons to produce document or other thing.

(2) Any person required under this section merely to produce a document or other thing shall be deemed to have complied with the requisition if he causes such document or thing to be produced instead of attending personally to produce the same.

(3) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, sections 123 and 124, or to apply to a letter, post-card, telegram or other document or any parcel or thing in the custody of the Postal or Telegraph authorities.

Scope of the section.—This section is not limited to documents which form the subject of the offence under investigation but also to documents or things which are or can be used as evidence in support of the prosecution, 5 Bom. L.R. 980 at 982; 15 C. 109; 19 C. 52. The words of this section are of the widest possible character. Any person in whose possession or power a document or other thing which the Court considers necessary or desirable for the purpose of any investigation, inquiry or trial is, may be summoned to produce it, 15 C. 109 at 122. It is competent under this section to a Magistrate to issue a summons to an accused person to produce a document or a thing the production of which might lead to incriminate him, 13 Cr. L.J. 433=15 Ind. Cas. 433 following 15 C. 109. Under this section the Court has power to call upon the Police to produce the inquest report so that the accused be granted a copy of the statements made by the witnesses at the inquest, 20 L.W. 745. An order for the production of the thing or document should be complied with even where there is a lien on the thing directed to be produced, 19 C. 52; 3 C. 379, 2 B.H.C.R. 217.

Any document.—For the definition of the term 'document', see S. 3 (16) of the General Clauses Act X of 1854 and S. 3 of Indian Evidence Act I of 1872. The word 'document' or 'thing' is general and seems to cover any document the production and inspection of which is necessary or desirable or will serve the ends of justice, 1914 P.R. (Cr.) 36; 5 Bom. L.R. 980.

Production necessary or desirable.—The words 'necessary or desirable' mean really necessary in the ends of justice, 8 A.L.J. 517; 16 Cr.L.J. 225=27 Ind. Cas. 897; 26 Cr. L.J. 826=85 Ind. Cas. 42. The Magistrate is given a discretion to decide whether the production of a particular document or book is necessary or desirable for the purpose of any trial, and he is to exercise this discretion judicially, in the sense that he must satisfy himself that the document or book has a bearing upon or is relevant to the case. When he is so satisfied, his jurisdiction to order its production comes into play and this carries with it, jurisdiction to permit the production and to have inspection of the same, 5 Bom. L.R. 980; 15 C. 109; but a general search for stolen property is not authorized, and the law cannot be got over by using such an expression "stolen property relevant to the case," 16 C.W.N. 1078=13 Cr. L.J. 764=17 Ind. Cas. 76. It is not open to a Magistrate to issue an order allowing the prosecution to inspect the entries in the books of the accused relating to the subject-matter of the charge at the office of the accused's pleader, 5 Bom. L.R. 978.

Court may issue a summons, etc.—An order upon the police to take possession of the account books of a firm, without issuing a summons under this section or a warrant under S. 96 infra was held to be illegal, 33 C. 63.

To the person in whose possession or power such document is.—The words herein used are of the widest character, 15 C. 109. The person need not be a party, 19 C. 52. It is enough that the document is in his possession or power. The provision of this section cannot be taken to apply to the case of an accused person on his trial. No summons could be issued to him to produce an incriminating document, and failure to comply with this requisition is no offence under S. 175, I.P.O., 12 C.W.N. 1016=8 C.L.J. 320=8 Cr.L.J. 225. But this decision was dissented from by Benson, J., in 37 M. 112, where His Lordship followed the earlier Calcutta rulings in 15 C. 109 and 19 C. 52, on the ground that a Magistrate had power to issue a search-warrant, and a summons to produce is only another form of attaining the same. This section is limited to a specific document or thing and does not empower a Magistrate to issue a general search for stolen property in the house of an absconding person, 38 C. 304, but in 16 C.W.N. 1078=13 Cr.L.J. 764=17 Ind. Cas. 76, it was held that the police-officer can search an accused's house for property relevant to the case, 28 C. 303 held otherwise; it is not good law, see 31 C. 251; 27 Cr. L.J. 1155 = 97 Ind. Cas. 553. It is competent for a Magistrate to issue a summons to an accused to produce an incriminating document or other thing, 37 M. 112; 41 C. 161; 15 C. 109; 19 C. 52; 1914 P.R. (Cr.) 36; 16 Cr. L.J. 225 = 27 Ind. Cas. 857; 12 Cr. L.J. 58 = 9 Ind. Cas. 564. The provisions of this section cannot be got over by using general expressions "stolen property relevant to the case" as the law requires mention of specific things, 16 C.W.N. 1078 = 13 Cr. L.J. 764 = 17 Ind. Cas. 76; 13 C.W.N. 485. The document or thing need not be in the actual possession of the party summoned to produce the same. In the 1872 Code the language used was 'in whose keeping'; the language now used is of the widest character. It is enough if the document or thing is in the power of the person summoned to produce.

Indian Evidence Act, Ss. 123 and 124.—These sections regulate the giving of evidence as to affairs of State and the disclosure of official communications. Under S 123 no one is permitted to give evidence derived from unpublished official records relating to affairs of State, except with the permission of the officer at the head of the department concerned and under S. 124 no public-officer can be compelled to disclose official communications made in confidence when public interests will suffer by such disclosure.

Sub-section (2).—A person summoned merely to produce a document or thing may cause it to be produced instead of himself attending the Court personally. Even when the person summoned merely to produce a document or thing appears in Court for its production he does not become a witness by the mere fact that he produces the document, etc., and he cannot be cross-examined unless and until he is cited as a witness in the proceeding. See S. 139 Ind. Ev. Act.

Revision.—Under Ss. 435 and 439 infra the High Court has ample powers to interfere in revision in any case where the Magistrate has either refused to exercise a discretion vested in him by law, or has exercised that discretion in an improper manner. Where a Magistrate erroneously refused to order the production of a certain currency note in the possession of the accused and his legal adviser, the High Court set aside the order in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction, 19 C. 52.

95. (1) If any document, parcel or thing in such custody is, in the opinion of any District Magistrate, Chief Presidency Magistrate, High Court or Court of Session, wanted for the purpose of any investigation, inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code, such Magistrate or Court may require the Postal or Telegraph authorities, as the case may be, to deliver such document, parcel or thing to such person as such Magistrate or Court directs.

(2) If any such document, parcel or thing is, in the opinion of any other Magistrate, or of any Commissioner of Police or District Superintendent of Police, wanted for any such purpose, he may require the Postal or Telegraph Department, as the case may be, to cause search to be made for and to detain such document, parcel or thing pending the orders of any such District Magistrate, Chief Presidency Magistrate or Court.

All Provincial Magistrates are empowered to order search to be made for letters and telegrams, Sch. III, cl. (7), but in the presidency town only the Chief Presidency Magistrate can act under cl. (1) of the section. If any Magistrate not being a District Magistrate or a Chief Presidency Magistrate issues a search warrant, for a letter, parcel or other thing in the Post office or a telegram in the Telegraph Department, his proceedings are void, S. 530(b), infra.

The act of issuing a search-warrant is judicial, 32 C. 953 (P.C.) at 687, and the Magistrate should weigh the evidence and circumstances and record reasons before issuing a search-warrant, (1917) M.W.N. 494=8 L.W. 287=18 Cr. L.J. 837=44 Ind. Cas. 661; 7 Cr. L. Rev. 476=17 Cr. L.J. 63=32 Ind. Cas. 652; 15 C. 103; 8 W.R. (Cr) 74; 22 B. 949. A Magistrate has jurisdiction to stay execution of the warrant issued by him conditionally on execution of bond to produce copies of document in Court, 47 C. 164. Search-warrants are a species of process exceedingly arbitrary in character and inasmuch as they are resorted to only for very urgent and satisfactory reasons, the rules of law which pertain to them are of more than ordinary strictness. In the first place it is common learning that they are only to be granted in the cases expressly authorized by law and not generally in such cases until it has been shown before a responsible officer on oath that a crime has been committed and that officer has reason to believe that the offender or the property, which is the subject or instrument of a crime is concealed in some specified house or place. The law clearly intends that the evidence shall be given of such facts as shall satisfy the officer issuing the warrant that there is "reason to believe." Suspicion itself is no ground whatever for issue of warrant of this description. Search-warrants are always open to very serious objection and very great particularity is justly required by law in cases where they are authorized before the privacy of a man's premises is allowed to be invaded by the minister of the law, 30 C.W.N. 713 at 717.

B.—Search-warrant.

96. (1) Where any Court has reason to believe that a person to whom a summons or order under section 94 or a requisition under section 95, sub-section (1), has been or might be addressed, will not or would not produce the document or thing as required by such summons or requisition,

When search-warrant may be issued.

or where such document or thing is not known to the Court to be in the possession of any person, or where the Court considers that the purposes of any inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code will be served by a general search or inspection, it may issue a search-warrant; and the person to whom such warrant is directed, may search or inspect in accordance therewith and the provisions hereinafter contained.

(2) Nothing herein contained shall authorize any Magistrate other than a District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate to grant a warrant to search for a document, parcel, or other thing in the custody of the Postal or Telegraph authorities.

Scope of the section.—Search-warrants are a species of process exceedingly arbitrary in character and are only to be granted in cases expressly authorized by law and not generally, 53 C. 718. The scheme as regards searches under the Code is reasonably clear. The Court can issue a search-warrant under this section or in lieu thereof the Magistrate may himself search under S. 105 infra and S. 165 infra deals with searches by Police-officers and not by a Magistrate, 36 C. 433 at 438. The Court should always remember that it is a grave step to issue a search-warrant directing that a man's house should be invaded and searched. It is necessary that power to issue search-warrants should be given but it should not be exercised without full appreciation of the gravity of the step and after the Court has come to the conclusion that that step is really necessary in the ends of justice, 8 A.L.J. 517 = 12 Cr. L.J. 175 = 9 Ind. Cas. 991. To issue a search-warrant to seize all letters, books, bills, etc., and books of account in a person's house for an inquiry as to whether he had used or sold articles with a counterfeit trade-mark is a gross perversion of the law, 17 Cr. L.J. 533 = 36 Ind. Cas. 591. A Magistrate has no authority to issue on the application of a complainant a search-warrant ordering summary seizure of all the goods of a particular description in the possession of an accused person, 17 Cr. L.J. 60 = 32 Ind. Cas. 652. The issue of a search-warrant is a judicial act, 39 C. 953 (P.C.) at 967, and it ought be used only after a judicial inquiry and upon proper materials. 15 C. 103 : 8 W.R. (Cr.) 74 ; 22 B. 943 = 1917 M.W.N. 434 = 6 L.W. 237 ; 7 Cr. L.R. 476. Under this section before issuing a warrant it is the duty of the Court in the first instance to consider whether a summons to produce would not have the desired effect. The informant should be examined on oath if possible and if this is not possible the Court should act with due application that it is taking upon itself the responsibility of considering the weight of the information as information preparatory to issuing an order of a very serious nature, 8 A.L.J. 517 = 12 Cr. L.J. 175 = 9 Ind. Cas. 991 ; 15 C. 103. All Magistrates are empowered to issue search-warrants, see Sch. III 1 (3) infra.

The words of the section are of the widest possible character. Any person to whom a summons under S. 94 supra has been or might be addressed and who, the Court has reason to believe will not and would not produce it, is liable to have his premises searched ; search for what ? Surely for the document or thing which the Court has reason to believe he will not produce. The whole object of the section would be frustrated if we were to hold, that because form 8 of Sch. V, says "specifying the thing clearly" and not the "document or thing clearly" there was no authority to issue search-warrant for a document ; a document cannot be seized unless under a search-warrant, 15 C. 109 at 122 and 123. In taking action under this section the Court is authorized to go as far as it is physically possible in that behalf. The accused can perhaps defeat the Court by concealing or destroying the document or thing or having it concealed or destroyed, taking of course the consequences of such action just like an accused in the dock, can when questioned under S. 342 infra thwart the Court in its search for the truth by answering falsely or by refusing to answer. But the mere fact that the accused can so defeat or thwart the Court is no reason for holding that the Court is debarred from going so far as the sections specially allow, 1913 P.R. (Cr.) 36. The power of issuing search-warrant is not intended to give the complainant an opportunity of fishing for evidence but is intended for use in respect of a definite existing document which must be clearly specified in the warrant, 17 Cr. L.J. 533 = 36 Ind. Cas. 591. The first para. of this section requires as a condition precedent to the issue of a search-warrant that the Court must have reason to believe that the person against whom the search-warrant is issued is likely not to produce the document or thing in his possession as required by a summons or under S. 94 supra or a requisition under S. 95 (1) supra served upon him or that he is not likely to produce it, should such summons, order or requisition be served on him, 5 Bom. L.R. 1032. Searches can be made (1) Under a search warrant issued under this section (2) By the Magistrate himself under S. 105 infra. (3) By a Police-officer under S. 165 infra, 36 C. 433

Inaccuracies in a warrant do not take away the jurisdiction or render the evidence adduced inadmissible by reason of such inaccuracy, 27 Cr. L.J. 503 = 93 Ind. Cas. 967 following 37 C. 457 at 502. A search-warrant which mentions a wrong door number of the house to be searched and gives no other description of it to identify the same is an illegal warrant, 27 Cr. L.J. 503 = 93 Ind. Cas. 967, following 37 B. 402. The question of accused's guilt is entirely different from the question whether the officer was acting within his powers, 26 M. 123.

Any Court.—The 'Code' contains no definition of the word 'Court' nor is a definition of it to be found in the General Clauses Act X of 1897, but according to S. 4 of the Ind. Ev. Act the word 'Court' includes all Magistrates. Taking this definition as a guide a Magistrate must be held to be included in the term Court, 17 Cr. L.J. 491 = 36 Ind. Cas. 171.

It was held in 35 C. 433 by the majority of the Court that the word "Court" implied that the Magistrate was acting in his judicial capacity and if he conducts a search not acting as a "Court" he would be liable civilly for trespass, but Brett, J., dissented from the view of the majority and said, "Court" is nowhere defined in the Code. From Chap. II, of the Code it would, however, appear that the term 'Court' and Magistrate, are in fact synonymous and it should be remembered that under the special conditions prevailing in India a Magistrate is frequently called upon to act as a Court even though he may not be at the time sitting within the four walls of his ordinary Court-building or in fact in any building; the powers of the Court depend upon the power with which the Magistrate presiding in it is vested, 35 C. 433 at 457. This view was approved by the Privy Council in 39 C. 933 at 956; their Lordships held it would seem that the Trial Judge and both the learned Judges who formed the majority of the Court of appeal were misled by the use of the word 'Court' in S. 96. For the sake of brevity the Code uses the term 'Court' and 'Magistrate' generally, if not always, as convertible terms. S. 6 headed classes of Criminal Court enacts I Court of Session, II Presidency Magistrate..... S. 96 taken in conjunction with Sch. III, places the matter beyond all doubt. The ordinary powers of all Provincial Magistrates are declared to be those hereinafter conferred upon them and specified in the third schedule. The power to issue search-warrants is specified among the ordinary powers of all Provincial Magistrates but the only section conferring the power is S. 96 to which the schedule itself refers.

Has reason to believe.—Reason to believe is a condition precedent to the issue of a search-warrant under this section, 5 Bom. L.R. 1032, see also 15 C. 109 at 134.

A person to whom a summons has been addressed—The word person will include an accused person also, 16 Cr. L.J. 225=27 Ind. Cas. 897; 12 Cr. L.J. 98=9 Ind. Cas. 534; 37 M. 112; 41 C. 261; 15 C. 108, see also notes under S. 94 supra.

Document or thing.—The words "document or thing" in this and S. 94 supra are general and cover any document the production or inspection of which is necessary or desirable or will serve the ends of justice. There is nothing in this and S. 94 supra to limit their production to the finding of such documents or things only in respect of which the alleged offence may have been committed, 1314 P.R. (Or) 36; 5 Bom. L.R. 983. The word 'thing' will include any document the production and inspection of which is necessary or desirable or will serve the ends of justice, 16 Cr. L.J. 223=27 Ind. Cas. 897. The word 'thing' is specifically mentioned and that would not include a configuration of a wall or the inspection of any place inside the house for purposes of investigation, 26 A.L.J. 406 at 411=29 Cr.L.J. 272=107 Ind. Cas. 683. This section is inapplicable to the case of a person, i.e., a woman confined in a house or staying voluntarily there. A person cannot be said to be a "thing" to which alone the section is applicable. S. 100 infra applies to such a case and a warrant issued under this section, instead of under S. 100 infra is illegal and must be treated as a nullity, 11 C.W.N. 835=6 Cr. L.J. 33.

Purposes of inquiry or other proceedings will be served by a general search—It is lawful for a Magistrate to issue a search-warrant when he considers the production of any thing necessary for the purposes of investigation or inquiry under the Code. It is not incumbent on him to wait till the prosecution evidence has been recorded in the presence of the accused. He is entitled to act upon credible information, provided, it is based upon a complaint and the complainant is examined upon solemn affirmation, 13 M. 18, followed in 1910 M.W.N. 818=11 Cr. L.J. 535=7 Ind. Cas. 895; 22 B. 949. A Magistrate ought not to issue a search-warrant simply because a police-officer asks for it, 47 C. 587; 21 Cr.L.J. 313=55 Ind. Cas. 473; 24 C.W.N. 405; 21 Cr.L.J. 573=57 Ind. Cas. 93. In 8 A.L.J. 517 at 522=12 Cr. L.J. 175=9 Ind. Cas. 991, it was held when there is no investigation, inquiry or other proceedings under the Code pending, the issue of a search-warrant is illegal and S. infra 537 does not cure the defect. But if the Magistrate subsequently takes cognizance under S. 190 (1) (c) infra and then re-issues the warrant it is legal, 35 C. 1076. It is necessary that the power to issue search-warrants should be given, but it should not be exercised without full appreciation of the gravity of the step and after the Court has come to the conclusion that the step is really necessary in the ends of justice. The power of issuing search-warrants is not intended to be used for the purpose of giving complainants an opportunity of fishing evidence, but is intended for use in respect of definite documents believed to exist which must be clearly specified in the warrant and before issuing the warrant, the Magistrate must have before him some information or evidence that the documents are necessary or desirable for the inquiry before him; to issue a warrant to search a man's house and for production of all papers and books in the house for an inquiry as to whether he had used or sold articles with a counterfeit trade-mark, is a perversion of the law, 17 Cr. L.J. 543=36 Ind. Cas. 591. A search-warrant is not to be given for attaching property the title to which is in dispute and what is known in civil law as attachment before judgment is foreign to criminal law, Ratanial 677. The act of issuing a search-warrant is a judicial act, 39 C. 953 (P.C.) at 967, and the Magistrate should weigh the circumstances, and record his reasons before issuing the search-warrant, 1917 M.W.N. 494=6 L.W. 287; 18 Cr. L.J. 837=43 Ind. Cas. 661; 7 Cr. L. Rev. 476=17 Cr. L.J. 60=32 Ind. Cas. 652. When a search-warrant was issued three weeks after issuing process to accused it was held that it was so dilatory that it could only defeat the object for which such warrants are issued, though the issue of warrant will strictly come within the letter of the law, 22 C.W.N. 719. The Court must have also reason to believe that the person against whom the warrant is issued, is not likely to produce the document or thing in his possession as required by the summons under S. 94 supra, or a requisition under S. 95 (1) supra, 5 Bom. L.R. 1032. The section is somewhat obscurely worded; it is clear from the wording of cl. (3) that the Legislature intended to restrict it to documents forming the subject of a charge as distinguished from documents sought to be used as evidence in a case, 5 Bom. L.R. 980. But it is not open to a Magistrate to issue an order allowing the prosecution to inspect entries in the book of the accused person relating to the subject matter of the charge at the office of the accused's lawyers, 5 Bom. L.R. 578.

Search or Inspect.—The word "inspect" seems to apply only to locality or place but not to document or thing. The language of S. 97 infra to the effect "search or inspect the place or part so specified" supports this view, 15 C. 109 at 124. Once the articles are seized and brought before the Court in execution of a search-warrant issued by the Court, inspection thereof may be allowed to the complainant, 43 C.L.J. 164; 33 C.W.N. 369=30 Cr. L.J. 705=116 Ind. Cas. 721 relying on 15 C. 109. Power to search necessarily includes the power to take the thing or document into possession. A Magistrate who is competent to issue a search-warrant is also competent himself to conduct a search, 1884 A.W.N. 213. A Magistrate may direct a search in his presence under S. 105, infra.

For form of search-warrant see Sch. V, Form No. 8, S. 530, cl. (b), infra provides that if any Magistrate not empowered by law in this behalf issues a search warrant for a letter, parcel or other thing in the Post Office or Telegraph Department, his proceedings are void.

Resistance to illegal search is not protected. See B. 99, I.P.O. No right of private defence exists unless there is an apprehension of death or grievous hurt, 21 M. 296 at 298; 19 M. 349; 28 C. 411; 39 C. 403; 16 C.W.N. 336; 11 C.W.N. 838=6 C. L.J. 127=6 Cr. L.J. 38, but if there is no search-warrant there can be no legal search, and right of private defence is available, 38 C. 303. Illegality of a search cannot be pleaded as a defence when evidence of offence under the Arms Act is discovered in consequence of such illegal search, 47 A. 375; 35 A. 575; see also 48 A. 86.

97. The Court may, if it thinks fit, specify in the warrant the particular place or part thereof to which only the search or inspection shall extend; and the person charged with the execution of such warrant shall then search or inspect only the place or part so specified.

Power to restrict warrant.

98. (1) If a District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class, upon information and after such inquiry as he thinks necessary, has reason to believe that any place is used for the deposit or sale of stolen property, or for the deposit or sale or manufacture of forged documents, false seals or counterfeit stamps or coin, or instruments or materials for counterfeiting coin or stamps or for forging, or that any forged documents, false seals or counterfeit stamps or coin, or instruments or materials used for counterfeiting coin or stamps or for forging, are kept or deposited in any place, or, if a District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate, or a Presidency Magistrate, upon information and after such inquiry as he thinks necessary, has reason to believe that any place is used for the deposit, sale, manufacture or production of any obscene object such as referred to in section 292 of the Indian Penal Code or that any such obscene objects are kept or deposited in any place [Inserted by Act VIII of 1925, section 3], he may by his warrant authorize any police-officer above the rank of a constable—

(a) to enter, with such assistance as may be required, such place, and

(b) to search the same in manner specified in the warrant, and

(c) to take possession of any property, documents, seals, stamps or coins therein found which he reasonably suspects to be stolen, unlawfully obtained, forged, false or counterfeit, and also of any such instruments and materials or any such obscene objects as aforesaid, and

(d) to convey such property, documents, seals, stamps, coins, instruments or materials or any such obscene objects before a Magistrate, or to guard the same on the spot until the offender is taken before a Magistrate, or otherwise to dispose thereof in some place of safety, and

(e) to take into custody and carry before a Magistrate every person found in such place who appears to have been privy to the deposit, sale or manufacture or keeping of any such property, documents, seals, stamps, coins, instruments or materials * or any such obscene objects, knowing or having reasonable cause to suspect the said property to have been stolen or otherwise unlawfully obtained, or the said documents, seals, stamps, coins, instruments or materials to have been forged, falsified or counterfeited, or the said instruments or materials to have been or to

(2) In sub-section (1) "document" includes also any painting, drawing or photograph, or other visible representation.

S. 295-A newly added in the I.P.C. runs thus: "Whoever, with deliberate and malicious intention of outraging the religious feelings of any class of his Majesty's subjects by words either spoken or written, or by visible representations insults or attempts to insult the religion or the religious beliefs of that class shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years or with fine or with both." This section is the outcome of the strained relationship which existed between the Hindus and Muhammadans especially in Northern India. There was no direct provision of law to deal with scurrilous writings intended to insult the religious feelings of both communities and S. 153-A, I.P.C. used to be made applicable to such cases. The judgment in the 'Rangila Rasul Case' of the Lahore High Court threw considerable doubt of the applicability of S. 153-A to writings intended to insult the religious feeling of any community and consequently this new section is enacted in Chap. XV of the I.P.C. creating a specific offence, viz., deliberate and malicious acts intended to outrage the religious feelings of any class by insulting its religion or its religious beliefs.

In order to justify a forfeiture under this section it is necessary for Government to satisfy the Court that on the evidence produced by the prosecution that a conviction under S. 153-A, I.P.C., could have been had, 29 Cr. L.J. 889=111 Ind. Cas. 659 where 54 C 59 and 28 Cr. L.J. 794=104 Ind. Cas. 234 are referred to.

99B. Any person having any interest in any newspaper, book or other document, in respect of which an order of forfeiture has been made under section 99A, may, within two months from the date of such order, apply to the High Court to set aside such order on the ground that the issue of the newspaper, or the book or other document, in respect of which the order was made, did not contain *seditious or other matter of such a nature as is referred to in sub-section (1) of section 99A.

Application to High Court to set aside order of forfeiture.

This section as amended by Act XXXVI of 1926 permits any person having any interest in a book in respect of which the order of forfeiture is made under the last section to apply to the High Court to have the order set aside on the ground that the issue of the book in respect of which the order was made did not contain any matter which promoted or was intended to promote feelings of enmity or hatred between different classes of His Majesty's subjects, 43 A 856 (Sp.B.); 50 A. 187. Under this section the High Court is to consider only the question whether in fact the matters contained in the document in question contain any seditious matter. It is precluded from going into other questions; the onus is on the Government to prove that the document contains seditious matter, 47 A. 298 (F.B.).

Hearing by Special Bench.

99C. Every such application shall be heard and determined by a Special Bench of the High Court composed of three Judges.

99D. (1) On receipt of the application, the Special Bench shall, if it is not satisfied that the issue of the newspaper, or the book or other document, in respect of which the application has been made, contained seditious or other matter of such a nature as is* referred to in sub-section (1) of section 99A, set aside the order of forfeiture.

Order of Special Bench setting aside the forfeiture.

(2) Where there is a difference of opinion among the judges forming the Special Bench, the decision shall be in accordance with the opinion of the majority of those Judges.

Under this section, the High Court is precluded from considering any other point than the question whether in fact the matters contained in the document were seditious or not and come within the mischief aimed at by S. 124A, I.P.C. The onus is on the Local Government having regard to the frame work of the section but it is not a matter of great practical moment and indeed it gives to the Local Government the advantage of opening and of reply, 47 A. 298 (F.B.). If the High Court is left in doubt after hearing the application, the order of forfeiture should be set aside—a practice contrary to the practice in a Civil appeal, 49 A. 856 (Sp B.).

99E. On the hearing of any such application with reference to any newspaper, any copy of such newspaper may be given in evidence in aid of the proof of the nature or tendency of the words, signs or visible representations contained in such newspaper, in respect of which the order of forfeiture was made.*

Evidence to prove nature or tendency of newspapers.

99F. Every High Court shall, as soon as conveniently may be, frame rules to regulate the procedure in the case of such applications, the amount of the costs thereof and the execution of orders passed thereon, and until such rules are framed, the practice of such Court in proceedings other than suits and appeals shall apply, so far as may be practicable, to such applications.

Procedure in High Court.

99G. No order passed or action taken under section 99A shall be called in question in any Court, otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of section 99B.

Jurisdiction barred.

These sections were added by Act XIV of 1922, the Press Law Repeal and Amendment Act 1922 and correspond to Ss. 12, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21 and 22 of the Repealed Indian Press Act I of 1920 See 43 M. 146 ; 41 C. 465 at 478, 483 and 487.

C.—Discovery of persons wrongfully confined.

100. If any Presidency Magistrate, Magistrate of the first class or Sub-Divisional Magistrate has reason to believe that any person is confined under such circumstances that the confinement amounts to an offence, he may issue a search-warrant, and the person to whom such warrant is directed may search for the person so confined; and such search shall be made in accordance therewith, and the person, if found shall be immediately taken before a Magistrate, who shall make such order as in the circumstances of the case seems proper.

Scope of the section.—A Magistrate is not bound to issue a search-warrant under this section unless he has reason to believe that a minor is confined wrongfully. The powers under this section are discretionary, Ratanlal 839. An Inquiry under this section is a judicial inquiry, 15 C. 103; 35 C. 1076 (1917) M.W.N. 494. The jurisdiction conferred by this section is not so wide as that under S 491 infra relating to the issue of Habeas Corpus, Ratanlal 839; 24 C.W.N. 104=29 C.L.J. 602=20 Cr. L.J. 729=52 Ind. Cas. 889.

Has reason to believe that any person is confined may issue.—If the complaint is against a husband for keeping his wife in confinement, the Magistrate will not be justified in passing a hasty order. He should hear both sides and after making such inquiry as may seem necessary pass an order. If he finds the confinement proved he should let go the wife and warn the husband and if he finds against confinement he should advise the wife to go home with her husband warning the husband not to use coercion in taking her, 11 Cr. L.J. 450=7 Ind. Cas. 354, see 24 C.W.N. 104=29 C.L.J. 603=20 Cr. L.J. 729=52 Ind. Cas. 889; 2 C.W.N. CCCXXXIII. As to a complaint with respect of the removal of a child, the paramount consideration for the Court is the health and safety of the child in its being allowed to live with its natural parents. See 1929 M.W.N. 687.

Search-warrant.—Under this section the only kind of warrant that can be issued is a search-warrant, and the person to whom such warrant is directed may search for the person so confined, and such search shall be made in accordance therewith and the person if found, shall be immediately taken before the Magistrate. It is perfectly clear that the form under S 93, supra after scoring out cls. (a) and (c) would be sufficient for the execution of a process under this section. When there is no printed form under this section, the form under S. 98 is always used for these warrants under this section, 30 C. 403 at 406 and 45 C. 805. It is immaterial what form is used, provided the substance of the warrant complies with the requirements of the section, 45 C. 805; 16 C.W.N. 336=13 Cr. L.J. 186=13 Ind. Cas. 1002. For the power of the High Courts to issue directions in the nature of habeas corpus see S 491 infra. See S. 552 infra which deals with the powers of a Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate to compel the restoration of abducted females. Under S. 25 (2) of the Guardians and wards Act VIII of 1890, a District Court for the purpose of arresting the ward may exercise the powers conferred on a Magistrate of the first class by this section.

Magistrate may make such order as in the circumstances seems proper.—The power to issue a search-warrant is discretionary with the Magistrate and before he acts he must have reason to believe that a person is wrongfully confined, Ratanlal 839. The Magistrate is bound to hear both parties and pass an order, not hastily, but after making such inquiry as may seem necessary under the circumstances, 11 Cr. L.J. 450=7 Ind. Cas. 354. Where no search-warrant under this section was in fact issued and the boy said to be wrongfully confined was not produced before the Court although a warrant for the production of the boy was ordered and where it is not clear whether the detention was wrongful, no order can be passed directing the boy to be made over to the complainant, 24 C.W.N. 104=29 C.L.J. 603=20 Cr. L.J. 729=52 Ind. Cas. 889.

D.—General Provisions relating to Searches.

101. The provisions of sections 43, 75, 77, 79, 82, 83 and 84 shall, so far as may be, apply to all search-warrants issued under section 96, section 98, section 99A or section 100.

Direction, etc., of search-warrants.

A search that was made without a legal warrant is not illegal and cannot vitiate the trial. There is no question of any legal presumption and any irregularity or illegality in the search can neither vitiate nor affect a conviction, 46 A. 85 following 33 A. 358.

A search-warrant under the Gambling Act of 1867 is governed by the provisions of the Code and may therefore be endorsed over by the Police-officer to whom it is addressed to another police-officer duly empowered, 30 A. 60. See also 18 Cr. L.J. 238=27 Ind. Cas. 910, but this section is not applicable to warrant issued under the Burma Gambling Act and consequently a search by an officer to whom the warrant was not originally directed but was only endorsed by the officer named in the warrant is illegal, 21 Cr. L.J. 9=54 Ind. Cas. 57.

102. (1) Whenever any place liable to search or inspection under this Chapter is closed, any person residing in, or being in charge of such places shall, on demand of the officer or other person executing the warrant, and on production of the warrant, allow him free ingress thereto, and afford all reasonable facilities for a search therein.

Persons in charge of closed place to allow search.

(2) If ingress into such place cannot be so obtained, the officer or other person executing the warrant may proceed in manner provided by section 48.

(3) Where any person in or about such place is reasonably suspected of concealing about his person any article for which search should be made, such person may be searched. If such person is a woman, the directions of section 52 shall be observed.

103. (1) Before making a search under this Chapter, the officer or other person about to make it shall call upon two or more respectable inhabitants of the locality in which the place to be searched is situate to attend and witness the search, and may issue an order in writing to them or any of them so to do.

Search to be made in presence of witnesses.

(2) The search shall be made in their presence, and a list of all things seized in the course of such search and of the places in which they are respectively found shall be prepared by such officer or other person and signed by such witnesses; but no person witnessing a search under this section shall be required to attend the Court as a witness of the search unless specially summoned by it.

(3) The occupant of the place searched, or some person in his behalf, shall, in every instance, be permitted to attend during the search, and a copy of the list prepared under this section, signed by the said witnesses, shall be delivered to such occupant or person at his request.

Occupant of place searched may attend.

(4) When any person is searched under section 102, sub-section (3), a list of all things taken possession of shall be prepared, and a copy thereof shall be delivered to such person at his request.

(5) Any person who, without reasonable cause, refuses or neglects to attend and witness a search under this section, when called upon to do so by an order in writing delivered or tendered to him, shall be deemed to have committed an offence under section 187 of the Indian Penal Code.

Amendment.—Sub-section (5) is new. "We think that the power, thus given to the police practically to compel the attendance of respectable witnesses from as near as possible to the place where the search is to be effected, should go far to put an end to the objectionable practice of bringing semi-professional search witnesses from a greater distance, and will also prevent the frustration of searches by the unreasonable refusal of witnesses to attend, which we understand is by no means uncommon. If executive instructions are issued to the police, that with this new sub-section to back them, they are whenever possible, to require the attendance of respectable witnesses from the immediate vicinity, we think that a considerable improvement will be effected." Sel. Com. Report.

Object and scope of the section.—The object of the section is to see that searches are conducted properly and that no wrong doing such as planting of articles by Police in the house of accused should take place and thus prevent fabrication of false evidence. Object of the Legislature in requiring the presence of two or more respectable witnesses of the locality is to guard against possible discovery and unfair dealings on the part of officers entrusted with search-warrants and to ensure that anything incriminating which may be said to have been found on the premises searched was really found there and was not introduced by the members of the search party, 27 Cr. L.J. 73=91 Ind. Cas. 249, the intention of the law is to protect the person whose house is searched and to give confidence to the neighbours. In the case of a person whose residence is so easily accessible there will be no difficulty in ascertaining the character and status of the witnesses and in proving that any particular witness is not respectable if in fact he was not, 18 Cr. L.J. 1002=42 Ind. Cas. 753; 5 Ran. 251 at 294. Whether a search is legal or illegal if contraband articles such as arms, ammunition, etc., are found in the possession of the accused no question of the legality of the search or otherwise can be raised by him, 27 A.L.J. 28 at 30 following 23 A.L.J. 354. The provisions of this section are applicable to searches conducted under S. 14 of the Opium Act I of 1878 empowering the officer to enter into a building vessel or place to search and seize opium liable to confiscation but an arrest and search in an open place under S. 15 of the said Act need not comply with the provisions of this section. There are certain kinds of searches permitted by the Code which do not fall within this Chapter and therefore not governed by the provisions of this section and searches under S. 15 of the Opium Act, is an example of this, 28 Cr. L.J. 372=100 Ind. Cas. 580. The provisions of this section and S. 102 supra do not apply to a search made under the Excise Act. In view of the provisions of S. 1(2) and S. 5(2) supra, there is a special provision in the Excise Act relating to searches made under that Act and so the provisions of this section and S. 102 supra cannot apply to such a search. Under the Excise Act a search can be conducted by persons other than police-officers, and the Chapter IX of that Act gives the powers of different persons to make the search of any person or any vessel, vehicle, etc., reasonably suspected to contain any excisable articles. There is nothing in the Excise Act to show that the search is to be conducted under the provisions of this Code, 54 C. 601.

The officer shall call upon two or more respectable inhabitants of the locality.—This section requires the officer about to make a search to call upon two or more respectable inhabitants of the locality in which the place of search is situate to attend and witness the search. It is undoubtedly important that an officer making a search should comply with the provisions of this section, for the credibility of his story may in many cases depend on the support it might receive from the persons accompanying him in the search. But if for any reason the officer making the search is unable to get two or more respectable inhabitants of the locality and a search is effected in the presence of one or more men available at the time leading to the discovery of the articles, the accused who is found in possession can be convicted all the same if the Court is satisfied from the evidence that an offence has been committed, 24 A.L.J. 173; 23 A.L.J. 354 followed in 27 A.L.J. 23. The intention of the Legislature in laying down the procedure as to house search is to protect the person whose house is searched and to give confidence to the neighbours, 18 Cr.L.J. 1009=42 Ind. Cas. 753, 5 Ran. 231. By this it is intended to operate in favour of the accused and in a densely populated town, it means persons in the immediate neighbourhood and not persons who live couple of miles away and are friends of the police officer conducting the search are to witness the search, 26 Cr. L.J. 827=66 Ind. Cas. 475; one of the essentials of a valid search is the presence of independent witnesses to the search, 23 Cr. L.J. 603=63 Ind. Cas. 837. The police-officer may issue an order in writing to the witnesses to attend and the order is necessary if the witness is to be proceeded against for refusal to attend. There is nothing in this or any other section of the Code to justify the notion that the required witnesses are to be selected by any person other than the officer conducting the search. Assuming what is by no means clear, that the witnesses to the search were not the inhabitants of the locality we do not think that circumstance must necessarily expose the conduct of the police to suspicion or render the evidence of the search inadmissible," 21 M. 81 at 89; 23 M.L.J. 445=(1912) M.W.N. 1111=13 Cr. L.J. 763=17 Ind. Cas. 75; 27 Cr. L.J. 73=91 Ind. Cas. 249, see also 1 Cr.L.J. 933 and 13 M. 349. The intention of the enactment is to ensure that searches are conducted with decency and in order that no wrong doing, such as planting articles by the Police in the house searched should take place. Regularity and proper conduct of searches could be secured only if those should be chosen as witnesses who can be reasonably relied on to secure the desired result and whose trustworthiness and ability towards the conveying out of the particular duty required of them can be felt, 7 Cr. L.J. 479; 12 Cr. L.J. 251=10 Ind. Cas. 756. The stress is upon the word 'respectable' and not on 'locality.' The important point is that the men called in should be persons of some standing whose word can be believed and not of those living within a stone's throw of the house to be searched, 18 Cr. L.J. 1009=42 Ind. Cas. 753; 11 Cr. L.J. 743=3 Ind. Cas. 933; 12 Cr.L.J. 479(1)=12 Ind. Cas. 87. The facts with reference to a search may be proved otherwise than by the production of the search lists, 34 M. 349 (F.B). Failure to call respectable inhabitants of the locality to witness a search is a failure to comply with the provisions of this section but such failure does not make the search illegal, 23 M.L.J. 443=13 Cr. L.J. 763=(1912) M.W.N. 1111=17 Ind. Cas. 75 where 17 M.L.J. 323 is followed; 2 Pat. L.T. 353 where 20 Cr. L.J. 742=53 Ind. Cas. 150 is dissented and 35 A. 353; 31 C.557 and 26 M. 124 are referred to. See also 27 Cr. L.J. 73=91 Ind. Cas. 249; but such illegality will not be a bar to the consideration of the evidence discovered by the search 4 C. 653 followed in 18 Cr. L.J. 49=37 Ind. Cas. 33.

No person witnessing a search shall be required to attend Court as a witness, etc.—The reason for this provision is obvious. Many persons would be unwilling to attend searches if, as a matter of fact, they had to attend Court at the trial of the case, possibly two Courts if the case is committed to the Sessions. The discretion is, therefore, left to the Court to require or not the attendance of such witness. It is equally open to the accused to call them as defence witnesses if they profess to have a high regard for the truthfulness of these witnesses, 46 C.L.J. 368 at 382-83=29 Cr. L.J. 47=106 Ind. Cas. 545 dissenting from 9 C.W.N. 439=2 Cr. L.J. 176.

Sub-section (3).—The Code permits the occupants of the rooms to be searched to be present at the search and if they are not permitted to be present there is a violation of the provision which is one not merely of technicality but of substance in that it is enacted to guarantee the reality of the search and the discoveries made out, 41 C. 350 at 370. The words "occupant of the place searched or some person in his behalf" are not intended to cover every person who happened to be in the place at the time but may refer back to the person mentioned in S 102 supra, namely "a person residing in or being in charge of the place." Strictly speaking then the only persons entitled as of right to be present at a search are persons residing in, or in charge of the place, 41 C. 350 at 377. The words are "shall be permitted to attend during the search." The spirit of the provision that the occupant shall be present and he is to be given the option of being present and not that he is to be allowed to be present if he demands it, 41 C. 350 at 377 but this view was dissented from in, 44 C.L.J. 368 at 382=29 Cr.L.J. 45=106 Ind. Cas. 545, holding that the interpretation put on the word "permitted" occurring in this sub-section could not be accepted as sound.

Occupant of the place to be searched.—These words are not intended to cover any person who may happen to be in the place but they refer back to the person mentioned in S. 102, i.e., a person residing in or being in charge of the place, 41 C. 350 at 377. A cart is not a place within the meaning of the section as held by the Bombay High Court.

List to be signed by the witnesses.—It was held in 26 M. 419 (F.B.) that refusal to sign the search list under this section is not an offence punishable under S. 187, I.P.O.; but now see the new sub-section (5) which enacts that any person who without reasonable cause refuses or neglects to attend and witness a search when called upon to do so shall be deemed to have committed an offence under S. 187, I.P.C. But the order requiring the person to attend must be a written order now see 38 M.L.J. 27=1920 M.W.N. 110=11 L.W. 58=21 Cr. L.J. 33=54 Ind. Cas. 241. Unless the list of things seized is signed by the witness as required by this section, the search would not be legal and each page of the search list must be signed by witness, 7 Cr. L.J. 411. See Ss 165 and 166 infra as to mode of making searches by the Police. The Officer's duty is to be present on the spot and to exercise general supervision. This section does not lay down that the officer himself should ransack boxes, examine the roof, dig up the floor, 23 M.L.J. 415 where 21 M. 83 is not followed; see 21 M.L.J. 281 (F.B.)=8 M.L.T. 451=11 Cr. L.J. 576=8 Ind. Cas. 178 and 33 M. 413 as to mode of proving the search list and its contents.

Rules relating to searches.—Whenever possible, the presence of the village-headman should be obtained to witness a search. The witnesses to a search shall enter the premises to be searched and watch the police when they search and before commencing a search the person of the police-officer who is to conduct the search shall be examined before the witnesses. The Code does not require a search to be made by day-light but as a rule day-light should be awaited, the inmates of the place being made to evacuate it and the place sealed and guarded. In conducting the search the place shall be inspected to see whether facilities exist for introducing properties from outside. Under S. 165 (2) an S.H.O., or investigating officer must if practicable search himself, if incapacitated, he must deliver to his subordinates an order in writing. A verbal order given on the spot is not legal. The search list is to be in duplicate with a trifoil, and copy to be forwarded to the Magistrate with case-diary and the other attached to the copy of the case diary forwarded to the District or sub-divisional officer. Orders Mad. Pol. Ch. XXV, pp. 69 and 70 The sending for shopkeepers selected arbitrarily by the police and making them witnesses to the search of houses of accused persons is a fruitful source of oppression and extortion. It is difficult to prescribe rules for the selection of witnesses to search houses for stolen property but District Superintendents can easily ascertain by questioning the witnesses sent in whether they have been unfairly selected. One respectable house-holder should not be selected a second time till his neighbours have had their turns unless good reason is given for their exemption. Respectable shopkeepers are just as liable to be summoned as other respectable inhabitants of this place, Beng. Pol. Man., p. 403.

E.—Miscellaneous.

Power to impound document, etc., produced.

104. Any Court may, if it thinks fit, impound any document or thing produced before it under this Code.

The section applies only when the document or thing is before the Magistrate in any proceeding before him. Where a Presidency Magistrate on a telegram from a District Magistrate to take possession of certain account books, called upon the person to produce them before him and when they were produced sent them to the District Magistrate, it was held that the Presidency Magistrate acted illegally and without jurisdiction, Ratanlal 680.

May impound document or thing produced before it.—A District Magistrate could not impound a document which has been produced in a pending case before a Subordinate Magistrate, 1 A.L.J. 607. A Magistrate can only conduct a search under this section when he is competent to issue a search-warrant under § 96, supra, but the issue of a search-warrant by an unauthorized Magistrate is not void, S. 529 (a), infra.

Magistrate may direct search in his presence. 105. Any Magistrate may direct a search to be made in his presence of any place for the search of which he is competent to issue a search-warrant.

See 39 C. 953 (P.C.) as to the scope of this section, and a Magistrate acting under this section is protected, as held by the Privy Council, by Act XVIII of 1850 (Protection of Judicial Officers). When the legislature empowers an officer to delegate an authority to do a certain act to another person it necessarily implies that the original authority to do the act fully and completely vests in the officer himself, but it is necessary for the exigencies of business that it should be done by persons acting under authority derived from him. This principle is adopted by the Legislature in S. 65 and this section, 31 B.438 at 445.

PART IV.

PREVENTION OF OFFENCES.

This Part is headed "Prevention of Offences" and does not provide punishment of offences already committed. It deals with steps to be taken to prevent offences in the future, 26 A.L.J. 813.

CHAPTER VIII.

OF SECURITY FOR KEEPING THE PEACE AND FOR GOOD BEHAVIOUR.

Scope and object of the chapter.—This chapter deals with preventive measures which are generally resorted to, to prevent a breach of the peace and to ensure good behaviour from bad characters. The object of the chapter is not the punishment of offences but the prevention of crime and it is clear that when there was no risk of crime being committed in any particular district by persons who were brought in custody from different places with a view to an enquiry in that district into offences alleged to have been committed by them in that district, it was never contemplated, that the Police should be at liberty to ask the Magistrate to exercise his preventive jurisdiction on failure to prove the specific offences charged, the persons being then within the Magistrate's jurisdiction. Much less can it be supposed that for the purpose of preventing the prisoners from being returned but detained in the lock-up pending enquiry for a lengthened period, the police could ask the Magistrate to institute proceedings on the same evidence which would afterwards be used to prove the specific offences charged with a view to their being required to furnish security and imprisoned on their failure to do so, 1885 P R. Cr. J. 43. The person proceeded against is required to enter into his own recognizance with or without sureties or with both. Security to keep the peace can be demanded (1) from a person actually convicted of an offence involving a breach of the peace, (2) or from a person likely to commit a breach of the peace. Security for good behaviour can be demanded (1) from a person disseminating seditious matter, (2) from vagrants and suspects, (3) from habitual offenders. The provisions are aimed at prevention not as a punishment for past offences. The person proceeded against is required to execute a bond with or without sureties for a definite period and so long as he keeps the peace or remains of good behaviour for the periods specified in the bond, he is safe from all molestation on the part of the authorities. If he fails to execute the bond, he renders himself liable to be imprisoned for his default but the moment he executes the bond, he is released from jail. The object of the chapter is therefore not to consign bad characters to jail but to prevent them from committing offences and to allay public apprehension, 16 Cr. L.J. 100—27 Ind. Cas. 148. Proceedings under this chapter are inquiries and not trials. All through the chapter the expression used is "inquiries." See S. 117 (2), infra. The expression "accused" is not defined in the Code. It is to be noted that nowhere in this chapter is a person called on to give security referred to as an accused person. In chapters dealing with trials and inquiries preliminary to commitment for trial the word "accused" is always used to denote the person proceeded against. Prima facie, then a person proceeded against under this chapter would not appear to be an accused person as used in the Code. In 23 C. 493 and 16 B. 661, the word "accused" was held to mean persons over whom a Magistrate or Court was exercising jurisdiction. This interpretation would lead to startling results. A witness compelled by a summons or warrant to appear in Court and give evidence, is clearly a person over whom the Court is exercising jurisdiction, and so a witness would be an accused person and no oath could be administered to him. The learned Judges in those cases were considering S. 340 infra and they decided nothing more. A person called on to give security cannot be said to be a person accused of an offence as defined in S. 4 (1) (c), supra. There exist grave doubts whether a person proceeded against under this chapter is an accused, 50 C. 485 at 487-90. See also S. 340 (2) infra which enacts that any person against whom proceedings are instituted under S. 107 may be examined as a witness, and this will show that the person proceeded against is not an accused person as understood in other portions of the Code. Imprisonment for failure to furnish security to keep the peace is to be simple whereas in good behaviour cases falling under S. 108 be simple but in cases falling under S. 109 or S. 110 infra it shall be rigorous or simple according as the Court in each case directs.

A.—Security for keeping the Peace on Conviction.

106. (1) Whenever any person accused of any offence punishable under Chapter VIII of the Indian Penal Code, other than an offence punishable under section 143, section 149, section 153A or section 154 thereof, or of assault or other offence involving a breach of the peace, or of abetting the same, or any person accused of committing criminal intimidation, is convicted of such offence before a High Court, a Court of Session or the Court of a Presidency Magistrate, a District Magistrate, a Sub-divisional Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class, and such Court is of opinion that it is necessary to require such person to execute a bond for keeping the peace, such Court may, at the time of passing sentence on such person, order him to execute a bond for a sum proportionate to his means, with or without sureties, for keeping the peace during such period, not exceeding three years, as it thinks fit to fix.

(2) If the conviction is set aside on appeal or otherwise, the bond so executed shall become void.

(3) An order under this section may also be made by an Appellate Court including a Court hearing appeals under section 407 or by the High Court when exercising its powers of revision.

Amendment—In sub-section (1) for the word 'rioting' the words 'any offence punishable under Chap. VIII of the I.P.C. other than S. 143, S. 144, S. 153A or S. 154, thereof' have been substituted thus enlarging the scope of the section and words in sub-section (1) "or assembling armed men or taking other unlawful measures with the evident intent of committing the same" have been omitted. In sub-section (3) "after Appellate Court" the words 'including a Court hearing appeals under S. 407' have been added.

Difference between the procedure under S. 106 and S. 107.—The foundation of an order under this section is the conviction and that under S. 107 is information. Both these sections aim at prevention of a breach of the peace. Under S. 106 the order can be passed on conviction for any of the offences specified in that section but under S. 107 proceedings must be taken, summons in the first instance being issued and evidence recorded as in summons cases (S. 117) to prove that the taking of the bond with or without sureties from accused person for preserving the peace is necessary. Again under S. 106 the Magistrate has already adjudicated on the evidence at the trial in the presence of the accused and facts are found for requiring security for keeping the peace from the accused but under S. 107 the Magistrate proceeds on information the value of which is to be tested in the presence of the accused who must have an opportunity of showing that it is not reliable. He should not form his opinion extrajudicially, 3 C.L.R. 72; 22 W.R. (Cr) 79.

Scope of the section.—This section applies when the offence amounts to or constitutes a breach of the peace, in other words when a breach of the peace is a component part or ingredient of the offence. The very fact that a man commits rioting or assaults constitutes a disorder a disturbance of the king's peace, general peace of the realm. The words "breach of the peace" are the antithesis of the other set of words also occurring in the section "keeping the peace" which connote preservation of the public peace and are direct opposites of the words "breaking the peace." The question in each case is, does the offence brought home to the accused necessarily include or imply a breach of the peace or does it constitute or amount to a breach of the peace. If it does the section applies, 47 M. 846 at 843. The Magistrate is given a wide discretion to proceed under this section but to justify an order, he must find it in clear and explicit terms that in committing the offence the accused also actually committed a breach of the peace or criminally intimidated the complainant or that he committed the offence for which he was convicted in such circumstances that he evidently intended to do so, 43 C. 671; 35 C. 315; 30 C. 13; 33 A. 771; 42 A. 345; 43 B. 554; Weir II, 47; 23 A.L.J. 1053=26 Cr.L.J. 1457=89 Ind.Cas. 1025. Persons against whom proceedings are started under this chapter are accused persons and have a right to be defended by a pleader and notices of the date of hearing should be given to them, 25 A. 376. But they are not accused of an offence and hence an order refusing bail to persons required to execute bonds for keeping the peace under this section is illegal, 7 M.L.T. 104 where 30 A. 334 is referred to. To act under this section without notice to parties concerned is incorrect procedure on general principles, 27 Cr. L.J. 1112=97 Ind. Cas. 424. Action under this section is uncalled for when the accused is convicted and sentenced to a long term of imprisonment say, for seven years, 10 Cr. L.J. 69 (F.B.) at 72=2 Ind. Cas. 531.

Any accused person.—These words are wide enough to include European British subjects also. See 35 C. 163.

Other offences involving a breach of the peace.—The expression "other offences" refers to offences ajusdem generis with the offences against public tranquillity and of assaults, etc., mentioned in this section, 47 M. 846; 23 A.L.J. 1053; 49 A. 131; 24 Cr. L.J. 271=71 Ind. Cas. 879. The words "breach of the peace" imply some offence against the public, 24 Cr. L.J. 461=72 Ind. Cas. 895. A superior Magistrate to whom a case is referred by a subordinate Magistrate being of opinion that an order under this section is necessary cannot merely pass an order under this section and send back the case for trial to a subordinate Magistrate, 24 Cr. L.J. 784=74 Ind. Cas. 443. No order can be passed under this section as amended, where an accused is only convicted of an offence under the Indian Penal Code read with S. 149, I.P.C. The amendment is not very happily worded for it speaks of an offence punishable under S. 149. No offence is punishable under S. 149 alone. There must be some substantive offence charged to be read with S. 149. So an order demanding security where a person was convicted under S. 325 read with S. 149, I.P.C., was set aside by the Patna High Court, 26 Cr. L.J. 426=85 Ind. Cas. 42; see 28 Cr. L.J. 144=99 Ind. Cas. 352 dissenting from, 24 Cr. L.J. 227=71 Ind. Cas. 691; where it was held that the expression clearly included the offence of causing hurt under S. 323, I.P.C., and a person convicted of causing hurt can be ordered to find security under this section, see also 49 A. 131. The words offences involving a breach of the peace in this section must be construed to mean offences into which a breach of the peace necessarily enters as a constituting element, 19 M.L.J. 66. The words "involve a breach of the peace" must receive their ordinary and natural meaning. A thing is involved in another when it is necessarily included or implied in it, 47 M. 846. The word "involve" connotes the inclusion not only of a necessary, but also a probable feature, circumstances antecedent, condition or consequence, 25 Cr. L.J. 71=75 Ind. Cas.=83. The words would probably be taken in their ordinary meaning to indicate an offence in which there had actually been and not in which there was, mere likelihood of there being a breach of the peace. The words "breach of the peace" have been given a wider interpretation, including even creating disturbance or excitement and falling far short of riot, 22 Bom. L.R. 166 at 182; 46 A. 105; 23 A.L.J. 1053; 44 M.L.J. 485=17 L.W. 499=(1923) M.W.N. 314=24 Cr. L.J. 455=72 Ind. Cas. 615; 24 Cr. L.J. 227=71 Ind. Cas. 691; 24 Cr. L.J. 319=72 Ind. Cas. 79. An offence merely provoking or likely to lead to a breach of the peace is not within this section. The offence must be one in which breach of the peace is a necessary ingredient, 26 M. 469, 47 M. 846; 30 C. 366; 43 C. 671; 29 C. 393; 35 C. 315; 29 M. 190; 2 Lah. 279; 27 Cr. L.J. 571=94 Ind. Cas. 139; 4 M.L.T. 468; 20 Cr. L.J. 543=51 Ind. Cas. 783 but the Allahabad High Court in 33 A. 771 dissented from the above view and held that where the offence is such, that it was as a matter of experience often followed by breaches of the peace, an order under this section was proper. A person who interferes with another's premises and uses violence to him and deprives him of his property commits a breach of the peace in the wider sense of the expression, 21 Cr. L.J. 288=55 Ind. Cas. 304; 43 B. 554. In 42 A. 345, it was held that a conviction for criminal trespass where the intent was to commit a breach of the peace, an order under this section may lawfully be passed. See also 20 W.R. (Cr.) 37, 7 W.R. (Cr.) 14, 7 C.W.N. 25. Criminal trespass into a man's house for causing bodily injury to him is an offence involving a breach of the peace and when a conviction is had for such an offence an order under this section is valid, 26 Cr. L.J. 1452=89 Ind. Cas. 1039, but where no such intention was found the trespass being with the object of having illicit intercourse with the complainant's wife, an order under this section was not legal, 23 C. 628; on a conviction for theft, unless it was found, that force was employed, or armed men were present, an order under this section cannot be made, 29 C. 393; 8 C.W.N. 517; wrongful confinement per se is not an offence involving a breach of the peace, e.g., locking up a room outside when a man is inside the room thus making ingress impossible. But if the accused in using violence seizes another and ties his hands the offence does involve a breach of the peace, 47 M. 846 where 30 M.L.T. 348 is not followed. See also 24 Cr. L.J. 271=71 Ind. Cas. 879; 4 M.L.T. 468; 29 M. 120; 7 W.R. (Cr.) 14; 20 W.R. (Cr.) 37; 7 C.W.N. 25. The expression is so illusive that it must of necessity attract different interpretations. The words cover two classes of cases—(1) where a breach of the peace actually occurs, (2) where the definition of the offence involves a breach of the peace, e.g., S. 504, I.P.C., 21 Bom. L.R. 270, 20 Cr. L.J. 543, 22 Bom. L.R. 166 at 178; 46 A. 105.

Is convicted of such offence.—A conviction is absolutely necessary before an order for security is passed. The conviction may be in a summary trial, 8 C.W.N. 517; 11 Cr. L.J. 630=8 Ind. Cas. 551. No order for security can be made where the accused is acquitted or discharged, 3 C.L.R. 72. A superior Magistrate to whom a case is sent to pass an order under this section cannot merely pass an order without convicting the accused but send back the case for trial to the subordinate Magistrate, 24 Cr. L.J. 734=74 Ind. Cas. 443. Under this section it is the offence for which a person is convicted and not the facts as put in evidence at the trial which determines whether security can be demanded or not, Weir 11, 43. There must be an express finding to the effect that the act attributed to the person was likely to cause a breach of the peace, or the evidence must be so clear as to satisfy the Court without an express finding that such was the case, 26 C. 576; 27 C. 283; 30 C. 93 and 366; 29 M. 190; 26 M. 469; 25 Cr. L.J. 1064=81 Ind. Cas. 893. Where at an election the accused and his companions beat a person who refused to vote for the accused and the Magistrate when convicting the accused for assault remarked that the accused appeared to be a very troublesome person and took security from him it was held that the order demanding security was legal although it was contended that there was no finding that there was an apprehension of a breach of the peace, 46 A. 105. To support an order under this section the Court must record as a condition precedent its grounds for demanding security. The mere fact that the accused is convicted of an offence involving a breach of the peace is not alone sufficient, 27 Cr. L.J. 1112=97 Ind. Cas. 424=1927 Pat. 37.

Sub-divisional Magistrate.—A Sub-divisional Magistrate may be a Magistrate of the second class in charge of a sub-division. See S. 13, supra. A Sub-divisional Magistrate of the second class has jurisdiction to pass an order under this section calling upon an accused to furnish security for a period exceeding six months independent of the powers of the Magistrate as provided in S. 32, supra, 5 Cr. L. Rev. 153=13 A.L.J. 268.

A Magistrate of the first class—A Bench of Magistrates of which one is a Magistrate of the first class can exercise powers under this section, 21 W.R. (Cr.) 12; 2 C.L.R. 348 at 349

Such Court may order.—Demanding security for keeping the peace is discretionary with the Magistrate provided he has materials upon which to proceed, 23 W.R. (Cr.) 58. It is necessary before an order can be made under this section that the party should have the opportunity of answering to an accusation of an offence of the kind upon a conviction for which such an order can be made. Where that requirement is not complied with, the order under this section cannot stand and must be set aside, 25 C. 828 at 630, 27 Cr. L.J. 1112=97 Ind. Cas. 424=1927 Pat. 37. When such opportunity is given, the accused may be able to show sufficient cause why he should not be bound over although he was unable to make a good defence against the charge. But the section is silent on this matter and it is desirable that there should be a provision for an opportunity to show cause similar to the provision in S. 250 infra.

Such Court when passing sentence order to execute bond.—An order for taking security under this section must be passed at the time of deciding the original case in the presence of the accused and no notice to show cause why such an order should not be passed is necessary, 21 A.L.J. 839=25 Cr. L.J. 565=81 Ind. Cas. 613. If no such order is then made, subsequent proceedings should be under S. 107, infra, after giving the person an opportunity to show cause, 15 W.R. (Cr.) 56; 21 A.L.J. 839=25 Cr. L.J. 565=81 Ind. Cas. 613. The order for security must be passed in the presence of the accused, and any order passed during his absence is illegal, 3 B.H.C.R. (Cr. Ca.) 1. S. 513 infra provides that in lieu of executing a bond, money or Government Promissory-note may be deposited, but in cases where security for good behaviour is demanded, the section expressly says that such deposit shall not be made.

When conviction is set aside the bond shall become void.—When the conviction is annulled on appeal or otherwise, the order directing the person to find security abates ipso facto, and it is not competent for the Appellate Court to order the security to be continued, 1895 A.W.N. 14; 31 C. 101; 7 N.W.P.H.C.R. 375.

For a sum proportionate to his means.—In fixing the amount of security the Magistrate should consider the station in life of the person concerned and should not go beyond the sum for which there is a fair probability of his being able to find security. The individual should be afforded a fair chance at least of complying with the required condition of security, 4 M.H.C.R. (Appx.) 46; 2 C. 384; 16 B. 372; 23 A. 80. The Magistrate should look to the means of the person called upon to furnish security, not to the means of his master, 22 W.R. (Cr.) 74. A demand for unreasonably heavy security may result in a heavy pecuniary fine in a case of mere suspicion and reputation as the accused might have to pay heavy sums to obtain security, 6 C. 14; 16 B. 372.

Order may be made by Appellate Court including a Court hearing Appeals under S. 407.—The words 'Appellate Court' include Appellate Court other than the High Court, 2 Cr. L.J. 150. The words "including a Court hearing appeals under S. 407" are new. It has been held that an Appellate Court cannot pass an order under this section unless the person convicted has been sentenced by a Court not inferior to that of Magistrate of the first class, see 23 Cr. L.J. 457=67 Ind. Cas. 729. "This result does not appear to have been intended, and it is proposed to remove the restriction"—St. of Obj. and Reas., 35 C. 434; 29 M. 150; 30 M. 43; 24 Cr. L.J. 308=72 Ind. Cas. 68, are no longer law. The amendment is in accordance with the decisions in 33 B. 33; 37 M. 153 (F.B.) and 33 A. 48; 2 Pat. L.J. 21=(1917) Pat. 57. See also 27 Cr. L.J. 1112=97 Ind. Cas. 424 following 2 P.L.R. 21. The power of the Appellate Court is not limited by the fact that the trial Court should have power to take security, 25 Cr. L.J. 657=81 Ind. Cas. 145. The power can be exercised by the Appellate Court even though the actual order was not made when confirming in appeal the sentence already passed by the Magistrate. There is nothing in the section to limit the time when the order can be made by the Appellate Court, so long as it is acting in fact as an Appellate Court, 30 Bom. L.R. 373=29 Cr. L.J. 502=109 Ind. Cas. 230 following 33 B. 33. But when the District Magistrate did not try a case as a Court of appeal, he had no jurisdiction to demand security, 16 A.L.J. 538. The exercise by the Appellate Court of the power under sub-section (3) of this section requiring the appellant to find security to keep the peace after the expiry of the sentence will not amount to an enhancement of the sentence, 2 Cr. L.J. 190; 20 Cr. L.J. 760, and by virtue of S. 423, cl. (1) (d) an Appellate Court has power to set aside an order for security under this section even while upholding the conviction, 30 C. 101; but to enable the Appellate Court to do so, the substantive sentence must be appealable without taking into account the order under this section or S. 415, infra. In the absence of a finding that any breach of the peace had occurred, an Appellate Court has no power to direct the accused to enter into a bond under this section, 30 M.L.T. 348. But this view is not followed in 47 M. 846. In an appeal from a conviction under Ss. 147 and 325, I.P.O., the sentences being ordered to run consecutively the Appellate Court while ordering the sentence to run concurrently passed an order binding the accused to keep the peace for 8 years, it was held that such an order was valid under this section, 20 Cr. L.J. 302=50 Ind. Cas. 350.

Appeal.—No appeal lies from an order demanding security under this section; when the conviction is set aside the bond shall become void, see sub-section (2). Even when a conviction is confirmed on appeal, the order under this section may be set aside by the Appellate Court, 30 C. 101; See also 10 Cr. L.J. 69 (F.B.) at 72=2 Ind. Cas. 531.

For form of bond see Sch. V, No. 10 infra. No Court-fee is payable on security bonds under this chapter. If any Magistrate not being empowered by law demands security to keep the peace, his proceedings shall be void, S. 530, cl. (c), infra.

An order under this section may be made on conviction in a summary trial, 1880 A.W.N. 181, and a Bench of Magistrates invested with first class powers under S. 15, supra is competent to make an order under this section, 21 W.R. (Cr.) 12; 2 C.L.R. 348 at 349. The contention that in a summary trial and conviction Court has no power to award under S. 123 infra more than three months' imprisonment in default, and so the Court cannot act under this section in a summary trial was not accepted in 53 M.L.J. 762=1927 M.W.N. 788=39 M.L.T. 658. An order demanding security under this section is uncalled for when a sentence of imprisonment or transportation for so long a term as seven years is passed when convicting the accused, 10 Cr. L.J. 69 (F.B.) at 72=2 Ind. Cas. 531.

B.—Security for keeping the Peace in other Cases and Security for Good Behaviour.

107. (1) Whenever a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class is informed that any person is likely to commit a breach of the peace or disturb the public

Security for keeping the peace in other cases, tranquillity, or to do any wrongful act that may probably occasion a breach of the peace, or disturb the public tranquillity, the Magistrate if in his opinion there is sufficient ground for proceeding, may in manner hereinafter provided, require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with or without sureties, for keeping the peace for such period not exceeding one year as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix.

(2) Proceedings shall not be taken under this section unless either the person informed against or the place where the breach of the peace or disturbance is apprehended is within the local limits of such Magistrate's jurisdiction, and no proceedings shall be taken before any Magistrate, other than a Chief Presidency or District Magistrate, unless both the person informed against, and the place where the breach of the peace or disturbance is apprehended, are within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction.

(3) When any Magistrate not empowered to proceed under sub-section (1) has reason to believe that any person is likely to commit a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity or to do any wrongful act that may probably occasion a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity, and that such breach of the peace or disturbance cannot be prevented otherwise than by detaining such person in custody, such Magistrate may, after recording his reasons, issue a warrant for his arrest (if he is not already in custody or before the Court), and may send him before a Magistrate empowered to deal with the case, together with a copy of his reasons.

(4) A Magistrate before whom a person is sent under sub-section (3) may in his discretion detain such person in custody pending further action by himself under this chapter.

Amendment.—The words until the completion of the inquiry herein prescribed have been omitted in sub section (4) as it was thought that the powers conferred by the sub-section as it stood was unnecessarily wide. The Magistrates are now given power to detain the accused in custody pending further action by him under this chapter.

Scope and object of the section—Proceedings under this section are intended to be precautionary and not punitive. The object of the section is not to punish persons for anything they have done in the past but to prevent them from doing in future something that may probably occasion a breach of the peace, 9 C.W.N. 898 at 908, 31 C. 359; 35 C. 674; 26 A. L. J. 813, 36 M. 315. Thus the object of the order for furnishing security is the prevention of crime and not to secure imprisonment of the person concerned, 22 Bom. L. R. 190, 16 Bom. L. R. 138; 1 C. L. J. 616; 3 C. L. R. 72, 23 Cr. L. J. 1226—82 Ind. Cas. 154. A petition under this section contemplates merely an apprehension that an offence is likely to be committed and not the commission of an offence and the power to refer the matter to the police under S. 161 may not apply as Chap. XIV of the Code relates to information as to the commission of a cognizable offence. It is possible to argue that the words "any offence relating to the dropped, such proceedings not being a case where a person is accused of an offence 1903, P.L.R. (Cr.J) 9 at page 32; 28 Cr.L.J. 604-102 Ind. Cas. 780 where 45 A. 363 is followed.

Whenever a Magistrate is informed.—The report of a Sub-Magistrate is sufficient "information" to authorize the Magistrate to act under this section. 8 114 proviso also shows that the report of a police-officer is information on which a Magistrate could act upon, 2 M.H.C.R. 240 at 242. Credible information is necessary to take action, 12 A.L.J. 336. It is not necessary to call witnesses in support of an information laid before a Magistrate previous to issuing summons to show cause under this section, 11 W.R. (Cr.) 6. A statement by complainant believed by the Magistrate that he expected the person informed against at any time to make an attempt on his person or property is sufficient information; 7 W.R. (Cr.) 30; 17 C.W.N. 238, but there must be something more than a bare possibility, a reasonable likelihood of a breach of the peace taking place, 20 W.R. (Cr.) 57. Information must be clear and definite directly affecting the person to be proceeded against, and should disclose tangible facts and details so as to afford notice to such person what he is to come prepared to meet, 6 A. 26 (F.B.); the nature of the information on which the Magistrate acts must appear on the face of the preliminary order, 6 W.R. (Cr.) 13. Facts and information which formed the subject of a previous enquiry and in which the accused were discharged cannot be relied on for initiating proceedings. There must be fresh materials available on which it can be said that a fresh apprehension of a breach of the peace is likely. The same facts cannot form the basis of repeated proceedings under the Penal Code or under this Code, 41 M. 246. A Subordinate Magistrate should not draw up proceedings merely because the District Magistrate has ordered him to do so. He must use his discretion and if he thinks that it is necessary to do so to prevent a breach of the peace he is entitled to draw up proceedings. If a District Magistrate apprehended a breach of the peace, it is his duty to draw up proceedings and then transfer the case for inquiry to a Subordinate Magistrate, 24 Cr. L.J. 367=72 Ind. Cas. 357.

Is likely to commit a breach of the peace—It is clear that there are two distinct sets of circumstances in which a Magistrate may take action (a) where it appears that a person is anticipated is a wrongful act. It has been laid down by the various High Courts that the section does not authorize action against a person who is expected to do an act which may cause a breach of the peace unless the act is wrongful and the mere fact that the doing of a lawful act may lead to a breach of the peace while it may authorize the Magistrate to take action against persons expected to commit that breach, does not authorize action against those intending to do the lawful act, unless they themselves are likely to commit a breach of the peace, 18 Cr.L.J. 512 at 514-39 Ind. Cas. 480 where 12 C.W.N. 703=7 Cr. L.J. 504; 32 A. 571; 6 M. 203 are referred to. This section presupposes that the person sought to be proceeded against is likely (not was likely) to commit a breach of the peace, and it cannot be presumed from the fact that the person has done a wrongful act in the past he is likely to do the same again, 6 Bom L.R. 663, 26 A. 150 at 153; 28 Cr.L.J. 719=103 Ind. Cas. 607. Again, a hasty speech likely to cause a breach of the peace does not justify an order under this section against the speaker when all fear of a breach of the peace ceases before the order is made, 7 Cr. L.J. 232. Security cannot be demanded in anticipation of a breach of the peace, 3 C.L.R. 280, 7 A.L.J. 1161, 32 A. 571, 38 A. 468; 37 A. 33, 14 A.L.J. 769; the act of which information is given to a Magistrate and in respect of which security is required must be an act which is shown to be in contemplation at the time when information is given and not merely a repetition which may be expected or apprehended from some misconduct of the kind without anything further, Weir II, 49; 24 Cr. L.J. 230=71 Ind. Cas. 694. See 26 A. 180. Where it was held that on order binding over certain persons with a view to prevent the possibility of their creating a disturbance at the next recurrence of an annually recurring festival was held to be bad. See also 6 Bom. L.R. 663; 8 A.L.J. 1080. Nor can an order be passed under this section merely on the ground that there was enmity between two parties, 1 A.L.J. 418=29 Cr. L.J. 417=108 Ind. Cas. 517. The fact that the accused is found to be quarrelsome and fights and quarrels with everybody is not sufficient indication of a breach of the peace. Nor can arranging defence of property with the help of the police be held to be an act likely to cause a breach of the peace, 18 A.L.J. 157. Where there is no evidence of the persons proceeded against having committed any overt act, the mere expression of opinion by some persons that there is an apprehension of the breach of the peace and the parties should be bound over is insufficient to sustain an order under this section, 27 Cr. L.J. 1002=96 Ind. Cas. 7859 following 32 A 571. A mere bombast will not justify an order under this section, 9 M.L.T. 271=12 Cr. L.J. 104. A Magistrate must keep out knowledge obtained outside record, and base his decision entirely on the evidence in the case and must also find that the persons proceeded against are likely to commit a breach of the peace, 12 A.L.J. 1246. Evidence as to acts committed in the past may be brought forward to show that while the conditions remain unchanged similar acts may be committed in the future, 1 C.L.J. 616.

To do any wrongful Act.—The expression "wrongful act" was inserted in the 1892 Code. It is now expressly declared that the act which may probably occasion a breach of the peace must be some wrongful act. The expression means an act forbidden by the penal statutes of India or declared to be penal and wrongful by such statutes, 21 Cr. L.J. 433=56 Ind. Cas. 437. When a party exercising its right in a lawful manner the opposite party is provoked to commit a breach of the peace the party exercising lawful rights cannot be said to be doing a wrongful act liable to be bound over under this section, 8 Lah. 98; 7 Lah. 782; 23 Cr. L.J. 603=102 Ind. Cas. 781; 27 Cr. L.J. 1002=96 Ind. Cas. 858; 21 Cr. L.J. 651=57 Ind. Cas. 667; 12 C.W.N. 703=7 Cr. L.J. 504; 18 Cr. L.J. 512=39 Ind. Cas. 480; 14 M.L.J. 431. Persons combining together to prevent the Desai from recovering his rents and retaining possession of lands which the tenants have given up is not a wrongful act within this section; as also raising subscriptions to petition Government and advising standing security for tenants, 6 Bom. L.R. 663. From the mere fact that the persons proceeded against, viz., tenants were boycotting the servants of the Zemindar it cannot be held that the tenants have done any act likely to cause a breach of the peace necessitating the demanding of security under this section, 14 Cr. L.J. 238=99 Ind. Cas. 334. There can be no question that the right of public discussion is a right which every subject possesses and that in convening a meeting to discuss religious matters, the persons convening such meeting cannot be held to be doing a wrongful act, 18 Cr. L.J. 512 at 514=39 Ind. Cas. 480. The action of a party insisting upon their rights to take a procession along a certain road which was objected by a rival party cannot be said to be a wrongful act within this section, 12 C.W.N. 703=7 Cr. L.J. 504. The mere fact that a person from whom security is demanded has been previously convicted of offences against property will not justify proceedings being taken under this section. There must be evidence that he has done some wrongful act indicating an intention to lapse to his former course of life, 10 B. 174; 12 C. 520. Lawful acts done in a lawful manner cannot be the basis of proceedings under this section even when they are likely to induce others to commit a breach of the peace. Cow-killing by a Mahomedan is not illegal. But it may induce Hindus to break the peace; unless any such act amounts to a public nuisance or is obnoxious to the rules and regulations lawfully promulgated, this section cannot apply, 30 A. 181. Thus when a person who is rightfully entitled to land, wrongfully kept out of possession granted leases of it and the lessees tried to take possession peacefully and not accompanied by force or violence, it does not itself justify an order under this section, 25 C. 793, 7 Cr. L.J. 504; 16 A.L.J. 279, similarly when the accused used his influence to boycott complainant, 7 C.W.N. 32; 3 C.W.N. 463 or when an accused after joining the congregation service in a mosque not set apart for any particular section, in the bona fide performance of his devotion calls 'Amen' in a loud tone so as to lead other worshippers to break the peace, 13 A. 419 (F.B.); 9 A 432; 7 A 461 (F.B.); 12 A. 491 (F.B.). But where persons performing a religious ceremony on lands in their occupation but not set apart for that purpose with the deliberate intention of triumphing over, insulting and wounding the religious feelings of their neighbours they were held to have committed wrongful acts within this section, 33 A. 775. The blowing of a conch in a public place for one's personal amusement, or with any other lawful and innocent motive and without any intention of thereby annoying or hurting the religious feelings of any other persons is not a wrongful act within this section. The blowing of a conch in connection with ceremonial acts of worship, in accordance with established usage in a place fixed for the occasional or periodical performance of such ceremonies or worship, will not as a rule be wrongful act, even though there may be persons within hearing of the sound who find their religious feelings hurt in consequence, 33 A. 775 at 777. A person who asserts a claim and makes preparations for the enforcement of that claim through a servant who goes continuously armed though he keeps himself in the back ground does a wrongful act, 18 Cr. L.J. 374=38 Ind. Cas. 738=1 Pat. L.J. 361. So also a person by doing a wrongful act induces another to do things probably occasioning a breach of the peace will be equally liable to be dealt with under this section, 32 C.W.N. 477 at 490=47 C.L.J. 444 at 447=29 Cr. L.J. 844=111 Ind. Cas. 356. A wrongful act means a definite wrongful act which may occasion a breach of peace. An act however wrongful would not justify action unless it is shown that if it is committed it would in all reasonable probability lead to a disturbance, 7 C.W.N. 32; 6 Bom. L.R. 262; 9 A. 452. The following are some instances of wrongful acts within this section, (1) Building a side-wall upon one's own land, the droppings from the roof of the building when completed, will likely fall on the thatch of the neighbour's house, 19 W.R. (Cr.) 47, (2) Granting lease to tenants of land not in one's possession, 25 C. 728, (3) Using one's influence to stop the service of village barber, washerman, and others to another villager, 7 C.W.N. 32, (4) Uttering 'Amen' in a loud voice during service in a mosque, 7 A. 461 (F.B.) 1902 P.R. (Cr.) 15, (5) Singing ballads in the public street, 1889 P.R. (Cr.) 15, See 34 C. 935 and 12 C.W.N. 703 where it was held that the provisions of this section should not be used to curtail private right of property and the party exercising a legal right should always be protected. See also 1881 A.W.N. 57; 3 C.W.N. 463. A person bound over is entitled to have his right enforced through a Civil Court, 1 Lah. 310. Where there is a dispute about land likely to cause a breach of the peace before the Civil Court passes a decision, action can be taken under this section in a proper case to prevent public danger, 28 Bom. L.R. 488=27 Cr. L.J. 734=95 Ind. Cas. 62.

In manner hereinafter provided.—It has been held times without number that the Magistrate should hold an independent inquiry and should not act on the mere readiness of the accused person to furnish security, 24 A.L.J. 317=27 Cr. L.J. 370=92 Ind. Cas. 882, where 37 A. 30; 54 Ind. Cas. 411 and 784 are followed. He must first make an order under S. 112 infra and call upon the person to show cause and if the order calling upon accused is vague, the proceedings are illegal, 41 M. 246; 25 Cr. L.J. 89, 47 M.L.J. 689=(1925) M.W.N. 57=26 Cr. L.J. 673=86 Ind. Cas. 49. The power to take action under this section is discretionary and there is no compulsion on the part of the Magistrate to proceed under this section.

Magistrate to proceed under this section, 2 M.H.C.R. 240; 31 C. 350, but if unsupported by other evidence it cannot form the proper basis for a final order under S. 118, infra, 6 B.H.C.R. (C-1) 1-5 B.H.C.P. (C-1) 45. A notice issued with reference to S. 112 (1) is not valid.

In this section rendering the subsequent proceedings null and void, 30 M. 282.

Require such person to show cause.—Notice should be given to the person against whom the order is to be made and should specify the particular conduct on his part which is complained of. When such notice was given and the ground of complaint specified in the notice was found by the Magistrate to be unsustainable, the Magistrate could not pass an order on a different ground, 21 W.R. (Cr.) 6. No person can be bound down under this section without any evidence being recorded as to the likelihood of a breach of the peace taking place even though he may consent to be bound over, 25 C. 674, 34 M. 139; 21 Cr. L.J. 176 and 59; 25 Cr. L.J. 710=81 Ind. Cas. 168; 37 A. 30. The statement of the person in answer to the notice to show cause why he should not be bound over to the effect that he is not a quarrelsome person but he is willing to furnish the security demanded would not justify an order without recording evidence, 21 Cr. L.J. 656=57 Ind. Cas. 67. See also 21 Cr. L.J. 59=54 Ind. Cas. 411; 26 Cr. L.J. 105=83 Ind. Cas. 669; 18 Cr. L.J. 847=41 Ind. Cas. 671. But where after due inquiry and notice, a free consent amounting to a plea of guilty has been given the Court may act on such consent and pass an order under this section, 46 A. 109. When an accused is called upon to furnish security says in terms that no prosecution evidence may be recorded and he is willing to furnish security it is sufficient proof that he should execute a bond for keeping the peace. When the accused appears in Court and expresses his willingness to enter into a bond and the Magistrate without recording evidence takes his statement in his own words and ordered him to execute bonds the procedure adopted is proper and legal and there was full enquiry as laid down in 8 117 Infra 25 A.L.J. 819; referring 21 A.L.J. 881; 46 Ind. Cas. 415; 24 A.L.J. 317; 37 A. 30; 35 C 674; 30 M. 330. Looking at the matter independently of the authorities all that is necessary to protect the interest of the members of the public who may be summoned, is to make it clear that the Magistrate must be satisfied that the person summoned understands the proceedings and that he is at liberty to show any cause if he wishes to do so, 50 A. 59 at 602. Courts are bound to give a reasonable interpretation to the language of the section. The language of this section puts upon the Magistrate the duty of making up his mind whether further evidence is necessary or not. It is unreasonable to say that he has a statutory duty to take further evidence if he does not consider it necessary and it is equally unreasonable to hold that he is wrong in considering further evidence unnecessary if he has made the person summoned understand what the enquiry is about and has given him an opportunity to show cause if he wants to do so. When the person proceeded against having the contents of the notice issued under this section, based on the information by the police, which he was at liberty to consider or dispute, on being asked whether he had any objection to execute a bond in accordance with the notice, stated that he had no surety and a bond for a reduced amount may be accepted from him, it was held that the procedure adopted in taking security from him without recording evidence was quite proper and reasonable and no objection statutory or in commonsense can seriously be taken against it, 50 A. 599 at 603 following 46 A. 109 and referring to 34 M. 139; 21 Cr. L.J. 176=54 Ind. Cas. 784. See 30 M. 330, where it was held that an order made on the statement of the accused's vakil without formal evidence being recorded was bad. See also 12 A.L.J. 124 and 23 Cr. L.J. 175=65 Ind. Cas. 639; 25 Cr. L.J. 750. The expression any person within the local limits means any person within the local limits at the time the Magistrate takes action. To give jurisdiction to a Magistrate it is not necessary that the person should be residing within the local limits. A contrary view would defeat the object of the section, viz., to prevent crime, as it would be impossible to deal with wandering gangs of criminals with no fixed residence or with habitual thieves or with desperate characters of foreign territories who infest British India, 36 M. 96; 14 A.L.J. 1074; 14 Bom. L.R. 889; contra 27 C. 393. There is no legal prohibition in trying a number of persons together under this section but it is highly unfair and unjust to proceed against them jointly unless they apparently form a gang; ordinarily the case of each person should be considered separately, 21 A.L.J. 881=23 Cr. L.J. 741=69 Ind. Cas. 620.

Scope of sub-section (2).—This sub-section requires that when proceedings are initiated by the District Magistrate, both the person informed against and the place where breach of the peace is apprehended shall be within the Magistrate's jurisdiction. Where no objection as to jurisdiction was raised before the Magistrate and no prejudice is shown to have been caused the irregularity is cured by S. 531 infra, 27 Cr. L.J. 1132=57 Ind. Cas. 652. This sub-section does not authorize a Magistrate to bind over a person not residing within the limits of his district; were it otherwise, a Magistrate in one district may take recognizance from a person in any other part of British India in which this Code is in force and vice versa. Moreover a person summoned into one district from another, might be subjected to unnecessary expense and inconvenience in obtaining sureties from the District in which he resides, to say nothing of the cost of witnesses he might wish to bring thence, to show that the information given to the Magistrate was incorrect or untrue and that he was not liable to be called upon for recognizance, 6 A. 26 (F.B.); 23 B. 32; 14 Bom. L.R. 889; 14 A. 49. The proper course for a Magistrate to pursue, when he believes that some persons resident beyond the limits of his district are likely to commit a breach of the peace within his district, is to cause the information of the fact to be given to the Magistrate within whose district such persons reside and to produce evidence in support of his view in order that proceedings may be taken against them in a Court having jurisdiction, 11 C. 737 but in 23 Cr. L.J. 396, it was held that the Magistrate has jurisdiction if breach of the peace is apprehended within the local limits of his jurisdiction from a person residing outside the local limits but such a power should be exercised very carefully, 12 C. 133. See also 31 C. 350 and 13 C.W.N. 580. If during the temporary residence an accused commits acts likely to cause a breach of the peace, a Magistrate has jurisdiction, 24 C. 344; 31 C. 419.

Exception is made in the case of the Chief Presidency Magistrate and the District Magistrate who could take proceedings against a person outside their jurisdiction investigating a breach of the peace within their jurisdiction. The object of this clause is merely to restrict the initiation of proceedings against persons residing outside a district and not to restrict the power of the District Magistrate to transfer such proceedings to a Subordinate Magistrate after initiation, 31 C. 350; 24 A. 151; 22 C. 858; 27 C.L.J. 314. But even at the direction of a District Magistrate, a Subordinate Magistrate has no jurisdiction to draw up proceedings under this section against one who resides outside the local limits; in such a case the District Magistrate must initiate proceedings, 13 C.W.N. 530. S. 351, infra, applies to an inquiry under this section and the person proceeded against is entitled to a de novo inquiry on the transfer of the Magistrate, 43 M. 511.

But a District Magistrate has no power to make over the initiation of proceedings in a case under this section to a Magistrate who has no local jurisdiction in the matter and the latter Magistrate acquires no jurisdiction by the transfer to him, and his proceeding will be void. A District Magistrate cannot be said to take cognizance of a case under this section, in which he had not issued notice to the person proceeded against, and he has no power under S. 192, infra, to transfer such a case to another Magistrate. A District Magistrate is not entitled to initiate proceedings under this section upon facts and information which have already been subject of inquiry under the section, or in connection with charges under the Penal Code brought against the person proceeded against and have ended in a discharge, 41 M. 246.

Power of Magistrate not empowered under sub-section (1).—The power to proceed under sub-section (3) ought to be used with great caution; unlike sub-section (1) where we find the expression "is informed..." we find here "has reason to believe." See B. 26 I. P. C.

Sub-section (3).—Where a Magistrate is not himself competent to take action under this section but has to forward the case to a Magistrate empowered to act, under this section, he can if there is an immediate likelihood of a breach of the peace send the accused under arrest and the Magistrate to whom the accused is sent may in his discretion keep him under arrest under sub-section (4). See B. 530 (c) which enacts that if a Magistrate not being empowered to demand security to keep the peace his proceedings are void.

Scope of sub-section (4).—See the amendment of the last portion of this sub-section. A Magistrate has now power only to detain in custody pending further action by him under this chapter. In 31 M. 315 (F.B.) it was held that where an accused person is sent before the District Magistrate by any other Magistrate under sub-section (3) so as to bring the case under this sub-section, such District Magistrate's order detaining him in custody was one made without jurisdiction. The sub-section can only be put into operation when a Magistrate is not empowered to act under sub-section (1) is led to believe that a person is likely to cause a breach of the peace, etc., and he cannot by any other means prevent it. Then he has power to arrest and send him to the Magistrate empowered to act under this section, 23 Cr. L.J. 825—74 Ind. Cas. 857 where 31 M. 315 and 32 C. 80 are followed. This sub-section is not controlled by S. 496, infra, but it makes an exception to the general rule contained in S. 496, which enacts that bail should be given in all bailable offences, 38 M. 315. The new proviso to S. 496 makes this clear, See 36 M. 474. Reading this sub-section and sub-section (3) of S. 114 with S. 496 infra it is clear that an accused person is entitled to be released on bail for his appearance unless detention in custody pending the inquiry is the only way to prevent immediate breach of the peace. See 1 C.L.R. 130; 6 A. 132; 14 A. 45; 32 C. 80

Appeal and revision.—An appeal is now provided for in cases of security to keep the peace as well as in cases of good behaviour by S. 406, infra. Although the person is not convicted of an offence, but only bound over under this section, the Appellate Court, when hearing an appeal under S. 406 infra, is competent to order a retrial as the order for retrial in such a case is an incidental order which the Appellate Court is empowered to make under S. 423, supra, 48 A. 501. Under S. 125, infra, a Chief Presidency Magistrate or a District Magistrate, may for sufficient reasons to be recorded in writing cancel a bond taken under this section by any Magistrate in his district not superior to his Court. No Letters Patent Appeal lies under S. 15 of the Letters Patent from an order passed in revision, as the proceedings under this section are proceedings in a "Criminal trial" within the meaning of the Letters Patent, 27 M. 510; 28 M.L.J. 307. A proceeding under this section does not terminate in an acquittal or discharge of the accused, 36 M. 315 following 33 M. 85 and 27 C. 662. The High Court ordinarily will not interfere in the preliminary stage of the proceedings with the discretion of the Magistrates taking action under the preventive sections such as this section and S. 110, infra. But where the materials on which the order is based are clearly insufficient to support it, it will interfere, 38 C.L.J. 193; 17 C.W.N. 238=16 C.L.J. 467; 23 Cr. L.J. 741; 41 M. 246.

Further inquiry.—Under this section if a Magistrate responsible for the peace of his division is not satisfied with the advisability of taking proceedings under this section his discretion is not open to interference by a superior Court, 26 Cr. L.J. 1149=81 Ind. Cas. 973; 24 Cr. L.J. 825=74 Ind. Cas. 857, 11 C.W.N. 121 and 415. Where a Magistrate refuses to take proceedings under this section, a Session Judge has no jurisdiction to set aside the order and direct the Magistrate to draw up proceedings under this section, 25 Cr. L.J. 679=81 Ind. Cas. 167, see also 46 A. 235 where it was held that proceedings under this section are not included within the provisions of S. 436, infra, and so cannot be revised by a District Magistrate, and the proper procedure for him is to report the result of his examination of the record to the High Court, see also 2 Ran. 30. The change in the wording of S. 436, infra, makes this position quite clear. "Any accused person" has been changed into "any person accused of any offence" and this removes the doubt, if any, which existed before and no further inquiry can now be made. In 33 M. 83 it was held after a full consideration of the various provisions of the Code that a person proceeded against under this section is not an accused person and the order under S. 119, infra, is not an order of discharge within the meaning of S. 436, infra, see also 27 C. 662, under S. 436 infra as amended, a District Magistrate has no jurisdiction to revise an order under S. 119 supra discharging a person who was called upon to furnish security. The conflict of authority which existed before 1923 has been removed now and the view expressed in 33 M. 83 has been adopted by the Legislature, 51 A. 408. In 36 A. 382 it was held that a person against whom information has been laid under this section is not a "person accused of any offence" within S. 4 (1) (c), supra and no order for compensation under S. 250, infra, could be passed against the person who petitioned the Magistrate under this section, but the District Magistrate may examine the record of the proceedings and if he finds that an improper order has been passed he may submit the case to the High Court for the exercise of its revisional power, 35 A. 103 see also 44 A. 691; 46 A. 235. S. 250 does not apply to cases where proceedings under this section are instituted at the instance of private persons and in which the accused are discharged, 20 A.L.J. 624 following 7 A.L.J. 743 and 15 A. 365, see also 36 A. 382; 25 B. 43.

108. Whenever a Chief Presidency or District Magistrate, or a Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class specially empowered by the Local Government in this behalf, has information that there is within the limits of his jurisdiction any person who,

Security for good behaviour from persons disseminating seditious matter.

within or without such limits, either orally or in writing or in any other manner intentionally disseminates or attempts to disseminate, or in anywise abets the dissemination of—

(a) any seditious matter, that is to say, any matter the publication of which is punishable under section 124A of the Indian Penal Code, or

(b) any matter the publication of which is punishable under section 153A of the Indian Penal Code, or

(c) any matter concerning a Judge which amounts to criminal intimidation or defamation under the Indian Penal Code, such Magistrate if in his opinion there is sufficient ground for proceeding may (in manner hereinafter provided) require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with or without sureties, for his good behaviour for such period, not exceeding one year, as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix.

No proceedings shall be taken under this section against the editor, proprietor, printer or publisher of any publication registered under, and edited and printed and published in conformity with, the rules laid down in the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867, with reference to any matter contained in such publication except by the order or under the authority of the Governor General in Council or the Local Government or some officer empowered by the Governor General in Council in this behalf.

Scope of the section—This part is headed prevention of offences. It does not provide for punishment of offences already committed, 26 A.L.J. 813. The object of taking security is prevention and not the punishment of offences, 2 A. 835; 3 M. 238; 35 M. 96 at 97; 10 B. 174; 4 C.W.N. 531; 6 Bom. L.R. 34; 27 C. 781. The object is not to punish a person who is suspected for past unproved offences but to prevent him from committing offences and to afford him an opportunity of reforming himself, 25 Cr. L.J. 1226=82 Ind. Cas. 154. To start proceedings under this section there ought to be evidence that, if not prevented, the person accused would continue to act in the way in which he had done, 26 A.L.J. 813 at 816. The provisions of this Chapter are aimed against those who are a danger to the public by reason of the commission, by them of certain offences against the State. The test under this section is whether the person proceeded against has been disseminating seditious matter and whether there is any fear of a repetition of such an offence. In each case it is a question of fact which must be determined with reference to the antecedents of the person and other surrounding circumstances. A printer must be proved to have had knowledge of the matter but a publisher's knowledge is presumed, 47 B. 438; 11 Bom. L.R. 743; see also 11 C.W.N. 1050; 12 Cr. L.J. 243=10 Ind. Cas. 789. It is not sufficient to show that the language used was highly offensive to a community. It must be shown that the accused intended to provoke feelings of enmity or hatred although it is unnecessary that he should have succeeded in carrying through his intention, 12 Cr. L.J. 243=10 Ind. Cas. 789. Proceedings under this section for the prevention of offences under S. 124A or S. 153A may be taken without any such special sanction required by S. 196, infra, except in respect of proceedings against the editor or proprietor of any publication specified in the last para. of this section. 11 Bom. L.R. 743. Where substantive offences are committed, the law does not provide for an easy way of dealing with them under this Chapter by taking security from the offender, 26 A.L.J. 813 at 814.

Orally or in writing or in any other manner.—"It has been found that the matters covered by S. 108 have been disseminated either orally or in writing or by gramophone records, and the amendment meets this contingency."—St. of Obj. and Reasons.

Disseminates or attempts to disseminate.—The words are "disseminates or attempts to disseminate" and they do not cover a single act on the part of the person proceeded against in which case the words would have been "has disseminated or has attempted to disseminate". If analogy of other sections of this Chapter were applied to bind a person over under S. 110 infra a single theft would be insufficient; so also a single beating given by one person to another would hardly be sufficient to bind him over under S. 107 supra, 26 A.L.J. 813 at 814.

Sub-section (b).—To justify an order under this clause one has only to find that there are words in the leaflet or in the matter complained of which are likely to provoke feelings of enmity and hatred, and there is no necessity for finding an intention if one finds such words present unlike a trial for an offence under S. 153A. I.P.C., 43 C 591, but in 54 C. 59 the rule laid down in 43 C 591 was held to be inadmissible, holding that where the legislature has passed upon the matter and drawn the line in its own way, it is not for the criminal courts to abandon the intention—the old statutory test—and put in peril of their process persons of innocent intention.

Sub-section (c).—The criminal intimidation or defamation must be concerning a Judge. The term "Judge" has the meaning assigned to it by the Indian Penal Code. See last para. of S. 4, supra; it denotes not only every person who is officially designated as a Judge, but also every person who is empowered by law to give in any legal proceeding civil or criminal a definitive judgment, or who is one of a body of persons empowered by law to give such judgment, S. 19, I.P.C.

With reference to any matter contained in such publication.—This is newly added. "This amendment is merely designed to make the intention of the Legislature clearer as regards the proceedings which require sanction prior to their institution"—St. of Objects and Reasons. The mere fact that this section is applicable to a particular case will not necessarily make S. 110, infra, inapplicable, 23 C.W.N. 193.

May require such person to show cause.—When a person is called upon to show cause why he should not be required to give security for good behaviour he must be ready with his evidence when he appears in obedience to the notice. This is the meaning of the expression "to show cause" in law. If he has been unable to bring the evidence with him on account of the shortness of the notice or other reasonable cause, it is his duty when he appears, to apply at once for summonses to the witnesses he proposes to call, 9 Bom. L.R. 1385 to 1386-87; 6 A. 214; 23 W.R. (Cr.) 9. The procedure applicable to cases under this section is that prescribed for warrant-cases except that a charge need not be framed, and this is clear from S. 117 (2). The prosecution has to establish the truth of the information and the person against whom an order requiring security for good behaviour is sought, is entitled to take the position that the prosecution should prove affirmatively the authorship of the pamphlet, 47 B 438 at 443.

Security for good behaviour from vagrants and suspected persons.

109. Whenever a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class receives information—

(a) that any person is taking precautions to conceal his presence within the local limits of such Magistrate's jurisdiction, and that there is reason to believe that such person is taking such precautions with a view to committing any offence, or

(b) that there is within such limits a person who has no ostensible means of subsistence, or who cannot give a satisfactory account of himself, such Magistrate may, in manner hereinafter provided, require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with sureties, for his good behaviour for such period, not exceeding one year, as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix.

Vagrants.—Vagrants or vagabonds are described in old English Statutes as “persons who wake in the night and sleep in the day and haunt customable taverns and ale houses and routs about; and no man knew from whence they came and whither they go”. The phrase rogues and vagabonds is applied to a large class of wandering, disorderly or dissolute persons without the means of honest livelihood.

Scope and object of the section.—This section makes provision for taking security from persons lurking within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction who have no ostensible means of subsistence or cannot give a satisfactory account of themselves. They need not be suspected of any particular offence. The object is to enable Magistrates to take action against suspicious strangers lurking within their jurisdiction, 39 C. 456 at 462; 53 C. 343. The salutary provisions of this section are often turned into an engine of oppression upon old convicts who are thrown helpless upon the world with none to take them into their company or help them to turn out an honest penny for a living. The fact that a man does not work or has been previously convicted for bad livelihood will not justify a Magistrate without being satisfied from the evidence that since his release he had no ostensible means of livelihood, to demand security for good behaviour, 41 C.L.J. 142=26 Cr. L.J. 842=86 Ind. Cas. 686 where 5 C.W.N. 28 is followed. A person who deliberately prepares to commit burglary but he is caught by the police and admits his intention to do the act cannot be dealt with under this section, 49 A. 844. An attempt to avoid a police patrol does not bring the person within the ambit of this section, he being a shop-keeper and resident of the place, 27 Cr. L.J. 573=94 Ind. Cas. 141; 6 Pat. 177. Bare suspicion of complicity in isolated cases is not sufficient. The fact that the Police suspected a person of having been concerned in various burglaries is no ground for demanding security, 29 Cr. L.J. 479=109 Ind. Cas. 127; nor is this section intended to cover a case where a person has been tried and convicted of an offence and no other evidence is available to start proceedings against him under this section, 29 Cr. L.J. 1043=112 Ind. Cas. 467. This section refers to a continuous act and therefore does not apply to a case where there is a momentary effort at concealment to avoid detection or arrest, nor can it apply to a case of a person brought under arrest, for it cannot be said of such a person that he is taking precautions to conceal his presence, 22 C.W.N. 163 at 165, but see 6 Pat. 177 which takes a different view. The object of the order for furnishing security for good behaviour is the prevention of crime and not to secure imprisonment of the person concerned, 22 Bom. L.R. 190; 16 Bom. L.R. 138; 1 C.L.J. 616. See 5 Cr. L.J. 377 where it was held that the object of this Chapter is not to get every suspected person confined in jail and thus save trouble to the police, but it is only when the ordinary means of detection and prevention of crime and for ensuring good behaviour have been adopted and have failed, resort should be had to the special means provided here. It is notorious that accusations under this section are constantly made with the object of blackening an enemy's character and of satisfying feelings of spite and hatred and the Magistrates cannot be too cautious in making sure that the provisions intended for securing the peace of the community are not utilized for wreaking private vengeance under the aegis of a crown prosecution, 33 C. 156 at 169. Care should be taken to prevent the abuse of the salutary provisions of this section which may be made an engine of oppression, 53 C. 345. Security cannot be demanded both under this section and S. 110 infra, 38 M. 555; 6 M.L.T. 158=14 Cr. L.J. 243=3 Ind. Cas. 77; 11 Cr. L.J. 80=5 Ind. Cas. 156. But the Madras High Court did not hold the bond to be void but merely set aside the order under this section and confirmed the order under S. 110, infra, 27 Cr. L.J. 333=33 Ind. Cas. 743.

Receives information.—Magistrates are competent to act under this section when they have credible information that a person has no ostensible means of livelihood or is unable to give a satisfactory account of himself, 31 C. 557; 26 M. 124; 6 A.L.J. 253.

Taking precautions to conceal his presence, etc.—The object of the concealment must be for committing some offence. Mere concealment with a view to avoid observation is no offence at all. A person cannot be called upon to furnish security for an alleged concealment in his father's house unconnected with any intention to commit an offence nor any previous concealment outside the jurisdiction of the Magistrate who initiates proceedings under this section, 39 C. 456. This sub-section refers to the case of a continuous act and not to the case of an isolated effort at concealment, 50 C.L.J. 181 following 22 C.W.N. 163=27 C.L.J. 382 and 41 C.L.J. 142=26 Cr. L.J. 842=86 Ind. Cas. 666. The provisions of this section must be used with discretion and cannot apply to one who was merely found talking with bad characters at a public place. It is not necessary to show that the accused followed a continuous course of conduct to conceal his presence, 6 Pat. 177. Where the only evidence against a person proceeded against under this section was that he was seen coming out of a sugar-cane field near his village at 10 P.M. in the night and when challenged by two persons he tried to run away it was held that on these facts he cannot be bound over under this section and the revision on behalf of the Government was dismissed, 26 A.L.J. 896 (F.B.)=29 Cr. L.J. 864=111 Ind. Cas. 448. The greatest criminal in the world is not liable to be questioned as to his presence in his own house, 39 C. 456 at 452; 23 C.W.N. 163, action cannot be taken under this section against a person who on being questioned by the police gives a false name and then corrects it. In such a case there is nothing to show that he was taking precautions to conceal his presence, 21 A.L.J. 847. There must be some definite attempt at concealment by taking precautions with that object in view whether it be by disguise or otherwise indicating a desire to hide the fact of his presence within the local limits, 6 Pat. 177. Where a person gives a false name and secretly delivers letters inciting the commission of a crime or demanding money, he can be dealt with under this section, 15 Cr. L.J. 255=23 Ind. Cas. 207. The provisions of cl. (a) must be read together. See in this connection S. 55 (1) (a) supra. See also 26 A.L.J. 1257 at 1260 (F.B.).

Within the limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction—It is an entire mistake to read this sub-section as applying to any person who takes steps to conceal himself, in the sense of concealing his presence in the way in which a criminal conceals his presence when he goes out in the dark, or by a deserted road or by some other select means to commit a crime in his own neighbourhood. The section does not contemplate such a situation and has no application to it and was clearly in contemplation of a totally different situation. This sub-section says that the power is to be exercised in the case of "any person taking precautions to conceal his presence within the local limits of such Magistrate's jurisdiction." If it was intended to deal with anybody either a habitual resident or a person well known in the neighbourhood trying to conceal himself, it would have been natural to employ the expression "conceal himself" and it is impossible to attribute to the expression "within the local limits of such Magistrate's jurisdiction", a direction as to the jurisdiction of the Magistrate over the offence, because for that purpose the words would be superfluous, the jurisdiction of the Magistrate for offences committed in his district being clearly established by other provisions of the law. It is an elementary principle of interpretation of statutes that you must give a reasonable meaning to every expression used and we have therefore to interpret the passage "within the local limits of such Magistrate's jurisdiction." It is part of the predicate to "conceal his presence" and the offence contemplated is that a person probably, although not necessarily coming from outside the jurisdiction into the Magistrate's jurisdiction for some nefarious purpose and taking precautions to conceal the fact that he is present in that jurisdiction. The words are free from ambiguity, 49 A. 240 following 8 A.L.J. 1097; 17 A.L.J. 891 and 432. This decision is followed in 25 A.L.J. 679=28 Cr. L.J. 567=103 Ind. Cas. 503. Before a person is called upon to execute a bond it must be shown that he was taking precautions to conceal his presence within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction and further such precautions were taken with a view to commit an offence. A person within a Magistrate's jurisdiction whether of good or bad character who merely avoids the police by running away on their approach cannot be said to be within the mischief of this section, 6 Pat. 177, see also 50 A. 909 (F.B.) following 49 A. 240 and 844; 8 A.L.J. 1097; 27 C.L.J. 332; 17 A.L.J. 432 and 891; 39 C. 456 and 6 Pat. 177; 41 C.L.J. 142, where it was held that this sub-section is only applicable where the person concealing his presence within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate and he need not necessarily be a stranger to the jurisdiction.

Has no ostensible means of subsistence.—The law requires that before a person is called upon to furnish security it should be proved that he has no ostensible means of subsistence. The mere fact that a person does not work coupled with an admission of a previous conviction for bad livelihood will not justify a Magistrate demanding security under this section, 5 C.W.N. 28; merely to be penniless or out of work is not an offence. Many an honest man may find himself in either predicament and in a country where there are workless people but no work houses and casual labourers but no casual wards, if it were the law that persons are exposed to proceedings under cl. (b) of the section merely because they cannot give a satisfactory account of the manner in which they are eking out a precarious existence, the Magistrate's hands would be full indeed and much injustice might be done to innocent persons, 53 C. 345; 41 C.L.J. 142. If a person is unable to prove the source of his livelihood he ought not to be ordered to execute a bond unless there is reasonable ground for suspecting that he is sustaining himself by some dishonest means, for such an order can only be made where it is necessary for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour, 53 C. 345; old convicts whether they are lawfully engaged or otherwise naturally shun the police and this of itself does not show that the person where he was found was there for some unlawful purpose. Having no home is the condition of a very large number of perfectly honest persons and it is extremely difficult to prove that a person works as a cooly. The floating population mostly of the cooly class have no place of abode and they spend the nights in verandahs and door ways and eat where they can. For such people to prove to the satisfaction of the Court that they have work is well nigh impossible. They may be working quite honestly but it is very difficult, if not impossible to prove it. To call upon such persons to give security is to perpetuate a farce and no one is going to stand surety for a homeless cooly. The logical result of demanding security will be that such persons will be spending their lives in jail for various terms of imprisonment for failing to give security, 41 C.L.J. 142; 26 Cr. L.J. 842=86 Ind. Cas. 666; 6 Pat. 177. The fact that a person belongs to a wandering tribe is not a sufficient reason for demanding security from him, Weir II, 53, but in 6 A.L.J. 253=9 Cr. L.J. 527=2 Ind. Cas. 219 it was held that the language of cl. (b) was very wide and that a Magistrate who demanded security from one who belonged to a gang frequenting melas and carried on a ring game was acting legally upon the evidence before him, 40 C. 702. Again a young man out of employment living with his father, a man of means and able to support his son, does not come within the phrase 'person without ostensible means of substance' as the object of cl. (b) is to enable Magistrate to take action against suspicious strangers lurking within his jurisdiction, 39 C. 436; 22 Cr. L.J. 739=64 Ind. Cas. 141. See 17 C.W.N. 883 where it was held that a person earning his livelihood by ring game cannot be dealt with under this section. See also 18 A.L.J. 321; 17 A.L.J. 432. Mere proof of want of ostensible means of subsistence is not by itself sufficient to bring the case under this section. The Magistrate is further bound to consider whether the order is really necessary to secure good behaviour which is entirely within the Magistrate's judicial discretion, Ratanlal 723. To justify an order under this section there must be a good basis of fact. Mere suspicion is not sufficient, 17 A.L.J. 432=20 Cr. L.J. 431=51 Ind. Cas. 161.

Who cannot give a satisfactory account of himself.—The expressions "who has no ostensible means of subsistence" and "who cannot give a satisfactory account of himself" are widely different from each other. In practice, they are very often taken as meaning one and the same thing and this leads to a misapplication of the provisions of the section. The expression 'give a satisfactory account of himself' does not mean that the person should satisfy how he spends his time but it means that he has no satisfactory account for his presence within the Magistrate's jurisdiction. It means that if a person is present within such limits or is present at a place within such limits to which he does not belong and there are circumstances justifying the suspicion that he is there not for an innocent purpose, he has got to explain his presence, 41 C.L.J. 142=26 Cr. L.J. 842=86 Ind. Cas. 666, but see 6 Pat. 177 which dissents from this view. Where a man who is a Kabiraj and a dealer was found in association with two others at midnight with house-breaking implements in their possession and on being discovered fled and when arrested remained silent and the explanation which he gave subsequently to the Magistrate was false, it was held that the case did not fall within this section, 22 C.W.N. 163=27 C.L.J. 332 followed in 50 C.L.J. 181. To the effect that failure to give a satisfactory account will not bring a person within the purview of this section. This does not refer to a person who spends his time or at least his leisure moments in an unsatisfactory manner 41 C.L.J. 142=26 Cr. L.J. 842=86 Ind. Cas. 666; 53 C. 313. It is obviously true that this sub-section does not justify broadly calling upon any person to satisfactorily account for how he spends his leisure, but if there is definite evidence that he has been caught spending a portion of that leisure in a manner giving rise to grave suspicion and can have no satisfactory account of the incident, there is no reason why this sub-section should not apply. There is no justification for limiting the plain, natural and unambiguous meaning of the words 'cannot give a satisfactory account of himself.' If a house-holder catches a man in his garden in the middle of the night armed with a jemmy and that man cannot explain what he was doing at that hour of the night armed with a jemmy in somebody else's garden, surely it is not using language in any other than its simple and straightforward sense to say 'he cannot give a satisfactory account of himself'. These words do not refer to his domestic relations, or his normal daylight orthodox occupation but require him to give a satisfactory account of himself in relation to the circumstances which led up to his being called upon for an explanation, 50 A. 999 (F.B.) at 933. A municipal employee whose occupation and place of residence are known but who according to the Magistrate prowls about at night, associates with bad characters, arms himself with a lathi cannot be dealt with under this section, 8 A.L.J. 1097=12 Cr. L.J. 536=12 Ind. Cas. 304. When a person was found away from his house in the house of a dangerous political conspirator, an order requiring such person to give an account of himself was justified, 13 Cr. L.J. 239=14 Ind. Cas. 431, but the prosecution must satisfy the Magistrate that suspicion against the person proceeded against attaches to him because of his failure to give a satisfactory explanation when called upon to account for his presence in the place where he is found, e.g., if he fails to account for his being discovered in the company of person living a dishonest criminal life or detected in some place where he has no legal right to be. The poor, the outcast and the old offender must somewhere live and move and have their being, and, a person who during the morning hours was passing the time at a particular locality to all outward appearance innocently and in a manner void of suspicion cannot be brought within the ambit of cl. (b) of this section and S. 118, infra merely because he was unable to prove that he was working for his living, 53 C. 343. See 6 Pat 177. This clause covers suspected persons who are classed in Europe as rogues and persons of any class who cannot give any satisfactory account of themselves, 13 Cr. L.J. 239=14 Ind. Cas. 431.

There is within his limits a person.—To give jurisdiction to a Magistrate to proceed under this section it is not necessary that the person proceeded against should be residing within the local limits of Magistrate's jurisdiction, 36 M. 96; Weir II, 53; 39 A. 139; 43 C. 153; 27 Cr. L.J. 1261=98 Ind. Cas. 109, see also 49 A. 240. The meaning of the expression 'any person within the local limits' is any person who is within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction at the time of taking action. The object of the section is the prevention of offences and that object would be liable to be defeated if its scope were restricted to persons residing within the Magistrate's jurisdiction, 36 M. 96; when a person was put up before the Magistrate for action under cl. (b) of this section but the Magistrate discharged the accused holding that the arrest was not legal and the accused was not properly brought before the Court, held, setting aside the order, that how the accused was brought before the Magistrate was immaterial and the Court was bound to proceed with the case, 31 C. 557. See also 35 B. 223; 26 M. 124; 23 Cr. L.J. 1039=112 Ind. Cas. 673.

To execute a bond with sureties.—Under this section and S. 110 infra surety is not optional, as in the case falling under Ss. 106, 107 and 108 supra where the bond may be with or without sureties but it is indispensable. In the case of a minor the bond may be executed only by his sureties, S. 113, infra. The amount of the bond should not be excessive and a fair chance of complying with the required conditions of the security should be afforded, Weir II, 52; 16 B. 372; 23 A. 80. Restrictions of caste and residence of surety is illegal, 1 Bom L.R. 520. So also the condition that the surety should be an immediate neighbour of the person bound over, 17 Cr. L.J. 93=32 Ind. Cas. 687. The sufficiency of surety should be considered from a general view of his stability and property houses and not merely from the point of view of his moveables, 17 Cr. L.J. 97=32 Ind. Cas. 687. Government Promissory-notes cannot be accepted in addition to or in lieu of bond under this section. See S. 513, infra. In fixing the amount under this and S. 110, infra, the Magistrate should consider the station in life of the accused and should not go beyond a sum of which there is a fair probability of his being able to find surety, 4 M.H.C.R. Appx. xlv. See also the proviso to S. 181, infra. When once a surety offered has been accepted by the Magistrate he has no power subsequently to enhance the security bond, though he might be of opinion that such surety is an unfit person, 1 C.W.N. 394; 2 Cr. L.J. 278. A person should not be called upon to enter into a bond both under Ss. 109 and 110, 38 M. 555. But a bond so taken is not void, and the High Court merely set aside the order under this section and confirmed the order under S. 110, infra. See 27 Cr. L.J. 326=92 Ind. Cas. 742. See also 36 C. 562 where it was held that the object of requiring a surety bond is not to insure the recovery of the amount of the bond from the principal but to serve as an additional security for his keeping the peace or being of good behaviour, and therefore double payment both from the principal and the surety may be demanded. This decision was not approved in 5 Lah. 448 where it was held that more than the amount mentioned in the bond can be recovered from the principal or sureties individually or collectively. See also 12 Cr. L.J. 404=11 Ind. Cas. 593; 1894 P.R. (Cr.) 26. The provisions of S. 517 infra apply to proceedings under this section although there may be no proof that any offence had been committed with reference to that property, 31 C. 347; 20 Cr. L.J. 133. As to form of bond see form No. 11 of Sch. V.

110. Whenever a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, or Sub-divisional Magistrate or a Magistrate of the

behaviour from habitual offenders.

first class specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government receives information that any person within the local limits of his jurisdiction—

(a) is by habit a robber, house-breaker, thief, or forger, or

(b) is by habit a receiver of stolen property knowing the same to have been stolen, or

(c) habitually protects or harbours thieves or aids in the concealment or disposal of stolen property, or

(d) habitually commits, or attempts to commit, or abets the commission of, the offence of kidnapping, abduction, extortion, cheating or mischief, or any offence punishable under Chapter XII of the Indian Penal Code, or under section 489A, section 489B, section 489C or section 489D of that Code, or

(e) habitually commits, or attempts to commit, or abets the commission of, offences involving a breach of the peace, or

(f) is so desperate and dangerous as to render his being at large without security hazardous to the community, such Magistrate may, in manner hereinafter provided, require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with sureties, for his good behaviour for such period, not exceeding three years, as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix.

Amendment.—In sub-section (a) habitual forgers are included, and in sub-section (d) all offences under Chap. XII, I.P.C., kidnapping, abduction and offences under Ss. 489A, 489B, 489C, 489D, are also included.

Scope and object of the section.—The object of this section like that of Ss. 106 and 107 supra, is prevention of crime and not punishment. It is only for the purpose of securing future good behaviour that the power vested in Magistrates should be exercised. Any attempt to use it for punishing past offences is unwarranted and is not sanctioned by law, 27 C. 781; 31 C. 350; 17 C.W.N. 238; 9 C.W.N. 898 at 903; 1 C.L.R. 268; 10 B. 174; 6 Bom. L.R. 34; 3 M. 238; 16 Cr. L.J. 100 and 474; 1914 P.R. (Cr.) 6. The section is enacted as a protection to the public against a repetition of crimes by which the safety of property is menaced and not the security of the person alone is jeopardised, 2 A. 835; 17 C.W.N. 238. What this section desires to guard against is the freedom of a dangerous person without security and not freedom entirely. Proceedings started were therefore improper when he had already been placed under security by another Magistrate as there was no hazard to the community till the period for which security is taken by the first Magistrate, 30 Cr. L.J. 756 (1)=117 Ind. Cas. 343. This section provides six categories of cases within one or more of which the offender's case must come in order that a penalty may be imposed in accordance with this section. On general principles when a man is sought to be proceeded against under this section, it must be made clear under which of the sub-sections he is charged. It has been laid down a number of times that mere suspicion is not admissible evidence and cannot form the legitimate basis for an order under this section, 26 A.L.J. 99 at 101=29 Cr. L.J. 92=106 Ind. Cas. 684. But a witness may have a suspicion against a person in respect of whom he is giving evidence and if he has such suspicion he ought to be able to give the ground of that suspicion and the value of the facts stated can then be weighed by the Magistrates, 26 A.L.J. 99 at 102=29 Cr. L.J. 92=106 Ind. Cas. 684. It is not enough to assert that he is a man of criminal tendencies or that he is suspected of having committed certain crimes. The prosecution must charge that the accused habitually commits one of the offences mentioned in sub-sections (a) to (d) or that he habitually commits, or attempts or abets the commission of offences involving a breach of the peace, sub-section (e) or that he is so desperate and dangerous as to render his being at large without security hazardous to the community, sub-section (f). It must be specifically stated under which of these categories the accused's case is alleged to fall and the omission to do so causes obviously hardship to him as he received no notice of the precise case he has to meet. It is not enough to charge a person generally of having committed an offence, under this section without specifically stating under which of the sub-sections the case is alleged to fall, 26 Cr. L.J. 1377=19 Ind. Cas. 513. The powers under this section are to be exercised very sparingly and only in those cases where the evidence is very clear and precise, 23 Cr. L.J. 507=68 Ind. Cas. 43; 38 C. 156. In cases of security proceedings the Courts ought to approach the consideration of them in a fair way, having regard to the interests not only of the prosecution but also of the accused, 26 Cr. L.J. 99=83 Ind. Cas. 659. The security law is a hard law and one easily used as an instrument of oppression and is to be enforced with caution and impartiality. Where the evidence for the defence is as weighty as the evidence for the prosecution, the order demanding security for good behaviour is not justified. Where security is demanded on evidence of general repute there should be no doubt as to what his general repute is, 1901 P.L.R. (Cr. J.) 18 at page 52. Mere suspicion and bare allegation that a person is of bad repute is not sufficient to base an order under this section, 27 Cr. L.J. 1037=87 Ind. Cas. 43. Where respectable witnesses testify to accused's good character and the prosecution evidence is meagre no order for security should be passed, 9 Lah. 133; ordinarily speaking a case under this section will be governed by exactly the same rules of evidence as govern any other cases. A witness cannot say what he suspects. If the prosecution know that the witness does suspect the accused of having taken part in a theft, the prosecution can question the witness before he is put in the witness box and ask him his reasons for suspecting. They can themselves ascertain from the witness what facts are within his knowledge and then put him in the box to give evidence as to those facts and it will be for the Magistrate to determine whether those facts alone or supported by other evidence create such a conviction in his mind as to justify taking security. But a witness's "Suspicion" and his "allegations" that the accused is a thief, etc., are worth nothing and should not be admitted, 30 Cr. L.J. 562 at 553=116 Ind. Cas. 23. The object of the section is preventive and not punitive, 16 Bom. L.R. 139=15 Cr. L.J. 268=23 Ind. Cas. 476; 31 C. 333; 47 C. 154; 27 C.W.N. 781; 9 C.W.N. 893; 17 C.W.N. 238; 1 C.L.R. 269; 3 M. 329; 6 Bom. L.R. 34; 2 A. 835; 27 Cr.L.J. 933=96 Ind. Cas. 391; 16 Cr. L.J. 100, 335, 438 and 479; 1914 P.R. (Cr.) 6. Any attempt to use it for punishing for past offences is wrong and not sanctioned by law, and this section should be invoked only in cases where positive evidence of the commission of crime is available against the person proceeded against, 3 M. 238; 27 C. 781; 31 C. 330; 17 C.W.N. 238; 13 C.W.N. 318; 20 C.L.J. 30; 7 A. 67 at 72; 42 A. 563; Weir II, 832, 19 B. 174; 6 Bom. L.R. 35; 16 Cr. L.J. 100=27 Ind. Cas. 143; 14 Cr. L.J. 5; 12 Cr. L.J. 323. The Legislature does not provide by means of this section a means of punishment, 23 Cr. L.J. 597=69 Ind. Cas. 43. The intention of the law is not that the person called upon to furnish security should be sent to jail but that, if possible he should be kept out of jail, 16 Bom. L.R. 139=21 Cr. L.J. 377, 22 Bom. L.R. 190. It is undoubtedly true that in cases where proceedings under this section follow soon after discharge or an acquittal the Court before binding the person proceeded against must be satisfied that the proceedings under this section were not instituted with a view to get one punished, when the police had failed to secure his conviction for a substantive offence and as such, the Courts are called upon to scrutinize the evidence with the greatest care, 28 Cr. L.J. 515=102 Ind. Cas. 211 where 23 Cr. L.J. 119=62 Ind. Cas. 551 is followed. The object of the law as to security for good behaviour is not to fill the jails with bad characters, but to bring reasonable pressure to bear on such persons to respect the law, 5 Cr. L. Rev. 145. The salutary provisions of this section were enacted for protecting society from habitual offenders and was never intended to be applied to coerce landlords to adopt efficient management of their estates. 17 C.W.N. 238=16 C.L.J. 467=14 Cr. L.J. 5=18 Ind. Cas. 143. This section is inapplicable to a landlord whose tenants are of bad character and who through his tenants commits acts of extortion, the proper course is to prosecute for specific acts of oppression and not to proceed under this section, 27 C. 731; 6 C.L.J. 711. The institution of proceedings under this section against persons registered under the Criminal Tribes Act is not necessarily inexpedient. The control obtained over a person by registering him as a member of a criminal tribe is sufficient to prevent him from committing acts for which preventive action may be necessary. Notwithstanding such control he has enough of liberty left to pursue a career of crime bringing him within some of the clauses of this section. Each case has to be scrutinized on its merits, information on which proceedings are asked for being scanned, and the question whether preventive action is called for or not being considered due regard being had to the consequences which in most cases inevitably follow, viz., failure to furnish security, 54 C. 279, see also 23 Cr. L.J. 39 Ind. Cas. The object of the section is not to obtain money for the Crown by forfeiture of the bonds taken, but is only to secure good behaviour, 29 A. 203. The provisions of the section ought not to be employed to punish past offences but only to be used for future good behaviour; where a person is proceeded against for a substantive offence and has given bail to the satisfaction of the Magistrate, he cannot be proceeded against simultaneously under this section, 1 C.L.R. 258 at 271; 7 A. 67 at 72; 10 B. 174. Where the information received shows a likelihood of a breach of the ~~is illegal to~~ demand security under this section, 6 A. 132. This ~~to~~ public against repetition of crimes in which the safety to property is menaced and not if the security of persons alone is jeopardised, 2 A. 835 at 837. Mere proof of bad character will not justify an order under this section, 8 M.L.T. 245=11 Cr. L.J. 638=8 Ind. Cas. 320. Powers under this section are to be exercised with great caution and discrimination. They are not to be applied too freely and to persons whose cases are not within the spirit of the provisions of this section, 4 N.W.P.H.C.R. 117; 6 A. 214; 14 A. 15. This section is not intended to afford means to the police to detain a suspected person in custody till they are liable to work out a case against him. If the police arrest a person for starting proceedings under this section it should be specified under what clause or clauses of S. 55, supra, the action is taken, 27 Cr. L.J. 628=94 Ind. Cas. 404. A Magistrate should not detain a man in custody unless he has the necessary information to pass an order in which he was suspected, it is always necessary to make it clear that proceedings were not taken as a means of indirectly punishing a man who the police was convinced was guilty, 6 A.L.J. 487=9 Cr. L.J. 528=2 Ind. Cas. 225. Mere suspicion is not sufficient to bind down a person to be of good behaviour, 25 Cr. L.J. 35=75 Ind. Cas. 723; 30 Cr. L.J. 693=116 Ind. Cas. 801; 27 Cr. L.J. 1067=97 Ind. Cas. 43. Unless the record upon which an order binding down a person is passed is such that it proves conclusively the charge read out and explained to him, the order passed is bad in law, 28 Cr. L.J. 8=99 Ind. Cas. 40. There must be some independent evidence of the charge against the accused under cl. (a), (d) and (f) of this section and when the evidence given is vague, general and of hearsay character and not legally admissible for purposes of proving the charges, the order under this section is bad in law, 26 Cr. L.J. 738=86 Ind. Cas. 274. Immediately after the acquittal of a person of an offence under S. 411, I.P.C., an order under this section ought not to be passed against him unless a very strong case is made out and the High Court in revision cancelled the order so passed, 27 Cr. L.J. 190=91 Ind. Cas. 1006. When a person is repeatedly convicted and imprisoned before his release proceedings may be initiated against him under this section. The Court in 6 W.R. (Cr) 18 remarked thus: "If, upon being set at liberty he should return to the former course of life and show that he continues to be, after being set at liberty, a person of dangerous and desperate character, whom it is hazardous for the community to leave at large, no doubt he may again be brought before the Magistrate and after the evidence of his proceedings have been laid before the Magistrate, a further order may be passed requiring him to furnish security. It does not appear that, without having set at liberty and without a fair chance of leading a new life, orders demanding security should be passed one after another." See also 12 C. 520. "The greatest thief is entitled to locus penitentiae when he has served out his punishment. It is only when he outrages that grace which is extended to him and therefore shows he is unreformed, that the machinery of the Act should be brought into operation, in order to obtain a substantial guarantee for security, that he will not commit any further depredations upon it," 2 A. 835; 10 B. 175. A person who has served out a term of imprisonment should be given a chance of reformation and start with a clean sheet from the date of his discharge and should not be proceeded against under this section immediately he emerges from jail, 43 C 1128; 31 C. 783; 22 C.W.N. lx. Security cannot be demanded both under S. 109 and this section, 33 M. 553; 6 M.L.T. 158=10 Cr.L.J. 233=3 Ind Cas 77; 11 Cr. L.J. 80=5 Ind Cas 156. But the bond is not void and even in the Madras Case the High Court merely set aside the order under S. 109 supra and confirmed the order under this section, 27 Cr. L.J. 326=92 Ind. Cas. 742. Ordinarily under this section every person has to be tried separately for the offence enumerated herein and a joint trial is only permissible when one or more persons have been associated together for committing offences specified herein, 23 Cr. L.J. 100=65 Ind. Cas. 484; 8 L.W. 461; 43 M. 430. It is essential to prove what each accused has done and definite evidence must be adduced against each accused, 35 C. 929; 8 C.W.N. 180; 10 Cr. L.J. 591 and specific finding should be recorded against each accused, 37 C. 91; 6 A. 214. See the subject fully dealt with at p. 153 'Joint inquiry.' Security cannot be taken on evidence of general repute unless it is proved to be universal, 16 Cr. L.J. 106=27 Ind. Cas. 154.

Within the local limits of his jurisdiction.—The words are not equivalent to residing within local limits. It is sufficient to give the Magistrate jurisdiction if the evil habits of the accused are practised and evil reputation acquired within the local limits of his jurisdiction, 19 C.W.N. 1022; 43 C. 215; 33 A. 83. The expression 'any person within the local limits of his jurisdiction' are obviously not intended to apply to persons undergoing imprisonment and consequently the Magistrate has no power to commence proceedings under this section, 7 Cr. L.J. 417=4 L.B.R. 145; 23 Cr. L.J. 812=111 Ind. Cas. 335. Persons to be proceeded against must be residing within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction and must be found to answer to one of the descriptions given in (a) to (f). When a person resides outside such limits, a Magistrate cannot initiate proceedings and issue a warrant under this section against him, 43 C.L.J. 143. The reputation a man has must necessarily be the reputation in the neighbourhood of his residence and not at some place far away from his home, 27 C. 993. Occasional residence is enough to confer jurisdiction under this section, 31 C. 419. And the fact that it would be inconvenient for the person proceeded against to summon and to have his witnesses from the place of his permanent residence is no ground for not proceeding with this case where it was initiated, 27 Cr. L.J. 1261=93 Ind. Cas. 103. It was held in 23 A.L.J. 43=23 Cr. L.J. 93 that permanent residence within the locality is not essential to give jurisdiction to a Magistrate. It is enough if the person practises his career as thief, housebreaker, etc., within such jurisdiction, see also 43 C. 153; 23 C.W.N. 193; 23 Cr. L.J. 133; 27 C. 993; 35 M. 93; 33 A. 139. The Magistrate who is in executive charge of the local area, is the best person to judge whether there is any likelihood of a breach of the peace within the local limits of his jurisdiction and whether it is necessary or desirable that preventive proceedings should be taken, and the Legislature has purposely left it to the discretion of such a Magistrate to say whether proceedings ought to be taken or not, 41 M. 246; 1918 M.W.N. 731. The expression 'any person within local limits' is advisedly used to exclude the necessity of proving anything approaching a permanent residence and leave it in the power of Magistracy to deal with most dangerous criminals who wander from place to place and who have no well-known residence, 9 Bom. L.R. 244. The words person within the local limits, etc., will include a person undergoing a sentence of imprisonment in a jail within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction, 17 Cr. L.J. 83=32 Ind. 683. When an inquiry was held at a place outside the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction, it was held the proceedings were void and passed without jurisdiction, 3 C.L.J. 195. Unless a sub-divisional Magistrate's jurisdiction is restricted under S. 12 supra he has jurisdiction over the whole district and therefore a Magistrate is entitled to take proceedings under this section upon a police report in respect of a person residing outside his local jurisdiction irrespective of how the police report came before him, 21 Cr. L.J. 321=53 Ind. Cas. 593. A person residing within the Magistrate's jurisdiction can be proceeded against under this section even though he was arrested outside the Magistrate's jurisdiction under S. 55 (1) (c) supra 17 Cr. L.J. 319=35 Ind. Cas. 495.

Whenever a Magistrate receives information.—This information is the foundation of the whole proceeding and there is no limit to the nature or source of information on which a Magistrate might initiate proceedings under this section, 27 A. 172; nor is a Magistrate bound to inform the person proceeded against, the source of his information or the nature of the information. There is nothing in the section which specifies what the nature of the information should be. In 42 A. 648 the learned judges appeared to be of opinion that the information must be detailed information containing the nature of the evidence which it was proposed to bring against such a person. There is nothing in the section laying down any quantum of information, as a necessary condition for the Magistrate to take action. Undoubtedly a prudent Magistrate might not consider information sufficient to cause him to take action unless it gave sufficient details against the person in question. The High Court is concerned only with the legality of the Magistrate's action and not with his prudence. If a Magistrate empowered to receive information of the barest kind to the effect that person who is a habitual thief is within his jurisdiction, it is certainly within his powers to take action under this Chapter and the legality of his action cannot be questioned.

2 Luck, 157. The information may to some extent be of a hearsay and general description, 6 A. 132. The information which a Magistrate inquiring into a case under this section already possesses concerning a person cannot be used as substantive evidence, but it may form a check which the trial Court may legitimately use in order to test the nature of the evidence which it has to deal and to negative, e.g., a suggestion that the police investigation had been unfair, 43 A. 749 distinguishing 21 A.L.J. 513. All that the Magistrate is bound to state is, the substance of the information, 23 C. 332; but he is not bound to give a list of witnesses in support of the proceedings, 33 C. 243. A Magistrate who initiates proceedings on his own personal knowledge is not competent to inquire into the truth of the information under S 117 infra, 29 C. 392. The person who gives information is not liable to be dealt with under S. 250 infra.

By habit a robber, etc.—This section does not provide any person being called upon to furnish security for being by habit a dacoit and belonging to a gang of dacoits. It is not for the Courts to find out the motive for the omission by the Legislature but if it were necessary it is this. Being a member of a gang of dacoits is a definite offence under S. 400, I.P.C., and it was for that reason that under the preventive sections, action could not be taken for having committed a specific offence. Instead of proceeding for the specific offence it cannot be permitted to indirectly punish persons by proceeding against them under the preventive section. It was urged that if a person can be called upon to furnish security being a habitual robber, there is no reason why a man should not be bound over for being by habit a dacoit. A man may be by habit a robber and so long as he is not charged with a definite act of robbery he may be bound over under the preventive section. But as soon as it is said that he along with four others or more, habitually commits robbery, he becomes at once a member of a gang of dacoits and thereby commits a definite and specific offence under S 400, I.P.C. This section therefore deliberately omitted dacoity out of its purview, 23 A.L.J. 18 = 26 Cr. L.J. 745 = 83 Ind. Cas. 232. But see 47 A. 733 where 23 A.L.J. 18 is distinguished. The words "habit" and "habitually" are not used in the narrow sense, meaning "inclined by nature" but must be taken as meaning persistence in doing an act, a fact which is capable of proof by adducing evidence of the commission of a number of similar acts. "Habitually" must be taken to mean 'repeatedly' or 'persistently,' 25 Cr. L.J. 60 = 75 Ind. Cas. 764. Habit is to be proved by an aggregate of facts, 6 M.H.C.R. 120; 29 Cr. L.J. 574 = 109 Ind. Cas. 510. Persons are said to commit habitual extortion only when they are in the habit of committing as individual members of the community and not when certain acts amounting to extortion are committed by them as mere agents of a zamindar because the moment they cease to be the agents they become divested of their capacity and are not likely to commit extortion as individual members of the community. The proper course therefore is to prosecute the perpetrators of these extortions and not to proceed under this section, which is intended to prevent crime and not to punish for offences, 27 C. 781. Vague and general information that a man is a habitual offender is not sufficient evidence on which an accused person might be bound over under this section, 1 A.L.J. 616. To sustain an order under this section the evidence should be of such a nature as would lead to a reasonable and definite ground for coming to the conclusion that the persons are habitual offenders, 8 C.W.N. 543. When the witnesses are examined as to general character, their evidence is not of much value as to the habits of the person concerned, unless they support their opinion by specific instances, but it is not absolutely necessary that unless specific instances are given the evidence could not be acted upon to base an order under this section, 6 Bom. L.R. 34. Where the evidence against certain persons consisted in that of certain respectable witnesses none of whom knew the accused personally but only stated what they heard from others whose names they could not give no order under this section could be passed on such evidence, 29 C. 779. The term "habit" must be distinguished from the term "repute" which refers to the common belief of the respectable inhabitants of the locality where the person resides. But habit apparently requires a more specific evidence of bad character. Under S 117 (3) the fact that a person is a habitual offender may be proved by evidence of general repute. Mere evidence of suspicion against the accused is not sufficient, 75 Ind. Cas. 723; 27 Cr. L.J. 1067 = 97 Ind. Cas. 43. There must be independent evidence to have the charge against the accused under cl. (a), (d) and (f) and where the evidence given is vague, general, and of hearsay character and not legally admissible for purpose of proving the charges, the order under the section is bad in law, 23 Cr. L.J. 733=88 Ind. Cas. 274. Evidence going to show that a substantive offence has been committed or which might form the basis of a charge of a substantive offence is not necessarily to be included in proceedings under this section and can form the basis of an order under S. 112 infra and a finding under S. 118, infra. Previous acquittals on the evidence on two occasions will not enable the accused to have the evidence excluded but it is a question of the value of the acquittals and may be put in evidence for what they may be worth, 47 A. 733 where 23 A.L.J. 18 is distinguished. See also 23 Cr. L.J. 515=102 Ind. Cas. 211.

Habitually protects or harbours thieves.—This section deals with only harbouring thieves. A person cannot be called upon to give security for harbouring dacoits. It is always interesting to discover how legislation as to particular sections of a certain Code came into effect in order to understand the meaning thereof. Dacoity is a very serious crime and therefore an attempt to commit it, even preparation to commit it, and being a gang of dacoits are all separately made punishable under different sections of the I.P.C. At the time of the framing of the Indian Penal Code it was overlooked that dacoits might be helped by men honest to the outside world, not joining them or belonging to their gang but giving shelter to them when needed to escape pursuit. In 1891, S. 216A, I.P.C., was enacted to meet such a case. In 1891 Code there was no provision for calling upon a person to furnish security for habitually harbouring thieves. In the 1893 Code provision was made herein only to bring in persons who are habitually harbouring thieves as harbouring dacoits had already been dealt with under the substantive provision under S. 216A, I.P.C. So a person who habitually harbours dacoits should be dealt with for the substantive offence under S. 216A, I.P.C., and not under this section, 39 Cr. L.J. 691=116 Ind. Cas. 804. The acts which amount to harbouring must be done with the intention of screening the offender from legal punishment or to prevent him from being apprehended. If a person from mere motives of humanity and without any intention of enabling the fugitive to escape from justice gave food to a starving man or gave medical aid to one who was wounded, knowing his character he commits no criminal act. The expression "protecting" or "harbouring" seems to contemplate cases where assistance is rendered to screen an offender from legal punishment, etc., but does not refer to acts done with motives of humanity. The clause is designed to meet cases of professional receivers, etc., who protect thieves from discovery and prevent their arrest and help them in disposing off stolen property, 11 Cr. L.J. 490=7 Ind. Cas. 462.

Commits offences involving a breach of the peace.—These words "offences involving a breach of the peace" mean offences in which a breach of the peace is an ingredient and not offences provoking or likely to lead to a breach of the peace, 30 C. 366 followed in 38 C. 156. Therefore a person who behaves indecently and immodestly towards women and who is of immoral habits, tries to seduce women cannot be bound over under clause (c) of this section, 30 C. 366; see also 25 C. 628; 26 M. 459; 29 M. 190. A zamindar who employs lathials to threaten his tenants and uses forces in unyoking their bullocks, and burn their houses for compelling them to pay enhanced rents brought himself within the mischief of this clause, 31 C. 419 approved in 33 C. 156. But indecent overtures to boys passing by the shop of a person cannot come within this clause, 16 Cr. L.J. 582=30 Ind. Cas. 134. The words "involving a breach of the peace" occur in S. 106 (1) supra and give rise to a number of rulings pointing out the difficulty in construing these words. See notes under S. 106 (1) supra at pp. 127-128.

So desperate and dangerous as to be hazardous to the community.—"A man of desperate and dangerous character" under cl. (f) means a man who has a reckless disregard of the safety of the persons or the property of his neighbours; and under that clause evidence of general repute is not admissible. Evidence of general repute is also excluded by Ss 112 and 117 infra, and a finding that a man is of so desperate and dangerous a character must be based on evidence of facts. It is not sufficient to do so by some vague and general evidence that some one was robbed or assaulted and people say that the accused was responsible for it,

3 Cr. L.J. 290; 5 C.W.N. 249; 11 C.W.N. 788. When a person is charged under cl. (f) only evidence of general repute is inadmissible. 34 M. 255; 225 A. 273; 11 C.W.N. 789; 13 C.W.N. 244; 29 C. 779; where the evidence produced against a person amounts to no more than that he is a nuisance to his neighbours, refuses to pay his debts, abuses people who sell goods to him and makes indecent overtures to school-boys who passed by his shop, it was held, these will not justify an order under clause (f) of this section, 16 Cr. L.J. 582=30 Ind. Cas. 124. Evidence of repute must be evidence given by respectable persons of the neighbourhood acquainted with the accused. Mere evidence of suspicion that the accused did certain acts is not generally of value, 16 Cr. L.J. 553=29 Ind. Cas. 825. The burden of proving an accused's bad character is on the prosecution, and therefore when the evidence on both sides is of an indifferent and interested character, the prosecution must fail. Cases should be decided on evidence taken in Court and not on the personal knowledge of the Magistrate 27 C. 731; 11 A.L.J. 461=41 Cr. L.J. 437=20 Ind. Cas. 231.

Require such person to show cause.—Showing cause is not merely putting in a written statement, or making a verbal statement but the supporting of that statement by such evidence as the party may be able to produce. He may bring his witnesses with him or he may apply for summons to them, 22 W.R. (Cr) 9. When a person is called upon to show cause he must be ready with his evidence when he appears in Court in obedience to the notice. That is the meaning of the expression to show cause. If he is unable to bring the witnesses with him he must immediately apply for summons to them, 9 Bom. L.R. 1385. By this expression the legislature did not intend that all the fundamental principles of jurisprudence in connection with criminal cases should, by dint of such an ambiguous phrase, be reversed. It is not for him who is free and who has not transgressed the law to show why he should remain free and why his freedom should not be qualified. It is for him who wishes to take away that freedom or wishes to qualify it, to establish circumstances which, by the force of law, would operate either in defence of, or in derogation of that freedom. Such has been the rule of law of all civilized nations pre-eminently of the English people; and words of most undoubted and express import are required before one can be convinced that the British rule, in legislating for the Indian people, intended to alter the principle of criminal law which it may be presumed to have brought from England, and which, indeed, it found in full force extant in India itself as a doctrine of the Muhammadan criminal law, which constituted the common law of the land at the advent of the British rule and which till comparatively recent times, was maintained as almost the only available guide in criminal cases, 9 A. 432 at 450 referring to 9 B.L.R. (F.B) 46 and 2 N.W.P.H.C.R., p. 431. See also 27 C. 731. Reasonable time should be allowed to the person proceeded against to show cause he must have sufficient time to bring the witnesses and have their evidence recorded, 31 C. 808. It has been held times without number that under S. 107, supra, Magistrate should hold an independent inquiry and should not act on the mere readiness of the accused to furnish security. In principle there is no distinction between proceedings under S. 107 and under this section. In either case it is the duty of the Magistrate to hold an inquiry and not to bind down a person merely because he agrees to furnish security, 24 A.L.J. 317=27 Cr. L.J. 370=92 Ind. Cas. 882. See also 37 A. 30; 34 M. 139; 35 C. 674; 25 Cr. L.J. 710=81 Ind. Cas. 193; 54 Ind. Cas. 411 and 784; 23 Cr. L.J. 173=65 Ind. Cas. 633; 30 M. 330. But see 46 A. 109, where it was held that where after due inquiry and notice a free consent amounting to a plea of guilty has been given, the Court may act on such consent and pass an order. See also 25 A.L.J. 819 which takes the same view as was taken in 46 A. 109. See also 50 A. 599 at 603. Before an order is passed the accused should be given an opportunity of entering on his defence and he should be clearly informed of the accusation he has to meet, 11 C. 13. It is incumbent on the Magistrate under S. 112, infra, to make an order setting forth the substance of information, etc., mentioned in this section; mere information to an accused that he is a suspect is hardly sufficient, 42 A. 646. Section 117 infra requires that proceedings under this section should be conducted as nearly as may be practicable in conducting trials and recording evidence as in warrant cases except no charge need be framed. The reason for this exception is what is equivalent to a charge has already been framed in the preliminary order under

S. 112 infra already served on the accused. There is no reason why the provisions of Ss. 254 and 255 infra should not be applied to these proceedings. If the Magistrate is satisfied that a prima facie case is made out and the accused elects to defend, the Magistrate is bound to ask the accused whether he wishes to cross-examine any of the prosecution witnesses and if he says yes, then the Magistrate is bound to give him an opportunity to do so. This procedure may cause inconvenience in many cases as it is more convenient to the Magistrate to insist upon accused cross-examining immediately whether he wishes to do so or not, but it is plainly not the law and the accused is entitled to have an opportunity of cross-examining in accordance with law. Such reasonable opportunity should be given to the accused, 50 A. 71 at 73-74 where 35 C. 213 and 10 A.L.J. 382 are referred to. Thus S. 256 infra is applicable to these proceedings but the accused although he is entitled to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses, he has no right of further cross-examination of the witnesses before entering on his defence as in warrant-cases, 35 C. 243; 1916 P.R. (Cr. J.) 1; 17 Cr. L.J. 84=32 Ind. Cas. 676; 23 Cr. L.J. 239=99 Ind. Cas. 1039. See also 7 Lah. 263 following 33 C. 243 and 17 Cr. L.J. 84. In 43 M. 511 (F.B.) it was held that S. 117 (2) infra attracts to itself all the provisions relating to the trial of warrant-cases and so the accused had the right of further cross-examination of the prosecution witness under S. 256 infra. The question as to this right has now been referred to a Full Bench, 56 M.L.J. (Sh. n.) 43, which after hearing full argument has reserved Judgment. For the decision of the F.B. see notes under S. 256, infra. In case detailed information as to the nature of the evidence to be adduced by the prosecution is not given to the person proceeded against in the notice issued to him and he is taken by surprise, the accused is entitled to ask the Magistrate to give him sufficient time to commence the cross-examination, 20 Cr. L.J. 436=51 Ind. Cas. 260. When fresh proceedings are taken after the expiration of the period of a bond for good behaviour previously taken, such proceedings must be confined to facts and circumstances alleged after release from last security, 19 C.W.N. 223.

To execute a bond with sureties.—There is no provision of law empowering a Magistrate to call upon a person to provide sureties for good behaviour without his giving his own bond at the same time, 27 A. 262. The object of requiring sureties for good behaviour is that sureties should have an interest in seeing that the person from whom security is taken does behave well and they should also be in a position to exercise their influence over the man, 1893 A.W.N. 140; 20 A. 206, but a Magistrate has no power to impose arbitrary conditions, 22 Cr. L.J. 393=61 Ind. Cas. 253; in fixing the amount of security a Magistrate should consider the station in life of the person concerned, and should not go beyond a sum for which there is a fair probability of his being able to find security, 1901 P.L.R. (Cr. J.) 24 p. 69. In 33 C. 400 it was held that the test is not whether the surety can supervise the person bound over but whether the surety is of sufficient substance to warrant his being accepted. See also 30 C.W.N. 791; 23 Cr. L.J. 10=99 Ind. Cas. 42. The fact that the sureties are relatives of the accused far from being a disqualification is an additional qualification, provided they are in other respects suitable, 25 A. 131. When once a surety-bond is accepted it cannot be cancelled on the information that the surety is not a man of means, 29 C. 433. As to the form of bond see Sch. VI, No. 11. See S. 514, infra, as to forfeiture of bond. When a person forfeits his bond by reason of his having been convicted for an offence involving a breach of the peace, he cannot be forthwith committed to prison for the unexpired portion of the term for which security was demanded but the amount of the forfeited bond might be exacted, 28 A. 629.

Joint inquiry.—The principle of misjoinder of charges and of persons applies to inquiries under this chapter, 8 C.W.N. 193; 9 A. 432 at 437; 4 M.H.C.R. Appx. 46; a number of persons should not be tried together unless they are confederates or partners in the affair, 21 A.L.J. 641=23 Cr. L.J. 632=81 Ind. Cas. 600; 45 A. 109 at 111. Ordinarily every person has to be tried separately under this section. A joint inquiry is only permissible when two or more persons have been associated together for the purpose of committing offences mentioned in cls (a) to (f) which are under inquiry, 13 C.W.N. 244=10 Cr. L.J. 460=4 Ind. Cas. 10, unless this circumstance is established a joint inquiry is illegal, [1923] Pat. 8; 45 A. 109; Weir II, 52; 9 A. 432; 1881 A.W.N. 23; 13 Cr. L.J. 760=17 Ind. Cas. 72;

16 Cr. L.J. 136=27 Ind. Cas. 203=1914 P.R. (Cr.) 21; 37 C. 91; 22 C.W.N. 1x; 13 C.W.N. 244; 14 Bom. L.R. 373; 20 Cr.L.J. 221. See sub-section (5) of S. 117, infra. Although sub-section (4) permits joint inquiry against several suspects associated together, it is the duty of the Magistrate to consider the case of each suspect individually on its own merits and come to a separate finding with regard to each of them, 25 Cr. L.J. 1377=83 Ind. Cas. 337. It is not permissible to take proceedings under this section against several persons jointly unless such persons are confederates or partisans or against whom all the evidence is equally applicable, 45 A. 109; 8 L.W. 461; 10 L.W. 267=(1919) M.W.N. 639=20 Cr. L.J. 763. Where the persons proceeded against formed one gang with one purpose and each act spoken to is an act prompted by that common object and directed towards accomplishing it, a joint trial is proper, 51 M. 515 distinguishing 47 M.L.J. 689; 27 C. 781 and 45 A. 109. Where proceedings were taken against two persons not only for their conduct coming within cl. (d) and (e) of this section, but also under cl. (f) for the reason that they were so desperate and dangerous as to render their being at large without security hazardous to the community and both the persons proceeded against were tried jointly and evidence relating exclusively to the nefarious acts of each of them was let in, in addition to the evidence regarding the events in which it was alleged that they were associated together and the Magistrate passed an order against both, on a consideration of the entire evidence thus introduced into the record against both, it was held that the joint trial was bad and prejudiced them. Without laying down any rule or consulting any section, commonsense and common justice dictates that proceedings against a person for badmashi should be confined to himself alone unless the case is that he has a confederate or a partner to whom all the evidence is equally applicable, 45 A. 109 at 111 followed in 47 M.L.J. 689; 26 Cr. L.J. 378=89 Ind. Cas. 910. But where by holding such inquiry no prejudice has resulted and the lower Court had excluded from consideration evidence which did not apply directly to the case of each accused such joint enquiry was held to be not illegal, 26 Cr. L.J. 1114=38 Ind. Cas. 282 where 45 A. 109 is distinguished. Persons belonging to two contending factions should not be legally dealt with and bound over in one proceeding. Such persons cannot be said to be associated together in the matter under inquiry within the meaning of S. 117, infra. A joint inquiry is therefore bad and vitiates the entire proceeding, 9 Cr. L. J. 560=2 Ind. Cas. 240 where 11 C.W.N. 472, 5 Cr.L.J. 197 and 31 M. 276 are followed.

Transfer.—A case under this section can be transferred by a District Magistrate as under S. 192, infra, he is entitled to transfer any case cognizable by a Criminal Court. The words 'any case' in S. 192 include a case under this section. Even if the Magistrate has no such power to transfer but does so erroneously and in good faith S. 529 (f) declares that his proceedings will not be void, 35 C. 243; 24 Cr. L.J. 31=71 Ind. Cas. 79, but it has been held that when a transfer is made to the file of a first Class Magistrate who has ordinarily, jurisdiction throughout a district but not specially empowered under this section, he cannot exercise jurisdiction under this section, 23 C. 898. It has been doubted whether S. 192 or S. 526 infra, would apply to proceedings under Ch. VIII and Ch. XII of the Code. The decisions in 31 C. 350; 26 M. 188 remove the doubt but 25 B. 179 took a different view. It was held in 16 A. 9; 30 A. 47; 19 A. 291 that proceedings under this section cannot be transferred to any Court outside the district within such proceedings have been instituted but see the later rulings in, 32 A. 642; 12 A L J. 736 which hold that proceedings can be transferred by the High Court. See 36 A. 239 as to grounds sufficient for a transfer. In 17 C.W.N. 536 the Court remarked as to the inconvenience of transferring security proceedings from one district to another thus. "As a rule it would not be at all in accordance with our view of our duty to transfer any preventive proceedings from one district to another. It must be an extremely exceptional case that could justify the interference of this Court with the jurisdiction of the Magistrate of the district taking preventive action within his own boundaries and imposing such foreign and extraneous duty on the Magistrate of another district. It would always involve the employment of no less an authority than the District Magistrate himself, for it is impossible for a Subordinate Magistrate in a foreign district to take cognizance of proceedings of the District Magistrate of his district. This would cause the greatest inconvenience and dislocation of judicial work."

Proceedings taken under this section should be disposed of by the Magistrate who initiated the same. He cannot after recording evidence send up the case to the District Magistrate without passing final orders and the District Magistrate has no jurisdiction to dispose of the case so sent up, 14 Bom. L.R. 713=13 Cr. L.J. 749=17 Ind. Cas. 60.

Appeal and revision.—An appeal lies to the High Court from final orders passed by a Presidency Magistrate, and from all other Magistrates the appeal lies to the Sessions Court, but, Local Government is empowered to notify that in any District appeal from Magistrates shall lie to the District Magistrate and not to Court of Session. S. 406 infra. If a Subordinate Magistrate refers a case to the Sessions Judge under S. 123 (2) infra then the final order being that of the Sessions Judge, no appeal lay to the District Magistrate. Orders passed by a District Magistrate under this section can be revised by the High Court on the same grounds on which revisional powers are exercised in non-appealable sentences and orders. The High Court is not a Court of appeal in proceedings under this section and the responsibility of administering that section does not rest with it. The High Court will not weigh evidence, but will only see that the Courts below have approached the question in a fair way and when the lower Courts have not approached the case from proper standpoint, it will interfere in revision, 13 A.L.J. 1046=16 Cr. L.J. 803=31 Ind. Cas. 821; 23 Cr. L.J. 515=102 Ind. Cas. 211 where, 13 A.L.J. 1046 is followed. Although it is not the practice in revision to look into the evidence in cases under this section in exceptional cases the High Court will do so, for example when a person is bound over on evidence that he was suspected of having committed murders such class of evidence being wholly inadmissible for binding over a person under this section the High Court set aside the order of the lower Court in revision 28 Cr. L.J. 8=99 Ind. Cas. 40 where 11 A.L.J. 451=14 Cr. L.J. 437=23 Ind. Cas. 231 is followed. Although the High Court is not a Court of appeal in cases under this section and the responsibility of administering that section which ought to be administered with scrupulous care both by the Court of first instance and by the appellate Court, it only when something appears unsatisfactory and unusual, the High Court will look into the record to examine if the order had been properly passed, 28 Cr. L.J. 532=101 Ind. Cas. 836. Before affirming an order under this section the High Court must be satisfied that the evidence in the case was of such a character which made it imperative in the interests of public security to pass an order under S. 118 infra, 28 Cr. L.J. 515=102 Ind. Cas. 211 where 22 A.L.J. 678=25 Cr. L.J. 1172=82 Ind. Cas. 36, is referred to. The High Court being thus not a Court of Criminal appeal in cases under this section its duty is not to weigh the evidence given on behalf of one side or other but only to see whether the Court below has approached the case in a fair way having regard to the interest not only of the prosecution but also the accused, 25 Cr. L.J. 1293=89 Ind. Cas. 147; 13 Cr. L.J. 9=13 Ind. Cas. 102; 13 A.L.J. 1046=16 Cr. L.J. 803=31 Ind. Cas. 821. In 6 A.L.J. 487=9 Cr. L.J. 528=2 Ind. Cas. 225, it was held that the High Court will not interfere in revision on the merits with an order under this section, provided the appellate Court under S. 406, infra has really considered the evidence on record. The High Court ordinarily does not interfere in the preliminary stage with the discretion of Magistrates taking action under this section, but where the materials on which the order is based are clearly insufficient to support the order, it does interfere, 38 C.L.J. 198; 17 C.W.N. 233=16 C.L.J. 457. See also 41 M. 246. No Letters Patent Appeal lies against the order of a single Judge of the High Court as proceedings under this Chapter are criminal trials, 39 M. 539.

Further inquiry.—Before the amendment of S. 436 infra it was held that, a District Magistrate was competent to direct a further inquiry into the case when a first class Magistrate discharged an accused against whom proceedings were taken under Chap VIII, as such person was an accused person within S. 436, infra, 21 A. 107; 15 B. 561; 24 A. 143, 27 C. 662 and S. 436 infra was not intended for having a review of the proceedings under this section, merely because the District Magistrate took a different view of the evidence, from that taken by the trying Magistrate especially when no further evidence is available, 44 A. 691. The change effected in S. 436, infra is very significant. The words "any accused person" has been altered into "any person accused of an offence" and certainly a person proceeded against under this section cannot be said to be a person accused of an offence and the information against him will not amount to a complaint within the meaning of S. 4 (1) (b) supra, 23 Cr. L.J. 89=76 Ind. Cas. 23. Consequently if a Magistrate responsible for the peace of his division is not satisfied with the advisability of taking proceedings under this section his discretion is not open to interference by a superior Court, 25 Cr. L.J. 1149=81 Ind. Cas. 973; 2 Ran. 30; 24 Cr. L.J. 825=74 Ind. Cas. 857; 50 A. 408. The recent amendment removes the doubt if any which existed before and no further inquiry can be made now. An order under S. 113 by an Additional District Magistrate in a proceeding under this section is appealable to the District Magistrate, 48 C. 874. When proceedings were set aside on appeal by the District Magistrate he has no power to order further inquiry in proceedings under this section, 33 C. 8. In an appeal from an order, the appellate Court can either alter or reverse it under S. 423 (1) (c) infra. So a District Magistrate on appeal from an order demanding security could either reverse it or alter it e.g., by reducing the amount of security. An order for further inquiry does not fall under either category. So an order for retrial is illegal, 30 Cr. L.J. 491 (1)=115 Ind. Cas. 544 See 33 M. 83, where it was held that no order for further inquiry could be made if the case resulted in a discharge under S. 119 infra, see also 35 M. 313. See S. 590, cl. (d) which declares that if a Magistrate not empowered acts under this section his proceedings are void.

111. [Proviso as to European vagrants] Repealed by Act XII of 1923, section 8.

112. When a Magistrate acting under section 107, section 108, section 109 or section 110 deems it necessary to require any person to show cause under such section, Order to be made. he shall make an order in writing, setting forth the substance of the information received, the amount of the bond to be executed, the term for which it is to be in force, and the number, character and class of sureties (if any) required.

Object of the section.—This section provides that notice should be given to the accused as to the case he has to meet. He is entitled as a matter of right, as any person accused of a substantive offence to have a reasonable opportunity of defending himself, 27 Cr. L.J. 935=96 Ind. Cas. 391. Each accused is entitled to have a separate notice and not a joint notice with others. Charges which are going to be made against one should not be confused with charges they are being made against somebody else, 30 Cr. L.J. 532 at 564=115 Ind. Cas. 25. The party proceeded against should have due notice of the facts on which the Magistrate proposed to proceed against him. The notice should very effectually show under which of the sub clauses of S. 103 or S. 110 the case falls, so that the accused may know more clearly what is the case he has to meet. Merely telling an accused person that he is a suspected thief, is not a compliance with the imperative provisions of this section, because that does not give the person alleged to be of that character not the slightest intimation as to what are the grounds upon which it is based. If such a notice is sufficient, all that would be necessary would be to call upon anybody in India to show cause on a mere statement that he is suspected by the police to be a habitual thief, but the procedure clearly requires something in the nature of an indictment or charge containing substantial particulars indicating the grounds upon which the police have given the information to the Magistrate, 42 A. 645. It is clear that merely setting out in a notice under this section that a man is a habitual thief or robber and having the prosecution witnesses ready there and then to go on with the case is not what the Legislature contemplated. However guilty a man may be, he is entitled, to a trial which is not a sham but a real trial where the accused knows something about what is happening to him, 49 A. 5 where 42 A. 645 is followed. If this is not made clear in the notice the final order is liable to be set aside, 30 M. 282; 11 C. 13. The order under this section stands in the place of a charge in the trial of a warrant case and it is the intention of the Code that an accused person should have at his own house the fullest information as to the reasons why his liberty is liable to be endangered, 14 A. 43; 6 A. 25; but a Magistrate is not bound to disclose the source of his information or which he is acting, 27 A. 172. The parties must be in a position to bring their evidence to rebut the truth of the information, 6 A. 214; 11 C. 13. But omission to set forth the substance of the information received may not necessarily vitiate the proceedings if as a matter of fact the accused had clear notice of the case against him and had ample reason and opportunity to let in evidence, 23 Cr. L.J. 42—64 Ind. Cas. 668; 27 Cr. L.J. 575—94 Ind. Cas. 143.

Deems it necessary.—The Magistrate is bound to state before issuing process that in his opinion a breach of the peace is likely to take place, 6 A. 26 at 30.

Shall make an order in writing.—The provisions of this section are imperative, not merely directory. If a Magistrate before taking action under §. 107, supra omits to issue a notice in writing as required by this section, his omission was a non-compliance with an express provision of law rendering his subsequent proceedings void, 30 M. 282. It has been again and again pointed out to the police and the Magistrates the general desirability of proceeding in security cases strictly in accordance with the provisions of the Code but the advice repeatedly given is as regularly ignored. The proceedings ought to commence with what purports to be an order under this section by which it is sought to give notice to the accused of the charges he had to meet, 26 A.L.J. 519 at 523. See also 47 M.L.J. 689. But a different view was taken in 1891 A.W.N. 40; 15 W.R. (Cr.) 43; see also 11 Bom. L.R. 742—10 Cr. L.J. 373—3 Ind. Cas. 774. The order is only a preliminary notice, 30 M. 282, and is not in the nature of a rule nisi implying that the burden of proving innocence is on the person proceeded against. In drawing up the preliminary order the Magistrate should specify in what way and with reference to what matter the person proceeded against is likely to commit a breach of the peace. A proceeding which merely reproduces the words of §. 107, supra without giving any particulars is vague and cannot be supported, 30 Cr. L.J. 492—115 Ind. Cas. 545. The onus lies always on the prosecution to establish circumstances justifying the action taken, 9 A. 452; 12 W.R. (Cr.) 60; 4 B.L.R. 46 (F.B.); 3 Bom. L.R. 269. The preliminary order must state the amount of the bond to be executed and the term for which the bond is to be in force, 2 Ran. 524. Omission to state the amount of the bond to be executed is only an irregularity, 8 C. 724. It is only after an order in writing under this section has been passed the Magistrate is empowered to issue a warrant against a suspect to prevent the commission of an offence, 27 Cr. L.J. 935—96 Ind. Cas. 391.

Require him to show cause.—The object of serving the preliminary order on the person proceeded against is to acquaint him with the details of the order itself and to enable him to defend himself against the allegations upon which the order was made. The preliminary order must state the amount of the bond to be executed and time for which it is to be in force, 2 Ran. 524. If the person proceeded against was absent and the preliminary order was not served on him it is a sufficient compliance with law, if the order is read out to him in Court when he appears, 23 Cr. L.J. 132—76 Ind. Cas. 228; but in 47 M.L.J. 689, it was held that the object being to enable the accused to prepare his defence and to summon his witnesses before the hearing commences the defects in the notice cannot be remedied by explanations given by the prosecuting inspector at the commencement of the trial. The issue of a preliminary order is not a formal matter. It is a judicial act to be exercised after due consideration of the materials placed before the Magistrate. Where the notice issued was very meagre and did not contain sufficient details regarding the charges brought against the persons proceeded against the whole proceedings are vitiated, 47 M.L.J. 689; (1925) M.W.N. 57—26 Cr. L.J. 673—88 Ind. Cas. 49; 12 A.L.J. 336; 27 Cr. L.J. 318—92 Ind. Cas. 702; 45 A. 109; 49 A. 5 but see 27 Cr. L.J. 575—94 Ind. Cas. 143, where it was held that the High Court ought not set aside the final order for non-compliance strictly of the provisions of this and §. 118 infra when the accused had been sufficiently informed of the allegations against him. See also 27 Cr. L.J. 1132=97 Ind. Cas. 652. The notice must show under which sub-section the person is sought to be proceeded against. A mere statement that he is one of criminal tendencies or is suspected of having committed crimes is insufficient and violates proceedings, 26 Cr. L.J. 1377=89 Ind. Cas. 513. "When a person is called upon to show cause why he should not be required to give security for good behaviour, he must be ready with his evidence when he appears in obedience to the notice. That is the meaning of the expression 'to show cause.' If he is unable to bring the evidence with him on account of the shortness of the notice or other reasonable cause, it is his duty when he appears, to apply at once for summonses to the witnesses he proposes to call, 9 Bom. L.R. 1333. 'Showing cause' is not merely filing a written statement or making a verbal one but the supporting of that statement by such evidence as the party may be able to produce, 23 W.R. (Cr.) 9 at 11. Accused should be given ample opportunity of obtaining legal assistance before evidence is adduced for the prosecution, 42 A. 645. He must have time to bring his witnesses, 41 C. 806. A notice to show cause why security should not be taken for keeping the peace cannot form the basis of an order passed for security for good behaviour or vice versa, 25 C. 793; 30 M. 282.

Setting forth the substance of the information received.—The substance of the information received must be more than a bare statement that a man is a habitual thief, or a habitual committer of mischief, or is so desperate and dangerous as to render his being at large without security hazardous to the community or whatever may be brought against him and it is obligatory for the Magistrate to set forth the particulars, 42 A. 616; 49 A. 5; 47 M.L.J. 689. The words should not be interpreted to mean anything more than the gist of the information. It is not necessary to state anything more than which will show the person against whom proceedings are taken, the particular sub-section on which it is proposed to proceed against him. The words cannot be read as requiring in law, the particulars which the above decisions consider it necessary. The information which justifies taking action under this section may be the barest information. It may be lacking in details and in particulars. If for example, a Magistrate receives information from a police officer that a certain person is a habitual thief, the Magistrate has a right to proceed to the next stage and issue a notice to him. He may be unwise in taking such action without carefully checking the information. It may be lacking in details but he has a legal right to take such action, and if his information is meagre, the substance of his information would be meagre. Nevertheless it is sufficient for him to state it to make his order under this section valid. If he has taken action on insufficient information, the proceedings may on the evidence be found to have been without justification. No ill results will follow from the adoption of this view. Subsequent procedure under this chapter when examined shows that inquiry proceeds as in warrant cases (S. 117 (2) infra) except no charge need be framed. In warrant cases when a man is put on his trial he receives no information as to the nature of the charge against him until a considerable amount of prosecution evidence has been recorded. It is then that a charge is framed but in many instances the actual wording of the charges gives very little information of the nature of the case. In a charge of theft, the owner of the property stolen need not be stated and it need not state what the subject of theft is. The information is bare to a degree (See Form XXVIII (1) 3, Sch. V). Yet it is all the information which the Legislature considers it necessary to give to the accused on that charge. Once an accused has heard the evidence against him he is not put to any real hardship by reason of the brevity of the charge. Therefore a person against whom proceedings are started under this section as a habitual thief cannot have any grievance because the notice read out to him states simply 'it is alleged you are a habitual thief' by reason of lack of particulars, 2 Luck. 157.

Amount of the bond to be executed.—The amount should not be excessive, 16 B. 372 and the Magistrate is not entitled to demand a larger amount than that specified in the notice to show cause. The order under this section must be such that if a suspect has a bona fide intention to be of good behaviour it will not be impossible for him to find sureties and the order should also be clear in its provisions. It is not unreasonable to stipulate that the surety should be at least of equal standing to the accused, 16 Cr. L.J. 100.

Number, character and class of sureties required.—Arbitrary conditions as to sureties are not warranted by law. The condition that sureties should be respectable land-holders, 4 M.H.C.R. (App.) 46, that the sureties should not be from the accused's village and must be of a particular class, 1 Bom. L.R. 52, are equivalent to saying that he must go to jail; where a Magistrate required sureties being persons of respectability and substance not related to the accused and residing within one mile of his house and as a matter of fact no person of respectability resided within a mile, it was held that to impose such arbitrary conditions was tantamount to saying that the accused shall not furnish any security at all but must go to jail, 22 W.R. (Cr) 37. A condition that a surety should be willing to pledge his landed estates and immovable properties is, in majority of cases compelling a man to do that which he will never be able to do, and tantamount to a sentence of imprisonment, 7 N.W.P.H.C.R. 219. There seems to be some conflict of decisions as to whether sureties should be persons who will be able to supervise and control the accused and whether a surety offered, who is unable to control the principal should be accepted or not. The Allahabad High Court in 20 A. 206; 24 A. 471; 8 A.L.J. 793; 10 A.L.J. 354, took the view that a surety who is unfit to control the behaviour of the accused being a non-resident of the village ought not to be accepted. But the Calcutta High Court in 24 C. 133; 4 C.W.N. 797; 6 C.W.N. 593; 37 C. 433 and 91 took a different view. In the later decision of the Calcutta High Court in 13 C.W.N. 82, the correctness of the decisions in 4 C.W.N. 797; 6 C.W.N. 593, are doubted. See also 41 C. 764; 33 C. 400; 23 Cr. L.J. 10=93 Ind. Cas. 42.

The term for which it is to be in force.—An order requiring a person to give security for a longer term than that specified in the notice issued under this section is illegal, 26 M. 471; see 6 A. 213 as to the principles which should guide Courts in fixing the term. The term for which security is taken should cease with the necessity, e.g., taking security, when disturbance is apprehended at a fair which is to last only for a fortnight. The period for which security is given commences not from the date of the preliminary order but from the date of the final order under S. 118 infra, 51 M. 515.

113. If the person in respect of whom such order is made is present in Court, it shall be read over to him, or, if he so desires, the substance thereof shall be explained to him.

Procedure in respect of person present in Court.

Is present in Court.—Mere presence is sufficient. If the person is present in Court it is sufficient to read out to him the substance of the proceedings, 21 Cr. L.J. 325=53 Ind. Cas. 593. When a person appears in Court to show cause in pursuance of an order passed under S. 112 supra, served on him, the Magistrate passed a different order under S. 112 supra demanding higher security from him and he read out to him the later order passed under S. 112 supra as required by this section it was held the procedure adopted was proper 28 Cr. L.J. 815=104 Ind. Cas. 255. The question whether he was brought there legally or illegally or was under arrest or not is quite immaterial, 12 Cr. L.J. 833=12 Ind. Cas. 331; 6 N.W.P.H.C.R. 336; 2 B.L.R. (Appx.) 23; 35 B. 225; 31 C. 557; 26 M. 121.

Issue a warrant.—A warrant cannot be legally issued under this section unless the person proceeded against be actually and physically present in the district, the object being to prevent commission of future offences; this object can equally be served by a person voluntarily banishing himself out of the district, 14 Bom. L.R. 889=13 Cr. L.J. 796=17 Ind. Cas. 540.

114. If such person is not present in Court, the Magistrate shall issue a summons requiring him to appear, or, when such person is in custody, a warrant directing the officer in whose custody he is, to bring him before the Courts:

Summons or warrant in case of person not so present.

Provided that whenever it appears to such Magistrate, upon the report of a police-officer or upon other information (the substance of which report or information shall be recorded by the Magistrate), that there is reason to fear the commission of a breach of the peace, and that such breach of the peace cannot be prevented otherwise than by the immediate arrest of such person, the Magistrate may at any time issue a warrant for his arrest.

Shall issue a summons requiring him to appear.—The object of serving a notice on the suspect while under police custody is this: the police can arrest a suspected criminal under S. 55 supra and they may proceed against him either for a substantive offence or under this Chapter for taking security from him and it is for that reason, this section contemplates a notice to the suspect, 27 Cr. L.J. 623=94 Ind. Cas. 404. It is clear from this section that it is not necessary to serve a copy of the proceedings on a person who is present in Court. It is sufficient to read it out to him under S. 113 supra, 21 Cr.L.J. 321=55 Ind. Cas. 593. Reasonable time should be given to the person summoned to meet the charge against him and to have his evidence adduced, 41 C. 806; 6 A. 214.

For form of summons, see Sch. V, No. 12, infra.

Proviso to the section.—The proviso contains two stringent elements obviously directed against any ill-considered precipitancy on the part of the Magistrate. (1) A Magistrate must be of opinion that the only way to prevent a breach of the peace is to commit the person to custody, (2) the Magistrate must record the substance of the police report or other information on which he is acting, 24 Cr. L.J. 829=74 Ind. Cas. 861. The words here "there is reason to fear the commission of a breach of the peace" seem to suggest that the proviso applies only to cases falling under S. 107, supra. The Calcutta High Court in 32 C. 80 doubted whether the proviso applied to the case where a Magistrate re-arrested a person who had already appeared before him and was admitted to bail. Even granting that the Magistrate had power to re-arrest, the accused ought not to be remanded but must be released on bail except in the special circumstances referred to in cls. (3) and (4) of S. 107, supra; when the Magistrate has not followed the procedure prescribed by this proviso an order of committal to custody cannot be supported, 31 M. 315. The question whether the proviso applied to the case of a person who is present in Court, was left undecided in the above case; not only must the Magistrate have "reason to fear the commission of a breach of the peace" but that such breach of the peace cannot be prevented otherwise than by the immediate arrest of such person, 6 A. 132 at 133; 14 A. 43. It is only after the Magistrate has passed an order under S. 112 supra and satisfied himself that there is reason to fear a breach of the peace which ought to be prevented, he can issue a warrant against a suspect, 27 Cr. L.J. 935=96 Ind. Cas. 391. A warrant cannot legally be issued under this section unless the person proceeded against be actually and physically present in the district. The object being to prevent commission of future offences it is equally served by a person voluntarily banishing himself out of the district, 14 Bom. L.R. 889=13 Cr. L.J. 796=17 Ind. Cas. 540; but see 46 C. 215 which takes a different view.

Revision.—The High Court has jurisdiction to revise orders passed under this section, 25 C. 233; 22 C. 131; 20 B. 543; 1891 A.W.N. 219; 11 Cr. L.J. 393=6 Ind. Cas. 626.

115. Every summons or warrant issued under section 114 shall be accompanied by a copy of the order made under section 112, and such copy shall be delivered by the officer serving or executing such summons or warrant to the person served with, or arrested under the same.

Copy of order under section 112 to accompany summons or warrant.

Shall be accompanied by a copy of the order under S. 112.—The order in writing setting forth the substance of the information upon which the Magistrate professes to act should always, except in cases in which action has been taken under S. 55, supra accompany the summons issued under this section and in no case should a Magistrate acting under S. 112 issue a warrant of arrest except upon the clearest grounds for belief that unless he issues such warrant a breach of the peace is inevitable. It is the intention of the Code that any man called to meet the exceptional procedure laid down in this Chapter should at his own house have the fullest information, compatible with the circumstances of the case as to the reasons why his liberty is in danger of being interfered with. Only when a breach of the peace is imminent should the action taken under this Chapter be of a prompt and vigorous nature. To deprive any person of his liberty is a most serious step to take, and it is hardly too much to say that every step in the process should show extreme deliberation and care and if a person has to be arrested previous to inquiry he should be given the option of release upon proper bail, 14 A. 43 at 47. When a warrant was not accompanied by a copy of the order under S. 112, infra as required by this section the proceedings of the Magistrate were held illegal, Weir II, 55; 17 M.L.J. 438, but see 11 Bom. L.R. 740=10 Cr. L.J. 375=3 Ind. Cas. 774 which takes a different view and holds that S. 537, infra cures the irregularity. See also 21 Cr. L.J. 321=55 Ind. Cas. 593.

Such copy shall be delivered.—See Ss. 70 and 71 as to the mode of service of summons. The serving officer is to certify to the delivery of the copy of the order.

116. The Magistrate may, if he sees sufficient cause, dispense with the personal attendance of any person called upon to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond for keeping the peace, and may permit him to appear by a pleader.

Power to dispense with personal attendance.

May dispense with personal attendance.—There is a marked distinction made in the Code between proceedings under S. 107, supra and those under S. 108 or 109 or 110 supra. Personal attendance can be dispensed with only in proceedings under the former section to keep the peace, Weir II, 54. When proceedings are taken against a person who is at a distance and there was no special ground making his personal attendance necessary, it would be an unwise exercise of jurisdiction to require him to appear personally as the Magistrate has power to allow him to appear by a pleader, 12 C. 133 at 136.

117. (1) When an order under section 112 has been read or explained under section 113 to a person present in Court, or when any person appears or is brought before a Magistrate in compliance with, or in execution of, a summons or warrant issued under section 114, the Magistrate shall proceed to inquire into the truth of the information upon which action has been taken, and to take such further evidence as may appear necessary.

Inquiry as to truth of information.

(2) Such inquiry shall be made, as nearly as may be practicable where the order requires security for keeping the peace, in the manner hereinafter prescribed for conducting trials and recording evidence in summons-cases; and where the order requires security for good behaviour in the manner hereinafter prescribed for conducting trials and recording evidence in warrant-cases, except that no charge need be framed.

(3) Pending the completion of the inquiry under sub-section (1) the Magistrate, if he considers that immediate measures are necessary for the prevention of a breach of the peace or disturbance of the public tranquillity or the commission of any offence or for the public safety, may, for reasons to be recorded in writing, direct the person in respect of whom the order under section 112 has been made to execute a bond, with or without sureties, for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour until the conclusion of the inquiry, and may detain him in custody until such bond is executed or, in default of execution, until the inquiry is concluded :

Provided that —

(a) no person against whom proceedings are not being taken under section 108, section 109, or section 110, shall be directed to execute a bond for maintaining good behaviour, and

(b) the conditions of such bond whether as to the amount thereof or as to the provision of sureties or the number thereof or the pecuniary extent of their liability, shall not be more onerous than those specified in the order under section 112.

(4) For the purposes of this section the fact that a person is an habitual offender or is so desperate or dangerous as to render his being at large without security hazardous to the community may be proved by evidence of general repute or otherwise.

(5) Where two or more persons have been associated together in the matter under inquiry, they may be dealt with in the same or separate inquiries as the Magistrate shall think just.

Amendment.—Sub-section (3) is new "This clause enables a Magistrate in emergent cases to take immediate steps to preserve the public peace or for the public safety by taking security pending the detailed inquiry." St. of Obs. and Reasons.

Scope of the section.—Proceedings under this Chapter are not trials but only inquiries and the person proceeded against is not an accused person as the expression is used and understood in the Code. A person proceeded against cannot be said to be accused of an offence and any information laid against him will not amount to a complaint within the meaning of S. 4 (1) (h) supra. The provisions of S. 342 infra cannot therefore apply to an inquiry under this section and the omission on the part of the Court to examine the person proceeded against will not vitiate the proceedings, 50 C. 985; but the provisions of S. 350 infra apply to an inquiry under this section, 52 C. 470 and 632. The inquiry must be a judicial inquiry and order to be passed should be based upon legal evidence duly taken, 6 B. H. C.R. (Cr. Ca.) 1; 8 B. H. C.R. (Cr. Ca.) 162; 4 M. H. C.R. Appx. xxii; 18 W.R. (Cr.) 18; 10 W.R. (Cr.) 45; 18 W.R. (Cr.) 2; 11 W.R. (Cr.) 50, 1 C. L.R. 48; 2 N.W.P. H.C.R. 431 1889 A.W.N. 114; 10 B. 173.

The Magistrate shall proceed to inquire.—The power given under this section is no doubt for the purpose of suppression of crime. But once the proceedings come into Court, this section provides that the inquiry should be a full judicial inquiry, evidence being taken in the presence of the accused and opportunity given for cross-examination of witnesses, 4 M. H. C. R. Appx. xxii; 18 W.R. (Cr) 2; 5 C.W.N. 249. The Magistrate is bound to compel the attendance of the defence witnesses unless he considers the application is made for purposes of vexation or delay or defeating the ends of justice and if he refuses, then he should record in writing the grounds of refusal as required by S. 257, infra, 26 B. 418. A proceeding under this section is an inquiry within the meaning of S. 517 infra and the Court is therefore empowered to pass an order with regard to property produced before it, 42 M. 9. The inquiry in cases requiring security to keep the peace shall be the same as in summons cases, S. 355, infra, 26 Cr. L. J. 430=85 Ind. Cas. 46, and the inquiry in good behaviour cases as in warrant cases S. 356, infra. This section requires the Magistrate to satisfy himself as to the truth of the information before making an order for the execution of a bond and when no enquiry was made the order is bad in law, 34 M. 139. A report of a Subordinate Magistrate cannot be the basis of an order under this section, 6 B.H.C.R. (Cr. Ca.) 1; 5 B.H.C.R. (Cr. Ca.) 105, although such a report might be sufficient information upon which notice to show cause might be issued. Legal evidence must be recorded to found an order under this section. 8 B.H.C.R. (Cr. Ca.) 162. It is impossible to accept the proposition that evidence tending to show the commission of a substantive offence or which might form the basis of a charge of a substantive offence is necessarily to be excluded in proceedings under this section and cannot form the basis of an order under S. 112 infra and a finding under S. 118 infra. The fact that a person proceeded against under this section was acquitted in two cases put in evidence against him will not entitle him to have all the evidence excluded of the incidents which formed the subject of his trial. It is entirely a question of value of acquittals which ought to be put in evidence for whatever value they may be worth, 47 A. 733 followed in 23 Cr. L. J. 515=102 Ind. Cas. 211. Evidence in previous cases of rioting cannot form the basis of an order under this section. The Magistrate is bound to make an inquiry as to the truth of the information received and the order passed without such inquiry is bad in law, 37 A. 30. An order demanding security cannot be passed simply because the person proceeded against agrees to furnish the required security, 24 A.L.J. 317=27 Cr. L.J. 370=92 Ind. Cas. 882 but see 25 A.L.J. 819 which takes a contrary view and holds that when the accused's statement is recorded wherein he expresses his willingness to enter into a bond to keep the peace, there was sufficient compliance with this section and the order passed is perfectly legal even though no evidence for the prosecution had been recorded. See also 50 A. 599 to the same effect.

Truth of information upon which action is taken—What constitutes the action referred to herein is (1) the making of the preliminary order under S. 112, (2) supra the reading over or explaining the substance of it under S. 113, (3) supra the issuing of a summons or warrant under S. 114 supra. The Magistrate is directed expressly by this section to inquire into the truth of the information upon which action is taken. One method of inquiry into the truth of the information is to draw the attention of the person concerned to the matters contained in the notice and to ask him whether he has any cause to show or whether he desires further inquiry or whether he disputes the allegations, or whether he is willing to be bound over on the strength of such allegations and it would be a farfetched and unreasonable interpretation to hold that a Magistrate asking such questions and inviting the person summoned to state to the Court his attitude with regard to the summons was not taking reasonable steps to inquire into the truth of the information, 50 A. 599 at 601. When a person stated he was a poor man and he had very little expectation of getting any benefit by fighting the case and therefore agreed to be bound down it was held that there was no evidence that he was about to break the peace, 35 C. 674; 30 M. 330; 7 M.L.T. 304=1910 M.W.N. 228=11 Cr. L.J. 393=6 Ind. Cas. 662. Where the person proceeded against admits the allegations in the preliminary order under S. 112 when read over to him the Magistrate cannot pass an order against him at once but should proceed to record evidence as in warrant cases. People proceeded against are often illiterate and ignorant and a mere admission is not conclusive proof, that they are persons to be bound over. The whole Chapter vests extraordinary powers in the police and Magistracy and to prevent its forming an instrument of intolerable oppression it must be worked with utmost discretion, 26 Cr. L.J. 1041=87 Ind. Cas. 961, but see 50 A. 599 and 23 A.L.J. 317. The statement of the person proceeded against that he is of bad character and he had been to jail is not sufficient, 3 Bom. L.R. 269. It is for the prosecution to prove the case. The order to show cause is not in the nature of a rule nisi throwing the onus upon the person called upon to prove his innocence, 9 A. 452; 12 W.R. (Cr) 60; 4 B.L.R. 46 (F.B.).

Take such further evidence as may appear necessary.—Such further evidence refers to evidence ejusdem generis with the evidence already recorded, i.e., the evidence as to the circumstances of the case and as to the position in life and means of the person proceeded against to fix the period of security and the amount of the bond, 15 Cr. L.J. 212=22 Ind. Cas. 996. Courts are bound to give a reasonable interpretation to language of the kind which puts on the Magistrate the duty of making up his mind whether further evidence is necessary or not. It is unreasonable to say that he has a statutory duty to take further evidence if he does not consider it necessary and it is equally unreasonable to hold that he is wrong in considering further evidence unnecessary if the Magistrate has made the person summoned to understand what the enquiry is about and has given him an opportunity of showing cause, if he wants to, and on the other hand has accepted his content to be bound over as an intimation that he has no complaint to make of the information acted upon by the Magistrate, 50 A. 599 at 600.

Sub-section (2).—Before making an order directing security for good behaviour the person proceeded against should be informed of the accusation which he has to meet and he should be given an opportunity to enter upon his defence, 11 C. 13; 6 A. 132. Under this sub-section the inquiry should as nearly as possible be in the manner prescribed for trial of summons cases in proceedings under S. 107 supra, 26 Cr. L.J. 430=85 Ind. Cas. 46 and that prescribed for warrant cases, in good behaviour cases, 12 Cr. L.J. 89=9 Ind. Cas. 468. This sub-section requires that proceedings under S. 110 supra should be conducted as nearly as may be practicable in the manner hereinafter prescribed for conducting trials and recording evidence in warrant cases except that no charge need be framed. The reason for this exception is obvious as what is equivalent to a charge has already been framed in the preliminary order served on him under S. 112 supra. According to S. 254 infra at any stage of the prosecution case the Magistrate may frame a charge. According to S. 255 supra the charge shall then be read and explained to the accused and he shall be asked whether he is guilty or has any defence to make. There is no reason why the provisions of these two sections should not be applied to an inquiry under this section except the framing and reading it over the charge to the accused; in other words at any stage of the prosecution the Magistrate if he is prima facie satisfied that there is a case against the accused, may interrogate the accused. If the accused does not plead guilty and elects to defend, the accused shall be asked which of the prosecution witnesses he wishes to cross-examine and he must be given an opportunity to cross-examine. If the Magistrate wishes to hear all the prosecution witnesses before asking the accused whether he wishes to plead guilty or to defend himself, he is of course at liberty to do so. But when the stage is reached of asking the accused whether he pleads guilty or to defend himself, he must be allowed an opportunity to cross-examine. This procedure may in some cases be inconvenient and it may be much more convenient for the Magistrate to insist upon the accused cross-examining any witnesses immediately whether they wish to do so or not and whether are represented or not but that is plainly not the law and the accused are entitled to an opportunity to cross-examine in accordance with law, 50 A. 71, but in 7 Lah. 265 following 35 C. 243 and 1916 P.R. (Cr. J.) 1 and in 17 Cr. L.J. 84=32 Ind. Cas. 676 an opposite view that the accused had no right to further cross-examine prosecution witness has been taken. The Madras High Court in 43 M. 511 (F.B.) held that this section attracts to itself all the provisions in the trial of warrant cases and the accused had the right to further cross-examine the Prosecution witnesses under S. 256 infra but the question has recently been referred to a Full Bench for decision, see 56 M.L.J. (Sh. n.) 40. The Full Bench in Cr. R. C. No. 491 of 1928 has heard full arguments and has reserved judgment. For the decision of the Full Bench see notes under S. 256 infra. The provisions of S. 350 infra apply to proceedings under this Chapter and the accused is entitled to a de novo enquiry, 23 Cr. L.J. 1380=83 Ind. Cas. 340; 43 M. 511 (F.B.).

Sub-section (3).—This sub-section empowers the Magistrate pending the completion of the inquiry under sub-section (1), if he considers immediate measures necessary for preventing a breach of the peace to direct the person proceeded against to execute a bond with or without sureties until the conclusion of the inquiry and may detain him also in custody until the execution of the bond or until the completion of the inquiry. The object of this sub-section is to empower the Magistrate to direct the person against whom an order under S. 112 supra has been made to execute a bond until the conclusion of the inquiry. The power so to direct depends upon the Magistrate holding that immediate measures are necessary for the purpose mentioned herein. The reasons for exercising the power should be recorded in writing and if reasons are recorded the provisions of the section are complied with without further evidence being adduced. 27 Cr. L.J. 1030=96 Ind. Cas. 982. Under the proviso to this sub-section an interim order of security should not be more onerous than one made under S. 112 supra Ibid. A Court acts within its jurisdiction when it requires pending an application for transfer of the proceedings to another Court, the accused to execute a bond under this sub-section and S. 626 (8) infra cannot apply, 28 Cr. L.J. 173=26 A.L.J. 393=93 Ind. Cas. 605.

Sub section (4).—The mere record of previous convictions on account of which a person has undergone punishment does not satisfy the requirements of this section, 10 B. 174. Evidence of general repute means with reference to a man's character, evidence as to his general character founded on the general opinion of the neighbourhood where he lives. The evidence as to general disposition founded on opinion of particular witnesses on personal knowledge is also admissible. Generally repute need not be general opinion of the neighbours and need not be personal knowledge of neighbours generally, and general opinion need not be publicly expressed, 26 Cr. L.J. 1283=89 Ind. Cas. 147 where 6 Cr. L.J. 256 and 97 referred to. See also 6 Cr. L.J. 97 at 99; 12 A.L.J. 937=15 Cr. L.J. 705=26 Ind. Cas. 133.

Evidence of general repute.—Victor Hugo says "In villages it is the custom to collect all petty details of a man's career and when they are put together the sum total constitutes his "reputation." Reputation is that which generally has been and what many people said and thought of a man. As to what constitutes a man's general repute or general reputation as stated in S. 55, Ind. Ev. Act, the idea conveyed by these words is well understood. Every man is certainly conscious to what his general reputation is and by necessary association of ideas he is also conscious of the limited or the extensive circle, as the case may be, within which reputation generally exists. Now the opinion held by the body of persons within the circle as to his character is, his general reputation. The evidence which discloses the opinion of such persons collectively is, therefore evidence of proof of general reputation and what that circle is, is capable of being proved. It is impossible however to define the limits of the circle. It must vary according to the position and circumstances of every particular individual. As stated before the whole idea is better understood than could be defined with any logical precision "General reputation consists in what is generally thought of one by those among whom he resides, and with whom he is chiefly conversant. Common opinion in which there is a general concurrence, the prevailing opinion in that circle where one's character is best known; what is generally said by those among whom he associates and by whom he is known, common report among those who have the best opportunity of judging of his habit and integrity; common reputation among his neighbours and acquaintances,—are so many forms of expression by which an effort has been made to define wherein consists general reputation" when it is said that reputation must be general it is meant that the community as a whole must be agreed on this opinion in order that it may be regarded a reputation. If the estimates vary and public opinion has not reached the stage of definite harmony, the opinion cannot be treated as sufficiently trustworthy. On the other hand it is impossible to exact unanimity for there are always dissenters. To define precisely that quality of public opinion thus commonly described as general reputation is therefore a difficult thing. There is on this subject often an attempt at nicety of phrase which amounts in effect to mere quibbling because the witnesses will not ordinarily appreciate the discrimination. Such requirements of definition should be avoided as unprofitable", 21 Cr. L.J. 810 at 812-813=58 Ind. Cas. 632, quoting from Wigmore on evidence. Evidence of repute must be of persons who are acquainted with the accused and live in the neighbourhood are themselves aware of his reputation. It must be the opinion formed by witnesses from specific cases coming to their knowledge and not merely from reports or rumours from others, 25 Cr. L.J. 985=81 Ind. Cas. 633. When a witness comes into Court and says 'This man is by general repute a habitual thief etc.', whether his evidence is worth anything will depend upon his position, his partiality or impartiality and whether defence have by cross-examination been able to show that the witness has no real grounds for saying that he has knowledge of his general reputation. There should really be little difficulty in prosecuting these cases if the police and the Magistracy keep clearly in view the terms of the various clauses of S. 110, supra, and the provisions of this sub section and if they bear in mind that the allegations in S. 110 can only be proved by direct evidence of people who have knowledge of facts to which they depose with the exception contained in cl. (f); a witness may say "I know the general reputation of a man to be so and so." Such evidence of general repute does not offend against the rule as to hearsay evidence. This is not hearsay but direct evidence based on knowledge of facts—the fact that people are talking about a man in a certain way and the fact that he has such and such general reputation, 26 A.L.J. 99 at 102=29 Cr. L.J. 92=106 Ind. Cas. 684. Evidence of general repute is admissible only in cases of good behaviour falling under cl. (f) of S. 110 and this is made clear by the addition made to cl. (d) of this section of the words of cl. (f) of S. 110, supra. The rulings in 25 A. 273, 29 C. 779; 5 C.W.N. 249 are no longer law. Under the provisions of S. 109 and this section, if a person is unable to prove the source of his livelihood he ought not to be ordered to execute a bond unless there is reasonable ground for suspecting that he is sustaining himself by some dishonest means, for such an order can only be made where, it is necessary for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour, 53 C. 315. Evidence need not be given to prove that the person proceeded against has been convicted of any of the offences mentioned, 3 M. 238. A wide discretion is given to the Magistrate as to the evidence which he may admit in proceedings under S. 110, supra, 1904 A.W.N. 140=1 Cr. L.J. 3. See also 6 Bom. L.R. 34=10 Cr. L.J. 315=3 Ind. Cas. 681 evidence of general repute, though hearsay, was held admissible in proceedings under this Chapter, but in 1 A.L.J. 611 and 613 it was held that a rumour of bad character is no evidence of general repute. A man's general reputation is that which he bears among the fellow townsmen or in the neighbourhood in which he lives. There should be no doubt what a man's general reputation is where a large body of respectable witnesses of the neighbourhood testify to his good character as against the evidence of police-officers, no security is to be demanded, 9 Lah. 133 following 11 Cr. L.J. 603=8 Ind. Cas. 249; 1901 P.L.R. 18; 1898 P.R. (Cr. J.) 2. General reputation may be good or bad. It is the general opinion of persons who have known the accused or have heard of him. It is certainly not rumours and has stronger basis than rumours which are generally hearsay. Hearsay is not admissible evidence, 8 GO Ind. Ev. Act but it was held in 6 Bom. L.R. 34 that hearsay evidence amounting to evidence of general reputation is admissible in proceedings under this section. Evidence of general reputation involves to a certain extent evidence of opinion but that is the belief or opinion of a body of persons which is essentially different from individual opinion. The general rule therefore that individual opinions are inadmissible in proof of facts holds good even with reference of evidence of character, 8 Q.B.D. 491 followed in 21 Cr. L.J. 810=58 Ind. Cas. 682. It is hardly necessary to say that evidence of rumour is merely hearsay, and hearsay evidence of particular fact. Evidence of repute is a totally different thing. A man's general reputation is the reputation which he bears in the place in which he lives amongst all the townsmen, and if it is proved that a man who lives in a particular place is looked upon by his fellow townsmen, whether they happen to know him or not, as a man of good repute, that is strong evidence that he is a man of that character. On the other hand, if the state of things is, that the body of his fellow townsmen who know him look upon him as a dangerous man and a man of bad habits, that is strong evidence that he is a man of bad character; but to say that there are rumours in a particular place among a certain class of people that a man has done particular acts or has characteristics of a certain kind, those rumours are in themselves evidence under this section, is to say what the law does not justify us in saying, and consequently we think that the evidence of general repute is of little or no value," 23 C. 621 at 628. The law allows evidence of general repute of the accused to be given. This does not mean that the prosecution may place before the Magistrate a heterogeneous mass of more or less vague and general statements by any witness who can be produced to say something on hearsay or otherwise, label it 'general repute' and ask the Magistrate to call for security on the strength of it. Yet this is a very general practice. A man's general repute whether deserved or not, is just as much a fact as any other fact which can be proved by a witness. If a witness is a witness to general repute he may say 'the accused has the general reputation of being a man who habitually commits such and such offences.' In addition to this he may properly be put a few questions to show that he himself is in a position to know what the general reputation of the accused is. Further than this, on the mere question of 'general repute' it is unnecessary and generally undesirable to go in examination-in-chief. If the accused is defended his counsel, if he sees fit, can ask any questions that may go to show whether the witness is really telling the truth when he says that the accused's 'general repute' is so and so. He may question if he thinks fit as to when and what circumstances he has heard the character of the accused discussed. He may in fact test the credibility of the witness as to the real existence of the alleged general reputation in such legitimate way. The Magistrate too is at liberty to ask similar questions and when the accused is undefended or when the Magistrate is not satisfied with the cross examination he should satisfy himself by asking such questions as he thinks desirable, 27 A.L.J. 261=30 C.L.J. 562 at 565 66=116 Ind. Cas. 25. It has been repeatedly held that mere suspicion of complicity in this or that isolated offence is not evidence of general repute. If the person proceeded against is not convicted of any offence and he was never specifically named by any one as having committed any offence, he ought not to be proceeded against under S. 110 supra even though the police suspected him on various occasions 9 Lah. 586 following 9 Lah. 133. See also 30 Cr. L.J. 220=113 Ind. Cas. 909. In proceedings under s. 110 supra it is not enough to prove by evidence to the general character that a man is by general repute a habitual thief, etc., but it must further be proved that he is a habitual offender though the fact may be proved by evidence of general repute and it is not always possible or necessary to prove bad character by proof of actual previous convictions. Where actual convictions are not relied upon, great care should be taken to test the evidence on behalf of the prosecution with a view to ascertain what the witnesses's means of knowing the facts stated by them, the accused's movements, his constant companions, his way of earning his livelihood, his antecedents, etc., 2 Bom. L.R. 57 at 58. When security is taken on evidence of general repute only, it should be proved to be universal and there should be no doubt about it, 1915 P.L.R. 215=16 Cr. L.J. 106; 1907 P.R. (Cr. J.) 2. Association with bad characters is evidence of general repute but such association must be with proved bad characters and not with reputed bad characters, 13 C.W.N. 18; evidence of general repute is not admissible in cases falling under cl. (f) of S. 110 supra, 6 C.W.N. 789; 29 C. 279; 11 C.W.N. 789; 13 C.W.N. 244; 6 Bom. L.R. 34; 34 M. 255; 19 Cr. L.J. 871=47 Ind. Cas. 67. Where evidence of general repute has been given the fact that a person has been suspected in a large number of cases may be admissible as corroboration, 23 Cr. L.J. 486=77 Ind. Cas. 886, but evidence of instances in which a person was suspected will not certainly be evidence of general repute to demand security, 24 Cr. L.J. 608=73 Ind. Cas. 352; 26 Cr. L.J. 1283=89 Ind. Cas. 147; 2 Ran. 686. Points to be borne in mind in connection with evidence of general repute (1) that the witnesses should themselves be of good character and in a position really to know the reputation of the accused, (2) that they should be drawn if possible, from different classes of the community and not only from the village of the accused but also from neighbouring village (3) that they should be free from any suspicion or grudge against the accused. In particular, if party faction exists in the village it must be clear that the evidence against the accused is not due to faction Ben. Pol. Reg. 1915, Vol. V. p. 248. Evidence of general repute may be corroborated by proof of (1) previous conviction, (2) want of any known means of livelihood or manner of living in excess of such means, (3) association of accused with bad characters, (4) absence of accused from his house especially at night, (5) occurrence of crimes at or near the place visited by the accused coincident with such absence, Ben. Pol. Reg. 1915 Vol. V p 248.

Or Otherwise.—Inquiries under this Chapter are governed by ordinary rules of evidence and therefore evidence not admissible under the Evidence Act cannot be admitted under this section, 12 A.L.J. 937. Evidence of general repute is permitted to be adduced here as a special case in direct contravention to the provisions of S. 54, Ind. Ev. Act. Hence the expression or otherwise may mean by other evidence admissible under the Evidence Act, e.g., by adducing evidence of specific acts, previous convictions or association with bad characters. See 28 A.L.J. 519 at 523. The legislature seems to have left to the Magistrate a vast amount of liberty in relation to the admission of evidence. According to the general rule of interpretation the words "or otherwise" must be read as meaning something ejusdem generis with the particular or particulars alleged above it. It seems difficult to interpret the word 'otherwise' in the sense in which the law would ordinarily read it. Applying the ejusdem generis principle of interpretation the nearest approach to the particular general repute would be hearsay not amounting to general repute, 1904 A.W.N. 142.

Sub-section (5)—Although this sub-section permits joint trial of persons associated together with regard to S. 110 (d) and (e), supra certainly it will not justify joint trial when S. 110 (f) is also charged as there cannot be a connection between the persons in regard to their characters so as to make them dangerous persons and thus render them hazardous to the community, 47 M.L.J. 689 at 693. The words associated together do not imply that the persons to whom they may be separately applied must have been acting in concert but the persons associated in the matter of an inquiry must be persons shown to have been acting together in the various matters charged against them as grounds for binding them over; where there is no such association together, a joint inquiry is improper if not illegal and such an inquiry prejudices the accused, 1 C.L.J. 616 following 8 C.W.N. 180. By the expression 'associated together' is meant concerted action of persons whether due to mutual agreement amongst themselves or to the order of a common master, 9 C.W.N. cclxx. As to proof of association see 23 Cr.L.J. 531 = Ind. Cas. 27 C. 781; 18 Cr. L.J. 617—39 Ind. Cas. 935; 1893 P.R. (Cr.J.) 1; 1 C.L.J. 616 at 623. Persons belonging to two contending factions cannot be dealt with in one inquiry as they cannot be said to be associated together in the matter under inquiry within the meaning of this section and consequently the whole proceeding is bad, 9 Cr. L.J. 560—2 Ind. Cas. 243; 11 C.W.N. 472; 31 M. 276. This sub-section was inserted to remove doubts as to legality of joint proceedings under Ss. 107 and 110, supra. The legality of a joint trial must depend on what is alleged for the prosecution and not on findings of fact arrived at subsequently. The dictum of the Privy Council in 23 M. 61 as to violation of an express provision of law being an illegality applies to cases where joint trials are held contrary to the provisions of law and there is no provision in the Code which directs separate inquiries under this section, 25 C.W.N. 334. The Magistrate has a discretion to proceed with the matter jointly or separately even where the association of the several accused is clearly established, 27 C. 781. There must be a separate finding with regard to each accused, when the trial is held jointly, 35 C. 929. Where parties have been in conflict with one another, they cannot be said to be associated together in the matter under inquiry within this clause, and a joint trial is illegal. The main principle applicable to joinder of charges and joint trial of accused may well be held applicable to inquiries under this Chapter, 31 M. 276; 8 C.W.N. 180, 11 C.W.N. 472; [1923] Pat. 8; 16 Cr. L.J. 252=28 Ind. Cas. 108. Although there is no direct prohibition against trying a number of persons together yet such proceedings are improper and should be confined to one person alone unless the case be that each accused was a confederate or partner with the other persons to whom all the evidence would be equally applicable. Even then the case of each accused should be considered separately and individually, 43 A. 109; 25 Cr. L.J. 1377—83 Ind. Cas. 337; [1923] Pat. 8; 4 Pat. L.J. 7; 37 C. 91; 13 C.W.N. 244; 1 C.W.N. 394; 6 Bom. L.R. 34.

Order to give security. 118. If, upon such inquiry, it is proved that it is necessary for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour, as the case may be, that the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made should execute a bond, with or without sureties, the Magistrate shall make an order accordingly :

Provided—

first, that no person shall be ordered to give security of a nature different from, or of an amount larger than, or for a period longer than, that specified in the order made under section 112 :

secondly, that the amount of every bond shall be fixed with due regard to the circumstances of the case and shall not be excessive :

thirdly, that, when the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made is a minor, the bond shall be executed only by his sureties.

If upon inquiry it is proved.—It is desirable that very clear and full evidence with as much detail as possible should be required by the Magistrate before making an order under this section read with S 110, supra. Magistrates cannot be too careful before passing orders to require and place on record, evidence of a cogent and convincing and reliable kind and they are not to make up for carelessness, supineness or incompetence on the part of the police to bring home a specific crime to a particular person, calling on the accused to find the amount of security which he cannot provide and then by reason of his default to commit him to jail, 1839 A.W.N. 114. An order under this section to execute a bond for keeping the peace or to be of good behaviour cannot be made without following the procedure laid down by Ss 112 and 117, supra Weir II, 56; 34 M. 139. Where a man called upon to furnish security appeared before the Magistrate and pleaded poverty and requested that a bond for a small amount should be taken from him and the Magistrate bound him down without recording any evidence and without recording a finding that he was likely to cause a breach of the peace the order was set aside, 33 C. 674; 34 M. 139; 54 C. 59. It is not sufficient that the Magistrate is morally satisfied but he should give reasons for his finding based on legal evidence that the accused should be bound over 10 B. 174. When an accused person is called upon to produce a surety such surety must be accepted or if rejected, it must be rejected on tangible evidence recorded and considered by the Magistrate who ordered him to find security, 18 A.L.J. 321; 44 B. 335. The provisions of S. 122 infra make this clear. It is not competent to a Magistrate who has passed an order under this section to delegate to another the duty of inquiring into the fitness of a surety tendered by the person against whom the order is made. He should make the inquiry himself. A Magistrate cannot insist that respectable gentlemen residing in the same or neighbouring village in which the accused lives should be given as sureties and such a demand is quite unwarranted as long as the sureties offered could exercise their proper influence over the person bound over, 8 A.L.J. 785=12 Cr. L.J. 472=11 Ind. Cas. 1008

Magistrate shall make an order.—The Code requires that the Magistrate who initiated proceedings should pass the final order himself and he has no power to send up the case to the District Magistrate and the District Magistrate has no jurisdiction to dispose of the case, 14 Bom L.R. 713 at 714. The date from which security commences is the date of the final order under this section and not from the date of the preliminary order under S 112, supra, 51 M. 515.

Proviso (1).—It is illegal to require a bond for good behaviour when the notice issued was to show cause why a bond for keeping the peace should not be taken, 23 C. 798. A Magistrate cannot make an order for a longer period than that mentioned in the notice issued, under S. 112, supra, 28 M. 471; 1906 A.W.N. 276; where heavier security is thought necessary fresh summons should be issued, 9 B.L.R. Appx. 44=18 W.R. (Cr.) 61. But after

from his house especially at night, (5) occurrence of crimes at or near the place visited by the accused coincident with such absence, Ben. Pol. Reg. 1915 Vol. V p 218.

Or Otherwise.—Inquiries under this Chapter are governed by ordinary rules of evidence and therefore evidence not admissible under the Evidence Act cannot be admitted under this section, 12 A.L.J. 937. Evidence of general repute is permitted to be adduced here as a special case in direct contravention to the provisions of S. 54, Ind. Ev. Act. Hence the expression or otherwise may mean by other evidence admissible under the Evidence Act, e.g., by adducing evidence of specific acts, previous Convictions or association with bad characters. See 26 A.L.J. 519 at 522. The legislature seems to have left to the Magistrate a vast amount of liberty in relation to the admission of evidence. According to the general rule of interpretation the words "or otherwise" must be read as meaning something ejusdem generis with the particular or particulars alleged above it. It seems difficult to interpret the word 'otherwise' in the sense in which the law would ordinarily read it. Applying the ejusdem generis principle of interpretation the nearest approach to the particular general repute would be hearsay not amounting to general repute, 1904 A.W.N. 140.

Sub-section (5)—Although this sub-section permits joint trial of persons associated together with regard to S. 110 (d) and (e), supra certainly it will not justify joint trial when S. 110 (f) is also charged as there cannot be a connection between the persons in regard to their characters so as to make them dangerous persons and thus render them hazardous to the community, 47 M L.J. 699 at 633. The words associated together do not imply that the persons to whom they may be separately applied must have been acting in concert but the persons associated in the matter of an inquiry must be persons shown to have been acting together in the various matters charged against them as grounds for binding them over; where there is no such association together, a joint inquiry is improper if not illegal and such an inquiry prejudices the accused, 1 C.L.J. 616 following 8 C.W.N. 180. By the expression 'associated together' is meant concerted action of persons whether due to mutual agreement amongst themselves or to the order of a common master, 9 C.W.N. colxx. As to proof of association see 23 Cr.L.J. 531 = Ind. Cas. 27 C. 781; 18 Cr. L.J. 617—39 Ind. Cas. 935; 1893 P.R. (Gr. J.) 1; 1 C.L.J. 616 at 623. Persons belonging to two contending factions cannot be dealt with in one inquiry as they cannot be said to be associated together in the matter under inquiry within the meaning of this section and consequently the whole proceeding is bad, 9 Cr. L.J. 560—2 Ind. Cas. 243; 11 C.W.N. 472; 31 M 276. This sub-section was inserted to remove doubts as to legality of joint proceedings under Ss. 107 and 110, supra. The legality of a joint trial must depend on what is alleged for the prosecution and not on findings of fact arrived at subsequently. 118. If, upon such inquiry, it is proved that it is necessary for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour, as the case may be, that the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made should execute a bond, with or without sureties, the Magistrate shall make an order accordingly :

Provided—

first, that no person shall be ordered to give security of a nature different from, or of an amount larger than, or for a period longer than, that specified in the order made under section 112 :

secondly, that the amount of every bond shall be fixed with due regard to the circumstances of the case and shall not be excessive :

thirdly, that, when the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made is a minor, the bond shall be executed only by his sureties.

If upon inquiry it is proved.—It is desirable that very clear and full evidence with as much detail as possible should be required by the Magistrate before making an order under this section read with S 110, supra. Magistrates cannot be too careful before passing orders to require and place on record, evidence of a cogent and convincing and reliable kind and they are not to make up for carelessness, supineness or incompetence on the part of the police to bring home a specific crime to a particular person, calling on the accused to find the amount of security which he cannot provide and then by reason of his default to commit him to jail, 1839 A.W.N. 114. An order under this section to execute a bond for keeping the peace or to be of good behaviour cannot be made without following the procedure laid down by Ss 112 and 117, supra Weir II, 56 ; 34 M. 139. Where a man called upon to furnish security appeared before the Magistrate and pleaded poverty and requested that a bond for a small amount should be taken from him and the Magistrate bound him down without recording any evidence and without recording a finding that he was likely to cause a breach of the peace the order was set aside, 33 C 674 ; 34 M. 139 ; 54 C. 59. It is not sufficient that the Magistrate is morally satisfied but he should give reasons for his finding based on legal evidence that the accused should be bound over 10 B. 174. When an accused person is called upon to produce a surety such surety must be accepted or if rejected, it must be rejected on tangible evidence recorded and considered by the Magistrate who ordered him to find security, 18 A.L.J. 321, 41 B. 335. The provisions of S. 122 infra make this clear. It is not competent to a Magistrate who has passed an order under this section to delegate to another the duty of inquiring into the fitness of a surety tendered by the person against whom the order is made. He should make the inquiry himself. A Magistrate cannot insist that respectable gentlemen residing in the same or neighbouring village in which the accused lives should be given as sureties and such a demand is quite unwarranted as long as the sureties offered could exercise their proper influence over the person bound over, 8 A.L.J. 785=12 Cr. L.J. 472=11 Ind. Cas. 1008

Magistrate shall make an order.—The Code requires that the Magistrate who initiated proceedings should pass the final order himself and he has no power to send up the case to the District Magistrate and the District Magistrate has no jurisdiction to dispose of the case, 14 Bom L.R. 713 at 714. The date from which security commences is the date of the final order under this section and not from the date of the preliminary order under S. 112, supra, 51 M. 515.

Proviso (1).—It is illegal to require a bond for good behaviour when the notice issued was to show cause why a bond for keeping the peace should not be taken, 23 C. 798. A Magistrate cannot make an order for a longer period than that mentioned in the notice issued, under S. 112, supra, 26 M. 471 ; 1906 A.W.N. 276 ; where heavier security is thought necessary fresh summons should be issued, 9 B.L.R. Appx. 44=15 W.R. (Cr.) 61. But after the expiry of the period of the first order if a likelihood of a breach of the public peace still exists then further security could be demanded on fresh proceedings being taken, 4 C.W.N. 12, but sufficient locus penitentie must be allowed to the person before fresh proceedings are started, 1903 A W.N. 83; 31 C. 783.

Amount of bond shall not be excessive.—The character and reputation of a suspect are not the sole considerations on which the amount of security should be determined and fixed. It should not be excessive or prohibitive and it should be fixed considering the station in life of the accused, 12 Cr. L.J. 110=9 Ind. Cas 651 following 16 B. 372. Where a Magistrate made an order that a person should pledge all his proprietary right in land worth Rs 200, the order was declared illegal, 7 N.W.P.H.R. 249. For cases of excessive security see 2 C. 110 and 384; 1 C.L.R. 48. Fair chance of complying with the order should be allowed to the accused by fixing the amount of security considering the station in life of the person concerned, 4 M.H.C.R. Appx. 44 followed in 2 C. 384. The Magistrate should look to the means of the party concerned and not to that of his master, 22 W.R. (Cr.) 74.

Proviso(3)—The reason for proviso(3) is the incapacity of a minor to contract, and the bond may in such a case be executed by sureties only, 6 Cr. L.J. 123. See in this connection S. 29 (4) of the Children Act, Mad. Act IV of 1920 which enacts that where a child or young person (under 16 years and 14 years or upwards) has been ordered by a Court to give security under S. 106 or 118 infra and has failed to do so, the Court which passed the order may order such child or young person to be sent to a junior or senior certified school respectively.

Appeal.—Now an appeal lies in cases where security is demanded for keeping the peace also. See the amendment of S 406, infra. The order of a Sessions Judge under S. 406 discharging a person under security under this section is not an original or appellate order of acquittal within S. 417 infra, and the Local Government has no right of appeal against such an order, but may, move the High Court in revision, 27 Cr. L.J. 626=94 Ind. Cas 402 following 21 A. 107; 24 A. 148; 36 A. 147. An appeal will also lie when the order under this section is passed by a District Magistrate to the Court of session; when a first class Magistrate sends up a case to the Sessions Judge under S. 123, infra, no appeal lies to the District Magistrate. An appeal lay against an order under this section made by an additional District Magistrate to the District Magistrate, 43 C. 874; but this is no longer law, See S. 406, infra. No appeal lies under cl 41 of the Calcutta Letters Patent to His Majesty in Council from an order of the High Court on the appellate side under this section, 18 C.L.J. 119.

119. If, on an inquiry under section 117, it is not proved that person informed against.

it is necessary for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour, as the case may be, that the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made should execute a bond, the Magistrate shall make an entry on the record to that effect, and, if such person is in custody only for the purposes of the inquiry, shall release him, or, if such person is not in custody, shall discharge him.

Shall discharge him.—'Discharge,' under this section has been used in a non-technical sense and merely means permission to depart when a person from whom security is demanded, by evidence adduced by him satisfies the trying Magistrate that he ought not to be put under security. The Code does not contemplate a further inquiry by a superior Magistrate into the matter, 33 M. 85 but see 35 B. 401. It is no bar to fresh proceedings being taken upon fresh information received, 27 C. 662. In 24 A. 148 it was held that it was competent to a District Magistrate to institute fresh proceedings against a discharged person on the self-same record before the 1st Class Magistrate who inquired into the matter under S 117, supra. There were conflicting decisions as to whether further inquiry could be ordered under S. 436 infra in the case of a person discharged under this section. But the words newly introduced in S. 436, infra, "accused of an offence," make the point beyond all doubt and no further inquiry can be ordered by the superior Court. See notes under S 110, supra, further enquiry at p. The decisions in 35 A. 147; 35 B. 421 took the view that S 436 applied, while 33 C. 8; 33 M. 83 took a different view, see also 44 A. 691, See 43 A. 235; 51 A. 403. S. 250 infra does not apply to cases of discharge under this section and no compensation could be awarded even though the information furnished to the Magistrate might be vexatious, 15 A. 353.

C.—Proceedings in all cases subsequent to Order to furnish Security.

120. (1) If any person, in respect of whom an order requiring security is made under section 106 or section 118, is, at the time such order is made, sentenced to, or undergoing a sentence of, imprisonment, the period for which such security is required shall commence on the expiration of such sentence.

(2) In other cases such period shall commence on the date of such order unless the Magistrate, for sufficient reason, fixes a later date.

Scope of the section.—If on the date of the order demanding security, the suspect is undergoing imprisonment for a substantive offence then sub-section (1) applies and the period of security does not commence till the suspect has served out his sentence of imprisonment. He has time to furnish security required up to the date on which the period of security commences and therefore till the expiry of the period of imprisonment no order for his detention in prison for failure to furnish security can legitimately be passed. The proper procedure is to postpone further proceedings till the substantive sentence is served out and in order to secure the attendance of the suspect in Court on the date of his release from jail, the Magistrate should request the jail authorities to inform him of the probable date of release and to intimate to them that the suspect is to be produced in Court unless he has before that date furnished the required security. If on the date of the order under S. 118, supra, the suspect is not undergoing imprisonment for a substantive offence, his case does not fall within the purview of sub-section (1). If on the date the suspect asks for time to furnish the required security it is open to the Magistrate to inquire from the police whether the suspect is undergoing a trial for a substantive offence and if so, it is open to him to refuse to grant any time for furnishing security and to take immediate action under S 123, infra. If, however, the Magistrate does not make the necessary inquiry and does not get any definite information, and in the exercise of his discretion he grants time to furnish the security and before the expiry of that period, he is convicted to imprisonment neither sub-section (1) nor sub-section (2) applies. In that case the Magistrate should pass immediate detention in person of the suspect till he furnishes the required security. This detention would ipso facto run concurrently with the substantive offence which he is undergoing. In order to avoid any doubt being raised as to the question whether the two sentences are to run concurrently the Magistrate will be well advised to give express direction on that point, which he is even otherwise competent to do under the provisions of S. 297 infra which section as now amended in 1923 treats the detention of the suspect under S. 123 infra as a sentence of imprisonment, 23 Cr. L.J. 431 at 432—101 Ind. Cas. 463 where 28 Bom. L.R. 1038=27 Cr. L.J. 1163=97 Ind. Cas. 747 and 27 Cr. L.J. 865=93 Ind. Cas. 113 are followed. See also 23 Bom. L.R. 790=23 Cr. L.J. 652=103 Ind. Cas. 108 (1) as to the effect of a sentence of imprisonment for failure to furnish security overlapping a subsequent sentence of imprisonment for a substantive offence.

Commencement of period for which security is required.—The period for which security is required commences from the date of the order, i.e., the final order under S. 118, supra, 51 M. 515 unless the Magistrate for sufficient reasons fixes a later date. The party must execute his bond with or without surety at once, or he is committed to prison in default. The power to fix a later date was given only recently, 37 M. 125 at 143. A Magistrate has power under this section to postpone the date from which the security bond should take effect, that is, give the accused time within which to produce it. Until it is seen when the accused could give the security, or an order would have to be passed referring the case for the final orders of the Sessions Judge, it cannot be said that the proceedings in the Magistrate's Court had finally terminated so as to put an end to the liability of the sureties responsible for the accused's attendance, 24 A.L.J. 327=27 Cr. L.J. 377 (2)=92 Ind. Cas. 889, (2) Security cannot be asked until the period of imprisonment which the accused is undergoing ends. The order under S. 123 infra should not be passed until the expiry of the term of imprisonment, 4 Bom L.R. 934; 4 N.W.P.H.C.R. 154. An order that the period of imprisonment imposed on an accused under S. 118, supra, was to run concurrently with the sentence which the accused was actually at the time undergoing in another case is illegal and opposed to the terms of this section, 46 Cr. L.J. 272; 6 Cr. L. Rev. 437=28 Ind. Cas. 160. See also S. 123 (1), infra.

Sub-section (2).—It is somewhat difficult to ascertain precisely the intention of the Legislature in enacting this sub-section 27 Cr. L.J. 265=96 Ind. Cas. 113. This sub-section authorizes a Magistrate to give time to the person bound over to find sureties. It is not the object of this sub-section to enable the Magistrate to postpone the operation of the second order he passes, while the first order is still in force, otherwise, a Magistrate by making several orders for security each for a period less than one year might bind over a person for an aggregate period over one year without submitting the case to the Sessions Court as required by S. 123 (2), infra. Such a course will be obviously illegal, 4 C.W.N. 121. This sub-section lays down clearly that the period for which security shall be given is to commence on the date of the order under S. 118, supra, that is the date of the final orders 51 M. 515. S. 123 provides that security must be given on or before the date on which the period of such security commences. See 27 Cr. L.J. 505=96 Ind. Cas. 113. For form bond see form No. 42, Sch. V. The terms of the security bond given in the form are wide enough to include the successor of the Court in which the case originally was. Any other view of the law would produce most inconvenient results, 24 A.L.J. 327=27 Cr. L.J. 377 (2)=92 Ind. Cas. 889 (2).

121. The bond to be executed by any such person shall bind him to keep the peace or to be of good behaviour, as the Contents of bond case may be, and in the latter case the commission or attempt to commit, or the abetment of, any offence punishable with imprisonment, wherever it may be committed, is a breach of the bond.

Scope of the section.—The conditions under which security bonds are taken under this chapter are given here. The word 'commission' in this section does not necessarily imply a conviction although a conviction is ordinarily considered necessary to establish that an offence has been committed. At the same time there is no authority for the extreme view that the commission of an offence cannot be proved otherwise than by a conviction, e.g., flight of a person accused of an offence from British India will raise a strong presumption of his participation in the offence. In such a case the bond is liable to be forfeited provided evidence is produced to show that prior to his absconding he committed an offence in British India and during the period of the bond, 24 Cr. L.J. 588=73 Ind. Cas. 332. This section deals with two kinds of bonds, one for keeping the peace and the other for good behaviour. A distinction is drawn between the two kinds of bonds. A bond to keep the peace cannot be enforced on conviction for any offence other than offence involving a breach of the peace. For example, a conviction for theft or extortion will not justify the forfeiture of such a bond, 18 W.R. (Cr.) 63; 19 W.R. (Cr.) 49, but in the case of a bond for good behaviour it is expressly provided that the commission or attempt to commit or abetment of any offence, punishable with imprisonment, wherever it may be committed, is a breach of the bond, 11 Cr. L.J. 252—5 Ind. Cas. 827; 16 Cr. L.J. 549—29 Ind. Cas. 821. What constitutes a breach of the bond is the commission or attempt to commit or abetment of any offence punishable with imprisonment. The law lays down definitely what would constitute a breach of the bond given under an order passed under S. 118, supra, and a bond cannot be forfeited for other offences not mentioned herein. Absconding to avoid arrest under a warrant is not an offence under S. 172 I.P.C. and is not one of the offences mentioned herein for the commission of which alone can a surety bond be forfeited, 50 A. 666 following 8 W.R. (Cr.) 7; 2 C.L.J. 623; 7 N.W.P.H.C.R. 302; 4 N.W.P.H.C.R. 97 and dissenting from 1913 P.R. (Cr. J.) 15. See S. 514 infra as to the procedure on forfeiture of bond. A bond under S. 110, infra, can be forfeited on a conviction under S. 823, I.P.C., 4 Lah. 452.

Shall bind him to keep the peace.—All that is necessary to show before calling upon the executant of the bond to show cause why the penalty should not be levied, is that some act was done which was likely in its consequence to provoke a breach of the peace and it is not material to consider whether the person bound did act himself with his own hand or, made use of other persons to do it, 2 M. 169 at 173.

Wherever it may be committed.—Breach of the bond need not necessarily be confined to the district in which the accused was bound over. The word used is "wherever." If A executes a bond to keep the peace towards B in one district and subsequently A is convicted of having assaulted B in another district, A would forfeit the bond and the Magistrate who took the bond could proceed against him under this section, although the breach did not take place in his district, 2 B L.R. (Ap. Cr.) 11. The commission of an offence in a native state, e.g., receipt of stolen property may also work a forfeiture, 11 Cr. L.J. 635—8 Ind. Cas. 333. An accused person ought to be afforded an opportunity to show cause before a bond is forfeited, 4 C. 835. There must be actual proof of the commission of an offence and not a suspicion, Weir II, 57, and the offence justifying an order of forfeiture should correspond to the particular kind of offence mentioned in S. 110, 28 A. 629; and in the case of a surety, evidence must be taken in the presence of the surety before the bond is forfeited, 25 C. 440; and fresh security cannot be taken without fresh proceedings, 7 M.L.T. 90.

Is a breach of the bond.—When convicting a person for an offence involving a forfeiture for keeping the peace, a Magistrate knowing, that the person convicted has by his conduct forfeited the bond, does not make an order for forfeiture under this section, he must be taken to have declined to take action in respect of the particular breach and he cannot afterwards re-consider and add to his order a direction forfeiting the bond, 1 Cr. L.J. 1100; 1 C.L.R. 134; 3 C.L.R. 406; 16 Cr. L.J. 194—27 Ind. Cas. 754.

122. (1) A Magistrate may refuse to accept any surety offered, or may reject any surety previously accepted by him or his predecessor under this Chapter on the ground that such surety is an unfit person for the purposes of the bond :

Provided that, before so refusing to accept or rejecting any such surety, he shall either himself hold an inquiry on oath into the fitness of the surety, or cause such inquiry to be held and a report to be made thereon by a Magistrate subordinate to him.

(2) Such Magistrate shall, before holding inquiry, give reasonable notice to the surety and to the person by whom the surety was offered and shall in making the inquiry record the substance of the evidence adduced before him.

(3) If the Magistrate is satisfied, after considering the evidence so adduced either before him or before a Magistrate deputed under sub-section (1), and the report of such Magistrate (if any) that the surety is an unfit person for the purposes of the bond, he shall make an order refusing to accept or rejecting, as the case may be, such surety and recording his reasons for so doing :

Provided that, before making an order rejecting any surety, who has previously been accepted, the Magistrate shall issue his summons or warrant, as he thinks fit, and cause the person for whom the surety is bound to appear or to be brought before him.

Amendment.—This section has been re-drafted. The inquiry as to fitness of surety is to be on oath and the Magistrate is bound to record the substance of the evidence. A right of appeal is also provided, see Ss. 406A and 514A newly added.

The Magistrate may refuse.—This section confers a wide discretionary power on a Magistrate to refuse sureties offered ; when a surety is offered the Magistrate is required to consider the matter judicially and to state his reasons for not accepting the surety, 22 Bom. L R 190. The proceedings in which the Magistrate comes to this determination are judicial proceedings, and the question whether a person is fit to be a surety or not is left to the Magistrate's unfettered discretion, 44 C. 737 ; 37 C. 446 ; 13 C.W.N. 80 ; 12 A. L.J. 1004 = 16 Cr. L.J. 754 = 25 Ind. Cas. 645 ; 23 Ind. Cas. 743 ; 44 B. 385. He must hold an independent inquiry before accepting or refusing a surety and then exercise his discretion. He cannot refuse a surety merely relying on a police report, 12 A.L.J. 1004 = 16 Cr. L.J. 754 = 25 Ind. Cas. 645 ; 13 Cr. L.J. 760 = 17 Ind. Cas. 72. See also 24 C. 155. The amended section gives very wide powers to the Magistrate for rejecting sureties. A Magistrate before rejecting a surety is bound to take evidence on oath and inquire into the fitness of the surety or cause an inquiry to be made by a Subordinate Magistrate and to report to him. The Magistrate is bound to give notice to the parties and record the substance of the evidence adduced before him. Inability of surety to control the person bound over to keep the peace is a good ground for rejecting the surety, 41 C 764 ; 23 Cr. L.J. 796 = 81 Ind. Cas 316 ; 15 Cr. L.J. 378 = 23 Ind. Cas. 745 ; 27 Ind. Cas. 148. When a Magistrate refused the surety offered, without recording any reasons, the High Court set aside his order and directed the sureties to be accepted, 10 C.W.N. 1027 ; 18 A.L.J. 324 ; 27 A. 293 ; 44 B 385.

Refuses on the ground that the surety is unfit—In all cases under this section, it is the duty of the Magistrate to examine the sureties offered as to their fitness and to take such other evidence as the accused may adduce on the same point. If he asks the police to report, it should be with a view merely of enabling them to collect and call evidence where a Magistrate bases his order on a police report he abrogates the functions imposed on him by law and allows the decision of the case to vest on the police. In every case the Magistrate's order must proceed on a consideration of the evidence before him and not on the police report, 10 Cr. L.J. 225 = 10 Cr. L.J. 231. The ground for refusal to accept the surety tendered must be valid and reasonable, 22 W.R. (Cr.) 37 ; 41 C 764 ; 44 C. 737. Mere conjectures and surmises are not sufficient. The fact that the surety offered was once convicted does not of itself disqualify him for ever to be a surety, 26 A. 189. The fact that the surety offered lives at a distance from the place where the person for whom he stands as surety lives is by itself no sufficient ground for refusing to accept the surety and that fact becomes of less importance where the sureties are relations and presumably persons of standing, 30 Cr. L.J. 45 = 112 Ind. Cas. 909, relying on 43 C. 1021 and distinguishing 20 A. 206 the fact that the sureties tendered are relations of the accused, far from being a disqualification, is a circumstance which would be an additional qualification, 25 A. 131; 43 C. 1024 The unfitness is not limited to pecuniary unfitness, 13 C.W.N. 80=8 Cr. L.J. 388=4 Ind. Cas. 560 but when the sureties were brothers of the accused, who could not control the accused sufficiently to ensure to his future good behaviour they were rightly rejected, 41 C. 764; 44 C. 737, mere solvency of surety is not invariably sufficient to ensure good conduct of the person bound over. Surety must be in a position to keep the person under personal supervision and control, 21 Cr. L.J. 793=74 Ind. Cas. 539. A surety executing a bond undertakes to guarantee the good conduct of the person for whom he stands surety, and the test of his fitness is his ability to perform his contract of guarantee, and to enforce the good conduct of his principal. This is clear from the expression "character and class of the sureties required" in S. 112 supra. In addition to solvency, the Magistrate, is to consider the character of the surety, and of his ability to influence the conduct of the person bound over, 8 Cr. L.J. 166. The Magistrate may record evidence on oath to test the fitness of sureties, 26 A. 371; he can now call upon another officer subordinate to him to report and act upon such report. The decisions in 43 C. 1624; 25 A. 272; 27 A. 293, are no longer law. When sureties are offered it is the duty of the Court to accept them, unless the Court itself is satisfied that they are not proper persons. An inquiry under this section is a judicial inquiry, 42 C. 703 and a Magistrate cannot import his personal knowledge in such matter, 15 Cr. L.J. 378=23 Ind. Cas. 745, but a Magistrate is justified in using and applying his knowledge of his division when acting under this section and he must record his reasons for rejecting sureties offered, 11 Cr. L.J. 198=4 Ind. Cas. 1133; 14 C.W.N. 709=11 Cr. L.J. 243=6 Ind. Cas. 124. The Magistrate has a wide discretion in accepting or rejecting sureties and he must hold an independent inquiry and should not act on a mere police report, 12 A.L.J. 1004=16 Cr. L.J. 754=26 Ind. Cas. 646; 13 Cr. L.J. 760=17 Ind. Cas. 72; 3 C.L.J. 575; 20 A.L.J. 760; 11 Cr. L.J. 457=7 Ind. Cas. 552; 23 Cr. L.J. 453; 44 B. 385; 15 Cr. L.J. 727=26 Ind. Cas. 175. The unfitness referred to herein though it may not include the idea of pecuniary unfitness is more concerned with the idea of moral unfitness, 13 C.W.N. 80=8 Cr. L.J. 388=4 Ind. Cas. 560.

123. (1) If any person ordered to give security under section 106

default of security, or section 118 does not give such security on or before the date on which the period for which such security is to be given commences, he shall, except in the case next hereinafter mentioned, be committed to prison, or if he is already in prison, be detained in prison until such period expires, or until within such period he gives the security to the Court or Magistrate who made the order requiring it.

(2) When such person has been ordered by a Magistrate to give Proceedings when to be laid before High Court or Court of Session.

security for a period exceeding one year, such Magistrate shall, if such person does not give such security as aforesaid, issue a warrant directing him to be detained in prison pending the orders of the Sessions Judge or, if such Magistrate is a Presidency Magistrate, pending the orders of the High Court; and the proceedings shall be laid, as soon as conveniently may be, before such Court.

(3) Such Court, after examining such proceedings and requiring from the Magistrate any further information or evidence which it thinks necessary, may pass such order on the case as it thinks fit:

Provided that the period (if any) for which any person is imprisoned for failure to give security shall not exceed three years.

(3A) If security has been required in the course of the same proceedings from two or more persons in respect of any one of whom the proceedings are referred to the Sessions Judge or the High Court under sub-section (2), such reference shall also include the case of any other of such persons who has been ordered to give security, and the provisions of sub-sections (2) and (3) shall, in that event, apply to the case of such other person also, except that the period (if any) for which he may be imprisoned shall not exceed the period for which he was ordered to give security.

(3B) A Sessions Judge may in his discretion transfer any proceedings laid before him under sub-section (2) or sub-section (3A) to an Additional Sessions Judge or Assistant Sessions Judge and upon such transfer, such Additional Sessions Judge or Assistant Sessions Judge may exercise the powers of a Sessions Judge under this section in respect of such proceedings.

(4) If the security is tendered to the officer in charge of the jail, he shall forthwith refer the matter to the Court or Magistrate who made the order, and shall await the orders of such Court or Magistrate.

Kind of imprisonment.	(5) Imprisonment for failure to give security for keeping the peace shall be simple.

(6) Imprisonment for failure to give security for good behaviour shall, where the proceedings have been taken under section 108 be simple and, where the proceedings have been taken under section 109 or section 110, be rigorous or simple as the Court or Magistrate in each case directs.*

Amendment.—Sub-sections (3A) and (3B) have been newly added, by which when security is demanded from two or more persons some or one of whom only is ordered to give security for more than one year, all the persons should be dealt with by the Sessions Judge and not the one or some who are asked to furnish security for more than one year; sub-section (3B) also gives the Sessions Judge power to transfer proceedings to Additional and Assistant Sessions Judges. In sub-section (6) an important amendment was made by Act X of 1926, S. 2, imprisonment for failure to give security for good behaviour under S. 108 supra only, shall be simple and not that under S. 109 supra. Where proceedings are under S. 109 or S. 110 supra imprisonment shall be rigorous or simple as the Court may in each case direct.

Scope of Section.—This section has reference to the class of cases where default is made in furnishing the security required under S. 118 supra. If the security demanded is furnished, this section has no application, and no reference to the Sessions Judge is necessary even though the period for which security is demanded might exceed one year, 23 C. 621. sub-section (1) applies to security demanded under all the provisions of Chapter VIII, but sub-section (2) would not apply to cases falling under Ss. 107, 108 and 109, supra as the period for which security could be demanded under these sections can in no event exceed one year, and reference to the Sessions Court or High Court is necessary only when such a period exceeds one year. The object of detaining a person in prison is to control his conduct for a certain period and this object is attained equally well if the subsequent sentence of imprisonment for a subsequent offence is made to run concurrently with the other imprisonment, 17 Cr. L.J. 523—35 Ind. Cas. 496. The committal to prison, or a detention in prison for failing to furnish security under Chapter VIII is not a sentence of imprisonment and therefore S. 397 infra will not authorize a Magistrate to direct a subsequent sentence to take effect after the expiry of a previous detention or committal to prison under the section, 23 Cr. L.J. 285=66 Ind. Cas. 161. The new proviso to S. 397 infra permits such a course, and the decision is no authority now.

Sub-section (1).—This sub-section contemplates that the accused shall be brought up for sentence if security is not furnished. The Court should in its order fix a date for furnishing the security without any order for alternative imprisonment and then if by that date the accused has not furnished the security he is to appear and receive such sentence under sub-section (2) and he is not to fix one year as the accused is entitled to be released the moment he furnishes such security, 51 M. 178. When an accused undergoing a sentence of imprisonment is directed to furnish security, the proper procedure to be followed is to adjourn the security proceedings till the expiry of the sentence of imprisonment and communicate to the jail authorities asking them to detain the person in jail under the provisions of this sub-section, 23 Bom. L.R. 1033=27 Cr. L.J. 1163=97 Ind. Cas. 747. It is not proper to call upon a person to furnish security when he is sentenced to a long term of imprisonment or transportation, 10 Cr. L.J. 63 (F.B.)=2 Ind. Cas. 531. Similarly when an accused person has already been sent to jail for failure to furnish security under S. 108 supra, for disseminating seditious a subsequent trial and conviction for seditious under S. 124A, I.P.C. for uttering the same seditious matter is against the spirit of S. 403, infra, although technically there has been no breach of the letter of S. 403, infra, proceedings under S. 108, supra, not constituting a trial for an offence. Such subsequent trial and conviction can only create the impression that the accused were tried and punished twice for the same offence and it is most undesirable that the idea should get abroad among the people of the country that they are liable to be punished twice for the same offence, and thus lower their sense of British Justice. It would be disastrous if British Justice were dragged into disrepute in consequence of such conviction and proceedings under S. 124A, I.P.C. should not have been instituted when the accused had already been committed to jail for a term of imprisonment on the same facts, 30 Cr. L.J. 630 (2)=116 Ind. Cas. 477. Security is to be given on or before the date fixed. Once an order has been passed under S. 118, supra, a Magistrate has no discretion under this section but is bound to commit the person to prison forthwith. If for any reason the person proceeded against has not had a reasonable opportunity to furnish security on or before the date, the only legal method of giving him time is to invoke the aid of sub-section (2) of S. 120, supra. Actual failure to furnish security should be proved and no order can be passed under this section in anticipation of default, Ratanlal 355, 403 and 511. After the records had been submitted to the Sessions Court the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to accept bail and release the accused from jail as the sessio of the case was then with the Sessions Court, 28 Cr. L.J. 657=103 Ind. Cas. 113.

Sub-section (2).—The words 'as aforesaid' occurring in this sub-section should not be construed as referring to the date on which the period for which such security is demanded is to be given, is to commence. They merely refer to the security to be given. It may possibly be that the language of the section is defective and merely refers to orders passed under S. 118, supra, but having regard to the language of sub-section (3) infra it is clear that the Legislature intended cases contemplated by this section to be heard before the superior Court without undue delay after the Magistrate's order has been passed, 10 Cr. L.J. 69 (F.B.) at 76=2 Ind. Cas. 531=5 L.B.R. 34. Proceedings when referred to the Sessions Judge under this sub-section are not before him for mere confirmation of the Magistrate's order. It is before him for further inquiry for the purpose of determining under sub-section (3) whether the accused ought to be detained at all in custody as a preventive measure, and, if so, for what period, 7 Cr. L J. 412. When a case is referred to the Sessions Judge it becomes his duty to pass such order as he thinks fit under sub-section (3). A mere finding by the Sessions Judge that in the interests of the community at large security for good behaviour should be demanded from the accused is not sufficient; he is bound to find a special ground on which the order is passed having special reference to S. 110, supra, 27 C. 656. It was held in 12 C.W.N. 483=7 Cr. L J. 323, that sub-section (3), contemplated a decision by the Judge on the merits of the order demanding security for good behaviour, but it does not authorize him to consider the sufficiency of the security offered. On a reference to the Sessions Judge he is bound to give notice to the accused, 27 C. 655 and to hear his pleader, 23 C. 493; 27 C. 662; 21 A. 107; 16 B. 661; 25 A. 375, 35 B. 271; 11 Cr. L J. 725=8 Ind. Cas. 879, and after hearing him or his pleader and examining the records of the case come to an independent conclusion on the merits as to whether the order demanding security was or was not justified and if so for what period and in what sum, 23 Cr. L.J. 657=103 Ind. Cas. 193. Although notice is not specially provided for by this section yet on general principles it is advisable to do so as it involves the liberty of the subject, 23 C. 453; 4 C.W.N. 797. A Sessions Judge is not competent to delegate to a Magistrate the question of the adequacy of the security furnished which must be determined by himself alone, 12 Cr. L J. 310. A Sessions Judge has power to transfer a case referred to him under this sub-section to an Assistant Sessions Judge for disposal, 59 C. 229. An order passed directing a person to give security for a period of more than one year, and on failure, to be imprisoned for two years is prima facie bad, and such an illegality cannot be cured by the District Magistrate reducing the period to one year, and the period of imprisonment in default also to one year, as the provisions of this sub-section are imperative, Weir II, 57; 7 Cr. L.J. 412. A person undergoing imprisonment under this section for failure to furnish security to be of good behaviour is not undergoing a sentence of imprisonment within the meaning of S. 397, infra, so that the term of imprisonment for an offence cannot be made to commence on the expiration of the period for which he has been committed to prison 27 M. 525. Such a person is merely committed to prison, and not sentenced, 4 M.H.C.R. Appx. xliiv; but see 30 A. 334 (F.B.). A Magistrate has no power to sentence a person failing to furnish security to solitary confinement, 36 A. 455; where it was held that the words "committed to prison" in sub-section (1) mean a sentence of imprisonment, and do not merely mean 'committed to custody.' The words 'detained in prison' occurring in sub-section (2) have also a similar meaning. But in 31 M. 515 it was held following 27 M. 525 and Weir II, 452 and not following 30 A. 334 (F.B.) that any person committed to prison under this section is not undergoing a sentence of imprisonment; it is not for the commission of any offence that he is committed to prison under this section, and S. 397, infra, therefore, does not apply. See also 37 B. 178; 33 C. 1036; 23 Cr. L J. 255=66 Ind. Cas. 191. The new amendment in S. 397, infra, namely second proviso, makes the point clear and follows the Allahabad view in 30 A. 334 (F.B.). See also 28 Cr. L J. 652=103 Ind. Cas. 103. A Magistrate has power under S. 120, supra, to give time to the accused to furnish security after expiry of the date originally fixed and when he grants time, it was not in his power finally to dispose of the case when the accused absconds; the final order in such a case is to be passed by the Sessions Court under this section and proceedings cannot be said to have terminated with the Magistrate, 24 A.L.J. 327=27 Cr. L.J. 377=92 Ind. Cas. 889.

Sub-section (3)—The words of this sub-section are wide enough to give discretionary power to the Sessions Judge or High Court as the case may be to deal with the case on the merits and pass such orders as the circumstances of the case might require, 35 B. 271. This sub-section empowers Sessions Judges when good behaviour cases are laid before them to require the Magistrate to furnish them with further information or evidence if they think it necessary but they are not empowered to direct a rehearing of the case, 25 Cr. L.J. 1112=81 Ind. Cas. 836. This sub-section contemplates a further inquiry and evidence. Both in the interest of the prosecution and the accused it stands to reason that any further inquiry necessary should be held when the facts are fresh and when any further information or evidence necessary can, if possible, be obtained easily. As time elapses facts become forgotten and evidence unobtainable through various causes such as death and change of residence,

The Sessions Judge should pass orders as soon as possible and the law does not require him to wait until the expiry of the sentence before passing an order 10 Cr. L. J. 63 at 76 (F.B.) = 2 Ind. Cas. 531 = 5 L. J. R. 34. It is a fatal defect in procedure to pass an order under this sub-section without giving notice to the accused and without affording him an opportunity of being heard by the Sessions Judge, 10 Cr. L. J. 69 (F.B.) = 2 Ind. Cas. 531 following 2 Cr. L. J. 735 = 4 L. J. R. 43.

Sub-section (3A).—This is new and enacted with the object of avoiding conflict of opinion between the District Magistrate and the Sessions Judge in any particular case where one accused may appeal to the District Magistrate and the case of another accused jointly inquired into may be referred to the Sessions Judge.

Sub-section (4).—This sub-section deprives Superintendents of Jails of the power they possessed formerly to release persons if the security demanded was tendered to their satisfaction. This power was found to be inconsistent with the provisions of S. 122 supra, and therefore taken away. What corresponded to this sub-section in the Code of 1882 came in the end of sub-section (1). In the change newly effected, there is a clear indication that this sub-section authorized a Magistrate to take security even in a case where he has referred the matter to the Sessions Judge if it is offered before the Sessions Judge dealt with the case and the Magistrate cannot be said to be functus officio. There is nothing in the Code clearly indicating what should be done if security is offered after a reference to the Sessions Judge and before the reference is disposed of by him and this construction is a reasonable one, 29 Cr. L. J. 36 at 38 = 107 Ind. Cas. 286.

Sub-section (5).—Under this sub-section imprisonment for failure to give security for keeping the peace shall be simple, 26 Cr. L. J. 430 = 85 Ind. Cas. 49.

Sub-section (6).—By Act X of 1926, S. 2, an important amendment was made in this sub-section by omitting good behaviour cases falling under S. 109 supra from the category of cases where only simple imprisonment is awarded, and made to come under the category of cases falling under S. 110 supra namely simple or rigorous as the Court or Magistrate in each case directs. The result is, that political offenders are now classed along with habitual offenders.

Appeal.—S. 406 infra gives a right of appeal in good behaviour cases to the Sessions Court unless the Local Government notifies that in any district such appeal shall not lie to the Sessions Court. If a first class Magistrate demanded security for good behaviour for a period exceeding one year and the accused furnished security, the proceedings are not to be submitted to the Sessions Judge, and he has a right of appeal to the Sessions Judge; but if he fails to furnish the security the records must be submitted to the Sessions Judge, and the order passed by him, whatever its nature be, is the order passed by the Sessions Court, and no appeal lies to the High Court in such a case, as the order is not a conviction in a trial held by a Sessions Judge. In a case where the District Magistrate passes the order under this section an appeal lies to the Sessions Court under S. 406 infra. If a Sessions Judge refuses to confirm the order of a District Magistrate under this section, the District Magistrate cannot refer the matter to the High Court under S. 433 infra but his proper remedy is to ask the Public Prosecutor to move the High Court to revise the order of the Sessions Judge, 23 C. 249.

If a person who has been under a bond for good behaviour for three years is proceeded against a week after the expiry of the bond and no evidence was produced to show that anything had occurred in the week, no order ought to be passed demanding security. It is not fair to run a man in, as a Budmask before he had an opportunity of showing that he is willing to adopt an honest livelihood, 3 A L. J. 29 = 3 Cr. L. J. 95 following 1925 A.W.N. 34.

Power to release persons imprisoned for failing to give security.

124. (1) Whenever the District Magistrate or a Chief Presidency Magistrate is of opinion that any person imprisoned for failing to give security under this chapter may be released without hazard to the community or to any other person, he may order such person to be discharged.

(2) Whenever any person has been imprisoned for failing to give security under this Chapter, the Chief Presidency or District Magistrate may (unless the order has been made by some Court superior to his own) make an order reducing the amount of the security or the number of sureties or the time for which security has been required.

(3) An order under sub-section (1) may direct the discharge of such person either without conditions or upon any conditions which such person accepts :

Provided that any condition imposed shall cease to be operative when the period for which such person was ordered to give security has expired.

(4) The Local Government may prescribe the conditions upon which a conditional discharge may be made.

(5) If any condition upon which any such person has been discharged is, in the opinion of the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate by whom the order of discharge was made or of his successor, not fulfilled, he may cancel the same.

(6) When a conditional order of discharge has been cancelled under sub-section (5), such person may be arrested by any police officer without warrant, and shall thereupon be produced before the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate.

Unless such person then gives security in accordance with the terms of the original order for the unexpired portion of the term for which he was in the first instance committed or ordered to be detained (such portion being deemed to be a period equal to the period between the date of the breach of the conditions of discharge and the date on which, except for such conditional discharge, he would have been entitled to release), the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate may remand such person to prison to undergo such unexpired portion.

A person remanded to prison under this sub-section shall, subject to the provisions of section 122, be released at any time on giving security in accordance with the terms of the original order for the unexpired portion aforesaid to the Court or Magistrate by whom such order was made, or to its or his successor.

Amendment.—Sub-sections (3), (4), (5) and (6) are new.

Scope of the section—The powers of a District Magistrate under this section are distinct from the powers he exercises under S. 406, infra as an appellate Court in case he is empowered by the Local Government to hear appeals. The District Magistrate is responsible for the peace of his district, and it rests with him entirely to release a person if, in his opinion it could be done without hazard to the community, 1853 A.W.N. 183; 1905 A.W.N. 143; 2 Cr. L.J. 335. A Chief Presidency Magistrate also may exercise such a power. If a Subordinate Magistrate is of opinion that a person may be discharged he should make a report to the District Magistrate, Ratanlal 668 and an order under this section by any Magistrate other than those mentioned herein is void, S. 530 (e), infra. For purposes of this section all Presidency Magistrates are subordinate to the Chief Presidency Magistrate R. 12 Mad. Cr. Ruls. of Pr.

Sub-section (1).—The words "whether by the order of such Magistrate or that of his predecessor or by some Subordinate Magistrate" have been omitted by the new amendment.

Sub-section (2).—A Chief Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate has power only to reduce the amount of the security or the number of sureties or the time for which security has been taken, but as this sub-section stands he has no power to alter the condition as to the character and class of the sureties required.

Sub-section (3).—This is new. The District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate has absolute power now to release with or without condition a person imprisoned for failure to give security without the intervention of the Court of Session or the High Court.

Sub-section (4).—This is new. Power is given to the Local Government to prescribe conditions upon which a conditional discharge may be made.

Sub-section (5).—This is also new and it empowers the Magistrate to cancel the discharge made on condition not being fulfilled.

Sub-section (6).—This is also new and it empowers the Magistrate to commit the person to jail to undergo the unexpired term, unless security is furnished as per original order for the unexpired period.

125. The Chief Presidency or District Magistrate may at any time for sufficient reasons to be recorded in writing, cancel any bond for keeping the peace or for good behaviour executed under this Chapter by order of any Court in his district not superior to his Court.

Power of District Magistrate to cancel any bond for keeping the peace or good behaviour.

Scope of the section.—The words of the section are very wide. This section applies only to cases where a bond has actually been executed and if the person has been imprisoned for default of the execution of the bond, S. 121 supra would apply to such a case, 35 A. 103; 32 C. 949. The District Magistrate may at any time cancel a bond for reasons which appear to him in the exercise of a sound judicial discretion to be sufficient. If the District Magistrate in the exercise of a judicial discretion is of opinion that a bond in the particular case ought never to have been required, he is entitled to cancel such a bond. The words "at any time" occurring in the section also support this view, 37 M. 125 (F.B.), 34 C. 1 (F.B.); see also 7 Cr. L.J. 349; 2 Cr. L.J. 507; 15 Cr. L.J. 143=22 Ind. Cas. 495. But it was held in 44 A. 614 that the only ground on which a District Magistrate could cancel a bond under this section is that something has supervened since the passing of the order, which satisfies him that there was no longer any necessity for keeping the person under bond, and not merely because he holds a different view of the evidence justifying the passing of the order. This was the view taken by Sundara Ayyar, J., in 37 M. 125. An application under this section is not an appeal and does not give power to the District Magistrate to review an order passed by the lower Court on the ground that it was improperly passed, 24 Cr. L.J. 204=71 Ind. Cas. 668 where 35 A. 103; 39 A. 466; 41 A. 651; 44 A. 614, are referred to; 24 Cr. L.J. 616=73 Ind. Cas. 504. The nature of the jurisdiction vested in the District Magistrate under this section whether it is original, appellate or revisional is not very clear. Whether the jurisdiction is to be considered original or revisional depends on the circumstances which evoke the exercise of jurisdiction. If the petitioner alleges circumstances which have taken place since the execution of the bond, and its continuance is no longer necessary, the jurisdiction involved for cancellation is clearly original, but if he alleged that the order was made for insufficient reason and asks for the cancellation of the bond, then it is revisional, 37 M. 125 at 129. It was held in 23 Cr. L.J. 281=66 Ind. Cas. 423, that a District Magistrate was not an appellate or revisional authority when called on to cancel a bond under this section and he has no power to vacate the lower Court's order as ultra vires or to quash proceedings, see also 37 C. 72; 34 C. 1 and 32 C. 948; 19 Cr. L.J. 245=41 Ind. Cas. 33. This section does not provide for setting aside the order but only for the cancellation of the bond, 22 Cr. L.J. 394. The omission was perhaps due to a desire for simplicity of language as the section was intended to cover two classes of cases, 37 M. 125 at 130.

At any time—The words mean "however early or however late," 37 M. 125 at 145.

For sufficient reasons cancel.—If we give the words 'for sufficient reasons' in the above section their natural meaning, then it would seem that the District Magistrate may set aside the order if he thinks that the evidence did not support the conclusion arrived at by a Subordinate Magistrate. That the evidence adduced does not warrant the conclusion is surely a sufficient cause for interference. If anything had happened after the date of the passing of the order which made the continuance of the bond unnecessary, that also would be a sufficient reason," 37 M. 125 at 140; 16 Cr. L.J. 556=29 Ind. Cas. 827; 33 A. 103. The District Magistrate under this section is entitled to interfere on grounds other than those disclosed in the evidence before the Magistrate who passed the order. This section confers a larger power than those of an appellate or revisional Court, 37 M. 125 at 141. This section does not confer upon a District Magistrate either an appellate or revisional jurisdiction but confers only an original jurisdiction 15 Cr. L.J. 721=26 Ind. Cas. 169. Under this section the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate has power to cancel a bond if in his opinion the Court ordering the execution of the bond ought never to have so ordered; but a District Magistrate cannot cancel a security bond accepted by a Subordinate Magistrate and order that the person proceeded against should be imprisoned till he executes a fresh bond with fit and proper sureties, 29 C. 455, 33 A. 624; 2 Cr. L.J. 507 and 278. Cancellation of the bond will discharge the accused, as well as his surety from all liability, and when there is no likelihood of a breach of the peace or the commission of an offence likely to cause a breach or when a bond has been wrongly taken, the District Magistrate will ordinarily cancel the bond, 1905 A.W.N. 143. Under this section, the District Magistrate is not empowered to remand a case for further inquiry and fresh evidence, as S. 428, infra, has no application, 20 Cr. L.J. 221=43 Ind. Cas. 781; 33 C. 8; cancellation of bond by Magistrate not empowered is void under S. 530 (f), infra.

In his district—See S. 20 supra as to the jurisdiction and local limits of a Presidency Magistrate. His district will be the Presidency town.

126. (1) Any surety for the peaceable conduct or good behaviour of another person may at any time apply to a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class to cancel any bond executed under this Chapter within the local limits of his jurisdiction.

(2) On such application being made, the Magistrate shall issue his summons or warrant, as he thinks fit, requiring the person for whom such surety is bound to appear or to be brought before him.

Scope of the section—This section deals with cases where a surety intimates to the Court his wish to withdraw and to have his bond cancelled. He may do so at any time without any reasons for his action; no man can be compelled to continue as a surety against his will and the Magistrate is bound to cancel the bond and issue summons or warrant to the person for whom such surety is bound to appear to be brought before him. A surety may be discharged in one of three ways (1) By death of the principal, (2) By operation of law, (3) By act of parties. Where a person on bail commits suicide the surety is discharged, 15 C.W.N. 550=13 Cr. L.J. 592=15 Ind. Cas. 4003; 37 M. 156.

The surety may apply—When an application is made by a surety under this section, the Magistrate has no option but to cancel the bond. But he must issue summons or warrant to the principal and when he appears or is brought before him, then only he is empowered to cancel the bond. There is no such thing as hearing the application on the merits. The presentation of the application itself under S. 102, infra, imposes upon the Magistrate this duty of issuing a warrant for the arrest of the accused. Therefore when surety after once presenting an application fails to appear in person or by pleader, such failure cannot deprive him of his right to treat the bond as cancelled. When an application has been presented and received there is no option left to the Magistrate but to act under S. 102, infra, 9 Bom. L.R. 1285. The principal, if he is unable to give fresh surety, will be committed to prison under S. 123 (1), supra. In case imprisonment exceeds one year the Magistrate is bound to refer the case to the Sessions Judge, 12 Cr. L.J. 410=11 Ind. Cas. 524. An order passed under this section is really an order under S. 118, supra, and as such is appealable under S. 405, infra.

This section was originally sub-section (3) to S. 126, supra. The words in italics are newly added. This section deals with an order passed on an application by a surety for his discharge provides inter alia that the order shall for purposes of Ss. 21 to 124 be deemed to be an order under S. 118, supra, but it makes no mention of S. 120 supra, 27 Cr. L.J. 865=56 Ind. Cas. 113; it prescribes the procedure to be adopted on the appearance of the person called upon to furnish security in Court, the surety having already applied to have his bond cancelled. Orders under this section come within S. 118, supra, and are therefore appealable under S. 406, infra. Fresh security for the unexpired term of the bond must be of the same description as the original security.

CHAPTER IX.

UNLAWFUL ASSEMBLIES.

An unlawful assembly at Common Law is an assembly of three or more persons (1) for purpose forbidden by law such as that of committing a crime by open force or (2) with intent to carry out a common purpose, lawful or unlawful in such a manner as to endanger the public peace or to give firm and courageous persons in the neighbourhood of such assembly reasonable grounds to apprehend a breach of the peace. In consequence of it. . . Assemblies under arms even for self-defence appear to be unlawful except when they are in defence of a dwelling house. It includes meetings forbidden by statute as unlawful assembly or unlawful combinations or associations, meetings to intimidate the Executive or Parliament; meetings for the purpose of spreading sedition or listening to seditious speeches; assemblies to obstruct the offences of the law..... It appears to be immaterial whether the common purpose of the assembly is unlawful or lawful if the manner of the meeting endangers the public peace or causes general alarm. Arch Cr.Pl.Ev. and Pro, p. 1161-62. S. 141, I.P.C., defines an unlawful assembly thus. "An assembly of five or more persons is designated an unlawful assembly if the common object of the persons composing the assembly is (1) To overawe by criminal force or show of criminal force, the Legislative, or Executive Government of India or the Government of any Presidency or any Lieutenant Governor, or any public servant in the exercise of the lawful power of such public servant; or (2) To resist the execution of any law, or of any legal process, or (3) To commit any mischief or criminal trespass, or other offence; or (4) By means of criminal force or show of criminal force to any person, to take or obtain possession of any property or to deprive any person of the enjoyment, of a right of way, or the use of water or other incorporeal right which he is in possession or enjoyment or to enforce any right or supposed right, or (5) By means of criminal force or show of criminal force, to compel any person to do what he is not legally bound to do, or to omit to do what he is legally entitled to do. Explanation—An assembly which was not unlawful when it assembled, may subsequently become an unlawful assembly." Chapter VIII of the I.P.C. deals with offences against public tranquility and punishes especially unlawful assemblies of persons whether they assemble tumultuously or otherwise, on account of the unlawful purpose they have in their minds the execution of which will disturb public peace and excite alarm. For aggravated forms of unlawful assemblies as a menace to public peace, see Ss. 144, 145, 146, 148, 150, 151, 152, 153, I.P.C.

127. (1) Any Magistrate or officer in charge of a police-station may command any unlawful assembly, or any assembly of five or more persons likely to cause a disturbance of the public peace, to disperse; and it shall thereupon be the duty of the members of such assembly to disperse accordingly.

Assembly to disperse on command of Magistrate or police-officer.

(2) This section applies also to the police in the town of Calcutta.

Any officer in charge of a police station—An order to disperse may be passed by an officer superior in rank to an officer in charge of a police-station See S. 531, infra.

Unlawful Assembly.—For definition, see S. 141, I.P.C., quoted above. Where the object of three persons was to draw a crowd and their action was such as was calculated to draw a crowd of fifty or sixty persons likely to cause a disturbance of the public peace, it was held that the gathering constituted an unlawful assembly, 7 B. 42.

Any assembly of five or more persons.—The words used are "Any assembly." An assembly which is perfectly innocent and lawful, of five or more persons may be commanded to be dispersed under this section if the assembly is likely to cause a disturbance of the public peace.

Likely to cause a disturbance of the public peace.—Whether a disturbance of the peace is likely to be caused, must of necessity be very much a matter of opinion and the police-officer to whose discretion the law leaves the duty of dispersing assemblies must of course act upon his own opinion one way or the other, and if his opinion is relevant, the grounds on which it is based are relevant also. In a case of this kind the opinion of the police-man who knows the people of the locality is obviously valuable and the Magistrate himself must look to the surrounding circumstances and form his own conclusions whether the acts committed were reasonably likely to lead to a breach of the peace, 7 B. 42 at 50.

128. If, upon being so commanded, any such assembly does not disperse, or if, without being so commanded, it conducts itself in such a manner as to show a determination not to disperse, any Magistrate or officer in charge of a police-station, whether within or without the presidency-towns, may proceed to disperse such assembly by force, and may require the assistance of any male person, not being an officer or soldier in Her Majesty's Army or a volunteer enrolled under the Indian Volunteers Act, 1869, and acting as such, for the purpose of dispersing such assembly, and, if necessary, arresting and confining the persons who form part of it, in order to disperse such assembly or that they may be punished according to law.

If such assembly does not disperse.—The members of an assembly who fail to disperse when commanded to do so, are liable under S. 151, I.P.C. See S. 145, I.P.C. which makes upon any person who joins or continues in an unlawful assembly commanded to disperse and fails to do so liable. Where the object of three persons was to draw a crowd and their action was such as was calculated to draw a crowd of 50 or 60 persons likely to cause a disturbance of the public peace it was held that the gathering constituted an unlawful assembly within the meaning of S. 151, I.P.C., and a refusal to disperse after being lawfully commanded to do so rendered the members liable to a conviction under S. 151, I.P.C., 7 B. 42.

Disperse such assembly by force.—This section refers only to the use of civil force to disperse an unlawful assembly and S. 129 infra refers to use of military force.

Officer, soldier or volunteer acting as such.—It is only when an officer, soldier, etc., was acting as such officer, soldier, etc., that is, on actual duty who may not be required to assist a Magistrate or Police-officer in dispersing an unlawful assembly.

The degree of force to be used must be proportionate to the circumstances of each particular case, 21 M. 249.

129. If any such assembly cannot be otherwise dispersed, and if it is necessary for the public security that it should be dispersed, the Magistrate of the highest rank who is present may cause it to be dispersed by military force.

130. (1) When a Magistrate determines to disperse any such assembly by military force, he may require any commissioned or non-commissioned officer in command of any soldiers in her Majesty's Army or of any volunteers enrolled under the Indian Volunteers Act, 1869, to disperse such assembly by military force, and to arrest and confine such persons forming part of it as the Magistrate may direct, or as it may be necessary to arrest and confine in order to disperse the assembly or to have them punished according to law.

(2) Every such officer shall obey such requisition in such manner as he thinks fit, but in so doing he shall use as little force, and do as little injury to person and property, as may be consistent with dispersing the assembly and arresting and detaining such persons.

A police-officer in charge of patrol beat duty holding the rank below an S.H.O. has no power to disperse an unlawful assembly by force, 50 C. 318.

131. When the public security is manifestly endangered by any such assembly, and when no Magistrate can be communicated with, any commissioned officer of Her Majesty's Army may disperse such assembly by military force, and may arrest and confine any persons forming part of it, in order to disperse such assembly or that they may be punished according to law; but if, while he is acting under this section, it becomes practicable for him to communicate with a Magistrate, he shall do so and shall thenceforward obey the instructions of the Magistrate as to whether he shall or shall not continue such action.

Power of commissioned military officers to disperse assembly.

132. No prosecution against any person for any act purporting to be done under this chapter shall be instituted in any Criminal Court, except with the sanction of the Local Government; and—

(a) no Magistrate or police-officer acting under this chapter in good faith,

(b) no officer acting under section 131 in good faith,

(c) no person doing any act in good faith, in compliance with a requisition under section 128 or section 130, and

(d) no inferior officer, or soldier, or volunteer, doing any act in obedience to any order which he was bound to obey, shall be deemed to have thereby committed an offence :

Provided that no such prosecution shall be instituted in any Criminal Court against any Officer or Soldier of His Majesty's Army except with the sanction of the Governor-General in Council.

No prosecution shall be instituted except with the sanction, etc.—The words 'Local Government' for 'the Governor-General in Council' and the Proviso were added by the Devolution Act XXXVIII of 1920. The sanction required by this section for a prosecution against any person for any act purporting to be done under Ch. IX is that of the Local Government or of the Governor-General in Council, and want of such sanction cannot be cured by S. 537 infra, 21 M. 80, where 29 M. 139 is followed and 22 C. 176 not followed. No sanction is necessary to prosecute a police-officer in charge of patrol duty who is below the rank of an S.H.O. as such an officer has no power to disperse an unlawful assembly by force, 50 C. 318.

Any act purporting to be done under this chapter.—A Police-officer below the rank of an S.H.O. has no power to act under this chapter. The protection enures only to acts purporting to be done under this Chapter and not otherwise, 50 C. 318.

Good faith.—Nothing is said to be done in good faith which is done without due care and attention S. 62 I.P.C. General Clauses Act X of 1897, S. 3 (20) defines good faith as follows : ' A thing shall be deemed to be done in good faith where it is in fact done honestly, whether it is done negligently or not ' but having regard to S. 4 (2), supra, the definition of the Penal Code is to be adopted for construing the words of the Code. The words 'in good faith' occurring in cl. (a) to (c) is omitted in cl. (d), so that disobedience to order is sufficient justification in the case of persons mentioned in cl. (d), so long as the order is one they are bound to obey. Cl. (d) is not applicable to police-officers. A police officer is not protected simply because he obeyed the orders of his superior officer. The degree of force depends on the nature of such assembly. Force must always be moderated and proportioned to the circumstances of the case. The taking of a life may be justified only by the necessity of protecting person or property against violence or crime or by the necessity of dispersing a crowd which is dangerous unless dispersed. When a police-officer without believing that it was necessary for public security to disperse an assembly by firing on them fired in the air without warning and killed one of the crowd, it was held that he was not acting in good faith and his act was not protected simply because he obeyed the orders of his superior, 21 M. 239. When the defence of the police-officers was, they were acting in pursuance of the provisions of Ss. 127 and 123 supra and therefore sanction was necessary for the prosecution, in a trial by Jury, the Judge should direct the jury that they should consider the provisions of Ss. 127 and 123, supra, and determine whether the police-officers were so acting, 25 C.W.N. 623—33 C.L.J. 340.

Proviso.—This proviso was added by Act XXXVIII of 1920 (Devolution Act), Sch. I.

CHAPTER X.

PUBLIC NUISANCES.

Public or common nuisances are such inconvenient or troublesome offences as annoy the whole community in general and not merely some particular person ; and therefore are indictable only and not actionable as it would be unreasonable to multiply suits by giving to everyman a separate right of action for what damns him in common only with the rest of his fellow subjects 4 Blackstone Com. p. 167. Everyman is guilty of a misdemeanour at common law known as common nuisance who (1) does an act not warranted by law, or (2) omits to discharge a legal duty, if the effect of the act or omission is to endanger the life, health property, morals or comforts, of the public or to obstruct the public in the exercise or the enjoyment of the rights common to all His Majesty's subjects. It is immaterial whether the annoyance arises from noise, stench, unwholesomeness or interference with the public comfort or convenience. If the legal duty does not exist at common law and a particular penalty is imposed by the statute creating the duty, the remedy by indictment for common nuisance would seem to be excluded. The object with which the act or omission is made is immaterial if the probable result is to affect injuriously, in any of the ways above stated the public or any appreciable part of it and if the effect is such, the nuisance cannot be legalized by long continuance. It is only in this respect and in the quantum of annoyance that the public nuisance differ from a private nuisance.....Public nuisances which are indictable may thus be classified (1) Interference with comfort, enjoyment or health, (2) acts dangerous to public safety, (3) acts injurious to public morals or decency, (4) unlawful treatment of dead bodies, (5) interference with public rights of passage by land or water. Archbold Cr. Pl. Pr and Ev, p. 1216-1217. Chapter XIV, I.P.C., deals with public nuisances, offences affecting the public health, safety, convenience, decency and morals. S. 268, I.P.C., defines public nuisance thus. A person is guilty of public nuisance who does any act or is guilty of an illegal omission, or which causes any common injury, danger, or annoyance to the public or to the people in general who dwell or occupy property in the vicinity or which must necessarily cause injury, obstruction, danger or annoyance to persons who may have occasion to use any public right. A common nuisance is not excused on the ground that it causes some convenience or advantage." See also S. 269, I.P.C., dealing with negligent act likely to spread infection of disease dangerous to life. S. 270 I.P.C. malignant act likely to spread infection of disease dangerous to life S. 271 I.P.C.

disobedience to quarantine rule. S. 272 Adulteration of food or drink intended for sale. S. 273 Sale of noxious food or drink. S. 274 Adulteration of drug and sale of such drugs etc. S. 277 Fouling water of a public spring etc. S. 278 Making the atmosphere noxious to health. S. 279 Rash driving, etc., in a public way. S. 280 Rash navigation etc. S. 284 Negligent conduct with respect to poisonous substances. Ss. 235 to 237 Negligent conduct with fire or combustible matter or explosive substance, machinery, etc. S. 233 Negligent conduct in pulling down or repairing buildings. S. 239 Negligent conduct with respect to animals. These are all public nuisances punishable under the I.P.C. and Ss. 292 to 294A, I.P.C., deal with offences against public morals and decency.

133. (1) Whenever a District Magistrate, a Sub-divisional Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class considers, on receiving a police-report or other information and on taking such evidence (if any) as he thinks fit,

Conditional order for removal of nuisance.

that any unlawful obstruction or nuisance should be removed from any way, river or channel which is or may be lawfully used by the public, or from any public place, or that the conduct of any trade or occupation, or the keeping of any goods or merchandise, is injurious to the health or physical comfort of the community, and that in consequence such trade or occupation should be prohibited or regulated or such goods or merchandise should be removed or the keeping thereof regulated, or that the construction of any building, or the disposal of any substance, as likely to occasion conflagration or explosion, should be prevented or stopped, or that any building, tent or structure, or any tree is in such a condition that it is likely to fall and thereby cause injury to persons living or carrying on business in the neighbourhood or passing by, and that in consequence the removal, repair or support of such building, tent or structure, or the removal or support of such tree, is necessary, or that any tank, well or excavation adjacent to any such way or public place should be fenced in such manner as to prevent danger arising to the public, or that any dangerous animal should be destroyed, confined or otherwise disposed of, such Magistrate may make a conditional order requiring the person causing such obstruction or nuisance, or carrying on such trade or occupation, or keeping any such goods or merchandise, or owning, possessing or controlling such building, tent, structure, substance, tank, well or excavation, or owning or possessing such animal or tree, within a time to be fixed in the order, to remove such obstruction or nuisance ; or to desist from carrying on, or to remove or regulate in such manner as may be directed, such trade or occupation ; or to remove such goods or merchandise, or to regulate the keeping thereof in such manner as may be directed ; or to prevent or stop the erection of, or to remove, repair or support, such building, tent or structure ; or to remove or support such tree ; or to alter the disposal of such substance ; or to fence such tank, well or excavation, as the case may be ; or to destroy, confine or dispose of such dangerous animal in the manner provided in the said order : or, if he objects so to do, to appear before himself or some other Magistrate of the first or second class, at a time and place to be fixed by the order, and move to have the order set aside or modified in the manner hereinafter provided.

(2) No order duly made by a Magistrate under this section shall be called in question in any Civil Court.

Explanation.—A ' public place ' includes also property belonging to the State, camping grounds and grounds left unoccupied for sanitary or recreative purposes.

Amendment.—The section has been redrafted and many a doubt which existed before has been cleared ; the term building is made to include " tent, structure or tree " and the words " that any dangerous animal should be destroyed or disposed of " have been added and power to order destruction, confinement or disposal of animals is also given ; power is also given to prohibit or regulate trade or keeping of goods, etc.

Scope and object of the Section.—The powers given under this section are of an exceptional nature. The provisions of the chapter should be worked so as not to become a nuisance to the community at large and although every man is bound so to use his own property in such a way as not to cause legal damage or harm to his neighbour yet no one has a right to interfere with a free and full enjoyment by another of his property except on clear and absolute proof that such use to producing such legal damage or harm and therefore a lawful and necessary trade such as tanning should be interfered with unless it is proved that it is injurious to the health or physical comfort, 1 Lah. 163 following 1888 P.R. (Cr.) 17. This section is primarily intended to be exercised in cases where there is no question that the right claimed was one vested in the public, 45 A. 656 at 666 ; 49 C. 682. This section contemplates only an inquiry as to the existence or non-existence of the obstruction complained of, and not an inquiry into a disputed question of title, and where a bona fide claim or private right is raised the Magistrate has no power to make an order under this section but should leave the matter for the determination of the Civil Court, 18 C.W.N. 1148=19 C.L.J. 631 ; 18 C.W.N. 1086 ; 28 A. 98 ; 11 C. 8. Where the person proceeded against sets up title to the property, the proper course is to proceed under S 137 infra 49 A. 453. A long user by a person of what is claimed to be a part of the public way may be taken as a bona fide assertion of claim ousting the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to pass a summary order under this section vice versa a long user by the public of a place as part of the public road or way raises a presumption of relinquishment by the owner of the right over it and the Court has to maintain the possession as at present found, 29 Cr. L.J. 432=108 Ind. Cas. 559. Whether there is a bona fide dispute as to the public nature of the subject-matter, the question should be left to a Civil Court for adjudication, but whether there is a bona fide question is for the Magistrate to decide, 24 Cr. L.J. 690=73 Ind. Cas. 802. Whenever there is in fact a bona fide claim of right in a case in which a person is required to remove a nuisance the Magistrate's jurisdiction is ousted and he has no power to make an order under this section, 1 C.L.J. 434. See also 25 Cr. L.J. 1030=81 Ind. Cas. 934. This section only relates to an existing state of affairs and to the possibility of future results, 1 Lah. 153 ; 20 Cr. L.J. 462; 1901 A.W.N. 26; 21 W.R. (Cr.) 19. A general order or proclamation prohibiting a nuisance cannot be issued under this section as under S 114 (3), infra. Before this section can be applied there must be a finding that the obstruction in question is situated in a way which may be lawfully used by the public or on any public place, 12 A.L.J. 1024=13 Cr. L.J. 724=26 Ind. Cas. 172. A permissive way may be obstructed at pleasure by the owner or tenant of the land over which it runs, 13 C. 273 at 278. This section is limited to injuries arising or likely to arise to members of unascertained mass of the public. When a person against whom a notice is issued under this section appears and objects to the order, the inquiry must proceed as in a summons case, 20 A.L.J. 692. The persons who require protection are persons living or carrying on business in the neighbourhood or passing by. It would be straining the meaning of the words to hold that the section applies to persons living actually in the alleged dangerous building or in the servants' quarters in the compound belonging to it. This section does not therefore empower a Magistrate to order an owner of a house standing apart from the public in its own compound, to repair, 20 A. 501. The words 'when empowered by the Local Government in this behalf' are now omitted by the new amendment. All First Class Magistrates in the place of those specially empowered, have been now authorized to take action when necessary. This section is not intended to be employed to avoid the necessity of filing a civil suit in regard to a construction which had been in existence for several years, 24 A.L.J. 112=27 Cr. L.J. 27=91 Ind. Cas. 59. An order under this section and under the subsequent sections of the Chapter is an order against a particular individual and when that individual dies, the order must be considered to be spent and no order can be passed against his successor in-interest without fresh proceedings, 26 A.L.J. 405=29 Cr. L.J. 443 (2)=108 Ind. Cas. 565.

District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class.—Only these Magistrates, and not a Presidency Magistrate, are entitled to act under this chapter. A Presidency Magistrate can only deal with nuisances under the Local Acts. A Sub-divisional Magistrate after passing a conditional order under this section may refer this matter to a subordinate Magistrate for disposal. There is nothing in the Code to prevent such a course, 6 Pat. 428 at 430 where 42 C. 159; 17 C. 562; 25 C. 278 are referred to but in 50 C.L.J. 251, it was held that the Magistrate cannot refer the matter to a third class Magistrate as this section says that proceedings should be in the hands of a District Magistrate, etc., and a third class Magistrate cannot inquire and report.

Any unlawful obstruction or nuisance should be removed from any way, etc., which in his opinion—Obstruction to private paths and drains can only be dealt with by Civil Courts, 2 W.R. (Cr.) 33; 5 W.R. (Cr.) 58. The words 'in his opinion' have been newly added. This is to empower Magistrates to issue a conditional order under this section when in his opinion the way, river or channel which is the subject of unlawful obstruction or nuisance may be lawfully used by the public. The amendment is designed to meet the difficulty which arises when the defence set up that the way, river, etc., is private property of the objector, and that no public right exists. St of Objs. and Reas. This section deals with an obstruction to a way, river or channel which is or may be lawfully used by the public, and the obstruction must be to a public use, 22 B. 993. The duty of determining whether the site of the obstruction is a public place or way is cast by the section on the Magistrate in the first instance and under no circumstances can it be left to the jury and unless the Magistrate finds that the place or way is public he has no jurisdiction to proceed with the investigation, 4 Lah. 224. The erection of a dam across a public river is an unlawful obstruction which can be ordered to be removed under this section, 21 Cr. L.J. 55=54 Ind. Cas. 407. The word channel is not defined in the Code but it is quite wide enough to include a water course in the centre of a catchment area for rainwater which takes the water falling in that area to a public urani, 22 L.W. 470-1925 M.W.N. 663-27 Cr. L.J. 103-51 Ind. Cas. 537. Under this section power is given only for the removal of an obstruction and there is no provision for the reconstruction of a bund which has been once removed, 26 Cr. L.J. 517-55 Ind. Cas. 537. Eviding a cattle trough on Government waste land touching a public road was held to be an unlawful obstruction. The motive with which a public highway is obstructed is absolutely irrelevant and it does not matter when as a matter of fact the structure causes practical inconvenience or not, because the land in which it is built though not at the time necessary for continuous use of the public, may be required for such use when there is increased traffic or for any other similar reason, 23 A. 159; 14 C.W.N. 544; when the encroachment complained of is admittedly on a public way, however bona fide the claim may be, the Magistrate's jurisdiction is not ousted, 6 C.W.N. 836; 32 C. 530. A mere construction of a latrine in one's own land cannot be considered to be a nuisance within the meaning of this section. An order directing the removal of a latrine built on one's own property is without jurisdiction although the Magistrate can direct the owner not to use the latrine in such a way as to cause nuisance to his neighbours, 26 A.L.J. 86-29 Cr. L.J. 233-107 Ind. Cas. 242, following 25 C. 425. A common nuisance cannot be excused on the ground that it affords some convenience or advantage to the person guilty of it, 34 A. 345. See also 28 Cr. L.J. 203-99 Ind. Cas. 539 as to the erection of a bund amounting to a public nuisance justifying the passing of an order under this section when once such a bund has been found to be an encroachment the conditional order cannot be discharged on the ground that the encroachment causes no inconvenience, 6 Pat. 423.

Lawfully used by the public.—Before an order can be made ordering the removal of an obstruction to a way or public place, there must be a finding that the obstruction in question is on a way which may be lawfully used by the public or in a public place, 12 A L.J. 1024-15 Cr. L.J. 724-26 Ind. Cas. 172; 10 Cr. L.J. 210-3 Ind. Cas. 7. There is no warrant for the view that Railway land is necessarily a public place, with regard to which action under this section can be taken. There must be a finding that the land encroached upon is in a way which is, or may lawfully be used by the public, 24 Cr. L.J. 555-74 Ind. Cas. 1047. In 36 A 209 it was held that when a person whose field was on a lower level, raised the level of his field to such an extent as to cause damage to the neighbour's land, no action could be taken under this section against him, as the field or even if a channel, was not such as had been or could be lawfully used by the public. This ruling is based upon the fact that the field over which the water used to flow was not a public field and hence this section could not be applied to it. The Court was apparently prepared to concede that the field over which the water flowed could be described in a wide sense as a channel. 22 L.W. 470-1925 M.W.N. 663-27 Cr. L.J. 105-51 Ind. Cas. 537. See 10 C L J. 484.

The Conduct of any trade or occupation injurious to health etc.—"It was held that the section dealt with only trades or occupations which are in themselves injurious, but by the new amendment the conduct of any trade, etc., the provision as to various trades or occupations have been amplified in order to provide for cases in which it is the manner in which the trade or occupation is conducted which may be injurious to the health or physical comfort of the community."—St. of Obs. and Reas. See 1 Lah. 163 following 1883 P.P. (Cr.) 47. Where there is no evidence that the manufacture of bricks was in itself injurious to the health of the resident of a college near by or that the persons proceeded against were so working that the health of any one was being impaired, an order passed under this section was set aside and the High Court remarked thus "The powers given under S. 133 of the Code are of an exceptional character. The rights involved are important and the case essentially one in which if the residents of the college considered themselves aggrieved they should have taken action in the Civil Court to abate the nuisance alleged and this can still be done. The fact that the college was built many years ago in the present position in order to have an open country round and pure air is beside the point and is no ground for ignoring the legal rights of others. It is open to the college authorities to acquire the surrounding country in which the brick kilns had existed for many years." An order against some persons inoculating their children upon an outbreak of small-pox is not covered by this section as those persons cannot be said to be carrying on a trade or engaged in an occupation 15 Cr. L. J. 253=23 Ind. Cas. 205. Though a burning ghāt may not be a nuisance under this clause, if it is in such an offensive state as to be a source of injury or annoyance to the people of the vicinity, a Magistrate will have jurisdiction to act under this section, 25 C. 423; 19 M. 464; 49 A. 453 where 20 A. L. J. 657 and 692 and 6 A. L. J. 685 are followed, noise injurious to the physical comfort of the community is a nuisance within this section, 32 C. L. J. 42=21 Cr. L. J. 669=57 Ind. Cas. 829. This section authorizes action being taken if any trade in question is injurious to the physical comfort of the community. An order prohibiting the discharge into a river of an effluent from a factory which might be injurious to the health of the community which has rights to use the water of the river can validly be made under this section, 28 Cr. L. J. 317=100 Ind. Cas. 541. But at the same time it is necessary to take that all the circumstances into account to see that interference with public comfort is considerable, and a considerable section of the public is not affected injuriously, general equitable principles not being lost sight of, 12 Cr. L. J. 146=9 Ind. Cas. 891.

Health or physical comfort.—That is, as distinguished from religious or sentimental gratification such as arising from carrying taboos along a certain public road. See 2 B. 457.

May make a conditional order.—A Magistrate who commences proceedings under this section is bound to follow the procedure laid down in this chapter. He cannot proceed with the inquiry without issuing a conditional order and when the alleged public right is denied and there is reliable evidence in support of such denial he is bound to stay proceedings until the matter is decided by a competent Civil Court without directing any particular party to go to a competent Civil Court, 29 Cr. L. J. 530=109 Ind. Cas. 354. The conditional order under this section must be such that the person against whom it is directed can learn from its terms what it is they are to do for the purpose of complying with it. When it is too vague and indefinite, the final order made under S. 137, infra was set aside by the High Court holding that it was unnecessary to send back the case for retrial, as under S. 137, infra it could decide only on the reasonableness or propriety of the conditional order and was not competent to go behind it, 11 C. L. J. 114=11 Cr. L. J. 213=5 Ind. Cas. 7.2.

Requiring the person—The word "person" according to S. 11 I.P.O. includes a company or association or a body of persons, incorporated or not. A Magistrate cannot proceed to pass an order for the removal of a nuisance under this section without calling on the party to show cause why the order should not be passed against him and without hearing his objections if any, even if they are filed after the time fixed originally but before he takes up the case.

Persons living or carrying on business in the neighbourhood.—By these words are meant not the persons who in the exercise of their private rights may use a building supposed to be in a dangerous condition, but unascertained members of the public whose ordinary avocations may take them to the neighbourhood of such building, 20 A. 501.

Building, tent or structure likely to fall, etc.—The term "building" is made now to include tent or other structures. To justify an order, there must be proof that the building is in a dangerous state at present. Dangerous trees also are included now.

Any dangerous animal should be destroyed, etc.—This is newly introduced and provision is here made for the destruction or disposal of dangerous animals.

Remove such obstruction or nuisance.—The order under this section should be confined to a direction to remove the nuisance complained of. It must be left to the person to choose them most effective way of removing it. If a tank is a nuisance or it may be removed by filling it up or by excavating it to greater depth. He should be allowed the opportunity of using his discretion as to the mode in which he would remove the nuisance, 10 W. R. (Cr). 51. A final order directing a person to remove such portion of a platform as might be obstructing a public highway being vague and indefinite, such an order was held bad, 23 A. L. J. 43.

Remove or regulate such trade, etc.—It is of course possible to suggest that power to order 'removal' of a trade must be held to include power to remove anything connected with that trade or restore the status quo before that trade commenced. But that is not the natural and straightforward meaning of the expression 'removal of a trade' and the Court has no right to strain the natural and straightforward meaning merely because an order that might be passed by so doing would possibly be very desirable. The powers given under the section suggest three different ways (1) the Magistrate may simply order the party to stop carrying on the trade, etc. (2) May order it to be removed to a short distance holding the trade to be injurious. (3) May allow the trade to be carried on under certain conditions holding it to be injurious. It shall be manifestly straining the language to hold that removal of trade includes ordering the party to restore status quo, 27 A.L.J. 177.

Tank, well or excavation should be fenced in.—Under this section the Magistrate cannot order the filling of an excavation; he could order only that the excavation be fenced in, 22 B. 715; 27 A.L.J. 177. Where a tank is used as a reservoir for water, the Magistrate may order it to be fenced in to prevent accidents, but where the tank is proved to be injurious to the health and comfort of the community, he may treat it as a public nuisance and order it to be filled up; to fence in, such an excavation and to stop there, would be to make a dead letter of this section, and to take away from the community the relief which the law gives them, 10 W. R. (Gr.) 27.

Within a time to be fixed in the order.—Every conditional order must fix a time within which the person is required to remove the obstruction, etc., when the time fixed in the order is allowed to expire without obeying the order or appearing to show cause against it, the liability to punishment attaches irrespective of S. 140, infra, 31 M. 280.

To appear at the time and place to be fixed by the order.—The order must appoint a time within which and a place where, the person to whom it is directed to appear and move to have the conditional order set aside or modified, 9 C. 637. It must be addressed to a particular person or persons. It cannot be addressed to the public at large as in the case of orders under S. 144 (3), infra. The Magistrate is bound to hear the objections and to take evidence tendered under S. 137, infra, 20 A.L.J. 692 and 657; 8 C.L.R. 431; 11 B. 375. He is also bound to compel the attendance of witnesses when required by a party, 6 C.W.N. 548. Where from the conditional order the person against whom it is made could not learn what he is to do for the purpose of complying with it, it being vague and indefinite such an order is bad and the High Court while setting aside the order declined to send back the case for re-hearing as it thought that no useful purpose could possibly be served by such a course, 11 C.L.J. 114=11 Cr. L.J. 213=5 Ind. Cas. 722.

No order duly made shall be called in question in any Civil Court.—It is not competent to a Civil Court to set aside an order duly made under this section on the ground that it was made without jurisdiction as the subject matter in dispute was private land and not a thoroughfare or public place. But the Civil Court irrespective of the order made under this section may try the question whether the land in question is private property or not as between parties to such suit and those who claim under them, 6 C. 291; 2 B. 457; 3 B.L.R. 295; 4 B.L.R. 24 (F.B.). To such a suit it is unnecessary to make the Secretary of State a party, 13 C. 460 (F.B.) But in 17 B. 293 it was held that a party aggrieved by an order under this section may sue for a declaration of title against Government who is interested in denying plaintiff's title to the land; see 6 B. 670, where it was held that the party dissatisfied with the Magistrate's order cannot sue the Magistrate, but must sue the Secretary of State, see also 15 Cr. L.J. 259=23 Ind. Cas. 467. This clause provides that no order duly made shall be called in question in any Civil Court and therefore it is necessary that the provisions of this section should be sparingly used and if the party against whom an order is contemplated raises the question that the land is his private land he should stay hands and refer the party to a Civil Court, 18 C.W.N. 1086.

Revision.—In 48 C. 534 it was held that it was not the practice of the High Court to entertain an application in revision against an order made by a Magistrate unless the party aggrieved has first moved the Sessions Judge under Ss. 435 and 438, infra, see also 50 C. 423. The High Court cannot set aside an order under this section except on an error of law or an excess of jurisdiction. The Magistrate's proceedings being judicial proceedings, it is open to the High Court to revise the order on a point of law, 9 B.H.C.R. 160; 7 B.L.R. 449; 9 B.L.R. 417.

The High Court will not interfere in revision when a Magistrate dropped proceedings, 1 C.L.R. 486; 8 C. 883. A Magistrate clearly has jurisdiction to exercise his discretion by declining to decide when the public right is strongly disputed and sending the party to a Civil Court, 45 A. 656 at 666. Orders under this chapter are orders in a Criminal trial. No Letters Patent Appeal lies therefrom. The fact that the person proceeded against is a competent witness on his behalf does not make it the less a Criminal trial, 39 M. 537.

Further Inquiry.—When a Magistrate dropped proceedings under this section the District Magistrate or Sessions Judge has no power to order further inquiry under S. 436, infra, 24 C. 395. The proper course is to refer the matter to the High Court under S. 438 infra, when the order is illegal or improper, 25 C. 425; 26 Cr.L.J. 125 (1)=83 Ind. Cas. 995 (1)

Costs.—There is no provision in this chapter for the payment of costs by any party to a proceeding under this section, 26 Cr. L.J. 517=85 Ind. Cas. 357.

134. (1) The order shall, if practicable, be served on the person against whom it is made in manner herein provided for service of a summons.

(2) If such order cannot be so served, it shall be notified by proclamation published in such manner as the Local Government may by rule direct, and a copy thereof shall be stuck up at such place or places as may be fittest for conveying the information to such person.

Scope of the section.—The terms of this section are directory and an omission to follow strictly such direction though it is an irregularity does not invalidate the order where it is shown that the order passed has been actually known to the person affected by it. Such omission does not prevent the case coming within S. 188, I.P.C., 16 C. 9, 12 M. 475; 5 W.R. (Cr.) 4.

Order shall if practicable be served on the person.—The order herein referred to is the conditional order under S. 112, supra, and such conditional order is to be served on the person individually and an opportunity given to him to show cause against such order. It is only when service is not practicable, that resort is to be had to notification by proclamation, 8 A. 99. In order to ascertain the manner in which the order may be served it is necessary to refer to the provisions of Ss. 69 to 71, supra. It is plain that the procedure provided by S. 71, supra, cannot be made use of unless service in the manner provided by Ss. 67 and 70, supra, cannot be effected by due diligence. A conditional order under this section is not legally served when it is not proved that the order was served in the manner provided for service of summons. First it should be proved that service could not be effected personally under S. 69, supra, and then it could not be effected in the manner provided by S. 70, supra, and it is only after that, service by affixture should be resorted to under S. 71, supra, 43 C.L.J. 113.

In manner herein provided for service of summons.—See Ss. 69 to 73 as to manner of service. Service on an agent is sufficient, 30 A. 354. Omission to follow strictly the direction as to service of order on the person proceeded against is only an irregularity which can be cured under S. 537, infra.

Sub-section (2).—Disobedience of the order duly promulgated by a Magistrate is an offence under S. 188, I.P.C., 54 C. 152.

135. The person against whom such order is made shall—

Person to whom order is addressed to obey.

(a) perform, within the time and in the manner specified in the order the act directed thereby; or

(b) appear in accordance with such order and either show cause against the same, or apply to the Magistrate by whom it was made to appoint a jury to try whether the same is reasonable and proper.

or show cause or claim jury.

Scope of the section—This section gives the person against whom a conditional order is made (1) to perform the act directed within the specified time, (2) to appear to show cause against the same, (3) to apply to the Magistrate to appoint a jury to try whether the same is reasonable and proper, 43 M. 316 at 318. If he appears to show cause, the procedure laid down in S. 137, infra, is to be followed. He can hear the case on cause shown and may record evidence as in summons cases and may either drop proceedings or make the original order absolute. But if he claims a jury, the Magistrate is to proceed under S. 138, infra. Both Ss. 137 and 138 are imperative in their terms and the Magistrate has no discretion in the matter. The party cannot both show cause against the order and at the same time claim a jury, 13 C.W.N. 367=10 Cr. L.J. 454=4 Ind. Cas. 72; 1500 A.W.N. 204.

And in the manner specified—The words 'and in the manner' are new. If the person appears the Magistrate is bound subject to S. 139A infra, to take evidence as required by S. 137, infra, 1 Bom. L.R. 783; see also 25 Cr. L.J. 266=76 Ind. Cas. 826.

Apply for the appointment of a jury to try.—Reference to a jury is entirely optional with the person against whom an order is made, but if he applies for a jury he is bound by their verdict, 14 C. 60. When an application is made for the appointment of a jury the Magistrate cannot decide the matter by a local inquiry, 2 C.L.R. 518, Weir II, 63. When the jury return their verdict, the plea of obstruction under a bona fide claim of right cannot be raised, 22 A. 267; 1900 A.W.N. 30. Similarly when the party appears to show cause and does not object that it is not a public way, he cannot afterwards raise such an objection as to the Magistrate's jurisdiction in rejecting the plea as not bona fide, 15 C 564. An application for the appointment of a jury must be made to the Magistrate who passed the order under S. 133, supra, and it would seem that he alone is entitled to do with the case, 9 M 201; 25 C 273; 43 M. 316. There is nothing in the Code to prevent a Magistrate making a conditional order and subsequently referring the matter to a subordinate Magistrate for disposal. It is only when the person appears and demands a jury that the matter should be disposed of by the Magistrate who made the original order, 6 Pat 428 at 430. The jury is to be appointed to consider whether the measures directed by the Magistrate are reasonable and proper, 30 A. 354, and the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to refer the case to a jury unless he finds that the way alleged to be obstructed is one which is or may be lawfully used by the public; it was held in 31 C. 679 that the Magistrate is 'not entitled to refer to the jury and ask them to decide whether there was a public right of way, see Weir II, 64 and 14 C.W.N. 544. The new S. 139A makes this clear.

136. If such person does not perform such act or appear and show cause or apply for the appointment of a jury

Consequence of his failing to do so.

as required by section 135, he shall be liable to the penalty prescribed in that behalf in section 188 of the Indian Penal Code, and the order shall be made absolute.

Scope of the section—The provisions of this section are stringent, because the intention is to create facilities for conditional orders which Magistrates are authorized to pass under this Chapter in order to prevent danger to the public, becoming final without needless delay and thereby promptly to ensure public safety, 12 M. 473 at 478; before proceeding criminally for a breach of the order it must be shown that the order clearly and unequivocally prohibits the thing said to have been done. If the order is ambiguous and capable of two interpretations, the one most favourable to the accused must be adopted, 16 C. 9 at 13.

Appear and show cause.—The Magistrate is bound to take evidence and make some inquiry under S. 135, infra, 1 Bom. L.R. 783.

In that behalf.—The words "in that behalf" mean for his failure to comply with the requirements of S. 135 supra, 12 M. 475.

Order shall be made absolute.—When once an order has been made absolute it is not competent to the party affected by it to go behind and question its validity in any way, 13 A. 577; 12 M. 475; 31 M. 260. These decisions were distinguished in 20 A. 571. A Court has inherent power to set aside an ex parte order, 19 Cr. L.J. 214=43 Ind. Cas. 790 non-service of notice would not give the Magistrate power to cancel the order absolute made by him and on failure to obey the order passed under this section, the procedure prescribed under S. 140, infra, should be adopted, 31 C.W.N. 530=44 C.L.J. 211=28 Cr. L.J. 30=22 Ind. Cas. 62.

137. (1) If he appears and shows cause against the order, the Magistrate shall take evidence in the matter as in a summons-case.

(2) If the Magistrate is satisfied that the order is not reasonable and proper, no further proceedings shall be taken in the case.

(3) If the Magistrate is not so satisfied, the order shall be made absolute.

Scope of the section.—Where a conditional order under S. 133 supra is passed and the opposite party appeared by pleader before the Magistrate to show cause and denied the existence of any public right in respect of a water course in dispute the party denying the existence of the right is to adduce evidence in support of his case relevant to an inquiry under S. 139 A, infra and the party who moved the Court cannot be expected or required under this section to produce his evidence before the conclusion of that inquiry and any order made without affording the party who moved the Court an opportunity to adduce his evidence under this section after the conclusion of the inquiry under S. 139A infra, cannot be sustained. The inquiry under this section will commence only after the conclusion of the inquiry contemplated by S. 139A, infra, 30 Cr. L.J. 622 (1)=116 Ind. Cas. 334.

Shall take evidence as in summons-cases.—The provisions of this section are clearly mandatory and no waiver on the part of the petitioners can confer on the Magistrate authority to act in a manner not prescribed by the Legislature, viz., to pass an order without recording evidence, but merely basing it on information gathered at a local inquiry to which the parties consented, 10 C.L.J. 432=11 Cr. L.J. 1=4 Ind. Cas. 436. A Magistrate is not justified in assuming the role of an arbitrator between the parties to the proceedings before him. When the parties wished him to blink at the law, he should not have readily agreed to do so. Consent of the parties or waiver did not vest him with jurisdiction, 21 C.W.N. 825=25 C.L.J. 34f=18 Cr. L.J. 738=40 Ind. Cas. 733. The Magistrate is not justified in consenting to act as an arbitrator and deciding the matter in dispute on mere local inspection, 49 A. 270; nor can the Magistrate decide the matter merely on the report of a Tahsildar to whom he had referred the matter for inquiry. He must take evidence in the matter as in a summons-case, 27 Cr. L.J. 1254=93 Ind. Cas. 102. An order absolute made without recording evidence but on mere local inspection is illegal, 49 A. 475. A Conditional order cannot be made absolute without the party moving the Court being required to adduce evidence in support of his claims even where the opposite party called upon to show cause, appeared and denied the right claimed but failed to adduce evidence in support of the denial, 28 Cr. L.J. 855=104 Ind. Cas. 635; 28 Cr. L.J. 60=99 Ind. Cas. 52; where a Magistrate on receipt of a petition alleging an obstruction on a public highway asked certain Panchas to make a local investigation and on their reporting that a newly built shop encroached on the public highway directed the removal of the building relying on the report received by him, it was held that the Magistrate was bound to follow the procedure laid down in this chapter and determine on the evidence adduced whether there was any unlawful obstruction of a highway or public place and could not act outside such evidence relying solely on the report of the Panchas, 24 A.L.J. 162=28 Cr. L.J. 510=101 Ind. Cas. 824 following 31 A. 453. This certainly cannot mean that the person showing cause is to start the proceedings and produce evidence to meet a case which he has never heard. He is not supposed to know the substance of the Police report made to the Magistrate or other information on which the Magistrate acted; he is entitled to hear the evidence, taken as in summons-cases and cross-examine, and then he may produce his own evidence if so advised. When this has been done, but not before, the Magistrate can make the conditional order absolute if he finds sufficient reason for doing so," 31 A. 453 at 456, following 24 C. 325; 11 A.L.J. 531=15 Cr. L.J. 23=22 Ind. Cas. 167. It is clearly intended by the Legislature that the Court should by itself go into the evidence before making a preliminary order final and should give a judicial decision in the matter, 20 A.L.J. 657=27 Cr. L.J. 864=95 Ind. Cas. 944. After the conditional order has been made, it is incumbent on the Magistrate to take evidence as in a summons case if the final order is to be made by him, 47 B. 89 at 91; 42 C. 702; 22 Cr. L.J. 232; 28 Cr. L.J. 859=104 Ind. Cas. 635; 28 Cr. L.J. 60=99 Ind. Cas. 92. Where a person against whom a conditional order under S. 133, supra has been made appears and shows cause, the Magistrate is bound to take evidence as in a summons-case and he cannot make the order absolute under this section merely on the ground that no evidence was produced before him in support of the written statement filed denying any encroachment on the public way. The procedure prescribed, in B 214, infra, is, when the accused appears, the Magistrate is first to ask him to show cause, and if he does so, then the Magistrate is to hear the complainant's evidence first and then the evidence for the accused. The Magistrate should therefore in a case under this chapter hear the evidence in support of his order before calling upon the person on whom the conditional order is served for his defence, and such omission certainly prejudices the person proceeded against and the order under this section making absolute the conditional order is illegal, 47 A. 341. Where in a case of alleged obstruction to a public way the Magistrate made a conditional order but dropped proceedings when the person called upon to show cause raised the question of the Magistrate's jurisdiction to proceed with the inquiry as the matter had been previously inquired into, held it was the duty of the Magistrate to follow the procedure laid down in sub-section (1) of the section, to take evidence and then consider whether the objection raised was a complete answer or whether the case should be referred to a Civil Court for determination, and there was no room for applying the doctrine of res judicata, 19 C.W.N. 332; 44 C. 61. The person proceeded against is not an accused person and he is a competent witness on his behalf, 9 C.W.N. 983. The Magistrate cannot act on his own opinion and also cannot act solely on local inspection, 11 B. 375; Weir II, 62; 17 M.L.T. 142=16 Cr. L.J. 207=27 Ind. Cas. 767. When the person who was served with a notice under S. 133 supra appeared on the day fixed for hearing but failed to appear and produce evidence on the adjourned hearing, this will not justify the Magistrate in making it absolute without recording formal evidence, 2 Bom. L.R. 818 followed in 28 Cr. L.J. 1036=106 Ind. Cas. 220. The person who is called upon to show cause has an undoubted right to call upon the Court to compel the attendance of his witnesses, 6 C.W.N. 548. A verbal order to remove an obstruction has not the effect of an order under this section and is not lawful and disobedience of such an order is not punishable under the I.P.C., 16 Cr.L.J. 24=20 Ind. Cas. 328. When the party appears to show cause, the Magistrate cannot send the case to another Magistrate even if the parties consent, and pass final order acting on the report sent, 47 B. 89; 21 C.W.N. 826; 20 A.L.J. 657=27 Cr. L.J. 864=95 Ind. Cas. 944. Where the person against whom proceedings are initiated under S. 133 supra appears and sets up his title to the property in question, the proper course for the Magistrate is to proceed under this section, 49 A. 453.

Sub-section (2)—This sub-section is in accordance with the decision in 1 C.L.R. 436. If in a case relating to an obstruction to an alleged public thoroughfare the Magistrate finds that the way is not a public thoroughfare his jurisdiction to proceed ceases and he cannot direct the removal of obstruction under this section, 15 W.R. (Cr.) 67. Where the public nature of the way is disputed it is incumbent on the Magistrate after taking evidence to determine whether the claim is bona fide and if he finds it to be so, he is bound to stop further proceedings and refer the parties to establish their right in a Civil Court, 24 Cr. L.J. 856=74 Ind. Cas. 1047.

Sub-section (3).—An order made absolute on materials not provided to. by the section and in a manner contrary to the provisions of the section on consent of parties cannot possibly cure the illegality, 47 B. 89 at 92; 10 C.L.J. 432=11 Cr. L.J. 1=4 Ind. Cas. 436; 49 A. 475; 21 C.W.N. 926=23 C.L.J. 342=18 Cr. L.J. 733=40 Ind. Cas. 738. When a bona fide claim of private right is set up, the Magistrate ought not to make his conditional order absolute under this section but the proper course for him is to pass an order under S. 139A infra staying proceedings until the existence of such right has been determined by a competent Civil Court, 28 A.L.J. 285 following 32 C. 158 (F.B.); 21 A.L.J. 529 and referring to 19 A.L.J. 355; 12 A.L.J. 243 and 22 B. 188. When a conditional order has been found to be invalid as being too vague and indefinite and set aside by the High Court, the case cannot be sent back to the Magistrate for re-consideration having regard to the terms of this section and no useful purpose will be served by so doing for the vice really rests not on the final order under this sub-section but on the conditional order 11 C.L.J. 114 at 115.

Procedure where he claims jury.

138. (1) On receiving an application under section 135 to appoint a jury, the Magistrate shall

(a) forthwith appoint a jury consisting of an uneven number of persons not less than five, of whom the foreman and one-half of the remaining members shall be nominated by such Magistrate, and the other members by the applicant;

(b) summon such foreman and members to attend at such place and time as the Magistrate thinks fit; and

(c) fix a time within which they are to return their verdict.

(2) The time so fixed may, for good cause shown, be extended by the Magistrate.

The Magistrate shall forthwith appoint a jury.—The word "forthwith" must be construed in a reasonable way and it means that the Magistrate shall appoint a jury as soon as reasonably can, 4 Lah. 224. This section leaves no discretion to the Magistrate in the matter of appointing a jury when the petitioner applies for the same, Weir. II, 63. For form of the order constituting a jury see Sch V, form No. 17, infra. The Magistrate to whom the application for the appointment of a jury is made cannot delegate his powers. The Magistrate referred to in this section is the Magistrate who made the conditional order under S. 133, supra. This is clear from the language of cl. (b) of S. 135, supra.

Constitution of Jury.—The foreman and one-half of the remaining members shall be nominated by the Magistrate. When only the foreman was appointed by the Magistrate and the rest of the members by the parties, it was held there was no legally constituted jury, 16 W.R. (Cr.) 23. The Magistrate is to exercise an independent discretion in selecting the members of the jury and the persons selected should not be persons interested in upholding his conditional order, 21 W.R. (Cr.) 43; 23 Cr.L.J. 1036=106 Ind. Cas. 220; 23 C. 499; 26 C. 659. The Magistrate is bound to make his own nomination of the foreman and one half of the members of the jury, the other half being left to be nominated by the applicant. It is not open to the Magistrate to ask the applicant to nominate the jurors and the appointment of such nominees amounts to an illegality, 31 Bom. L.R. 79=30 Cr. L.J. 785=117 Ind. Cas. 333, following 23 C. 449 and 26 C. 669 and distinguishing 37 A. 26. Where a Magistrate appointed the complainant and his two witnesses as jurors, the High Court set aside the proceeding as there was no legally constituted jury, 22 W.R. (Cr.) 47. If one of the jurors declines to act, the Magistrate should appoint another jury and commence the inquiry afresh, 11 C. 84. When on the failure of a jury to report, the petitioner applied for a fresh jury but the Magistrate rejecting the application proceeded under S. 141, infra and made his order absolute, it was held that the Magistrate acted illegally and did not exercise a proper discretion in refusing to appoint a fresh jury, 12 C.W.N. 1047. See also 44 A. 575

Fix a time within which to return the verdict—A Magistrate cannot receive and enforce the award of the jury delivered long after the day fixed for the purpose. Such an award being invalid it was the duty of the Magistrate to take up the case himself, inquire into it and decide it. 7 B.L.R. (Appx.) 57=16 W.R. (Cr.) 23.

Time fixed may, for good cause shown, be extended—This provision was introduced to set at rest the conflict of rulings on the point. The time originally fixed may, for good cause shown, be extended by the Magistrate. He cannot delegate that power to the foreman of the jury, 23 A. 159 at 161.

139. (1) If the jury or a majority of the jurors find that the order of the Magistrate is reasonable and proper as originally made, or subject to a modification which the Magistrate accepts, the Magistrate shall make the order absolute, subject to such modification (if any).

Procedure where jury finds Magistrate's order to be reasonable

(2) In other cases no further proceedings shall be taken under this Chapter.

A majority of jurors.—A juror should not blindly follow the opinion of his fellow-jurors. Where out of five jurors only two inspected the place and the third never visited it but based his opinion solely on what the other two told him, held that the finding of the so-called majority is not that of a legal majority, 25 W.R. (Cr.) 4. The majority contemplated is a majority arrived at after full deliberation among the jurors appointed. Where a minority of the jurors do not act the Magistrate cannot, proceed upon a report submitted by the majority, but he is competent to act under S. 141, infra and pass such orders as he may think fit, 13 C. 275. Where under the provisions of S. 138, supra five jurors were appointed and on account of illness of one of the jurors who failed to attend only four of them dealt with the case and made a report and relying on such report, the Magistrate made the conditional order absolute, it was held that although the jury as a body can act by a majority that act must be by a majority out of the five who investigated the case and therefore the report submitted by four is not a legal one and the order cannot therefore be sustained, 11 Cr. L.J. 432=6 Ind. Cas. 777; a finding arrived at by a majority of the jurors cannot be rejected on the ground of inconsistency by the Magistrate when they found the order of the Magistrate to be reasonable and proper, 10 Cr. L.J. 210=3 Ind. Cas. 7. Where three out of the five jurors appointed under the last section refused to return any verdict at all, it was held that the Magistrate was not justified in stopping the proceedings entirely but should have appointed a fresh jury, 44 A. 575. See also 23 Cr. L.J. 276=66 Ind. Cas. 420. Where the majority of the jurors find the order of the Magistrate to be reasonable and proper the Magistrate cannot decline to make the order absolute on the ground that it involved an inconsistency, 10 Cr. L.J. 210=3 Inl. Cas. 7.

Find the order reasonable.—There is nothing in this chapter laying down any hard and fast rules to guide the procedure of the jury. It is commonsense and justice that they should hear the parties and receive the evidence which they may produce and if the jury require any evidence it should be produced before them, 18 A. 158; 25 C. 669; 6 C.W.N. 886; but see 30 A. 364, which takes a different view. The jury in deciding whether the conditional order passed under this section is reasonable or not shall consider any objection raised as to the non-existence of a public right, 5 C. 875; 31 C. 979; 26 C. 669; 3 C.W.N. 345 and 10 C.W.N. 843. But the power is now taken away by enacting S. 139A under which the Magistrate is to find as a preliminary point the existence of a public right and the question will not go before the jury if the person fails to deny the right or fails to adduce evidence before the Magistrate after denying the existence of such a right.

The Magistrate shall make order absolute.—The words "the Magistrate" in this section refer to the Magistrate to whom application has to be made under S. 133 (b) to empanel a jury and who under S. 133 does so, 43 M. 316 at 319.

139A. (1) Where an order is made under section 138 for the purpose of preventing obstruction, nuisance or danger to the public in the use of any way, river, channel or place, the Magistrate shall, on the appearance before him of the person against whom the order was made, question him as to whether he denies the existence of any public right in respect of the way, river, channel or place, and, if he does so, the Magistrate shall, before proceeding under section 137 or section 138, inquire into the matter.

Procedure where

(2) If in such inquiry the Magistrate finds that there is any reliable evidence in support of such denial, he shall stay the proceedings until the matter of the existence of such right has been decided by a competent Civil Court; and, if he finds that there is no such evidence, he shall proceed as laid down in section 137 or section 138, as the case may require.

(3) A person who has, on being questioned by the Magistrate under sub-section (1), failed to deny the existence of a public right of the nature therein referred to, or who, having made such denial, has failed to adduce reliable evidence in support thereof, shall not in the subsequent proceedings be permitted to make any such denial, nor shall any question in respect of the existence of any public right be inquired into by any jury appointed under section 138.

This section is new and is in accordance with the decision in, 13 C. 564 which held that mere assertion of a claim of title made without reasonable ground or honest belief in it or honest intention to support it will not oust the Criminal Court of its jurisdiction under Ss. 133 to 137, supra. It is a matter of common knowledge that prior to the amendment in 1923 the Courts had engrafted on the Code a law which may generally be stated as having the effect of casting on the Magistrate the duty of determining whether the claim was bona fide and if he found it to be so to refer the parties to the Civil Court. This graft on the Code was no doubt dictated by a feeling that it was undesirable where there was some reliable evidence of title in the opposite party to allow Criminal Court to order destruction of property. The Legislature desired to clarify the law on this point by enacting this section. It will be noted that the Legislature however has very carefully avoided any reference whatever to any consideration of the bona fides of the denial of the opposite party, except so far as there may be definite reliable evidence of that bona fides. The Court has not been directed on the opposite party showing cause, to consider directly the question of bona fides at all, but to consider whether there is reliable evidence in support of his denial. The merit of this is obvious, a party may make an absolute denial but he may have no reliable evidence to support his denial. He may have an honest belief in his denial. Bona fides was therefore a bad test to apply and so the Legislature has substituted a much better one. The Magistrate when the applicant shows cause to inquire into the matter and determine as to the existence of any reliable evidence. This inquiry is clearly something quite distinct from the inquiry under S. 137 supra and is to find out whether there is prima facie reliable evidence in support of the denial, 27 A.L.J. 335 at 335-37-38 Cr. L.J. 670=116 Ind. Cas. 783. This section was enacted to give effect also to the Full Bench decision in 42 G. 158, which related to the obstruction of a public way, and it was held there that if the Magistrate finds that the claim set up was bona fide, i.e., the right set up is a private and not a public one the Magistrate should stay his hands and refer the parties to a Civil Court, 26 A.L.J. 1285 at 1285, see also 24 A.L.J. 529 and 30 Cr. L.J. 360=114 Ind. Cas. 782. The matter is also elaborately dealt with in, 49 C. 682 (F B) where it was held that the mere raising of a bona fide claim of title will not oust the Magistrate's jurisdiction. See also 8 C.W.N. 143; 45 A. 656 where 28 A. 98 is not followed; see also 29 Cr. L.J. 254=107 Ind. Cas. 483. Under this section on the appearance of the party cited the Magistrate is bound to question him whether he denies the existence of the right in respect of the way, river or channel or place and if he does so the Magistrate before proceeding under S. 137 or S. 138, supra should inquire into the matter. The Magistrate could not refuse to inquire into the matter because the objection was not taken until a late stage of the case, 23 Cr. L.J. 1168=88 Ind. Cas. 528. When an order is made under S. 133 supra for preventing obstruction to the public in the use of a way, the Magistrate shall under this section question the person called upon to show cause as to whether he denies the existence of any public right in respect of the way and if he does so deny, the Magistrate shall before proceeding under S. 137 or S. 138 supra inquire into the matter and if in such inquiry he finds that there is any reliable evidence in support of such denial he shall stay proceedings until the matter of the existence of such right is decided by a competent Civil Court and if he finds no such evidence he shall proceed according to S. 137 or S. 138, supra, 10 Lah. 151; see also 29 Cr. L.J. 661=110 Ind. Cas. 213. The law before the amendment was that as soon as a party appeared before the Magistrate, his duty was to determine whether any public right existed. A long user by a person of what is claimed to be part of a public way may be taken as a bona fide assertion of a claim ousting the Magistrate's jurisdiction to pass a summary order. Vice versa a long user by the public of a private place as a part of the public road or way raises a presumption of relinquishment by the owner of his right over it. The Criminal Court's duty is to maintain the possession as at present found and undoubtedly the land the use of which is in dispute is part of the public road the right of the private person can only be revived by the decision of a competent Civil Court on his favour, 29 Cr. L.J. 422=108 Ind. Cas. 559. If the party denied the existence of the public right, the Magistrate is to determine whether the denial is bona fide or a mere pretence. Only when he finds it a mere pretence he can make the order absolute. If the denial is found to be bona fide, the Magistrate's jurisdiction is ousted. Thus the section requires (1) parties shall appear and deny the existence of public right (2) reliable evidence to be produced (3) such evidence shall be legal evidence to support the denial. If these conditions are satisfied the Magistrate's jurisdiction ceases and he has no jurisdiction to weigh the evidence and determine on which side the balance turns. This section has only given statutory effect to the view taken before the amendment. The section requires only evidence and not proof; and the only condition is that on the evidence before him the Magistrate has no reason to think it to be false. The intent of the section is that the Magistrate should neither encroach on the right of the Civil Court which can alone determine the right nor fail to exercise his own jurisdiction. The criterion is that the Magistrate should find evidence supporting the denial which he can presume to be reliable; that is necessary and sufficient to oust his jurisdiction, 4 Pat. 783 followed in 29 Cr. L.J. 254=107 Ind. Cas. 485. Reliable evidence is evidence of reliable persons; what is meant by the expression is not to weigh the evidence produced by both sides and then come to a conclusion which side evidence he believes or prefers but the Magistrate should take the evidence as it stands and see whether on the face of it, if there was no evidence to the contrary, he would come to the conclusion that the evidence was false and was therefore unreliable, 29 Cr. L.J. 254 at 255 =107 Ind. Cas. 485. See also 23 Cr. L.J. 1080=81 Ind. Cas. 904. It is not the duty of the Magistrate to come to a definite finding whether the evidence adduced is in his opinion sufficient to support the case set up by the person called upon to show cause. All he has to see is whether there is reliable evidence in support of the denial of any public right in respect of the subject of dispute. If there is, the Magistrate's jurisdiction is ousted, 10 Lah. 151. The Magistrate is to inquire into the question of public right if such right is denied by the person summoned and the person is entitled to adduce evidence to establish the right claimed by him. Where in a dispute relating to the closing of an old drain and the opening of a new one it was denied that the drain was a public one, the Magistrate instead of proceeding under this section, at once took evidence under S. 133 supra it was held that the procedure adopted was illegal, 23 A.L.J. 187=26 Cr. L.J. 873=86 Ind. Cas. 809, when on receipt of a notice under S. 133 supra, requiring the removal of a building, the party denied encroachment on a public way, the Magistrate should not immediately proceed to take evidence under S. 137 supra without proceeding under this section and passing an order under S. 140 infra, 24 A.L.J. 361=27 Cr. L.J. 473=93 Ind. Cas. 697 where 28 A. 98 and 1900 A.W.N. 204, are referred to. If the Magistrate finds there is reliable evidence of the right set up, he is bound to stay proceedings till it is settled by a competent Civil Court. Where a party causing the obstruction has produced reliable evidence in support of his denial of the existence of any public right in respect of the way, the case falls within this section and the Magistrate is bound to stay proceedings until the alleged right is decided by a Civil Court, 28 Cr. L.J. 247=100 Ind. Cas. 119; once proceedings are stayed under sub-section (2) they remain stayed until there is a decision by a competent Civil Court and there is nothing in the section which entitles the Magistrate to say which party is to file that suit in the Civil Court. By passing an order of stay under sub-section (2), the Magistrate ousts his own jurisdiction to decide any thing above the question of title including the onus of proof, 28 Cr. L.J. 363=100 Ind. Cas. 971. If the Magistrate finds that there is no reliable evidence he shall proceed under S. 137 or S. 138. The Court is to consider whether there is any reliable evidence and some force must be given to the word reliable. If there is some reliable evidence, the court is to exercise its discretion by staying proceedings till the matter is determined by the Civil Court. There is no direction in the section as to which party is to be directed to go to the Civil Court. The Court is not directed to quash proceedings when there is reliable evidence of the claim set up but only to stay proceedings, 27 A.L.J. 333 at 387. If the person fails to deny the existence of public right or fails to adduce evidence in support of his case, he shall be precluded from re-agitating the same question by claiming a jury under S. 133 to decide such right. It is the duty of the Magistrate before referring the matter to the jury to decide himself whether the way is a public one or not and it is only after deciding this question that any matter can be referred to the jury. If a private claim is asserted the Magistrate must himself inquire into such claim and if he finds the claim to be a bona fide question of title he must discontinue the proceedings, 4 Lah. 224. The proper procedure to be followed where in proceedings under S. 133 supra it is found that there is no reliable evidence to prove that the place in dispute is not a public place, is not to dismiss the application and refer the parties to the Civil Court but to stay proceeding pending before the Magistrate under sub-section (2) until the matter of the existence of the alleged right is decided by a competent Civil Court, 29 Cr. L.J. 244=107 Ind. Cas. 333. Where the public right is denied it is the duty of the Magistrate to inquire into the matter and come to a conclusion under this section and on the result of the inquiry will depend whether he is to stay proceedings or proceed under S. 137, supra, 30 G.W.N. 648=27 Cr. L.J. 878=86 Ind. Cas. 126. The inquiry must be made by the Magistrate himself, upon the result of the inquiry depends the subsequent procedure—either a stay of proceedings, or a further step under S. 137 or 138, supra. The test is whether there is or is not reliable evidence in support of the denial of the existence of the alleged public right. The value of the evidence is a matter better determined by the Magistrate if he has heard it himself. The Magistrate cannot depute a third class Magistrate to inquire and report and acting on such report decide whether to proceed further or not, 50 C.L.J. 291.

140. (1) When an order has been made absolute under section 136, section 137 or section 139, the Magistrate shall give notice of the same to the person against whom the order was made, and shall further require him to perform the act directed by the order within a time to be fixed in the notice, and inform him that, in case of disobedience, he will be liable to the penalty provided by section 188 of the Indian Penal Code.

Procedure on order
being made absolute

(2) If such act is not performed within the time fixed, the Magistrate may cause it to be performed, and may recover the costs of performing it, either by the sale of any building, goods or other property removed by his order, or by the distress and sale of any other moveable property of such person within or without the local limits of such Magistrate's jurisdiction. If such other property is without such limits, the order shall authorize its attachment and sale when endorsed by the Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property to be attached is found.

Consequences of disobedience to order.

(3) No suit shall lie in respect of anything done in good faith under this section.

Sub-section (1)—Inexcusable delay in carrying out a lawful order, no doubt, renders a person liable for his neglect, but when he has during the course of the proceedings, endeavoured to correct his remissness, and very slight injury or inconvenience has resulted, it is certainly a grave error of judgment to sentence him to imprisonment, 10 C.L.R. 193 at 196. Under this section if a person fails to perform the act after the order is made absolute and notice served on him, he is liable under S. 188, I.P.C. But in an earlier stage also he can be made liable under S. 188 if he fails to perform the act or appear and show cause, or apply for appointment of jury under S. 136 supra. Thus there are two distinct liabilities, one under S. 136 supra and one under this section after the order has been made absolute.

A succeeding Magistrate has no power to go behind the order of his predecessor or to question its validity, 27 C.W.N. 459; nor can an accused when proceeded against for disobedience of the order go behind the order and show cause that the order ought not to have been made, 12 M. 475. As soon as the person against whom an order is made to remove a nuisance dies, the order ceases to have further effect and the Magistrate will not be entitled to act under this section and have the obstruction removed, 26 A.L.J. 405=29 Cr. L.J. 445 (2)=108 Ind. Cas. 563.

Sub section (2).—The procedure to be followed when the act is not performed by the person directed by the Magistrate to do it, is clearly laid down in this sub-section, 31 C.W.N. 530=44 C.L.J. 211=23 Cr. L.J. 30=99 Ind.Cas. 62. If a party fails to perform the act directed

Not to repeat or continue a public nuisance.—For definition of "public nuisance" see S. 268, I.P.O., defined at p. 187. If a Magistrate makes an order under this section, prohibiting persons entitled to use a place dedicated for the communal purpose of cremation, when they use the same in a manner either unusual or calculated to aggravate the inconvenience necessarily incidental to such act, it is not warranted by this section, 19 M. 464.

Revision.—S. 435 (3) infra which had enacted that proceedings under this section are not proceedings within the meaning of that section is now repealed by the amendment of the Code in 1923 and therefore orders under this section are now open to revision under Ss. 435 and 439, infra, by the High Court.

CHAPTER XI.

TEMPORARY ORDERS IN URGENT CASES OF NUISANCE OR APPREHENDED DANGER.

144. (1) In cases where, in the opinion of a District Magistrate or a Chief Presidency Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate, or of any other Magistrate (not being a Magistrate of the third class) specially empowered by the Local Government or the Chief Presidency Magistrate or the District Magistrate to act under this section, there is sufficient ground for proceeding under this section and immediate prevention or speedy remedy is desirable,

Power to issue order absolute at once in urgent cases of nuisance or apprehended danger.

such Magistrate may, by a written order stating the material facts of the case and served in manner provided by section 134, direct any person to abstain from a certain act or to take certain order with certain property in his possession or under his management, if such Magistrate considers that such direction is likely to prevent, or tends to prevent, obstruction, annoyance or injury, or risk of obstruction, annoyance or injury, to any person lawfully employed, or danger to human life, health or safety, or a disturbance of the public tranquillity or a riot, or an affray.

(2) An order under this section may, in cases of emergency or in cases where the circumstances do not admit of the serving in due time of a notice upon the person against whom the order is directed, be passed ex parte.

(3) An order under this section may be directed to a particular individual, or to the public generally when frequenting or visiting a particular place.

(4) Any Magistrate may, either on his own motion or on the application of any person aggrieved, rescind or alter any order made under this section by himself or any Magistrate subordinate to him, or by his predecessor in office.

(5) Where such an application is received, the Magistrate shall afford to the applicant an early opportunity of appearing before him either in person or by pleader and showing cause against the order; and, if the Magistrate rejects the application wholly or in part, he shall record in writing his reasons for so doing.

(7) No order under this section shall remain in force for more than two months from the making thereof ; unless, in cases of danger to human life, health or safety, or a likelihood of a riot or an affray, the Local Government, by notification in the official Gazette, otherwise directs.

Amendment.—In sub section (1) the words "not being a Magistrate of the third class" are added depriving third-class Magistrate of the power to act under this section, and the words "there is sufficient ground for proceeding under this section" have been newly added in the same sub-section. In sub-section (4) the words "either on his own motion or on the application of any person aggrieved," are added, thus empowering the Magistrate to act suo motu. Sub-section (5) is new and makes it imperative to give the party an opportunity of appearing in person or by pleader to show cause against the order, and the Magistrate is bound to record reasons when rejecting the application.

Scope and object of the section.—This section appears in the Chapter which is headed "Temporary orders in urgent cases of nuisances" and reading the whole chapter it is clear that it relates to interference or dealing of some kind with the land itself or with something erected or standing on it ; and the section is directed to the prevention or direction by prompt order of some definite act on the part of an individual, so that injury or nuisance may not be caused, 19 C. 127 at 130. This section is enacted for preserving the public peace. Private rights must give way to the necessity of preserving public peace. The hands of the executive should not be tied by the Courts when they have been deliberately left free by the Legislature, 30 Cr. L.J. 510=115 Ind. Cas. 683. Both the heading of the Chapter and the language of the section show that the orders passed under this section are only of a temporary character, 27 C. 918 ; a Magistrate cannot issue an order the effect of which is a perpetual injunction, 8 C. 580 ; 24 M. 43. This section is ordinarily to be used in cases of urgency and should not be allowed to take the place of any other provision of the law which might appropriately apply, 38 C. 876. Its scope is very limited and the powers under it should be exercised sparingly and only in urgent cases, 50 A 415 at 416. It is of general application and is to be resorted to as a temporary measure, 2 Pat. 94. In a matter that can be dealt with both under this section and S. 193, supra, the Magistrate is bound to proceed under S. 193 unless he thinks that immediate prevention or speedy remedy is desirable, Weir II, 58 ; 1 C.L.J. 216. The gravamen of the provisions of this section consists in providing a speedy remedy in cases of emergency and a Magistrate is justified in passing an ex parte order immediately on receiving a police report, if he is satisfied that immediate action is necessary, and the aggrieved party can move the Court for its rescission or alteration, 25 Cr. L.J. 433. This section is of general application and contains nothing which ousts the Magistrates jurisdiction in case of bona fide disputes as to possession of land, 2 Pat. 94 at 101, and the Magistrate in such a case is bound to start proceedings under S. 145, supra, 7 Pat. 269. But a Magistrate may take action under this section in a case of dispute with regard to possession of immovable property when he finds that there is no bona fide dispute as to actual possession and one party is merely trying to get into possession held by the other. In such a case it will be manifestly oppressive to subject an unoffending citizen in possession by starting proceedings under S. 145 infra, 30 Cr. L.J. 510=115 Ind. Cas. 683. The power of suspending lawful rights is an extraordinary power which should be resorted to sparingly when other powers are insufficient. The authority of a Magistrate should be used in defence of rights rather than their suspension, in the repression of illegal, rather than in interference of lawful rights, 6 M. 203 (F.B.) ; 5 C. 132. Every person is ordinarily entitled to exercise all rights of ownership on his property. The Criminal Court gets jurisdiction to interfere with the lawful exercise of a person's right of ownership when such exercise in its ulterior consequences being directed primarily against the lawful right of another person's right of ownership is likely to cause a breach of the peace, 24 Cr. L.J. 164=71 Ind. Cas. 516. This section is ordinarily to be used in cases of urgency and should not be allowed to take the place of any other provision of law which might more appropriately apply, 38 C. 876. An order under this section cannot be passed in a matter dealt with under S. 133, supra, 8 W.R. (Cr.) 37. The terms of this section must be strictly complied with and a Magistrate cannot by means of an order under this section forbid future obstructions to a public high-way, 21 W.R. (Cr.) 10. A mere statement that an order is made under this section, if as a matter of fact the order is one not warranted by this section, does not make the order passed a valid order under this section, and consequently it is liable to be revised by the High Court, 19 C. 127 at 131. Although an owner of property has an absolute right to use his property as he pleases, yet if the mode of enjoyment of the property innocent and lawful as it might be, resulted or tended to result in a series of acts committed by the owner or his men which were likely to lead to a breach of the peace the Magistrate has ample powers to restrain the owner of the property temporarily from so using his property, say from holding a new market on his own land, 55 C. 1077 following 10 B.L.R. 434 (F.B.)=18 W. R. (Cr.) 47 and dissenting from, 11 C.W.N. 79 and 223. This section is not intended to restrict the liberty of an individual if there is no apprehension of a breach of the peace on account of any act to be done by him. The object of this section is to enable a Magistrate in case of emergency to make an order for the purpose of preventing an imminent breach of the peace. But it is not intended to relieve him of the duty of making a proper inquiry into the circumstances which make it likely that such breach of the peace will occur. If it is found that a person is doing an act which he is legally entitled to do, but his neighbour chooses to take offence thereat and to create a disturbance in consequence, it is the clear duty of the Magistrate not to deprive the person exercising the legal right, but to restrain the other party from illegally interfering with the exercise of the legal right, [1924] Pat. 262=25 Cr. L.J. 1173=82 Ind. Cas. 42 following 5 C. 132. A Magistrate ought not to proceed under this section where the dispute between the parties is such that proceedings should have been drawn up under S. 145 infra in the first instance, as the dispute between the parties was not likely to be satisfactorily settled by a temporary order made under this section, 28 Cr. L.J. 1039=106 Ind. Cas. 223. Similarly if a party has an undoubted right to take a procession along a public road, it is obvious that they cannot be prevented from doing so because some one else propose to interfere with the exercise of that lawful right. The proper course is to bind down the other party under S. 107, supra, 12 C.W.N. 703=7 Cr. L.J. 504; 18 Cr. L.J. 512=39 Ind. Cas. 480. It is the obvious duty of the Executive to uphold the civil rights declared by its own Civil Courts. Any omission to do so is a confession of failure in duty. No doubt the interests of the public peace are paramount but where the Magistrate is aware that there will be probably a disturbance of a party's civil rights at recurring seasons every year, it is his duty to exhaust every measure at his disposal to uphold declared civil rights before he abandons the attempt and he should resort to this section only if there is no time or opportunity for any other course. The Magistrate by taking thought in time, it is part of his duty to take thought in time, could have those who threaten to interfere with a party's civil rights bound over to keep the peace or might have got down sufficient force to meet the crisis and then call in aid this section to tide him over it, 52 M.L.J. 298=25 L.W. 375=28 Cr. L.J. 325=100 Ind. Cas. 709. Orders under this section are certainly not intended to be used as a means of depriving the citizens of lawful rights which have been declared in their favour by a competent Court. Any interruption to the exercise of that right, say to carry on a procession, so long as it is conducted in accordance with the decree of the Civil Court is undoubtedly an infraction of the law and for the Government to state that they are not prepared to prevent the infraction of the law and to restrain the law-breakers from interfering with lawful rights is practically to abdicate all authority. If the party who has obtained the decree of the Civil Court establishing their right to carry on the procession apply to carry on the procession and give reasonable notice to the authorities what they propose to do it would be incumbent on the authorities to take such action as will protect their rights, 52 M.L.J. 651=28 Cr.L.J. 509=101 Ind. Cas. 893. See the recent Full Bench decision in 51 M. 1006, where it was held that it cannot be laid down that it is the duty of the authorities to enforce the decree of the Civil Court in favour one party, namely the right of the Hindus of a particular locality to carry on a procession attended with music before a mosque in all circumstances and at all costs. Where there is a conflict between public interest and private right, the former must prevail. This section is a temporary measure which the Magistrate in his discretion may adopt for the immediate prevention amongst others of a disturbance of the public tranquillity or riot, or affray, 2 Pat. 54 at 105; 33 M. 489; 26 Cr. L.J. 1229=88 Ind. Cas. 845. A Magistrate has no power to direct a party to dig a channel in his own land, 15 Cr. L.J. 291=23 Ind. Cas. 499. An order under this section should not be passed to prejudice a party and exclude him from the possession of property whether exclusive or joint. No Courts by its proceedings can allow an advantage to one of the parties, [1922] Pat 241. This section cannot apply to a case where the object of the order appears to have been merely to prevent pecuniary loss to the opposite party. The proper remedy for the aggrieved party lies in the Civil Court and not under this section. 13 C.W.N. 183=11 Cr. L.J. 11=4 Ind. Cas. 577 where S.C.W.N. 373 and 9 C. 103 are followed. This section was never intended to vest a Magistrate with powers to decide disputes of a civil nature between private individuals and to usurp the functions of a Civil Court which alone have been vested by the Legislature with jurisdiction to decide disputes of a civil nature between private individuals and it is not permissible for Magistrates under cover of an order under this section to dispossess a particular individual from certain property and to direct a delivery of possession of that property by an order under this section, when the object of the order is not to prevent obstruction, annoyance or injury, etc., to any person lawfully employed, 50 A. 414. Under this section no preliminary notice as under S. 145, infra, is necessary, 52 M. 69 at 72.

Any Magistrate specially empowered—Third class Magistrates are now deprived of their power to pass orders under this section. The law in sanctioning the power under this section, is careful to provide that it shall be committed only to Magistrates whose discretion is presumably guaranteed by their responsible position or by selection, 6 M. 203 (F.B.) If any Magistrate not being empowered by law in this behalf issues an order under this section, his proceedings are void, S. 530 (i), infra.

Immediate prevention or speedy remedy is desirable.—This section is not intended to restrict the liberty of an individual if there is no apprehension of a breach of the peace on account of any act to be done by him. The object of the section is to enable a Magistrate in cases of emergency to make orders for preventing a breach of the peace and not to relieve him of his duty to make proper inquiry into circumstances showing a breach of the peace is likely. If a man when doing a lawful act in a lawful manner is obstructed by his neighbours who create a disturbance, it is the Magistrate's duty not to deprive the person lawfully exercising his right but to restrain his neighbours who illegally interfere with the exercise of a lawful right, 1924 Pat. 262=25 Cr. L.J. 1178=82 Ind. Cas. 42; 12 C.W.N. 703=7 Cr. L.J. 804; 18 Cr. L.J. 512=39 Ind. Cas. 499. Before a Magistrate takes action under this section he must be of opinion that immediate prevention or speedy remedy is desirable and when he has made up his mind that it is so, he may pass a written order stating the material facts in the order, so that the parties may know exactly whether they are bound to obey the order or to show cause against it by contesting its legality. When this is not done, the order is bad in law, 32 C. 933; 27 C. 918; 38 C. 876; 23 C.W.N. 145; 38 M. 459; 22 Bom. L.R. 157; but in 30 M. 543, it was held that the omission to state the grounds on which the Magistrate was satisfied was only an irregularity not vitiating the proceedings of the Magistrate. An order under this section can be passed in case of emergency, and when there is no emergency the order is one made without jurisdiction, 5 C. 7; 11 M. L.J. 122; 27 C. 918; 6 C.W.N. 455; 19 C.W.N. 213; 13 Cr. L.J. 511=15 Ind. Cas. 655. Whether the matter is likely to be decided shortly by the Civil Court and there is no apprehension of an immediate breach of the peace there is no necessity to take action under this section, 15 Cr. L.J. 291=23 Ind. Cas. 499. If no immediate prevention or speedy remedy is desirable, the Magistrate ought to proceed under S. 131, supra. The authority of the Magistrate under this section to suspend the rights recognized by law when such exercise may conflict with the rights of the public or tend to endanger public peace, is limited by the special ends it was designed to secure and is not destructive of the suspended rights, 6 M. 203 (F.B.). Where grave danger of breach of the peace is apprehended and the Magistrate cannot prevent it with the force at his command he has jurisdiction to pass a temporary order under this section. The fact that carrying on a procession is a luxury and not a necessity is no ground for passing a temporary injunction under this section, 15 Cr. L.J. 30=22 Ind. Cas. 174. If the Magistrate apprehends a breach of the peace he is entitled temporarily to restrain the exercise by any private individual of his lawful rights to prevent a breach of the peace. But when the order is made only to prevent loss to another party then the order is one passed without jurisdiction. See 50 A. 414; 51 M. 1006.

Written order stating material facts of the case.—The order ought to contain a clear statement of the facts upon which the order is based, to enable the party to know distinctly the grounds upon which the Magistrate has acted and to decide for himself whether he is to obey the order or resist it by standing a prosecution under B. 188 I.P.O. or to show cause against the order, 1 B.L.R. (Ap Cr.) 20=10 W.R. (Cr.) 53; 2 C.W.N. 747. See Form No. 21 of Sch. V as to form of order.

To abstain from a certain act.—The word 'certain' placed between the word 'act' and afterwards repeated twice in the expression 'to take certain order with certain property in his possession' leaves no reasonable doubt that the Legislature intended to give full and ample powers to the Magistrate, the chief officer entrusted with the duty of preserving the peace of the district to restrain any person from doing any act or to command him to hold any property in his possession subject to any condition, whenever such Magistrate shall consider that such a course of procedure is likely to prevent or even tends to prevent a riot or an affray. A particular act or a particular mode of enjoyment of property might be perfectly innocent or lawful in itself. But the act may be done or the property enjoyed in that particular mode under circumstances calculated to lead to a serious breach of the peace attended even with loss of human life and it would be by no means proper or desirable to hold that even in such cases the chief peace officer of the district has no power to issue an order such as that contemplated by this section, 10 B.L.R. 434 (F.B.)=18 W.R. (Cr.) 47 followed in 55 C. 1077 at 1082-83 where it was held that in cases where a party has an absolute right to use his property, innocent and lawful as it might be, such a use resulted or tends to result in a series of acts committed by his servants likely to lead to a breach of the peace, an order under this section restraining him temporarily from so using his property, say holding a new market on the property was amply justified. The words 'any person from abstaining from certain act' have been liberally construed in Madras and not in the restricted sense as in Calcutta. See 26 M.L.J. 132=1914 M.W.N. 165=15 Cr.L.J. 143=22 Ind. Cas. 721 following 24 M. 45 and 262. When a person was directed "not to interfere with the management of a certain Kori," it was held that it was a direction "to abstain from a certain act" within the meaning of these words as used in this section, 24 M. 45 at 46; 3 M. 354 "Certain act" means "a definite act". An order passed under this section prohibiting a person from collecting rents from the ryots in two villages no particular ryots being mentioned, it was held that such an order could not be properly made under this section, 16 C. 80; 9 C.W.N. 392. An order prohibiting a meluramdar from exercising certain rights as meluramdar is valid under this section. If such an order includes rights properly belonging to tenants, it would not be operative to prevent tenants from exercising acts properly belonging to them, unless the order is specific and definite and is addressed to them, 23 M.L.J. 132=(1914) M.W.N. 169=15 Cr. L.J. 145=22 Ind. Cas. 721. The order of a Magistrate directing that two rival sects of Mahomedans could each enter a mosque only at stated times was held to be one in substance, and effect, an order directing certain persons to abstain from certain acts within this section, 24 M. 282 at 263. In a dispute regarding prayers in a mosque there being an apprehension of a breach of the peace, the Magistrate drew up proceedings under this section and eventually passed an order that no member of either party would be allowed to read prayers in the mosque, it was held that the order was misconceived as it was not warranted by the provisions of the Code and the proper course was to ascertain which party was in the wrong, and to bind down that party to prevent a breach of the peace, 24 Cr. L. J. 154=71 Ind. Cas. 506.

In 2 M. 143 at 141 142 it was held that an order passed by the Magistrate directing that all music should cease when any procession is passing a certain place of worship was held to be ultra vires. "At times the rights of the several sects to the undisturbed exercise" "of their religious observances may come into conflict without any criminal intention" "In such cases, mutual toleration is, and must be, the only and the proper rule. It has" "then to be determined how far the conflicting rights interfere with and necessarily" "modify each other. It is, on the one hand, a right recognized by law that an assembly" "lawfully engaged in the performance of religious worship or religious ceremonies shall" "not be disturbed. It is, on the other hand, a right recognized by law that persons may," "for a lawful purpose whether civil or religious, use a common high-way by parading it" "attended by music, so that they do not obstruct the use of it by other persons. If" "persons passing in procession attended by music pass a place in which others are assembled" "and engaged in public worship which the music would tend to disturb, it is the duty of" "the persons composing the procession to refrain from such disturbance, but assemblies" "for purpose of worship are held scarcely in any place at all hours and generally at" "appointed hours, and therefore it is unnecessary that there should be a rule that persons" "should not at any time pass along a high road in the neighbourhood of a recognized" "place of worship if attended by music. If, indeed, the procession be of a religious" "character, the prohibition of it may be as real an interference with the free exercise of" "religion as in allowing it to proceed past an assembly engaged in worship attended with" "such circumstances as to disturb that worship, and if no religious procession is to be" "allowed to pass a recognized place of worship, whether persons are or are not at the" "time there assembled and engaged in religious worship, the members of a numerous sect" "might close every high-way to the procession of a sect to which they are opposed by" "erecting in the neighbourhood of each high-way a place of worship. The law in the" "restrictions it imposes on processions of whatever character, does not go beyond" "the necessity, and a Magistrate has no general authority to declare the law on" "the subject and anticipate a breach of it by a prohibitory order. For the" "preservation of the public peace he has a special authority—an authority limited" "to certain occasions. His first duty is to secure to every person the enjoyment" "of his right under the law and by measures of precaution to deter those who seek" "to invade the rights of others; but if he apprehends that the lawful exercise of a" "right may lead to a civil tumult, and he doubts whether he has available a sufficient" "force to repress such tumult or to render it innocuous regard for the public welfare is" "allowed to override temporarily the private right and the Magistrate is authorized to" "interdict its exercise. The duration of this authority in the Magistrate is co-extensive" "with the emergency that justified the exercise of the authority." The principles laid down in the above decision were approved in 6 M. 203, where the duties of Magistrates in cases where the public peace is likely to be disturbed by one sect attempting to disturb another using the public streets are fully discussed. The same High Court in its proceedings, dated 13th May, 1895, observed as follows.—"Primarily he (the Magistrate) must consult the public safety and the responsibility thrown on him is great, seeing that the Legislature has prohibited all interference with his order by a superior Court. At the same time it is incumbent on the Magistrate to interfere as little as possible with private rights and a custom which might be recognized as not unlawful under a Government that possessed a State religion might be unreasonable now that Government professes impartiality to all creeds. The Magistrate should endeavour to abstain from the appearance of showing favour to one sect at the expense of another, though, where a sufficient emergency arises private rights must necessarily yield to public security." These remarks were made under the old 1873 code where proceedings under this section were treated as executive and not judicial proceedings, see also 25 G.W.N. 904=24 Cr. L.J. 153=71 Ind. Cas. 506 where the order of the Magistrate was set aside as illegal when he prohibited the worshippers in a mosque from reading prayers therein and there was a dispute between the worshippers and Pesh Imam appointed by the Mutawalli. See also 51 M. 1006 (F.B.), Where a breach of the peace is anticipated, action is to be taken against the law breakers and not against peaceful citizens whom it is expected the law breakers will molest, 28 Cr. L.J. 345=100 Ind. Cas. 825 following 26 C.W.N. 904=24 Cr. L.J. 153=71 Ind. Cas. 506. As to right to conduct religious processions in public streets see 26 M. 376 at 382; 30 M. 185 (P.C.); 38 M. 489; 6 M. 203; 47 A. 151 (P.C.) Weir II 74; 38 M.L.T. 307.

To take certain order with certain property in his possession.—These words are undoubtedly very wide and equally vague, but it must be assumed that the Legislature in using these words in the section did not intend to give a Magistrate such extraordinary powers as would enable him to order, under this section, a building that has fallen down on private grounds to be rebuilt by the owner of the yard, 17 A. 485. An order on the hereditary priests of a public temple visited periodically by a large concourse of pilgrims to widen and heighten the doorway with a view to prevent danger arising from overcrowding and to improve the ventilation was held to be a legal order, 6 B.H.C.R. (Cr. Ca.) 36; see 2 C.W.N. 70 where it was held that the order passed by a Magistrate on certain prostitutes and the Zemindars under whom they held the land to remove their houses to the other side of a railway line within twenty-four hours on the ground that the visitors of the prostitutes had to cross the railway line and thereby their lives were endangered was not covered by the words direct any person to abstain from certain act or to take certain order with certain property in his possession. A Magistrate has no power under this section to pass an irrevocable order such as an order to cut down trees, 32 C. 154. The Magistrate has no power to direct a party to dig a channel under this section, 15 Cr. L.J. 291=23 Ind. Cas. 459. A general order prohibiting a person from holding a hat within an extensive area is illegal, 26 C.W.N. 663=35 C.L.J. 397. All that he has power to do is to compel the owner of property to take a certain order with it and cannot include an irrevocable order such as cutting down trees, 13 W.R. (Cr.) 72. A Magistrate has no power to make an order prohibiting the holding of a market for a definite period, 11 C.W.N. 223; or to take possession of property in dispute into custody for two months, 12 C.W.N. 1044, followed in 3 L.W. 498. The heading of the chapter seems to show that "property" is only immovable property; therefore a Magistrate cannot make an order under this section as to the custody of a sum of money even though there is a dispute concerning it. 12 W.R. (Cr.) 38.

Danger to human life.—Where a Magistrate directed certain prostitutes and the Zemindars under whom they were tenants to remove the houses occupied by the former from a particular site within 24 hours and to take up their quarters on the opposite side of a Railway line on the ground that the visitors to the prostitutes had to cross the Railway line and by so doing their lives would be in danger, and for the disobedience of the order passed directed their prosecution under S. 188, I.P.C., it was held that the order was not one contemplated by this section and was ultra vires, 2 C.W.N. 70. But a Magistrate is empowered to prevent overcrowding and to improve the ventilation to direct the hereditary priest of a certain temple to widen and heighten the doorway of the temple, 6 B.H.C.R. (Cr. Ca.) 36. This section is ordinarily to be used in cases of urgency and should not be allowed to take the place of any other provision of law which might be more appropriately be applied, 38 C. 876.

Order may in cases of emergency be passed ex parte.—In special and urgent cases alone an order may be passed ex parte, 6 M. 203; 2 C.W.N. 747; 38 M. 489; (1910) M.W.N. 354=8 M.L.T. 180=11 Cr. L.J. 449=7 Ind. Cas. 343; 27 C. 785. Ordinarily the party against whom an order is made should have an opportunity to show cause against it, 10 W.R. (Cr.) 53; 5 B.L.R. 131. Where a party called upon to show cause appeared ten minutes after the order made ex parte was made absolute and applied to be heard but the Magistrate declined to do so, it was held that the Magistrate ought to have under the circumstances heard the applicant, 2 C.W.N. 572; see also 26 C.W.N. 663=35 C.L.J. 397=24 Cr.L.J. 153=71 Ind. Cas. 506. The order must on the face of it show the emergency which renders the necessity of passing an ex parte order, and, if not, the order is liable to be set aside in revision,

2 C.W.N. 747; 22 M.L.T. 323. Proceedings under this section are judicial proceedings within S. (41) (m), supra, 19 M. 18; Cr.R.C. No. 273 of 1929 (M.H.C.). The object of the section is to enable the Magistrate in cases of emergency to make an immediate order for preventing an imminent breach of the peace, but it was never intended to relieve him of the duty of making proper inquiry into the circumstances which make it likely that such a breach of the peace will occur. It is incumbent on him to limit the operation of the order to such reasonable time as may be necessary to enable him to hold a sufficient inquiry and if necessary to deal with the case under this section, B.C. 132. It is not proper for a Magistrate after passing an ex parte order under this section, when its propriety or legality is challenged, to postpone the hearing of the matter from time to time until about the termination of the force of the order. Such matters are to be disposed off quickly in order to avoid unnecessary encroaching on the civil rights and liberties of the subject, 24 Cr. L.J. 164=71 Ind. Cas. 816.

Order may be directed to the public generally when frequenting or visiting a place.—In this section an exception is made to the general rule that the order should be directed to a particular individual. In emergent cases it may be directed to the public generally when frequenting or visiting a particular place, e.g., a temple, bathing ghat, or a fair or market, but it should not be confined to a portion of the community or a class of the public 8 A. 99; 14 B 160; 19 C. 127. An order may be directed to an individual but when it is impossible on account of numerous individuals to serve notices on each of them, a general order to the whole number of such individuals designated as the "public" may be issued and such an order will have the same effect as a separate service of order on each individual provided that it has been so promulgated and has come within the knowledge of each individual. This section is intended to extend rather than to limit the scope of the order so as to include therein every casual or frequent visitor from outside the limits of the particular locality within which the order is to have application. A general order by a Magistrate that no person shall sacrifice or cause to be sacrificed any cow within a certain specified area and period is a legal order, 16 Cr. L.J. 190=27 Ind. Cas. 670. A Magistrate has no power to issue a prohibitory order on the public, except as qualified by the last lines of sub-section (3). The order can only be issued to the public generally when resorting to a public place. An order directing the public in general to abstain from attending the 'Hat' is bad since it is not until the public attend the 'Hat' that the order can be binding on them. They cannot be forbidden by the order to do an act when the order cannot be addressed to them until after they have done that act, 26 Cr. L.J. 874=86 Ind. Cas. 810. This section authorizes him only to direct an order to the public generally when frequenting a particular place, 16 Bom. L.R. 684=16 Cr. L.J. 98=27 Ind. Cas. 146. For form of the order, see Sch. V, Form No. 91.

Magistrate may rescind or alter any order.—The power to rescind or alter is neither revisional nor appellate but is a special jurisdiction vested in the Magistrate by statute, 24 Cr. L.J. 331=72 Ind. Cas. 171. The jurisdiction is confined to rescind or alter any order made. A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to prevent a party before him from doing an act which he is permitted to do, 42 M.L.J. 352, followed in 16 L.W. 452=1922 M. W.N. 612=23 Cr. L.J. 689=69 Ind. Cas. 369. When a Magistrate after taking evidence finds his first order was wrong and passed without jurisdiction, he will be acting properly in recalling his first order, 13 W.R. (Cr.) 72. When an order has been set aside by the Magistrate who passed it, he had no power to revive it without starting fresh proceedings, 8 C. 580. An order by a joint Magistrate while acting as District Magistrate may be rescinded or altered after his reversion by the then District Magistrate, and the latter cannot transfer the application for rescission or alteration to the former, 16 Cr. L.J. 74=26 Ind. Cas. 666. For purposes of sub section (4) a Presidency Magistrate is subordinate to the Chief Presidency Magistrate, Rule 12, Mad. Cr. Rules of Pr. Under sub-section (4) a Magistrate has jurisdiction only to rescind or alter any order made under the section by himself or any Magistrate subordinate to him. A Magistrate has no jurisdiction on appeal from an order under this section to prohibit the counter-petitioners before him from doing an act which they were permitted to do by the order appealed against, 42 M.L.J. 352; 16 L.W. 452. It has been decided in 3 Pat. L.J. 237=19 Cr. L.J. 880=47 Ind. Cas. 76 that a District Magistrate under sub-section (4) has no power to substitute an order of his own for that made by the lower Court. His power is confined to rescind or alter. See also 29 Cr. L.J. 478=103 Ind. Cas. 126. The powers given by this section are not confined to cases where there has been a change of circumstances since the original order was passed. The Magistrate has power to rescind an order previously made because the circumstances no longer require it to remain in force. He should equally have power to rescind it if he is satisfied that it ought not to have been made. There is nothing in the wording of the section to limit the powers. No valid reasons exist to limit the words of the section. It is clearly desirable that a Magistrate should not interfere with an order once made, unless very good reasons are disclosed for doing so. It may equally be desirable that these reasons should be clearly defined in the section itself. But that is a matter for the Legislature and as the section at present stands the powers given are in no way limited to cases in which the circumstances have altered. To read into the section, words limiting its operation would be to usurp the functions of the Legislature which it is not within the competence of the High Court or any other Court, 2 Pat. 93 (F.B.); 26 Cr. L. J. 874=86 Ind. Cas. 810.

No order shall remain in force for more than two months.—It would be inconsistent with the intention of the Legislature that a Magistrate can pass under this section an order meant to have more than a temporary operation and although such order may, no doubt, what seems to the Magistrate sufficient cause to restrain a man in the otherwise lawful exercise of his rights, such restraint ought clearly not to be indefinite in its terms or to have an effect beyond the urgency which it was intended to provide for 5 C. 7 at 19. An order purporting to be under this section ceases to be effective after the expiry of two months from the date of the order. Any observation made in such an order as regards the possession of the parties is simply an incidental observation and cannot have the force of an order under S. 145, infra, determining the question of actual possession and which could be determined subsequently in proceedings under S. 145, 26 Cr. L.J. 1229=88 Ind. Cas. 845. A Magistrate cannot by passing successive orders under the section extend the operation of the order indirectly beyond two months, 11 C.W.N. 79; 13 C.W.N. 195=11 Cr. L.J. 12=4 Ind. Cas. 590; 38 M. 499. Non-specification of the duration of time does not make the order invalid. Under sub-section (5) it will be presumed in the absence of anything to the contrary in the order itself, that its duration is limited to the full period of two months, 34 C. 897. Confirmation of the ex parte order could not extend the operation of the first order to a further period of two months from the date of its confirmation, 13 C.W.N. 193. This section applies to temporary orders in urgent cases of nuisance or apprehended danger, and it is distinctly provided that except when specially extended by notification of Government, no such order shall remain in force for more than two months. When the records did not show any indication of urgency, and the order itself did not set forth material facts of the case as required by law and the order was in effect a second extension of two months prohibiting the procession, which is in contravention of sub-section (5) of this section, it was held to be ultra vires, it was also pointed out that it was open to the Magistrates to address Government for issue of a certificate under sub-section (5) of this section, 27 M.L.J. 628=(1913) M.W.N. 1003=14 Cr. L.J. 658=21 Ind. Cas. 893; 20 C.W.N. 758; 16 L.W. 452=(1922) M.W.N. 612=23 Cr. L.J. 689=69 Ind. Cas. 369; 38 M. 499. The Magistrate cannot under the shelter of this section, which relates to the passing of provisional order to tide over temporary emergencies in cases where immediate prevention or speedy remedy is desirable, issue a permanent injunction restraining parties from doing anything. Successive orders are invalid and cannot be supported as fresh orders. Such orders are an abuse of the process of the Court specially where the Civil Court has passed a temporary injunction against one party. It is the duty of Criminal Courts to respect the opinion of Civil Courts, and for preserving peace to take action against those infringing the rights of others and protect those in the enjoyment of lawful rights, 16 L.W. 452=1922 M.W.N. 612=23 Cr. L.J. 689=69 Ind. Cas. 369. The arm of law is long enough to prevent such evasion of the express provision of the Code by arbitrary and successive renewals of the orders passed under this section, and the High Court has power to prevent such evasion, 38 M. 499; 16 L.W. 452=(1922) M.W.N. 612=23 Cr. L.J. 689=69 Ind. Cas. 369.

see also 11 Cr. L.J. 12=4 Ind. Cas. 590. Repeated recourse should not be had to the provisions of this section in the same dispute. If it is considered probable that danger to the public may remain even after the expiry of two months from the date of the order, the proper course is to take steps to obtain an order from Government or to take action under the security sections of the Code, 16 Cr. L.J. 592=30 Ind. Cas. 144. An order cannot be made under this section prohibiting a person from taking part in the management of a temple until the de facto manager was duly evicted in due course of law, as such an order contravenes sub-section (5) of this section, 24 M. 45; nor can a Magistrate issue a perpetual injunction under this section, 8 C. 589; 5 C. 7; 26 C. 189; 18 M. 41; 26 A. 144; 24 M. 45; 25 A. 537. An order which, on the date on which it is sought to be revised by the High Court, had ceased to be in force by efflux of the time under the last clause of this section should not be interfered in revision, 16 Cr. L.J. 272=29 Ind. Cas. 160; Cr. R. C. No. 273 of 1929 (M.H.C.) but where the order is illegal on the face of it and affects the rights of a party, the High Court will interfere, 42 M.L.J. 352; 16 L.W. 452=(1922) M.W.N. 612; 24 M. 45; but see 47 M.L.J. 439=(1924) M.W.N. 675=25 Cr. L.J. 394, where the High Court refused to follow, 42 M.L.J. 352, and followed the earlier decision in 29 Ind. Cas. 160, holding that the order which has expired by efflux of time should not be revised, see also, 16 Cr. L.J. 272.

Unless the Local Government by notification otherwise directs.—The Local Government's power is not limited to any particular kind of procession and the period can be extended so long as the danger apprehended continues and no reasons are to be stated by Government, 45 A. 526. If the Local Government considers that there was danger to human life, health or safety, or likelihood of a riot or affray, in allowing a procession to pass down a public street, it was perfectly competent under sub-section (6) to extend the period of the order passed by the Magistrate and was not limited to any particular kind of procession. The Local Government was also competent to extend the order so long as the danger apprehended continues to exist and it is not necessary for the Local Government to state its reasons or even to state the fact of likelihood of a riot or affray or other danger, 45 A. 526 at 527. The power herein given to the Local Government to extend the operation of the order beyond two months in very exceptional cases may perhaps suggest the view that the order may be taken to be an executive one. If it submitted that view is farfetched and may not be accepted in the face of the various rulings of the High Court and by reason of the amendment in 1923 of S. 435, infra.

Revision.—The High Court has now power to revise orders under this section, sub-section (3) of S. 435, infra, which declared that orders under this section are not proceedings within the meaning of S. 435, infra, is now omitted and it is no longer necessary to invoke the aid of the Government of India Act, 47 M. 56, is no longer law. In 52 M. 69 Ramesam, J., disapproved of the view expressed here that 47 M. 56 is no longer law and following 47 M. 56 held that no revision lay to the High Court against orders passed under this section on the ground a Magistrate acting under this section is not a Court and Ss. 495 and 499 infra enable the High Court to call for and examine proceedings of inferior Criminal Courts and revise the same but if a Magistrate abuses his powers under this section by passing successive orders at the expiry of two months, in such a case the High Court may invoke the aid of S. 107 of the Government of India Act and set aside the order. This view was followed by Rellly, J., in the case in 53 M.L.J. 621 (Foot-note)=30 Cr. L.J. 629=116 Ind. Cas. 137. It is submitted that the view taken in the above decisions in 52 M. 69, and in 55 M.L.J. 621 (foot-note) is not correct. In 19 M. 18 a Bench of the Madras High Court held that proceedings under this section are judicial proceedings. A comparison of the provision of the Code of 1861, 1872 and 1882 shows that the proceedings are judicial and it was the practice of the High Court for the past 30 years, to revise proceedings under this section in spite of the express prohibition in S. 435 (3) infra under the Charter Act and Government of India Act. This bar which had existed before, has now been removed by the Legislature in 1923 omitting sub-section (3) in S. 435, infra and making proceedings under this section subject to the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court like any other proceedings under the Code. The view expressed in 52 M. 69 that the omission of S. 435 (3) was probably to remove any redundancy and such removal had made the matter clear against entertaining revisions against order under this section, it is submitted, is not correct. Again the Full Bench of five Judges in 51 M. 1005 have only held that the High Court will not interfere in revision with orders under this section as the preservation of the public peace is a function of Government and in the performance of that function it may be necessary for them to override temporarily private rights established by the decree of the Civil Court and the High Court cannot advise Government as to what measures should be taken to protect a particular section who had obtained a decree establishing their right or to preserve public peace in any locality. The question as to the correctness of the decision in 52 M. 69 was referred to a Bench for decision in Cr.R.O. No. 273 of 1929 and their Lordships (The Chief Justice and Cornish, J.) have held after an elaborate review of the provisions in the various Codes from 1861 and the decided cases that the proceedings under this section are judicial and the removal of sub-section (3) of S. 435 infra in 1923 was a clear indication that these orders are subject to the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court and the view expressed in 52 M. 69 and 55 M.L.J. 62. (Foot-note) was dissented from. The learned Judges however declined to interfere in revision as the order had ceased to have effect by efflux of time. When a Magistrate has jurisdiction to pass an order under this section in case of need whether that order was or was not the best that could have been passed or not is not a question which should be considered in revision, 5 M.L.T. 217=11 Cr. L.J. 164=4 Ind. Cas. 1123. The High Court has power under S. 439 read with S. 435 to set aside an order under this section directing the removal of property into Court and to restore status quo, 12 C.W.N. 1014. S. 561A infra empowers the High Court to set aside an illegal order passed by a Magistrate for delivery of property under this section and to direct that the property be re-delivered to the person who was originally in possession, 28 Cr. L.J. 991=105 Ind. Cas. 815 following 1916 M.W.N. 88=3 L.W. 408=17 Cr. L.J. 190=33 Ind. Cas. 830; 23 C.W.N. 145=28 C.L.J. 83=19 Cr. L.J. 951=47 Ind. Cas. 803. When the case is not one which can properly be dealt with under this section, it is subject to revision as any other judicial proceedings, 1 C.L.R. 58; 23 C. 862, where the order of the Magistrate is sought to be justified under an authority derived from law, but is in fact without jurisdiction not being sanctioned by it, it cannot but be assumed that the Magistrate has acted within his general jurisdiction and as such his order, is revisable by the High Court and is liable to be set aside at the instance of the party whose liberty is affected by it, 41 C. 500 at 404 405. Where the order is on the face of it purports to be an order under this section, there is no good of the Magistrate saying that his order is an executive order over which the High Court has no control and as an order under the section it is certainly ultra vires, it is liable to be set aside in revision, 21 Cr. L.J. 657=57 Ind. Cas. 817 following 41 C. 400. The High Court may exercise its powers of revision when there is a gross miscarriage of justice in regard to an order under this section, 26 M.L.J. 208, or to prevent the abuse of the powers of the Court, (1914) M.W.N. 169. Where the order has expired by efflux of time it would be mere waste of time to adjudicate upon matters which have no practical effect and the High Court would not therefore interfere on the merits of the order or annul it in revision, 47 M.L.J. 439, where 16 Cr. L.J. 272=28 Ind. Cas. 160, is followed and 42 M.L.J. 332 not followed, See also Cr.R.O. No. 273 of 1929 (M.H.C.) but see 26 Cr. L.J. 260=84 Ind. Cas. 324, where an order which had already expired, when the application for revision was made to the High Court, was set aside by the Patna High Court on the ground that it was clearly illegal as no preliminary order was passed and served on the party as required by law. Even the decision in 52 M. 69 held that when the order passed is an abuse of the power conferred by the Code the power under S. 107 Government of India Act may be invoked to have the order revised by the High Court.

Reference.—Orders under this section are now proceedings within S. 435 infra and can be dealt with under S. 433, infra. When the District Magistrate is of opinion that proceedings under this section is illegal or improper, the proper course for him is to make a reference to the High Court under S. 433, infra, 33 C.W.N. 723.

Civil suit to set aside Magisterial orders under this section.—A Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court consisting of twelve Judges in 5 C. 7 held that where a Magistrate passed an order clearly beyond his powers which in effect was in the nature of a perpetual injunction, the aggrieved party had a cause of action for a Civil suit against the opposite party and he is entitled to a decree declaring his right as against his opponent but the question whether the Civil Court can set aside an order passed with jurisdiction was left undecided. Magisterial orders prohibiting people from going in procession in public streets under this section are, without special damage furnish a good cause of action for a Civil suit by a member of the public for a declaration and injunction with regard to their right to go in possession against the defendants who procured the order of the Magistrate, 20 M.L.J. 119 following 32 M. 473 at 434; 2 M. 140 at 141; 30 M. 15; 26 M. 377; 18 B. 693; 2 B. 437.

CHAPTER XII.

DISPUTES AS TO IMMOVEABLE PROPERTY.

145. (1) Whenever a District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class is satisfied from

Procedure where dispute concerning land, etc., is likely to cause breach of peace

a police-report or other information that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists concerning any land or water or the boundaries thereof, within the local limits of his jurisdiction, he shall make an order in writing, stating the grounds of his being so satisfied, and requiring the parties concerned in such dispute to attend his Court in person or by pleader, within a time to be fixed by such Magistrate, and to put in written statements of their respective claims as respects the fact of actual possession of the subject of dispute.

(2) For the purposes of this section the expression "land or water" includes buildings, markets, fisheries, crops or other produce of land, and the rents or profits of any such property.

(3) A copy of the order shall be served in manner provided by this Code for the service of a summons upon such person or persons as the Magistrate may direct, and at least one copy shall be published by being affixed to some conspicuous place at or near the subject of dispute.

(4) The Magistrate shall then, without reference to the merits of the claims of any of such parties to a right to possess the subject of dispute, peruse the statements so put in, hear the parties, receive all such evidence as may be produced by them respectively, consider the effect of such evidence, take such further evidence (if any) as he thinks necessary, and, if possible, decide whether any and which of the parties was at the date of the order before mentioned in such possession of the said subject :

Provided that, if it appears to the Magistrate that any party has within two months next before the date of such order been forcibly and wrongfully dispossessed, he may treat the party so dispossessed as if he had been in possession at such date.

Provided also, that, if the Magistrate considers the case one of emergency, he may at any time attach the subject of dispute, pending his decision under this section.

(5) Nothing in this section shall preclude any party so required to attend, or any other person interested, from showing that no such dispute as aforesaid exists or has existed; and in such case the Magistrate shall cancel his said order, and all further proceedings thereon shall be stayed, but, subject to such cancellation, the order of the Magistrate under sub-section (1) shall be final.

(6) If the Magistrate decides that one of the parties was or should under the first proviso to sub-section (4) be treated as being in such possession of the said subject, he shall issue an order declaring such party to be entitled to possession thereof until evicted therefrom in due course of law, and forbidding all disturbance of such possession until such eviction, and, when he proceeds under the first proviso to sub-section (4), may restore to possession the party forcibly and wrongfully dispossessed,

Party in possession to retain possession until legally evicted.

(7) When any party to any such proceeding dies, the Magistrate may cause the legal representative of the deceased party to be made a party to the proceeding, and shall thereupon continue the inquiry, and if any question arises as to who the legal representative of a deceased party for the purpose of such proceeding is, all persons claiming to be representatives of the deceased party shall be made parties thereto.

(8) If the Magistrate is of opinion that any crop or other produce of the property, the subject of dispute in a proceeding under this section pending before him, is subject to speedy and natural decay, he may make an order for the proper custody or sale of such property, and, upon the completion of the inquiry, shall make such order for the disposal of such property, or the sale-proceeds thereof, as he thinks fit.

(9) The Magistrate, may, if he thinks fit, at any stage of the proceedings under this section, on the application of either party, issue a summons to any witness directing him to attend or to produce any document or thing.

(10) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to be in derogation of the powers of the Magistrate to proceed under section 107.

Amendment.—Sub-section (7), (8), (9) and 10 are new. So also the last portion of sub-section (6), sub-section (7) is elaborated considerably, and power is now given to add even rival claimants claiming as legal representatives of a deceased party. In sub-section (4) for the words "receive the evidence" the words "receive all such evidence as may be" have been substituted; and the new sub-section (9) gives power to the Magistrate on the application of either party to issue summons to witnesses to give evidence or to produce any document of thing. Power is also given by sub-section (6) to restore to possession the party forcibly and wrongfully dispossessed. Sub-section (10) expressly reserves the power to proceed under S. 107 supra.

Distinction between Chapter XI and Chapter XII.—Chapter XI is headed—temporary orders in urgent cases of nuisances and reading the whole chapter it is clear that it relates to interference or dealing of some kind with the property itself, the possession of which is undisputed or something erected or standing upon the property, 21 Cr. L.J. 646=57 Ind. Cas. 662. Chapter XI has nothing to do with the question of possession of the parties. It relates only to a temporary order in emergent cases of apprehended danger and is directed to the prevention or direction by a prompt order of some definite act on the part of an individual so that injury or nuisance may not be caused. Chapter XII on the other hand is headed 'Disputes as to immoveable property' and deals with the possession of the property in dispute. The dispute is concerning land or water likely to cause a breach of the peace, 21 Cr. L.J. 625=57 Ind. Cas. 449. Chapter XII can be applied to prevent interference by one party with the collection of rents and profits of the land by another and matters of similar kind and thus prevent a breach of the peace by forbidding all disturbance, 19 C. 127 at 130. What the legislature intended by enacting chapter XII is to provide an effective means of preventing a breach of the peace between rival claimants until their claims to property have been adjudicated by a competent Civil Court. Prompt preventive action and not lethargy is what is wanted in cases of this kind. But the Magistrate must himself be satisfied and he must form his own judgment and not proceed automatically upon a mere opinion of the police or the direction of some other officer, 23 Cr. L.J. 929 at 931=103 Ind. Cas. 449.

Scope and object of the section.—The object of the provisions of this section is to prevent a breach of the peace, 32 C.W.N. 275=47 C.L.J. 233; 56 C. 290 (F.B.); 30 C. 112; 21 C. 29; 28 C. 436; 30 C. 153 (F.B.); 6 C.W.N. 101; 3 L.W. 165=18 Cr. L.J. 23=38 Ind. Cas. 835 18 Cr. L.J. 692=49 Ind. Cas. 692; 18 Cr. L.J. 461=39 Ind. Cas. 301; 27 M.L.J. 169 at 171=15 Cr. L.J. 572=23 Ind. Cas. 324; 25 B. 179; 30 A. 41 and to bring to an end by a summary process disputes relating to land which are in their nature, likely, if not suppressed, to end in breaches of the peace: the object of the section is limited, strictly to the prevention of violent self help even by a true owner, 18 Cr. L.J. 858=41 Ind. Cas. 826; 56 C. 290 (F.B.). The object is not to provide the parties with an opportunity of bringing their civil dispute before the Criminal Court or of manoeuvring for possession for the purpose of a subsisting a civil litigation though that is often the effect of such proceedings but to arm the Magistrate concerned with an additional weapon for maintaining the peace within the area for which he is responsible, 55 M.L.J. 693=28 L.W. 664 the mere fact that the dispute is of a religious nature, is not sufficient to justify a Magistrate taking action but there must be positive proof that a breach of the peace is likely to occur if proceedings are not taken. 23 Cr. L.J. 23=73 Ind. Cas. 990, 26 Cr. L.J. 870=85 Ind. Cas. 806. The object of the section is thus there to prevent breaches of the peace pending a settlement of the rights of parties in the Civil Court. The Magistrate's jurisdiction is ancillary in a way to that of the Civil Courts, in fact it is quasi civil. In making use of his powers under the section the Magistrate should be guided by this cardinal principle for example he cannot acting on the mere words of the section pass an order in respect of any property where the question of the right to it has been decided by competent Civil Court long before the initiation of proceedings, 1902 P.L.R. (Cr. J.) 135 at p 573 following, 26 C. 623. The section is not the only weapon with which a Magistrate is entrusted for preserving the peace in disputes relating to land. He has power specially adopted in cases of urgency under S. 144 supra and also under S. 107 supra. Whatever force is given to 'shall' in sub-section (1) it need not in any way embarrass the Magistrate in exercising his discretion which is to be exercised on the particular facts of each case considered as a whole and by an officer with knowledge of local condition, 56 C. 290 (F.B.) at 303-4. Proceedings under this section are taken not in the interest of private parties but for the preservation of public peace and in cases the Magistrate is satisfied that the likelihood of the breach of the peace either did not exist or has ceased to exist, it is his proper duty to drop proceedings without notice and to withdraw from interfering with the rights of the parties in the property in dispute, 49 M. 232. What the Legislature intended by this section was to bring the dispute to a prompt termination and to compel the parties concerned in it to set their differences at rest without delay and once for all by having recourse to the Civil Courts, 30 C. 155 (F.B.) at 169.

Legislation regarding disputes concerning land likely to cause a breach of the peace and for the adjustment of these disputes and by such adjustments preventing them from culminating in a breach of the peace began with Regulation XLIX of 1793 and continued practically on the same lines down to the current Act viz., V of 1898. The tribunal by which the adjustment was to be made was changed by Regulation XV of 1824 but the method laid down by Regulation XLIX of 1793 has continued without a break in all subsequent legislations. That method was to bring before the Court the disputing parties, to ascertain, if possible which of them is in actual possession irrespective of title and to say to all other disputants that the person found in actual possession was to be left in undisturbed possession until evicted in due course of law. The prescribed method was to be resorted to, if the dispute related to land and was of such a character that there was a likelihood of a breach of the peace resulting therefrom. The object to be attained was the prevention of the dispute culminating in a breach of the peace. The object and method have remained the same all through, 56 C. 290 (F.B.) at 330. The maintenance of the public peace was the object before the mind of the Legislature, and where that supreme object is in view there can be no question but that the convenience and even the rights of individuals must at times be sacrificed for its attainment. It would be improper to lean too much in attempting to construe the section, upon analogies derived from suits and other civil proceedings, the result of which are very different from the proceedings under this section, and in which the rights of individuals inter se are alone in question. It is assumed as a possible consequence of proceedings under this section that the owner of the property may temporarily be deprived of possession of what is rightfully his and subjected to other inconveniences. But this and such like considerations, it was presumably necessary to subordinate to the imperative necessity of preserving the peace, 30 C. 155 (F.B.) at 195. The procedure prescribed by this section is intended solely for the purpose of preventing a breach of the peace where a dispute exists concerning any land, or water, or the boundaries thereof; which dispute, if no proceedings were taken, would be likely to cause a breach of the peace. The institution of such proceedings is a matter in the discretion of the Magistrate. By the addition of the new sub section (10) the Magistrate may now proceed under S. 107 or under this section; see 39 C. 150 (F.B.) which laid down that where there is a dispute concerning land a Magistrate is not precluded from proceeding under S. 107, supra. The existence of a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace is a condition precedent absolutely necessary to give the Magistrate jurisdiction to enter upon such an inquiry as to possession.....Any inquiry as to possession that is made under the provisions of the section is made not for the purpose of strengthening the position of the one party or of the other in the dispute between them, but because such an inquiry is necessary for the making of an order declaring the party in possession to be entitled to retain possession until evicted from the property in due course of law, and forbidding all disturbance of such possession until such eviction, 30 C. 112 at 115. The Magistrate, in order to assume jurisdiction under this section has to satisfy himself as to the likelihood of a breach of the peace and he has to exercise his own judgment upon the materials placed before him and to arrive at a conclusion as to whether on the materials placed before him there was a likelihood of a breach of the peace, and should not be satisfied in acting merely upon an expression of opinion by the police, (1923) Pat. 83=26 Cr. L.J. 133=83 Ind. Cas. 693; 33 C. 33; 26 Cr. L.J. 944=88 Ind. Cas. 1008. The jurisdiction of a Magistrate to proceed under this section is derived from the fact that he is satisfied that there is a likelihood of a breach of the peace and the moment it is found that there is no likelihood of a breach of the peace his jurisdiction to proceed under this section ceases and any order of attachment which had been made previously automatically comes to an end and he cannot continue the attachment, 29 Cr. L.J. 456=108 Ind. Cas. 904; see also 56 C. 290 (F.B.) The law does not require a Magistrate to record in his final order under this section an express finding that a breach of the peace is imminent. A finding as to the existence of a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace is a matter to be considered in relation to the preliminary order under sub-section (1) and where the preliminary order states that the Magistrate is satisfied on the materials before him that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace, with regard to the property in dispute, exists there is a sufficient compliance with law and his final order cannot be questioned on the ground that it did not contain a finding as to the likelihood of a breach of the peace, 26 Cr. L.J. 1581=90 Ind. Cas 541. What the Magistrate has to decide first is whether there is a dispute likely to lead to a breach of the peace and then he is to decide after taking evidence which party is in actual possession of the subject of dispute, 30 Cr. L.J. 381=115 Ind. Cas 810. A party to a proceeding under this section is not in the position of a plaintiff in a civil suit who has set the Court in motion and has a right to require a decision upon the question raised by him. If a Magistrate either refuses to make an order under sub-section (1) or having made such an order subsequently cancels the same on the ground that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace does not exist, no private person has any status to contest the propriety of his refusal to make an inquiry into the question of possession, 30 C. 112 at 117 followed in 49 M. 232. An order under this section is only a mere police-order made to prevent a breach of the peace; it does not confer any title on the person declared by the order to be in possession. He is only entitled to retain such possession until he is evicted by a person who can prove a better title or who can prove a better right to possession, 29 C. 187 (P.C.). An order under this section does not signify that the successful party is thereby entitled as of right to the property, in defiance of whatever legal title there may be existing in favour of the rightful owner; the order only entitles the successful party to possession pending the decree of a Civil Court, 18 L.W. 649. There is nothing in this section to prevent a Magistrate joining together various claims to possession and dealing with them in one proceeding, 26 Cr. L.J. 424=85 Ind. Cas. 40; 18 L.W. 649. It is not the actual parties but all parties who may have notice of the proceedings that are bound by the order, since the object of the section is to prevent a breach of the peace, 11 Bom. L.R. 377=10 Cr. L.J. 64=2 Ind. Cas. 513 followed in 33 C.W.N. 1002 at 1004. When a Hindu father who was the manager of the joint family was a party to a proceeding under this section as such manager, all the other members of the family are bound by the order passed by the Magistrate even though they were not parties to this proceeding 56 M.L.J. (Sh. N.) 14. This section did not before the amendment expressly authorize the successful party to be placed in possession by the Court but now, by the amendment, power is given to restore the successful party to possession. The functions of a Magistrate acting under this section are of quasi-executive character having for their object and justification the prevention of a breach of public peace. For that purpose the Magistrate could only decide the fact of possession, 6 Bom. L.R. 246. Under this section a special jurisdiction is vested in Subordinate Criminal Courts under special circumstances and for a special purpose. Where either the special circumstances do not exist or when the order does not attain the purpose for which the jurisdiction is created, then the special jurisdiction vested falls to the ground. The circumstances under which the jurisdiction springs up are those which give rise to an apprehension of a breach of the peace and if there is no such apprehension there is no jurisdiction to make the order. The purpose the Legislature had in view is a prevention of a breach of the peace, 28 C. 446; 24 C.W.N. 621=31 C.L.J. 369. This section is intended to provide a speedy remedy for prevention of the breaches of the peace arising out of disputes concerning immoveable property. The Code contemplates a determination of the question of possession without reference to the merits of the claims of the disputing parties to a right to possess. The question of possession has to be determined with reference to a specified point of time, viz., the date of the initial order or in the case of forcible dispossession a date within two months next preceding such order. The legislature could hardly have contemplated an elaborate protracted inquiry the result of which might be in many instances to defeat the very object in view, 32 C. 1093. This section is concerned solely with the fact of actual physical possession, whether lawful or unlawful, whether in contemplation of law enjoyed by the possessor in his own right or on behalf of others, 3 L.W. 164=4 Cr. L. Rev. 482=29 Ind. Cas 541; 29 Cr. L.J. 902 at 903=111 Ind. Cas. 662. So in proceedings under this section any question as to whether possession is on behalf of others or in one's own behalf is quite irrelevant; questions as to rights of parties raised by their written statements under this section are quite irrelevant as such proceedings are initiated in the interests of the public order and tranquillity, and it is his preliminary order that settles the actual issues between the parties and founds his jurisdiction, 3 L.W. 164=16 Cr. L.J. 525=29 Ind. Cas. 541; 26 Ind. Cas. 155. In cases under this section the tribunal inquiring into the case is not under the necessity which a Court trying a civil case or ordinary criminal case, is under, of coming to a conclusion at all, 14 C. 361 at 364. Proceedings under this section are generally taken as a preliminary skirmish before the actual battle in a Civil Court one side or other generally gets some advantage out of the proceedings, 27 Bom. L.R. 1353=27 Cr. L.J. 661 at 665=24 Ind. Cas. 709. Proceedings under this section are summary proceedings of a quasi civil nature the object being to prevent a breach of the peace and no right of title is decided and no one's life or liberty is in question and S. 360, supra, cannot apply, 26 Cr. L.J. 915=86 Ind. Cas. 979, 28 Cr. L.J. 437=101 Ind. Cas. 469. Before the amendment, a Magistrate had no power under the section to oust one party and to place another in possession of the disputed property as he has power to do under S. 522, infra, when there is a conviction for an offence, 13 A.L.J. 932 but the new addition to sub-section (6), empowers the Magistrate to restore to possession the party forcibly and wrongfully dispossessed. The Magistrate has power in proceedings under this section to give one of the parties a right of way over a plot of land in the possession of the other party; because he has power to declare the possession of one party to the plot the greater will include the less, viz, to declare a right of way, 48 B. 512. When once a Magistrate has issued a preliminary order under this section, he has no jurisdiction to cancel the same without holding an inquiry as required by sub-section (4) or (5). Failure to do so is illegal and the order dismissing the petition was set aside as not warranted by law, 7 Cr. L. Rev. 193. When a party has been declared to be in possession as the result of proceedings under this section, no fresh proceedings can be started against him, unless it is shown that that order had been vacated in due course of law or possession had been surrendered amicably and if the Magistrate without finding these, starts fresh proceedings, he acts without jurisdiction, 21 Cr. L.J. 753=58 Ind. Cas. 337. Similarly once proceedings have been dropped by the Magistrate, they cannot be revived unless upon further materials, 20 C. 867; 6 C.W.N. 923. So also a Magistrate cannot strike off proceedings once started without passing an order under this section or under S. 146, infra, 20 Cr. L.J. 464; 11 W.R. (Cr.) 9. The provisions of sub-section (1) are mandatory and failure to observe them vitiates the entire proceedings, 23 A.L.J. 155=28 Ind. Cas. 231=99 Ind. Cas. 1031.

District Magistrate sub-divisional Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class.—Only these Magistrates are empowered to act under this section. Presidency Magistrates too were sought to be included in the amending Bill, but the amendment fell through. In S. 6, supra, Presidency Magistrates and Magistrates of the first class are specially mentioned as two different Courts so that the expression "Magistrate of the first class" cannot include a Presidency Magistrate. In the Presidency towns the Commissioner of Police is an ex-officio Magistrate of the first class who can exercise powers under this chapter. See S. 7 of Madras Act III of 1886. In the towns of Calcutta and Bombay, Commissioners of Police, though not ordinarily Magistrates may be invested with powers necessary for the preservation of peace and prevention of crime. Under S. 18, supra, a sub-divisional Magistrate may be a Magistrate of the first or second class in charge of a sub-division. So a Magistrate of the second class in charge of a sub-division can exercise powers under this section although a Magistrate of a Second Class without a sub-division charge, cannot exercise powers under this section. A Bench of Magistrates are ordinarily empowered to try cases or class of cases referred to them within certain limits and they will not be empowered to inquire into miscellaneous proceedings under this chapter which are not trials for offences. But a Bench may be invested with any of the powers conferred or conferrable by and under this Code on a Magistrate. See S. 15 supra. Therefore proceedings under this section are cognizable by a Bench of Magistrates if specially empowered, e.g., Benches of Magistrates in the Hill stations of Nilgiris and Kodakanal are so empowered. See Fort St. George Gazette, 1875, p. 1204 and 1902, p. 299.

Is satisfied from a police report or other information.—The Magistrate has a wide discretion whether proceedings are to be instituted or not. It is for him to decide upon all the materials before him whether he should initiate proceedings or not, 43 C.L.J. 428; 50 C.L.J. 237. He is in no way bound to act on all that is stated in the Police report before him, 27 C. 892, 30 C. 112. Whether proceedings should or should not be taken is entirely a matter within the Magistrate's discretion. It appears to be settled law that a District Magistrate has no authority in law to direct a Subordinate Magistrate to institute proceedings under this section, 50 C.L.J. 237. The police report alone does not give jurisdiction. The Magistrate need not rely upon the entire police report and need not accept the truth of the whole report, 49 C.L.J. 428. A police report and the evidence contained therein are inadmissible in evidence for any purpose except for the initiation of proceedings under this section. It cannot be used for arriving at a finding as to factum of possession, 21 Cr.L.J. 735=53 Ind. Cas. 159 nor by itself evidence that a dispute which is likely to cause a breach of the peace exists, 7 B.L.R. 329. No rule can be laid down so as to specify the sufficiency of the materials upon which the Magistrate is entitled to act. But the Magistrate must form his own judgment and not proceed upon a mere expression of opinion by the police, 33 C. 33 followed in (1923) Pat. 83=26 Cr. L.J. 133=83 Ind. Cas. 693 and 28 Cr. L.J. 929 at 931=105 Ind. Cas. 449. A mere petition by an officer in the employ of one of the interested parties is not however such information upon which a Magistrate can act without receiving further evidence, 29 M. 561. A statement by a Magistrate that he has been directed by the Judge to hold an investigation is not sufficient to satisfy the requirements of this section, 9 W.R. (Cr.) 64. Though no initiation of proceedings can be ordered by a superior tribunal, yet it may draw the attention of the Magistrate to the nature of the dispute before it so that the Magistrate may exercise his own discretion in the matter, 20 C. 529; 24 C. 391; 33 C.W.N. 723; 50 C.L.J. 289, 10 Cr.L.J. 231. A mere expression of opinion by a police officer without sufficient materials, in his report that there is a likelihood of a breach of the peace, or a police report which states in the vaguest terms that a breach of the peace may occur, should not be acted upon, 11 C.W.N. 835 and 193. A Magistrate should specify the nature of the information received by him and state the material facts which by the exercise of a judicial discretion he derived therefrom and which in his judgment constitute grounds for believing that a dispute concerning certain land exists which is likely to cause a breach of the peace, if he does not take necessary steps to prevent it. Unless he is in a position in this way to present clear and rational grounds, capable of being estimated according to their merits on the mere statement of them, he has no legal foundation on which to base his investigation inter partes, relative to possession. He is not in any way limited as to the materials he might make use of to base his finding. No complaint is necessary, nor is he confined to evidence recorded on oath, 19 W.R. (Cr.) 10; 33 C. 33 (F.B.). The nature of the information is not defined and the Magistrate has a wide discretion as to the sufficiency of the information and so long as it is reasonable it cannot be interfered with; a mere statement on oath of one of the parties is not sufficient, 10 C. 78. Information as used in this section has no technical sense as in S. 190 (1) (c) infra. The meaning to be attached to this word should be as liberal as possible. It does not refer to any particular way in which a Magistrate's attention should be drawn. It is wide enough to cover the knowledge of the Magistrate derived from reading the petitions filed by the parties in another proceeding which satisfied him that a breach of the peace was imminent, 21 Cr. L.J. 625=57 Ind. Cas. 449. So also a written report of an amin is not itself sufficient, 20 W.R. (Cr.) 87. A petition which refers to the commission of various offences which involve no breach of the peace is not sufficient, 4 C.W.N. 57. A mere telegram has been held to be no information within this section, 22 B. 949 at 956. It is now well settled that sufficiency of information on which the Magistrate acts is entirely a matter for him and the law does not require it to be furnished to him in any particular form, 1 Pat. L.J. 335 (F.B.). The preliminary order should contain the fact of the Magistrate being satisfied as to the breach of the peace concerning a dispute as to immoveable property and the grounds thereof, 24 B. 527; 28 C. 416. The omission to set forth in the preliminary order the grounds of the Magistrate being satisfied to the likelihood of a breach of the peace do not affect the jurisdiction of the Magistrate, and is not fatal to the final order, 36 M. 273 at 283-285; 33 C. 332 (F.B.); 30 M. 549; 33 C. 63 (F.B.); 18 Cr. L.J. 156=37 Ind. Cas. 924; 17 M.L.J. 449; 16 M.L.J. 148; Weir II, 93; 3 Cr. L.J. 437 Proceedings initiated without sufficient materials before the Magistrate from which he could satisfy himself that there is a likelihood of the breach of the peace are void and cannot be cured by S. 537, infra, 20 C. 513; 11 C.W.N. 835 and any evidence that a Magistrate may take in the course of the inquiry cannot give him jurisdiction which he did not otherwise possess when he started proceedings.

Dispute likely to cause a breach of peace exists concerning land.—"Dispute" under this section means a reasonable dispute, a bona fide dispute, a dispute between parties which have each some resemblance of a right or supposed right, 6 C. 835 at 841 but see the observations of Rankin, C.J., to the contrary in 56 C. 290 (F.B.) at 306. "I dissent altogether from the doctrine that the words dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace" refer only to bona fide dispute or only to reasonable dispute. The first sub-section is concerned with the maintenance of the public peace and with the reality of disputes, the danger of disputes. It matters little to a broken head whether it be broken in good faith or in bad and the Magistrate can have no preference, when he finds from a police report that he must take action, he can hardly be in a position to enter into such question. The section requires him to call for written statements and to inquire only as to the fact of actual possession. The nature of the claim to title may affect the question of fact as to possession but he is expressly debarred from inquiring into the merits of the claims. The provision is not made with the object of inquiring into the bona fides and the reasonableness of claims. It is not generally true in India or elsewhere that unreasonable or malafide disputes are less dangerous than others or more readily accommodated. A Court of law might as well commit itself to the proposition that family disputes are always the mildest. The section is based upon the notion that whether a man has the best or the worst claim in the world he must not take the law into his own hand and so disturb the public peace." Dispute is used here in its ordinary sense of disagreement, struggle, scramble or quarrel for possession of land etc likely to cause a breach of the peace 66 C. 290 (F.B.) at 319. A mere verbal altercation between two parties claiming a right is not sufficient, 5 C. 194. The word 'dispute' is not defined but it has been clearly and sufficiently explained in the section itself as a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace. To add any other explanation to the term is not construing the act but legislating. To say that the dispute must be bona fide or reasonable is to restrict the jurisdiction of the Magistrate given to him by statute, 56 C. 290 at 317. Breach of peace apprehended need not be between rival claimants but may be on account of the dispute from anybody, 18 Cr. L.J. 156=37 Ind. Cas. 521. The Magistrate must record a distinct finding that the dispute is such as is likely to cause a breach of the peace, Weir II 117. Ratanlal 38 See also 28 C. 416; 24 B. 527; 4 M.H.C.R. Appx. 49; 1907 A.W.N. 49. The finding is to be recorded in the preliminary order and the final order cannot be questioned, that it did not contain a finding as to the likelihood of a breach of the peace, 23 Cr. L.J. 1331=93 Ind. Cas. 541; 23 Cr.L.J. 847=104 Ind. Cas. 453. If there is no present danger of a breach of the peace, the fact that such dispute is likely to cause breach of the peace in the future will not justify a Magistrate making an order under the section, 7 C.L.R. 352; 8 C.W.N. 590; 26 A. 190; 13 C.W.N. 271=11 Cr.L.J. 723=8 Ind. Cas. 892. The word "likely" in this section does not mean that a breach of the peace complained of is "imminent or likely to happen immediately," but simply signifies that there should be a probability or likelihood of a breach of the peace, 8 Cr. L.J. 173 where 33 C. 33 and 332 and various other rulings are referred to. The words, 'a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace' have to be given a reasonable and natural meaning. It is to be seen whether the section requires that there should be a dispute in existence which is likely to cause a breach of the peace at any time or whether dispute should be such that it is likely to cause a breach of the peace at the time the proceedings are drawn up. From very early times since this provision of law came under judicial interpretation it has been held that the dispute must be such as is likely to cause a breach of the peace at the time. In some cases it is stated that this likelihood should be 'imminent' or 'immediate' In 33 C. 33 at 43 it was held that the introduction of the word 'imminent' into the section giving it a strange significance that the words used here can bear is not justifiable but in 33 C. 352 (F.B.) the word imminent was used and it has been used in various other cases but what was meant was always that the breach of the peace was likely at the time when the proceedings were drawn up. It does not seem reasonable that the word 'dispute' should be read apart from the qualifying words 'likely to cause a breach of the peace'. The Criminal law is concerned only with a breach of the peace not at any future time for its interference but at the present time as was held in 7 C.L.R. 332 and 7 C. 395. The words 'dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists' must be understood to mean that the dispute must exist and that it should be of such a character as is likely to cause a breach of the peace unless proceedings are taken under this section to avert the breach of the peace which would otherwise take place on account of the existence of the dispute between the parties, 49 C.L.J. 394. See also 56 C. 230 (F.B.). Two essential pre-requisites to give the Magistrate jurisdiction are—(1) a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace, 49 C.L.J. 394, (2) that such dispute should concern land or water, etc. The Magistrate's jurisdiction solely depends upon his finding that there is a likelihood of a breach of the peace and it is a condition precedent to his taking action, 24 C. 55 (F.B.); 23 C. 557; 20 C. 320; 30 C. 112; 15 C. W. N. 271; 6 C.W.N. 340; 5 C.W.N. 900; 4 C.W.N. 57; 6 C. 835, 4 C. 650; 24 B. 527; 11 A.L.J. 305; 2 A.L.J. 272; 30 A. 41; 6 M.L.J. 193; Weir II, 117; 14 Cr. L.J. 493=20 Ind. Cas. 751; 28 Cr. L.J. 929 at 931=105 Ind. Cas. 419. After deciding that a breach of the peace is likely and issuing a preliminary order, the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to hold that there is no likelihood of a breach of the peace without holding an inquiry, 18 Cr. L.J. 789. The section does not primarily contemplate cases in which there have already been overt acts of violence. All the disputants may be persons of peaceable disposition, but if the dispute is in its nature of such a kind that it is likely, having regard to the known conditions of society to lead to breach of the peace, that is enough to warrant the Magistrate initiating proceedings under this section, 30 C. 155 (F.B.) at 200, 30 A. 41; 21 C. 29; when the apprehension of the breach of the peace is not clear but is only colourable, proceedings instituted are without jurisdiction, 6 C. 835; 10 C. 78; 4 C.W.N. 57; 6 C.W.N. 340; 4 C.L.J. 418; 11 A.L.J. 696. Proceedings under this section are initiated only by complying with the provisions of sub-section (1), which are imperative in their nature, (1914) M.W.N. 793 following 32 C. 652 and distinguishing 33 M. 273; 24 Ind. Cas. 160, 49 A. 325; 23 Cr. L.J. 623=102 Ind. Cas. 911. The term "land" in this section has a very wide significance. It includes crops or other produce of land and even the rents and profits of the land. The mere fact that the crops which are subject of dispute have been removed from the land is not sufficient to oust the jurisdiction of the Magistrate under this section, Weir II, 103. A dispute as regards mines and minerals and the right to work therein falls within the scope of this section, [1922] Pat 122; 4 Pat L.J. 154; 2 Pat. L.J. 637; a dispute as to right to collect rent is a dispute within this section, 16 Cr. L.J. 234; 17 M.L.T. 225; 11 C. 413; 16 C. 513; 12 M. 88. Disputes regarding fisheries are within the section, 11 C. 413; 13 C. 179; 35 C. 117; see also disputes regarding temples Weir II, 110; 17 Cr. L.J. 235 and right to perform Puja Weir II, 112; 24 B. 527. Disputes which are not within the purview of this section (1). Possession of one of the parties admitted by the other and possession of items not covered by the preliminary order, 7 C.W.N. 538 (2) possession of moveables, 4 L.B.R. 75, 23 Cr. L.J. 687=103 Ind. Cas. 419 and livestock, etc., 1912 M.W.N. 540, 1 Pat. L.J. 336 such as elephant, cattle (3) Joint possession of property, 27 M.L.J. 169 at 172; 40 C. 982 at 986 and other cases under heading joint possession at p. 244 (4); possession of public property, 17 C.W.N. 205; or use of public highway.

Within the local limits of his jurisdiction.—The section does not authorize a Magistrate to decide possession when the subject of dispute is beyond his jurisdiction, 17 W.R. (Cr.) 33; where proceeding were validly instituted and the District Magistrate transferred the case to some other Magistrate for disposal, it is not essential that the Magistrate to whom the case was transferred should have local jurisdiction; all that is necessary is that he must be empowered to inquire into the matter but where a District Magistrate merely received the petition to initiate proceedings and transferred it to a sub-divisional Magistrate who passed the preliminary order under this sub-section when the lands the subject of dispute between the parties were not within the local limits of his jurisdiction, it was held that the order passed was without jurisdiction, 52 M. 231. Where there was no valid initiation of proceedings they cannot be validated by transfer to a Court of competent jurisdiction. When the land in dispute is situated partly in one district and partly in another the Magistrate of one district could properly act on a police-report of an officer of the other district in respect of land within his jurisdiction and pass a preliminary order, 29 C. 585, followed in 1 Cr. L.J. 329.

Shall make an order in writing.—See 39 C. 150 (F.B.) which laid down that when there is a dispute concerning land a Magistrate is not precluded from proceeding under S. 107, supra. It was held in various decisions that the expression "shall" occurring in this section leaves no discretion to the Magistrate if he finds that certain circumstances exist, and when these circumstances exist, viz., a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace concerning land or water, etc., he is bound to proceed under this section and he is precluded from proceeding under S. 107, supra, see 35 C. 117; 12 C.W.N. 606=7 Cr. L.J. 403; 23 A. 406; 7 C.W.N. 746; 32 C. 566; 26 M. 471; 25 B. 179 but in construing the word "shall" the weighty observation of Rankin, C.J., is to be noted: "S. 145 is not the only weapon with which a Magistrate is entrusted for the maintenance of the peace in connection with dispute over land. He has a power specially adopted to cases of urgency under S. 144 and he has a power under S. 107 which in some cases will suffice. It is clear enough that whatever force is given to the word 'shall' in the first sub-section of S. 145 it need in not any way embarrass any Magistrate in exercising his discretion. If he is of opinion that an order under S. 107, will meet the case and proposes to make one he has only to make it to justify himself in holding that the dispute no longer is likely to cause a breach of the peace, he can do this either without taking action under this section or at any stage of the proceeding under that section. If he thinks that the case calls for action under S. 144 he can take such action and if he thinks this sufficient to prevent the likelihood of a breach of the peace he can postpone all action under this section. Whether in the midst of S. 145 proceedings he can on making an order under S. 144 drop such proceedings is a difficult question which it is unnecessary to decide. In exercising his discretion the Magistrate will regard as supreme the necessity of maintaining peace. The attempt to classify cases as appropriate to one section or another can be carried only a little way and it is not to be wondered as if decided cases contain little general advice of practical utility. The discretion is to be exercised on the particular facts of each case considered as a whole and by an officer with knowledge of the local conditions." Thus the use of the word 'shall' is mandatory but it is always open to the Magistrate to take other preventive action and thus put an end to the apprehension of a breach of the peace. There are numerous authorities to show that in matters of procedure, mandatory words like 'shall' may be construed as directory; but these authorities have no application to a case where an enactment which creates special jurisdiction provides certain things shall be done before jurisdiction is exercised, 24 M. 364 at 369; See also 7 B. & C. 12; 10 Cr. L.J. 231 at 233; 56 C. 290 (F.B.) at 303-304 where 32 C.W.N. 275=47 C.L.J. 233 is followed. To say that where the claim of one party is malafide or is unreasonable the Magistrate cannot act under S. 145 and should act under S. 107 is both bad advice and bad law 56 C. 290 at 306. Unless and until the Court is in a position to say that the party sought to be bound down is clearly in the wrong S. 107, supra, should not be resorted to 26 Cr. L.J. 1562=90 Ind. Cas. 442; see also [1922] Pat. 231=23 Cr. L.J. 549, 68 Ind. Cas. 149, where it was laid down that where one party is clearly in the wrong and threatens to disturb the right of another who is in actual possession of the land, this section has no application. In the light of the new sub-section (10) these decisions are no longer law on this point. A Magistrate's order under this section is no bar to his passing an order under S. 107, supra, on the same facts where he is satisfied that notwithstanding the order, one of the parties is likely to take the law into his own hands, 36 M. 315. See for a converse case, 39 C. 469. The new amendment gives ample discretion to the Magistrate to proceed either under this section or section 107, supra. The words of this section clearly indicate that the Magistrate is to make an order in writing stating the grounds of his being satisfied that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists. The reason for this provision is obviously that the parties should know before attending the Court what case they have to meet and sufficiently prepare themselves to put forward their claims respecting the fact of actual possession of the subject of dispute. The powers conferred by this section on Criminal Courts are somewhat of an exceptional character because they enable the Magistrates mentioned herein to partially deal with a matter over which Civil Courts have jurisdiction and therefore the requirements of the section should be strictly followed. A formal order is absolutely necessary to give the Magistrate jurisdiction and any final order passed without first recording a preliminary order is not in accordance with law and will be set aside, 28 Cr. L.J. 685=103 Ind. Cas. 413; 30 C. 443; 32 C. 552; 2 A.L.J. 272; 7 C.W.N. 174; 4 Lah. 66; 26 Cr. L.J. 1177=83 Ind. Cas. 601; 13 Cr. L.J. 296=14 Ind. Cas. 760; 16 Cr. L.J. 628=30 Ind. Cas. 452; 18 Cr. L.J. 633=39 Ind. Cas. 1001; 18 Cr. L.J. 461=39 Ind. Cas. 301; 30 M. 548. But the order need not be self-contained if the police-report on which the order is based is referred to in the order in express terms, 33 C. 352 (F.B.); 36 M. 275; it is sufficient if the order should specify clearly the subject-matter in dispute with reference to which the order is made, 27 A. 296; 30 C. 443; but non specification of the boundaries of the disputed lands will not vitiate the Magistrate's proceedings, 32 A. 132; 5 C.W.N. 563. The preliminary order is to be made by the Magistrates having local jurisdiction over the land etc., the subject of dispute and a District Magistrate by mere transfer of a petition received by him for initiating proceedings cannot confer such jurisdiction but if the District Magistrate makes the preliminary order and then transfers the case to a Subordinate Magistrate for inquiry the latter Magistrate has jurisdiction to dispose of the case in accordance with law 52 M. 241.

Stating the grounds of his being satisfied.—The Magistrate's order must contain a statement of the facts from which he is satisfied of the likelihood of breach of the peace and also should specify clearly the sufficiency of the materials upon which he takes action, 33 C. 33; 24 B. 527; see (1924) Pat. 83 where it was held that a Magistrate would not be justified in acting merely upon the expression of an opinion by the police but must exercise his own judgment upon the materials placed before him. The preliminary order need not be self-contained and where it makes in express terms a reference to a police report or other information on which action is taken, the proceedings are not defective, but validly instituted, 33 C. 352 (F.B.); 36 C. 370; 30 M. 548; 36 M. 275; 24 B. 527; 32 A. 132. If the preliminary order does not clearly state the grounds on which the Magistrate is satisfied as to the likelihood of a breach of the peace his order is materially defective and made without jurisdiction, 4 M L T. 213. There have been in the past conflicting decisions as to whether the omission of the Magistrate to record grounds on which he considers the inquiry should be instituted, results in his subsequent proceedings being void as without jurisdiction. It is only right and proper to avoid hasty action that a Magistrate should be required to state the grounds of his belief as to the necessity for an inquiry. It would prima facie appear to be absurd where an inquiry proves that there is a dispute which may lead to bloodshed and where a Magistrate has taken effective steps to prevent temporarily a breach of the peace, that his order should be capable of being set aside thereby reviving the conditions he is specifically ordered to remedy, merely because he omitted to put in writing the grounds which had caused him so to act. The former view of jurisdiction was based on the mistaken interpretation of, 25 M 61 (P.C.). The Privy Council has in 5 Ran. 53 (P.C.) has decided that disobedience of a mandatory and directory order does not, as a general rule, render the proceedings null and void unless it could be proved that injustice had been done to a party as the result of that omission, 5 Ran. 129 at 131. Even when the Magistrate acts on a local inquiry made by himself he must state the grounds of his being satisfied that there is a likelihood of a breach of the peace, 9 C.W.N. 621, 18 Cr. L.J. 156=37 Ind. Cas. 524 but when the Magistrate held a local inquiry in the presence of both parties and satisfied himself that there was a likelihood of a breach of the peace, the omission to state the source of information at the inquiry itself does not vitiate his proceedings, 7 C.W.N. 599; where parties are aware of a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace the Magistrate is not ousted of his jurisdiction simply because in the notice issued it is not stated that a dispute exists likely to cause a breach of the peace, 16 Cr. L.J. 224=27 Ind. Cas. 848; 33 C.L.J.

69. The object of drawing up a proceeding under sub-section (1) is to inform the parties of the grounds or source of his information which satisfied the Magistrate that a dispute existed, 32 C. 771. The object of setting forth in the order the grounds of his being satisfied is to enable the parties to know what case they have to meet. Where both the parties move the Magistrate to take action and the Magistrate issues a preliminary order without setting forth his reasons in full the parties are prejudiced in many ways, 32 A. 132; see also 15 Cr. L.J. 279=23 Ind. Cas. 437.

Requiring parties concerned in such dispute to attend his Court.—The expression, "parties concerned in such disputes" indicates all persons claiming to be in possession at the date of the preliminary order and not all parties interested in, or claiming a right to the property in dispute; all parties interested in, or claiming right are not entitled to be, and should not be made parties to the proceeding. To require a Magistrate to do so, would be to impose upon him in some cases, an almost impossible task and would undoubtedly have the effect of unduly prolonging and greatly embarrassing the proceedings, and defeating them of their summary character, 30 C. 155 (F.B.) at 196, 28 C. 446; 21 C. 29; 27 C. 892; 6 C.W.N. 101. The words parties concerned in such dispute have been understood as including persons who are interested in or claim a right to the subject of dispute (21 C. 21, 18 M. 51). The course of legal decisions as regards the right of managers to represent their principals in such proceedings shows a curious development. In 21 C. 915 the managers were held to have no interest or possession and this decision was followed in 25 C. 423 and in 31 C. 48 the possession of a manager on behalf of an absentee proprietor was recognised. In 32 C. 287 the fact of a manager being made a party instead of his employer was held to be a mere irregularity even if the master, the Zemindar lived within the Court's jurisdiction. The position of a servant is rather different. He cannot be treated as in actual possession either in his own right or on behalf of another. The possession in such a case must be with his master who entrusted him with the custody of the property in dispute. See 6 C.L.R. 193. If he were dismissed from service the order passed under this section could not be treated as binding on his successor or his master; nor is he a party to be evicted in due course of law by a Civil Court. The section therefore is not intended to apply to servants in the absence of their masters, otherwise it will be possible for an employer to make the order ineffective by changing servants, 18 Cr. L.J. 44=5 L.W. 118=36 Ind. Cas. 876. It is the duty of the Magistrate in the first instance to find out which parties are concerned in the dispute, 5 C.W.N. 900, and a person concerned in the dispute need not actually be present near the land, 20 C.W.N. 978=17 Cr. L.J. 449=36 Ind. Cas. 129. Landlords who set up false tenants as cultivators to oust the real tenants in possession are necessary parties. Undivided brothers of the original party are necessary parties, 3 C.W.N. 329. A reversioner is not a necessary party as he can have no possible right to present possession, 24 A. 439; 27 C. 892. Parties can be added, up to the time of the beginning of the inquiry and if a Magistrate refuses to allow a party to intervene, not on the ground that he has no interest in the subject of dispute, he is acting without jurisdiction. 30 C. 155 (F.B.); 20 C. 867. A third party can come in the course of the proceedings for the purpose of showing that no dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace really existed or exists. It is not clear that the Legislature contemplated that such third party should be made a party to the proceeding, 5 C.W.N. 900 at 903. The language of sub-section (5) also makes this position clear that a third party interested in the dispute is entitled to show that no such dispute as aforesaid exists or has existed. The object of the law is to obtain a settlement of the dispute and if a party is absent, strict proof of service on him is required and it will be better in most cases to order fresh service to secure an effective settlement of the dispute. If a party after due service of notice fails to appear, a warrant cannot be issued to enforce his attendance, 5 C.W.N. 71; 8 C.W.N. 642; 34 C. 840; 12 C.W.N. 771; 30 C. 918. This section contemplates one proceeding against all parties known to be concerned in the dispute so as to conclude the matter definitely and finally, 27 C. 892. The parties whom the Magistrate has to deal with are not merely the actual parties to, but all persons who may be concerned in the dispute, the object being to prevent a breach of the peace. Therefore it is not the actual parties alone before the Court but all parties who had notice of the proceedings that are bound by the order, 11 Bom. L.R. 377=10 Cr. L.J. 64=2 Ind. Cas. 517. In a dispute between old and new tenants of an estate the receiver who was not in actual possession but who only granted leases to some of the new tenants is not a necessary party, 9 M.L.T. 602; 12 Cr. L.J. 185=9 Ind. Cas. 1009, where 30 C. 593 is distinguished. The order should clearly specify the place where the parties are to attend. Where a Magistrate issued an order which did not state the place of trial and he being on tour, a party was not able to be present, the order made by the Magistrate was set aside, 7 C.W.N. 705.

Put in written statements of their respective claims.—Written statements of the parties are merely materials to assist the Magistrate in ascertaining the grounds on which they claim possession. The fact that the written statement of one party is not required to be served upon the other is conclusive to show that its contents, neither found nor limit the jurisdiction. It is the preliminary order which defines the issues to be determined and founds the jurisdiction to determine it and not written statement, 3 L.W. 164 at 167=6 Cr. L. Rev. 15 at 18=16 Cr. L.J. 523=29 Ind. Cas. 541. The allegations in the written statement are required to be proved like any other fact, and so on a written statement alone a Magistrate is not entitled to base an order, 5 C.W.N. 71; 34 C. 840; 8 C.W.N. 642; 12 C.W.N. 771; 30 C. 918; 17 M.L.J. 533; 17 Bom. L.R. 382, but where possession of the opposite party is admitted expressly in the written statement filed, there is duty cast on the Magistrate to take evidence, 7 C.W.N. 331; 9 M.L.T. 91; 1914 M.W.N. 793. When a party fails to appear and file a written statement, the Magistrate cannot when there is evidence, say that he could not decide possession, but he must proceed and come to a conclusion, if possible, 11 W.R. (Cr.) 9.

As respects the fact of actual possession.—The words 'actual possession' require to be heavily underlined. It is the omission to consider the meaning of these words 'actual possession' which has led to the numerous conflicting rulings. Actual possession means actual physical possession, the possession of a person who has, his feet on the land, who is ploughing it, sowing it or growing crops on it entirely irrespective of whether he has any title or right to possess it. Actual possession is not the same as a right to possession nor does it mean lawful or legal possession. If the code has meant legal or lawful possession it would have said so. The very fact that the expression actual possession is used shows that the legislature was contemplating a possession other than lawful or legal. This is clear from sub-section (4) for the Magistrate is not to determine the right to possession. Actual possession is not necessarily lawful possession. It may be the possession of a trespasser without any title whatever and the Magistrate is expressly prohibited from determining whether possession is lawful or not in other words whether the person in possession has any title or right, 55 C. 826 at 834. The Magistrate has no jurisdiction to inquire into the rights of the parties. By his training and experience he will very often be incompetent to decide such a question. All that he is to look into is the fact of actual possession and that too on a particular date, viz., the date of his preliminary order under sub-section (1), 7 C.L.J. 369=15 Cr. L.J. 470; 27 Cr. L.J. 784=96 Ind. Cas. 320; 30 C.W.N. 873=97 Ind. Cas. 78; 33 C.W.N. 574. In proceedings under this section the inquiry is limited to the fact of actual possession of the subject of dispute. In view of the imperative provisions of sub-section (4) the question as to which of the parties has a right to possess the subject of dispute is irrelevant as the proceedings are of a summary nature and initiated to prevent a breach of the peace. The question of title is exclusively within the jurisdiction of the Civil Court, 28 Cr. L.J. 437=101 Ind. Cas. 469; 56 C. 290 (F.B.). See also cases cited under heading sub-section (4) inquiry as to possession at p. 241. Once a trespasser a judgment-debtor in a civil suit who had been dispossessed under the decree of the Civil Court is found to be in actual possession 12 months after delivery of possession by the Civil Court and by the decree holder's neglect to take steps to recover possession from the trespassers possession of the trespasser ought to be maintained and protected by the Magistrate even though he had no right to retain possession, 56 C. 290 (F.B.). This section is concerned solely with actual physical possession, whether lawful or unlawful, whether in contemplation of law enjoyed by the possessor in his own right or on behalf of others. This seems clearly to follow from the words of the section, 3 L.W. 164 at 167=6 Cr. L. Rev. 15 at 17=16 Cr. L.J. 25=29 Ind. Cas. 54; 27 C. 918; 9 C.W.N. 837; 4 C.W.N. 426; 25 B. 179; 35 C. 375; Weir II, 98; (1926) Pat. 160; 27 Cr. L.J. 764=95 Ind. Cas. 320. By actual possession is meant not merely bodily possession, but also possession of a master by his servant, possession of a landlord by his immediate tenant that is the person who pays rent to him; possession by receipt of rent is actual possession, 11 C. 413; 16 C. 513. 17 M.L.T. 223; 12 M. 88; 1915 M.W.N. 267=17 M.L.T. 225; 16 Cr. L.J. 284; see 16 C. 231 as to possession of forest land. The Magistrate cannot call upon the parties to furnish a statement of their titles. He is not entitled to consider the claims of the parties as regards the right to possess except in so far as it might assist him in determining the factum of actual possession, 25 B. 179; 30 C. 153 (F.B.). The Court is to decide the fact of actual possession and that alone, 4 C.L.J. 562; 27 Cr. L.J. 44 (2)=91 Ind. Cas. 76 (2), "actual possession" in dispute between rival landlords need not be taken to exclude possession by receipt of rent and be taken to include possession of a landlord by his immediate tenants, (1915) M.W.N. 267=17 M.L.T. 225=16 Cr. L.J. 284=23 Ind. Cas. 382 where 12 M. 88; 11 C. 413; 15 C. 527; 16 C. 513; Weir. II, 105, are followed and 23 C. 80; 7 C.W.N. 432 are distinguished. A Magistrate cannot go behind the decision of a Civil Court even in a case where the Civil Court had no jurisdiction or in a case where symbolic delivery of possession was made by the Civil Court, 27 C.W.N. 267. It is the duty of the Magistrate to uphold possession given by a Civil Court, so that a person who had obtained a decree declaring his right to possession, and had been put in possession might not find himself again forced to litigate his title, 2 C.L.J. 147. Where in a proceeding under this section a party has once been declared to be in possession of land, no order to the contrary should be passed in a subsequent proceeding under this section concerning the same land unless the Magistrate finds that there has been a change of possession since the passing of the last order, 27 Cr. L.J. 815=93 Ind. Cas. 479. A Magistrate is bound to maintain the party in possession who has obtained a decree and recovered possession in execution of the decree. He is not competent to interfere with the execution of the Civil Court's decree and there would never be an end to litigation if the Magistrate will not keep in force the decision of the Civil Court regarding lands but if a decree-holder after obtaining possession in execution lost possession and the judgment-debtor was found to be in actual possession 12 months after the delivery of possession by the Civil Court, the Magistrate is bound to maintain the possession of the judgment-debtor even though he is only a trespasser, 56 C. 290 (F.B.).

Sub-section (2) ; Land or water.—The expression was formerly tangible 'immoveable property' and much difficulty and inconvenience was felt in construing the expression. This sub-section must be read in conjunction with sub-section (1) which deals with land or water and the sub-section purports to give a definition of what land or water is supposed to comprise. No doubt this is a new provision and extends the provisions of the prior Code but clearly the meaning of the sub-section is that the Magistrate has jurisdiction to deal with moveable property which represents the produce of the disputed land if the produce is attached to or the same cut and lying on the land at the time of initiation of proceedings but if removed and wholly disassociated from the land in dispute, then the Magistrate is deprived of jurisdiction to deal with it. Thus when mica is dug and removed to a godown and stored there, that cannot be dealt with by the Magistrate as there is a severance from the land and removal to a godown, 2 Pat. L.J. 637=18 Cr. L.J. 756=51 Ind. Cas. 132. The expression 'land' was held to include a temple, Weir II, 99, 110 and 112; crops, 15 A. 334, rents, 11 C. 413; 15 C. 527; 16 C. 513; 12 M. 88; the expression 'land or water' now includes buildings, markets, fisheries, crops, rents or profits of land. The definition of land is wide enough to cover mining rights, and even prospecting or boring licences, which can only be utilised by going upon the land and exercising some rights relating to it, 21 Cr. L.J. 103=71 Ind. Cas. 236. Proceedings cannot be instituted under this section with respect to moveables, 25 Cr. L.J. 440=77 Ind. Cas. 723. The Madras High Court in Weir II, 103, held that the mere fact that the crops which are the subject of dispute have been removed from the land is not sufficient to oust the jurisdiction of the Magistrate under this section, but in 30 C. 110, it was held that when the crops were severed from the land no action could be taken as the heading of Chap. XII is disputes as to immovable property. This is followed in 29 Cr. L.J. 857=111 Ind. Cas. 441. See also 28 A. 266 where it was held that a Magistrate has no jurisdiction to attach under S. 146, infra, a crop of mohra no longer growing on the trees. This sub-section seems to enlarge the scope of sub-section (7), for the section refers not only to crops but also to rents and profits of the property and the word 'crops or other produce' in this sub-section is the same as crop or other produce occurring in sub-section (8). Had it been the intention of the Legislature to restrict the meaning of 'crops' in this sub-section to standing crops, the words would have been used. The utility of the section would have been much reduced if a restricted meaning were applied to the word 'crops', in this sub-section, for disputes of this kind usually arise, after the crops are harvested, cut and stored. The principle laid down in cases such as 30 C. 110; 28 A. 266; 27 Cr. L.J. 1363=93 Ind. Cas. 433, would be applied had there been not this sub-section, 28 Cr. L.J. 939=103 Ind. Cas. 813 where Weir II, 108; 13 Cr. L.J. 203=14 Ind. Cas. 750 are followed. The new sub-section (8) introduced in 1923 seems to set at rest the conflict of decisions and the early rulings in 30 C. 110 and 28 A. 266 cannot now be considered to be good law. Crops that have been severed from the land are not immovable property at all and a dispute relating to such crops cannot be said to be one relating to immovable property within this section 27 Cr. L.J. 1363=93 Ind. Cas. 433 following 28 A. 266 but see 18 Cr. L.J. 652=40 Ind. Cas. 300, but crops of a disputed land being cut and entrusted with a third party before the initiation of proceedings under this section can validly be ordered to be divided between the parties by the Magistrate when he drops proceedings holding that the parties are in joint possession ousting his jurisdiction to pass an order under this section, 18 Cr. L.J. 616=39 Ind. Cas. 934. Trees severed from the land and lying on the land do not come within the purview of this section, 18 Cr. L.J. 461=39 Ind. Cas. 301. By a private arrangement between dealers in a market a Chaudri was appointed to regulate trade and he was to be remunerated by voluntary payments by dealers, such payment having no connection with the ordinary rents and profits of the market, due to the zemindar, in a dispute between the servants of the zemindar and the Chaudri, it was held that the dispute did not relate to the profits of the market, and so proceedings under this section could not be taken and the proper course is to proceed under S. 107, supra, 36 A. 143. A dispute as to the hereditary right to perform the duties of a pujari of an idol in a temple is not a right to the use of land, 37 C. 578; where 29 M. 237 is not followed, 52 C. 959. But the Madras High Court consistently took a different view, 27 M.L.J. 587; 29 M. 237 where 11 M. 323 is followed. But a claim to perform a religious ceremony in a public temple when such claim is the subject of dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace comes within this section, 24 B. 527. The offerings given by the worshippers of a deity for the worship are not profits arising out of a building or the land upon which the deity was installed and the order made under this section that a certain person is in possession of such offerings is one made without jurisdiction, 38 C. 387; 5 Pat. L. J. 246=21 Cr. L.J. 572=57 Ind. Cas. 92. A dispute as to division of offerings made to a deity in a temple by the worshippers is not within this sub-section because it is not profits arising out of land on which the deity is installed. To hold otherwise would be to allow Criminal Courts to interfere with the Customary law of the country. The dispute becomes one relating to moveable property and no declaration can be made under this section, 28 Cr. L.J. 687=103 Ind. Cas. 415 following 37 C. 784 and 38 C. 387. A dispute between two parties as to the collection and distribution of fees paid by pilgrims at Gaya for performing Sradha although there is a likelihood of a breach of the peace on account of such dispute does not come within this section as such fees can in no sense be said to be profits arising out of land, 3 C.L.J. 137. In 4 Bom. L.R. 433, it was held that a dispute as to the right to take the sandal paste from the decorations of the idol does not come within this section. A dispute as to the right of succession to a muff and its appurtenances does not come within the purview of this section, 11 W.R. (Cr.) 23. But a dispute as to the possession of a temple is one regarding immovable property within this section and it could be attached under S. 146, infra, Weir II 110 and 112. See also 38 C. 337. A right to collect payments for carrying passengers to and fro a ferry cannot be treated apart from the possession of the lands used on either side of the stream for landing the passengers, and so where the dispute is with regard to a ferry including the land and water on which the right is exercised, the case properly comes within this section, 26 C. 188. The right to use a ferry may come within S. 147, infra, 3 C.W.N. 148. A right to tap a tree may be the subject of a proceeding under this section 3 Pat. L.J. 316. A fishery right comes within this section, 35 C. 117. A dispute not relating to the possession of a share in a fishery, but to a share in its profits may be dealt with under this section, 11 C.L.J. 412, but a dispute as to a right of mooring and drying fishing nets claimed by one party on the land of another without any claim to the possession of the land is not within this section but only an easement right falling under S. 147, infra, 21 Cr. L.J. 697=57 Ind. Cas. 937. A dispute as to the right to collect rents is a dispute within the operation of this section, (1915) M.W.N. 267=17 M.L.T. 225=16 Cr. L.J. 284=28 Ind. Cas. 322; 11 C. 413; 16 C. 513; 12 M. 83; 18 Cr. L.J. 156=37 Ind. Cas. 524; 15 C. 527. The question for decision in such a case must always be, who was actually collecting rents at the date of the preliminary order, (1915) M.W.N. 267=17 M.L.T. 225=16 Cr. L.J. 284=28 Ind. Cas. 332, but it must relate to the whole property in dispute and a right to collect rent in respect of a share of an undivided joint property does not come within this section, 6 C.W.N. 841; 5 A. 607; 23 C. 80; 36 C. 986. But a dispute regarding the right to collect rent between joint owners governed by Mitakshara Law is within this section and the Magistrate has jurisdiction to appoint a receiver to such joint estate, 27 C. 259, followed in (1925) Pat. 142, unless by such right an attempt is made to exclude a sharer from possession and enjoyment of his share. A mere dispute as to the right to collect rent from tenants when there is no dispute either as to the extent of the shares or as to the factum of possession is not a dispute as to rents and profits within the meaning of this section, 5 Cr. L.J. 354; see also 19 C.W.N. 959=16 Cr. L.J. 590=30 Ind. Cas. 142. Where the traders in a market owned by a zemindar appoint a chaudri to regulate sale etc., agreeing to remunerate him by means of a small contribution for each beast of burden that brought goods to the market and where the servants of the owner object to his collecting the same, the dispute does not relate to a market or its rent within the meaning of this section, 35 A. 143. Where there is no question of shares as between parties to the proceeding and the question of shares arises only at the time of payment of rent this section does apply, 19 C.W.N. 959=30 Ind. Cas. 142. Joint possession is not within the scope of this section, 2 C.L.R. 62; 4 C.W.N. 426; 7 C.W.N. 118; 11 C.W.N. 512; 11 C.L.J. 412; 10 C.W.N. 1088; 40 C. 982. But if it is found that one co-sharer is in actual possession and the other is not, an order may be made under this section, 40 C. 992. No proceeding can be taken under this section to determine the question as to which partner is in exclusive possession of the partnership properties as manager, 32 C. 249; a Manager of a Hindu family is entitled to be protected in his possession by proceedings under this section against the other members of the family, 31 M. 318. In a dispute between two brothers with regard to the possession of certain sir land the Magistrate is legally entitled to declare the possession of one brother when on the evidence he finds him to be in actual possession and the fact that the brothers are members of a joint Hindu family is immaterial, 1 Luck. 201.

Sub-section (3) copy of the order shall be served, etc.—The object of this sub-section is to give notice to all persons interested in the subject-matter of dispute so that they can appear in Court at the time of the hearing, 30 C. 155 (F.B.) at 197. A person on whom a preliminary order under sub-section (1) has not been served and who has not been given an opportunity to prove his possession of the subject of dispute cannot be subjected to a final order under this section, 26 Cr. L.J. 1581=90 Ind. Cas. 531. This sub-section is in accordance with the decisions in 20 C. 520 and 513; and follows the suggestions contained in 4 C. 650 and overrules the decision in 24 C. 53. When objection is taken that the order has not been served, the Magistrate ought not to be satisfied by the mere written return of the process-server, but should examine him and allow the party to cross-examine him on this point, 8 C.W.N. 719. This sub-section also lays down that at least one copy of the preliminary order passed under sub-section (1) must be published by affixing it in some conspicuous place at or near the subject of dispute. This is an indication that the binding character of an order under this section is not under all circumstances to be confined to the persons who were actually made parties to the proceeding, but may, under certain circumstances, extend to persons other than parties themselves. This view has been adopted in 11 Bom. L.R. 377 holding that an order under this section is binding not only on the actual parties to the proceedings but also on those who may have notice of the proceedings, See also 33 C.W.N. 1002 at 1004.

In the manner provided for service of summons.—See Ss. 68 to 72, supra. If parties are absent they may be declared ex parte after due proof of service of notice on them, 8 C.W.N. 632. Failure to comply with the provisions of this sub-section can be cured by S. 537, infra, and will not invalidate the proceedings, 27 Cr. L.J. 680—94 Ind. Cas. 703. See also 30 A. 41; 30 M. 543; 15 Cr. L.J. 279—23 Ind. Cas. 437.

Upon such person or persons as the Magistrate directs.—A Magistrate ought before entering on his inquiry to satisfy himself to the best of his ability on the information before him, as to who are the persons claiming to be in present possession of the subject of dispute, 30 C. 155 (F.B.); 24 C. 55; 21 C. 915; 24 B. 527; 6 C.W.N. 101; 3 C.W.N. 329. Parties concerned in such dispute are not limited to the parties actually concerned in the dispute, but also those persons concerned in the subject-matter of the dispute who would be affected by the Magistrate's order declaring possession, and therefore they must also have notice of the proceedings, 4 C.W.N. 613. The decision in 30 C. 155 (F.B.) is an authority for the view that the question of misjoinder and non-joinder of parties does not ordinarily affect jurisdiction. It is a question of procedure by which jurisdiction is not affected, whether a party has been wrongly included or excluded. The invalidity of proceeding against one member of a party does not necessarily invalidate the whole proceedings, e.g., a minor though interested in the dispute and a proper party may not be an essential party especially as he would not be a likely person to cause a breach of the peace. Thus the proceedings cannot be held to be bad in respect at least of persons who are actually parties and who are not prejudiced, 26 Cr. L.J. 1287—89 Ind. Cas. 151. This section contemplates one proceeding against all parties known to be concerned in the dispute so as to conclude the matter definitely so far as the Criminal Courts are concerned, 27 C. 892. The object of the section being to obtain a settlement of disputes regarding possession of land, as are likely to cause a breach of the peace, any person who is really interested in the subject-matter of the dispute ought not to be left unserved, as this course would operate mischievously on the absent party, as the orders behind the back of such a party would be inoperative, and would tend not to settle disputes, but to a renewal of it in different directions, and between other parties, 4 C.W.N. 753 at 755.

The issue of a warrant to enforce the attendance of an absenting party under this section is illegal as the matter under enquiry under this section is not one relating to the commission of an offence but the settlement of a dispute as to possession and it was entirely optional with the parties or any of them to be present or not, 5 C.W.N. 71.

One copy shall be published.—The object of the publication is to give notice to all parties interested in the subject of dispute, 30 C. 153 (F.B.) at 197 See also 33 C.W.N. 1002. It was once held that the provision herein contained is mandatory and the publication is a condition precedent to the exercise of the Magistrate's jurisdiction in an inquiry as to possession, 8 C.W.N. 590; 9 C.W.N. 993; but now see the Full Bench ruling in 33 C. 68, where it was held that the provision was directory, and related to a matter of procedure only, and not of jurisdiction and the omission to comply with it does not destroy the jurisdiction of the Court which arises as soon as the preliminary order is passed under sub-section (1). See 30 A. 41 where it was held that such a defect was only an irregularity cured by S. 537, infra. See also 30 M. 543; 15 Cr. L.J. 279—23 Ind. Cas. 437. But when a Magistrate did not serve any notice upon a party, and failed also to affix a notice to some conspicuous place at or near the subject of dispute as required by this sub-section and passed a final order without receiving a written statement or recording evidence produced, it was held that the irregularities committed by the Magistrate were so great as to amount to want of jurisdiction justifying interference by the High Court, 35 C. 774.

The use of the word "then" is very significant and makes the publication of the notice under sub-section (3) a condition precedent to the holding of the inquiry as to possession, 33 C. 63 (F.B.)

Sub-section (4), Inquiry as to possession.—The scope of the inquiry under this section is confined strictly to the fact of actual possession irrespective of the merits of the claim of the parties concerned. A claim therefore merely to a right to possession as distinguished from a claim to be in possession would be outside the scope of the inquiry, 30 C. 155 (F.B.); 27 C. 918; 36 C. 83; 49 C. 992; 31 M. 416; Weir II, 48; 21 Cr. L.J. 136=54 Ind. Cas. 616; 6 C.L.J. 182; 7 C.L.J. 369; 25 B. 179; 16 Cr. L.J. 736. The whole scheme of the chapter contemplates an inquiry solely with reference to the fact of actual possession irrespective of title. The mere fact that one party's title has been disproved or that his title as one of the co-owners has been incidentally held to be established in a suit for damages will be of no avail in proceedings under this section. In order that the decree of the Civil Court may be binding on the Magistrate as conclusive evidence of possession, it has to be established that the decree is one for possession of the property in suit and actual possession was obtained in execution of that decree. It is an order for delivery, of possession contained in such a decree that a Magistrate is bound to maintain. Where a Civil Court deals only with the question of title, its decree will not bar a Magistrate from deciding a question of possession under this section. It is no doubt open to the Magistrate to take into consideration evidence of title to enable him to adjudicate on the question of actual possession but neither proof of title nor an adjudication on the question of title in favour of a party constitutes proof of actual possession what the Magistrate has to determine is which of the contending parties was in peaceful possession of the property at the time of his preliminary order. It is quite immaterial whether that possession was lawful or unlawful. The section is concerned with actual possession irrespective of its lawful or unlawful character, 29 Cr. L.J. 902 at 903=111 Ind. Cas. 667. See also 56 C. 220 (F.B.) and 3 L.W. 164=16 Cr. L.J. 523=29 Ind. Cas. 541. In proceedings under this section the Court is asked to say "I cannot look into your title. Possession is now the only question and therefore if your title is not clothed with possession you must go to another Court to establish your title," 5 Moore I.A. 413 at 424. See 7 Moore I.A. 283. A Magistrate's function is merely to go into the question of actual possession and he is precluded from going into the question of title, 28 Cr. L.J. 328=100 Ind. Cas. 712, 28 Cr. L.J. 437=101 Ind. Cas. 469; 27 Cr. L.J. 342=95 Ind. Cas. 320; 21 Cr. L.J. 136=54 Ind. Cas. 616. The words 'without reference to the merits of the claim of any of the parties to a right to possess the subject of the dispute' appear to have been specially inserted to fortify a Magistrate from the temptation to which he would naturally be inclined to yield in a case in which it appeared that a true owner had been dispossessed. The Magistrate is reminded that the object of the section is limited strictly to the prevention of violent self help even by a true owner, where there is no indication that the decision was influenced by any sympathy with the true owner, the order will not be interfered with, 48 Cr. L.J. 858=41 Ind. Cas. 826. See also 56 C. 290 (F.B.) and 55 C. 826. A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to inquire into the rights of the parties as by his training and experience he will very often be incompetent to decide such a question. All that he has to look to is the fact of actual possession and that generally, possession at a particular date, viz., the date of his preliminary order under sub-section (1), 7 C.L.J. 369=7 Cr. L.J. 336; 42 M.L.J. 147; 27 Cr. L.J. 735=95 Ind. Cas. 82, 29 Cr. L.J. 721=110 Ind. Cas. 880. A Magistrate cannot call upon the parties to furnish a statement of their title and he is not at liberty to enter into the merits of their respective claims as regards the right to possess except so far as it might assist him in determining the question of actual possession, 25 B. 179; 30 C. 155 (F.B.); 6 C.L.J. 182; 21 Cr. L.J. 136=54 Ind. Cas. 616; 34 M. 138. Documents of title are often of very great help in arriving at a conclusion upon the question of possession and such documents ought not to be rejected, 19 Cr. L.J. 764=48 Ind. Cas. 604; 23 C.W.N. 910. Where there is a conflict of evidence the Magistrate is justified in looking into evidence of title in corroboration of the evidence as to possession 7 C. 48; 19 Cr. L.J. 717=48 Ind. Cas. 301. This section is concerned solely with the fact of actual physical possession whether lawful or unlawful, whether in the contemplation of law enjoyed by the possessor in his own right or on behalf of others. Therefore in proceedings under this section any question as to whether possession is on behalf of others or in one's own right is quite irrelevant, 3 L. W. 164 at 167=16 Cr. L.J. 525=29 Ind. Cas. 541; 7 Bom. L.R. 18. Actual possession is to be found by the Magistrate regardless of the symbolical possession given to one of the parties by a Civil Court, 16 Cr. L.J. 736=31 Ind. Cas. 176. Evidence of title is admissible in an inquiry under this section to enable the Court to decide the question of actual possession, but proof of title is not proof of actual possession. If a Magistrate uses evidence of title to supplement the evidence of user by both parties but not establishing exclusive possession by either party, then he is deciding with reference to the claims of the parties to a right to possess the subject of dispute which the Code forbids him from doing, 34 M. 138. If a Magistrate uses evidence of title in order to guide and assist his mind in coming to a decision upon the question of possession, he would not be transgressing the provisions of this section by using the evidence of title for his limited purpose but if instead of proceeding to decide as to the actual possession he virtually puts aside the consideration of this question and determines the question of title alone he is clearly doing that which the law has forbidden him to do, 7 C. 46 at 50 followed in 14 C. 169. See 34 M. 133, which holds that evidence of title is admissible to enable the Court to decide the question of actual possession but proof of title is not proof of actual possession. 15 L.W. 62=(1922) M.W.N. 12; when a Magistrate ignoring the evidence as to actual possession of one party merely gave effect to an order of the Settlement Department, and dealt with the case as if it were a civil suit, framing several issues and discussing them at great length without deciding the factum of actual possession, his order was set aside as one passed without jurisdiction, 35 C. 793. Possession under this section must be absolute continuous and not occasional, 49 C. 871, followed in 28 Cr. L.J. 342=100 Ind. Cas. 323. But it is not intended that the possession must be such possession which a party in possession may have occasion to exercise and has exercised and exercises when he likes, continuity of possession must be understood with respect to the object over which it is exercised. A fallow land not yielding much profit but gets covered with water at certain seasons is used at times for storing bricks or for drying jute can be said to be in actual possession of the person who had so used, 28 Cr. L.J. 343=100 Ind. Cas. 823. Possession through the exercise of a right of collecting rents from tenants in possession though not in a juristic point of view of actual possession, is possession within this section, 26 Cr. L.J. 398=84 Ind. Cas. 932. Possession that can be pleaded under this section must be based on a claim of right to possession. Possession of an agent or servant which is permissive cannot give a party to a proceeding a locus standi as against his principal or master, 27 Cr. L.J. 212=92 Ind. Cas. 164, where 10 C.W.N. 1083 is followed. In order that the decree of a Civil Court may be binding on the Magistrate as evidence of possession, it has to be established that the decree is one for possession of the subject of dispute and that the decree-holder obtained possession of the subject of dispute through Court in execution of such decree. It is the order for delivery of possession contained in such decree that the Magistrate is bound to maintain. Where the Civil Court decree deals only with the question of proprietorship of land it will not bar the Magistrate from deciding the question of possession under this section 29 Cr. L.J. 902=111 Ind. Cas. 662 following 2 A.L.J. 274=2 Cr. L.J. 236. A Civil Court's decision as to possession is therefore not conclusive but the Magistrate must come to his own conclusion on the evidence on record, 13 Cr. L.J. 663=25 Ind. Cas. 551, but possession can be declared on the admission of a party as to the possession of his opponent, 9 M.L.T. 91=12 Cr. L.J. 47=9 Ind. Cas. 285. A Magistrate cannot refer the question of possession to a Tahsildar for inquiry and on receipt of his report without hearing the evidence himself, pass an order declaring possession, 10 A.L.J. 455=13 Cr. L.J. 777=17 Ind. Cas. 409. See also 17 C.W.N. 144=17 C.L.J. 610=14 Cr. L.J. 40=13 Ind. Cas. 264. As to possession of forest lands, see 18 C. 231.

The power under this section is very much limited and a very exceptional jurisdiction has been conferred on a Magistrate by this section and he must act in strict accordance with statutory provisions; power is given for purposes of preserving the peace and it is only for that purpose where a breach of the peace is imminent he can attach the property in dispute. Where therefore a Magistrate made an order attaching certain land and arranged for its cultivation to prevent future litigation about the produce, held, the Magistrate acted in excess of his powers and his order was set aside, 7 Lah. 134. There is nothing in the Code which directs the Magistrate in the course of his subsequent inquiry to record evidence on the question of the likelihood of a breach of the peace and he confines his inquiry entirely to the question of actual possession and decides the matter accordingly, declaring the possession of the party found to be in possession, 28 Cr. L. J. 847=103 Ind. Cas. 463. A party to a proceeding is not in the position of a plaintiff in a civil suit and has no right to require a decision by the Magistrate upon the question raised by them, 30 C. 112. Elaborate inquiry, framing of issues, etc., is outside the scope of the inquiry, 35 C. 375; 32 C. 1093; 27 C. 918; 17 C.W.N. 144; 18 Cr. L.J. 692; 11 W.R. (Cr.) 35.

Peruse the statements put in.—The allegations in the statement put in by a party require to be proved, and therefore a Magistrate is not competent to pass an order in favour of one party merely on the strength of the written statement filed by him under sub-section (1) of this section, 5 C.W.N. 71; 30 C. 112; 13 Cr. L.J. 296=14 Ind. Cas. 790; an order under this section cannot be based solely on the written statement of one of the parties without any evidence whatever though the other party is absent, 8 C.W.N. 642; but an order made on a perusal of the written statement of the parties that the possession of the first party was that of an agent and the second party the principal was entitled to possession, was upheld by the Madras High Court, (1914) M.W.N. 795. A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to found an order in favour of one party upon the mere absence of the other party on the date fixed for hearing without recording evidence to satisfy himself that the party is entitled to possession, 1929 M.W.N. 708 following 8 C.W.N. 642, 6 C.W.N. 925 and 12 C.W.N. 771. It is the duty of the Magistrate to inquire into the question and in the absence of the parties, he would be well advised to abstain from passing any final order, 12 C.W.N. 771. When a party applies for time to file a written statement, it is within the discretion of the Magistrate to grant it or not, 8 C.W.N. 642.

Hear the parties—These words mean, hear the evidence of parties and arguments of counsel or pleaders appearing on their behalf, or arguments addressed by the parties themselves and if the Magistrate refuses to receive arguments he is not complying with the provisions of law which are imperative, 5 Pat. L.J. 246 at 247; 21 Cr. L.J. 672=57 Ind. Cas. 92; 11 C. 762. No order can be passed merely upon a Tahsildar's report without hearing parties and recording their evidence, 10 A.L.J. 465=13 Cr. L.J. 777=17 Ind. Cas. 409. See 7 Pat. 1 as to parties to the proceeding.

Receive all such evidence as may be produced by them respectively.—These words mean that the Magistrate is to receive the evidence produced by the parties one after another. The order in which the evidence is to be received is not dealt with in the section at all and there is nothing to suggest that the second party is to begin, 21 Cr. L.J. 136=53 Ind. Cas. 616. Proceedings under this chapter are summary proceedings of a quasi-civil nature, the object being to prevent a breach of the peace, and no right or title is decided, no one's life or liberty is in question. In recording evidence under this section the Magistrate must follow the instructions of S. 356, infra. When the evidence is recorded in the language of the Court in vernacular by a clerk, the Magistrate should make a memorandum of the statement of each witness to strictly comply with the provisions of S. 356 (3) infra 29 Cr. L.J. 70=106 Ind. Cas. 582, but the imperative provisions of S. 360, infra, have no application and therefore it is not obligatory on the Court to read over the depositions of the witnesses in the presence of the parties or their pleaders, 28 Cr. L.J. 915=86 Ind. Cas. 979. It was held previously that the Magistrate was not bound to summon witnesses at the instance of the parties or to compel their attendance after they have been summoned, but failed to appear, 33 C. 24. But the new sub section (9) provides that the Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, at any stage of the proceeding on the application of either party, issue summons to any witness directing him to attend, or to produce any document or thing. A Magistrate may issue a commission to examine a witness under S. 503 infra if he is satisfied that the ends of justice require him to do so 33 C.W.N. 1088. This section does not specify that the procedure to be followed is either that prescribed for summons-cases or warrant-cases. On the other hand sub-section (4) provides that the Magistrate shall receive all such evidence as may be produced by the disputing parties, consider the effect of such evidence and take such further evidence, if any, as he thinks necessary. The Legislature has deliberately omitted to extend the procedure prescribed in summons cases or warrant-cases to proceedings under this section. This difference is undoubtedly remarkable, and the reason is not difficult to find. This section was intended to provide a speedy remedy for prevention of the breaches of the peace arising from disputes as to immoveable property and the Code contemplates a determination of the question of possession without reference to the merits of the respective claims of the disputing parties to a right to possess the subject-matter in dispute, and the question of possession has to be determined with reference to a specified time. The Legislature could hardly have contemplated an elaborate and protracted investigation, the result of which might, in many cases, be to defeat the very object in view, namely, an effective prevention of a breach of the peace, which might be defeated if the Court could be compelled to summon and re-summer witnesses at the choice of the parties. Having regard to the nature of the question to be determined, the parties ought not to have any difficulty in producing, without the assistance of the Court, evidence which would ordinarily be at their disposal. The Magistrate is given no choice in receiving the evidence produced. From the provisions of the Code it is not obligatory upon the Magistrate to assist the parties to produce their witnesses and they cannot claim as a matter of right that process should be issued by the Court to enable them to bring forward their evidence, 32 C. 1093 at 1099-1107. The Magistrate is therefore bound to receive the evidence produced and he has no jurisdiction to pass an order without recording such evidence, 18 Cr. L.J. 36=36 Ind. Cas. 868; 17 Cr. L.J. 129=33 Ind. Cas. 603. The Magistrate is entitled to declare possession of one of the contending parties after trying the question of possession in Court according to the procedure laid down herein. He cannot act on the statement in the police report before him admitting the possession of one of the parties without instituting proceedings, giving notice to the parties hearing parties what they had to say and receiving the evidence produced by them, 10 Cr. L.J. 6=2 Ind. Cas. 428. After this decision in 32 C. 1093 which is followed in 38 C. 24 little reliance could be placed on the decisions in 30 C. 508; 21 C. 29; 11 C. 762; 18 W.R. (Cr.) 64. But the Magistrate is given a wide discretion to summon witnesses on the application of either party under sub-section (9) which did not exist before, 17 M.L.T. 225=(1915) M.W.N. 267. Moreover on the date originally fixed the Magistrate should take all the evidence that is produced before him, and unless he considers it necessary for good reason to require further evidence, should decide then and there, if he can, which of the parties is in actual possession, 17 C.L.J. 610. A Magistrate cannot refuse to examine the witnesses present in Court on behalf of one of the parties, on the ground that sufficient evidence has already been recorded, and the High Court has power to interfere as he acts in contravention of the express terms of sub-section (4), 31 C. 685; but this decision was distinguished in 3 C.L.J. 478=3 Cr. L.J. 423, where it was held that it was not intended in 31 C. 685 to lay down the broad rule that the Magistrate had no discretion but was bound under all circumstances to examine every witness, and if he omitted to do so, he acted without jurisdiction; and he has a discretion in the circumstances of each particular case. The view taken in 29 M. 561 is somewhat different. There, one party wanted to produce evidence to show that there was no dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace so that the preliminary order under sub-section (1) might be cancelled under sub-section (5). The Magistrate refused to receive the evidence tendered and the High Court held that the refusal to receive the evidence gave the High Court no option but to declare that the Magistrate's order was one passed without jurisdiction and set it aside. See 11 A.L.J. 586; 15 Cr. L.J. 470=24 Ind. Cas. 350. If the party does not choose to appear and examine his witnesses the Magistrate is not bound to examine them himself, assuming that they were present, 4 Cr. L. Rev. 253. This section directs the Magistrate to receive the evidence produced by the parties and on a consideration thereof to come to a decision and therefore the question as to who is in actual possession should not be delegated to arbitrators even by the consent of the parties, 32 C. 552. Where at the instance of the parties arbitrators are appointed to settle the question of possession and the Magistrate passed final orders taking into consideration the finding arrived at by the arbitrators, it was held that proceedings were legally terminated, 7 C.W.N. 461. The Magistrate who is to pass an order under this section after applying his judicial mind to the facts of the case and to the evidence adduced by the parties, cannot divest himself of the case by delegating the decision to arbitrators even though they were appointed by the consent of the parties; to accept their award as the sole basis of the decision is to substitute the mind of the arbitrators for the mind of the Court and that is where the refusal to exercise jurisdiction arises. A Court has always power to direct inquiries, call for reports and may take such reports into consideration but an arbitration is a different matter altogether for the Court there accepts the award of arbitrators as the final pronouncement upon the facts. Looked at in this light, the award was entirely without jurisdiction and its acceptance by the Magistrate as the only basis for his decision constitutes a refusal to exercise jurisdiction, 18 Cr. L.J. 685=1917 Pat. 251=40 Ind. Cas. 333 following 7 C.W.N. 461; 32 C. 552; 17 Cr. L.J. 369=1 Pat. L.J. 333=35 Ind. Cas. 801. See 18 Cr. L.J. 145=2 Pat. L.J. 86. If the parties express a desire to settle their dispute by reference to arbitration, the proper course for the Magistrate seems to be to stay further proceedings on the ground that there was no longer any dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace, 30 C 1084. The scheme of the section is against the view that a reference to arbitration and the award thereon can be made the basis of an order declaring possession. A compromise can only be taken as evidence for an order under sub-section (5), that there was no longer any dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace and cannot possibly be made the basis of an order under sub-section (6) declaring possession, 3 Pat. 288; 32 C 552. When a dispute was referred to arbitration, and the trying Magistrate recorded an order, "further proceedings are unnecessary and they are therefore stayed," but the arbitration having failed, the Magistrate nearly two years later purported to revive the proceedings and called upon the parties to appear with evidence, held that the Magistrate acted without jurisdiction as his previous order was in terms one under sub-section (5) and directly it was passed he was functus officio, and fresh proceedings should be drawn up only on the basis of the then existing circumstances and not on what existed two years previously and that it should not be assumed that the causes which existed previously still continued to exist, 15 C.W.N. 271. Where a Magistrate decided the question of possession upon the evidence not taken by himself but taken by his predecessor, his proceedings are not bad, as S. 350, infra, governs such a case since proceedings under this section is only an inquiry within S. 4 (1) (b), supra, and not a trial 13 C.W.N. 420; 22 C. 893; See also 25 Cr. L.J. 82=76 Ind. Cas. 25, where it was held that a Magistrate has jurisdiction to decide a case under this section upon evidence partly recorded by himself and partly by his predecessor even though a party demanded a de novo hearing. The rulings in 4 M.H.C.R. Appx. 20; Weir II, 97, are no longer law. Where a Magistrate without examining witnesses on either side though one of the parties was present in Court, passed an order relying on the documents filed before him, the latest of which was ten years old, it was held that he ought not to have exercised his jurisdiction unless and until he had sufficient evidence before him and that he was bound to take such further evidence as became necessary after consideration of the document, 18 C.W.N. 700=19 C.L.J. 355. Where a Magistrate without recording evidence as required by sub-section (4) based his decision on evidence recorded by a Subordinate Magistrate at the local inquiry, it was held that the order was one made without jurisdiction and the High Court in setting aside the order directed the Magistrate to take the case again on file, and hold a fresh inquiry, 31 M. 82; a Magistrate may depute a Subordinate Magistrate to hold a local inquiry and on receipt of the report of such Magistrate, he should himself receive the evidence produced by the parties and himself conclude the inquiry under this section, Weir II, 118; and he cannot act merely on such report and pass an order without recording evidence himself, 10 A.L.J. 465; 13 Cr. L.J. 777=17 Ind. Cas. 409 where an order was made on local inspection and inquiry from persons present at the time without taking any evidence in the case the order was set aside as one made without jurisdiction, 46 C. 1056; 38 M.L.J. 73=11 L.W. 285; 4 C.W.N. 779; 13 Cr. L.J. 296=14 Ind. Cas. 760.

If possible decide which party at the date of his order was in such possession.—The words 'If...possible decide' are very significant. The Magistrate is not bound to come to a decision. In cases falling under this section "the tribunal trying the case is not under the necessity which a Court trying a civil case or ordinary criminal case is under, of coming to a conclusion at all. The Legislature contemplates circumstances in which it may be desirable for such a tribunal as that of a Deputy Magistrate, presumably unacquainted with the conduct of civil proceedings, being strictly a criminal tribunal, to say that the facts of the case do not enable him to come to a conclusion and looking at the circumstances of the case and the conflicting nature of the evidence and the various other circumstances which were before the Magistrate, the wise and proper course for him to have adopted would have been to have accepted the liberty which the Code gave him of not coming to a conclusion as to the fact of possession and to have passed an order under S. 146," 13 C. 361 at 364. A compromise cannot possibly be made the basis of an order declaring possession, 3 Pat. 283. The crucial question to be decided is which party was in actual possession at the date of the preliminary order and not who has the right to such possession, 27 Cr. L.J. 44=91 Ind. Cas. 76; 16 Cr. L.J. 239=27 Ind. Cas. 911; 28 Cr. L.J. 328=103 Ind. Cas. 712; 28 Cr. L.J. 929=105 Ind. Cas. 449. The date of the order under sub-section (1) is taken as the critical date for the purpose of determining possession and the question of possession is to be decided on evidence taken by the Magistrate. Where a Magistrate discarded the evidence on record as unreliable, and decided the case upon what he saw and heard and inferred at a local inquiry held by himself, it was held that the Magistrate acted with material irregularity in his jurisdiction and his final order was bad, 10 C.W.N. 181; 7 Cr. L. Rev. 443. A final order should embody a clear finding as to possession at the date of the preliminary order. It cannot go beyond the preliminary order and include property not referred to in the preliminary order, 3 Pat. 238; 28 Cr. L.J. 929 at 931=103 Ind. Cas. 449, nor can the Magistrate, in his final order decide the mode of possession or how the possession is to be exercised. He has jurisdiction only to declare by his final order which party was in actual possession at the date of his preliminary order, 30 C.W.N. 873=97 Ind. Cas. 73. It is not enough to find possession a year before that date, 9 Cr. L.J. 505=2 Ind. Cas. 159; see also 1 L.W. 939=15 Cr. L.J. 703=26 Ind. Cas. 156; 16 Cr. L.J. 239=27 Ind. Cas. 911. The word 'such possession' must relate back to sub-section (1) which lays down the conditions under which action should be taken, 27 M.L.J. 169 at 170=15 Cr. L.J. 572=25 Ind. Cas. 323. The words 'such possession' obviously refer to actual possession referred to in sub-section (1). Actual possession means actual physical possession, the possession of the person who has his feet on the land, who is ploughing it, sowing it, growing crops on it, entirely irrespective of title, 55 C. 826. A Magistrate also cannot summarily deal with the matter after a mere inspection of the locality, 4 C.W.N. 779; 38 M.L.J. 73=11 L.W. 285, nor can he pass an order against a party who is absent without recording some evidence, 6 C.W.N. 924; 6 M.L.T. 91=10 Cr. L.J. 6=21 Ind. Cas. 423; 7 C.W.N. 351; 8 C.W.N. 642, but a Magistrate can pass an order without making any inquiry when the party against whom the order is made admits the possession of the opposite party, 9 M.L.T. 91. The police report on which proceedings are initiated and the evidence contained therein on the factum of possession are not legally admissible as evidence for any purpose at the inquiry by the Magistrate and cannot be taken into consideration for finding actual possession, 21 Cr. L.J. 737=58 Ind. Cas. 231. So also the Magistrate cannot pass an order on the agreement of the parties to have the case decided on documents alone without adducing oral evidence as to actual possession, 24 Cr. L.J. 279=71 Ind. Cas. 993. The Magistrate cannot go behind the decision of the Civil Court in the matter between the parties, 37 C.L.J. 256; 22 C.W.N. 479; 29 C. 208; 6 C. 835; 17 A.L.J. 434; 32 C. 798; 5 Pat. L.J. 104; 27 Cr. L.J. 43=91 Ind. Cas. 73. The Civil and Criminal Courts are but the products of the same legislature, and to permit the proceedings of Civil Courts is to attribute an inconsistency to the legislature, and to assume against it an intention to create a conflict where harmony is to be presumed, 56 C. 290 (F.B.) at 361. 'If we are to administer justice as a civilized country, if we are to avoid those conflicts between Civil and Criminal Courts which ordinarily must be fraught with evil and can produce no good if, in short, we are to make the actual administration of justice in this country bear a proper relation to that which we profess it to be, then we cannot have Criminal Courts trying over again matters which have been thoroughly dealt with and finally decided by a Court of competent jurisdiction. It may be that to this principle there would be rare exceptions founded on, possibly, the discovery of new, cogent and important evidence. But ordinarily that principle must prevail, then it is a matter of first importance, of the very highest relevancy to show to a Criminal Court that the matter which the Criminal Court is asked to adjudicate or has already been fully dealt with by a Civil Court,' 41 B. 1 at p. 45 followed in 56 C. 290 (F.B.) at 361. See also 18 Cr. L.J. 301=38 Ind. Cas. 333. If the plea of a party who was defeated in the Civil Court and ousted from possession is that in spite of the delivery of possession by the Civil Court, he still continued to be in possession or he was in possession in defiance of the Civil Court, no court of law will listen to such a plea. In other words in the eye of law and for purposes of this section such possession cannot be recognized at all, 56 C. 290, but where a judgment-debtor is found to be in actual possession, some 12 months afterwards notwithstanding the delivery of possession by the Civil Court to the decree holder and the decree-holder/purchaser had not taken appropriate steps in proper time against the trespasser the judgment-debtor, and the decree-holder seeks to take possession without having recourse to law and a breach of the peace is likely, such decree holder cannot complain if the Magistrate declares the possession of the trespasser who is found to be in actual possession and the Magistrate by so declaring possession acts within his jurisdiction, 53 C. 233 (F.B.). See also 53 C. 826 where it was held that the Magistrate is not bound to maintain the decree of the Civil Court in favour of a party blindly if after the passing of the decree he finds in the evidence that possession had been disturbed or it had changed hands but if the decree is recent and no disturbance of possession or change of possession is proved, the Magistrate is bound to respect the decree of the Civil Court and declare possession in accordance with it. The Civil Court's decree to be binding must be recent, 26 C. 625; 33 C. 33; 32 C. 796; 29 C. 208; 22 C.W.N. 479; 18 C.W.N. 700; 8 C.W.N. 719; 2 C.L.J. 147; but the question of possession must have been directly in issue, 1914 M.W.N. 798; 15 Cr. L.J. 663; 17 A.L.J. 431; 4 C. 378; 5 C.W.N. 563; 2 A.L.J. 274. The Magistrate should accept the finding of the Civil Court as to possession and boundaries of properties in dispute, 6 N.W.N. 181; 8=C.W.N. 845, 23 C. 208; 26 C. 625. An order made without a judicial determination of the fact of possession is illegal. As to the question of possession the law contemplates not the opinions of Magistrates on such questions but their judicial decisions arrived at on proper materials in regular proceedings, 2 C.L.J. 853; it is the duty of the Magistrate under this section to complete the inquiry after he had passed a preliminary order, 24 Cr. L.J. 64=71 Ind. Cas. 112, where a Magistrate found that the evidence as to possession was equally unreliable but declared possession of one of the parties relying on the presumption as to possession arising on title, it was held that the order was bad and he was directed to proceed under S. 146, infra, 24 Cr. L.J. 141=71 Ind. Cas. 365. Where an order is passed after due inquiry against a party, that party cannot by merely transferring the subject of dispute evade the binding character of the final order of the Magistrate and the Magistrate was not entitled to initiate fresh proceedings on the application of a transferee but must maintain the possession of the party previously declared by him to be in possession, 37 C.L.J. 39; 27 C.W.N. 171. In the absence of any other evidence of possession a Magistrate would be justified in finding possession to be with a person to whom symbolical possession is shown to have been given in execution of a decree of Civil Court, 14 C. 162. A presumption as to possession may in certain cases be legitimately be drawn in favour of a person whose name is recorded as in actual possession in the register kept under the Land Regulation Act, 21 Cr. L.J. 785=33 Ind. Cas. 513. Where there was no actual or symbolical delivery of possession, mere certificate holder's possession cannot be declared, 31 M. 416. Possession that can be pleaded and found under this section must be based on a claim of right to possession. Possession of an agent or a servant which is permissive cannot give a party to a proceeding a locus standi as against his principal or master, 27 Cr. L.J. 212=92 Ind. Cas. 164 where 10 C.W.N. 1033 is followed. Possession through the exercise of a right of collecting rent from tenants in possession though not in a juristic point of view of actual possession, is possession within the meaning of this section, 28 Cr. L.J. 338=84 Ind. Cas. 912; 17 M.L.T. 225; 12 M. 85; 11 C. 413; 16 C. 513; 16 Cr. L.J. 234. In passing the final order, the Magistrate should write out a judgment showing that he has duly considered the contentions of the parties and the evidence adduced before him and give reasons for his order, 23 L.W. 664; 55 M.L.J. 693=1928 M.W.N. 921=43 M.L.J. 56.

At the date of the order before mentioned.—The crucial question for decision is actual possession at the date of the preliminary order, 27 Cr. L.J. 44=91 Ind. Cas. 56; 15 Cr. L.J. 708=1 L.W. 939=26 Ind. Cas. 156; 16 Cr. L.J. 239; 28 Cr. L.J. 929 at 931=105 Ind. Cas. 449; 28 Cr. L.J. 328; 10 Cr. L.J. 712; 16 Ind. Cas. 239; 17 Ind. Cas. 217. The time of possession which the Magistrate has to find is the date of the preliminary order, passed by him under sub-section (1) initiating proceedings. He cannot treat a subsequent proceeding as a continuation of the earlier one and cannot refer back to the possession held by one or other parties upon the date of the earlier proceeding in determining which of them should be declared to be in possession on the date of the subsequent proceeding, 5 C.W.N. 900; 18 C.W.N. 700; 27 Cr. L.J. 471=93 Ind. Cas. 695.

In such possession.—The words 'such possession' obviously refer to actual possession mentioned in sub-section (1), supra. Actual possession means actual physical possession, i.e., it means the possession of the person who has feet on the land, who is ploughing, it, sowing or growing crops on it irrespective of title to the land, 55 C. 826. When the Magistrate failed to decide which party was in actual possession at the date of his preliminary order, there is abundant authority for the position that the High Court can interfere in revision on the ground that he acted without jurisdiction, 45 M.L.J. 56 at 59 following 16 Cr. L.J. 239; 7 Cr. L. Rev. 430; 27 Ind. Cas. 911=18 M. 41. See also 15 Cr. L.J. 703=1 L.W. 933=25 Ind. Cas. 153; 9 Cr. L.J. 505. But the party in whose favour the final order is passed was found in possession 5 days before the date of the preliminary order that there was nothing on record to suggest that there was any change of possession during the short interval, it was held that the case was not a fit one for interference in revision even though the order in question was irregular, 42 M.L.J. 147. See also in this connection 5 L.W. 165=18 Cr. L.J. 23=36 Ind. Cas. 855.

First proviso to sub-section (4).—This proviso has been enacted practically to give the Magistrate a margin of 2 months' time to come to a decision on the question of possession, whether the case is a fit one for the issue of a preliminary order by limiting the order for want of possession to only 2 months next before the date of the preliminary order. It has thus imposed on the Magistrate a very great responsibility of being alert, active and prompt or how he is going to prevent a breach of the peace. If he delays, then, he is sure indirectly to deprive the party admitting dispossession, of a benefit of a presumed continuity of his possession after the lapse of that period from the date of his admitted dispossession, which the law declares him to be entitled to under this proviso, 23 Cr. L.J. 929 at 931=103 Ind. Cas. 449. It is incumbent on the Magistrate to find possession on the date of his preliminary order and the proviso only applies if there is forcible and wrongful dispossession within two months thereof, 3 Pat. 288; 32 C. 1093; 33 C. 33; 19 Cr. L.J. 977, 16 Cr. L.J. 239; 25 B. 179; 21 C. 404. If a party is out of possession more than two months previous to the preliminary order no presumption under this proviso will arise, 27 Cr. L.J. 68=91 Ind. Cas. 244; 27 Cr. L.J. 471=93 Ind. Cas. 695. The proposition that a party taking possession by force must be retained in possession if owing to delay, after the dispossessed party has asked the Court to take action, on the part of the Court taking action, over two months, have elapsed before the Court finally makes up its mind to issue a preliminary order cannot be accepted and the High Court will not interfere in revision on behalf of such a party who had dispossessed the other since clearly no injustice has been done, 28 Cr. L.J. 782=104 Ind. Cas. 110. A reasonable interpretation ought to be placed on this proviso and not a literal interpretation which would defeat the very object of sub-section (4) which relates to dispossession of immoveable property. Though the words of the proviso are capable of the interpretation that forcible dispossession must be within two months of the order yet the intent and object of the section must be taken into consideration before a literal interpretation is put upon it. When a person forcibly dispossessed complains to a Magistrate immediately and if for no reason or fault of his the Magistrate not making a preliminary order at once but delays in passing the order, the party complaining of dispossession should not be deprived of the benefit of the proviso by reason of the delay of the Court. 52 M 66 following the earlier decision in 28 Cr. L. J. 782=104 Ind. Cas 110 A party who obtained dispossession more than 2 months next before the date of the preliminary order and retaining such possession by virtue of an order under S. 144, supra, restraining the opposite party from entering on the disputed land should be declared to be entitled to possession thereof until evicted in due course of law and the period during which the injunction order under S. 144 was in force cannot be deducted, 18 Cr. L.J. 301=38 Ind. Cas 333. As the law stands at present, the date of the order under sub section (1) of this section is taken as the critical date for the purpose of determining actual possession. This appears to give unfair advantage to a person who has forcibly dispossessed another. But difficulties arise when the test of actual possession at the time of the institution of proceedings is departed from. We think that the proviso we have added to sub-section (4) as far as possible will meet the evil in question without involving the Magistrate in an inquiry into title or right to possession which is the function of a Civil Court"—Report of the Select Committee. The possession of the party forcibly and wrongfully dispossessed must be deemed to continue. The scheme of the inquiry is retrospective and not prospective, 3 Pat. 288. The dispossession herein contemplated must be a forcible and wrongful dispossession and not necessarily forcible dispossession. The proviso does not apply to a case of a peaceful dispossession though wrongful. Where the tenants of a landlord refused to pay rent to him but willingly paid it to another, the landlord cannot be said to have been forcibly and wrongfully dispossessed within this sub-section, 28 Cr. L.J. 437=101 Ind. Cas 469. Where a party having no title to land is ousted therefrom by means of removing the things he had put on the land by the lawful owner without the use of any physical violence, it cannot be held that there was any forcible and wrongful dispossession within the meaning of this sub-section, 44 C.L.J. 593=28 Cr. L.J. 210=98 Ind. Cas. 101. Where a landlord takes possession of an abandoned holding complying duly with the provisions of the Tenancy Act, it cannot be said that there was any forcible and wrongful dispossession entitling the tenants to oust him from possession, 31 C.W.N 242=28 Cr. L.J. 245=99 Ind. Cas. 117. Once a trespass by a judgment-debtor who was ousted by a decree of the Civil Court has ripened into possession recognized by law, it is the duty of the Magistrate to maintain and protect his possession, leaving the opposite party to seek his proper legal remedy, 56 C. 290 (F.B.). Possession delivered under a decree of a Civil Court will not be a dispossession of that character, 23 Cr. L.J. 379=67 Ind. Cas. 203. Under this section even if a party is wrongfully dispossessed action cannot be taken unless such dispossession was also forcible. The dispossession must be forcible and wrongful, 26 Cr. L.J. 263=84 Ind. Cas. 332; 3 Pat 809. The distinction drawn is between forcible entries which are rightful and forcible entries which are wrongful—and that depends on whether the person entering was entitled to use force and not merely whether he has a legal right to possession. If for instance a landlord came armed with a writ or a warrant in his favour to eject his former tenant then although force might in the end be used, it will not be a wrongful dispossession. If, on the other hand, he took the law into his own hands and used force without any such legal sanction then that would be forcible and wrongful dispossession of the tenant. The word, "wrongful" means no more than "otherwise than in due course of law" Possession taken by show of force is forcible dispossession, 27 Bom. L.R. 1333=27 Cr. L.J. 661 (2)=94 Ind. Cas. 709 (2); see 22 C. 297, where it was pointed out that to hold that the Magistrate is precluded from inquiring into anything before the date when he actually commenced his own proceedings might in some cases lead to a person who has been acting in an unwarranted manner misusing the process of the law to enable him to carry out a high-handed and improper scheme which could never have been the intention of the Legislature. The jurisdiction of a Magistrate to initiate proceedings under this section is not determined by the date of dispossession of one of the parties claiming the land. It is determined by an apprehension based on reliable information that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists between two parties concerning some land. This proviso merely recites a circumstance under which presumption of possession may be made in favour of one of the disputants. Where the Magistrate has failed to record a finding but made general observations as to the ownership of the property in dispute, the order is not one made in accordance with law, and the High Court is justified in setting aside the order, 24 Cr. L.J. 156=71 Ind. Cas. 508; 7 Cr. L. Rev. 448. Forcible dispossession within 2 months of the preliminary order constitutes one of many possible circumstances under which the presumption can be made. It does not deprive the Magistrate from deciding the question of actual possession on other grounds also. In any case a Magistrate does not act without jurisdiction if he decides the question of actual possession on grounds other than the presumption referred to in this proviso, 11 A.L.J. 305 at 308=14 Cr. L.J. 223=19 Ind. Cas. 319; where two months elapse after the death of the person in possession there is no forcible dispossession within two months, 23 C.W.N. 978=17 Cr. L.J. 443=36 Ind. Cas. 123; 16 Cr. L.J. 284, possession obtained subsequent to the initiation of proceedings is of no avail 27 C. 253; 15 C. 527; 12 C. 539; so also possession three months anterior to the preliminary order 16 C. 513; 16 Cr. L.J. 239, when during a local inspection one party alleges forcible dispossession by the opposite party on the day of the inspection, the Magistrate is bound to inquire into the truth of the allegation before declaring the possession, 8 Lah. 156. The law does not allow delegation of jurisdiction of the Court to arbitrators. The utmost the code allows is that the court may direct a local inspection and inquiry and bring on record the report submitted as evidence, 3 Pat. 233.

Second proviso to sub-section (4).—Power to attach given to the Magistrate by this proviso is quite different from that given by S 146, infra. The power under this proviso is to be exercised in cases of emergency before holding an inquiry regarding possession, while S. 146, infra, authorizes attachment only after the conclusion of the inquiry, and if the Magistrate decided that none of the parties was in actual possession or is unable to satisfy himself as to which of them was in actual possession at the date of his preliminary order, (1910) M.W.N. 821=8 M.L.T. 314. It is not obligatory on a Magistrate to attach the subject of dispute when he is unable to decide which party was in possession; the proper course in such a case is to follow the procedure in S. 146, infra, and attach, but, if a Magistrate fully conscious of the powers vested in him declined to follow it, the High Court should not interfere with his discretion in revision, 6 Cr. L. Rev. 236. In cases of emergency a Magistrate has power under this section to attach the subject of dispute. When after receiving evidence the Magistrate finds there is no danger of a breach of the peace he has no jurisdiction to direct the attached property to remain in Court custody pending the decision of a competent Court on the question of title, 26 Cr. L.J. 1378=85 Ind. Cas. 514. Where the Hindus of a certain locality were using a well and the Mahomedans of the locality moved the Magistrate who initiated proceedings and ultimately not being satisfied that either party was in exclusive possession attached the well, it was held that the attachment was not justified as the only question before the Magistrate was whether the Mahomedans also were entitled to use the well and therefore the Magistrate had no power to prevent the Hindus from using the well, 23 A. L.J. 41. A receiver cannot be appointed when the Magistrate acts under this proviso as he could do when acting under S 146, infra, (1910) M.W.N. 821=8 M.L.T. 314, followed in 26 Cr. L.J. 1378=85 Ind. Cas. 514, under this section a Magistrate has in cases of emergency power to attach the subject of dispute but he has no power to appoint a receiver at that stage. The object of the section is that the Magistrate is to confirm the party in actual possession and he is not competent to dispossess such party by appointing a receiver and the order of attachment can have no greater force than any Civil Court attachment which has the effect of preventing alienation. A receiver can be appointed only after investigation under the powers given under S. 146 infra and any order under this section appointing a receiver is ultra vires, 3 Lat. L.J. 147=19 Cr. L.J. 24=44 Ind. Cas. 41 followed in 30 Cr. L.J. 411=115 Ind. Cas. 29; 26 C. 625; 1922 M.W.N. 512=16 L.W. 452=23 Cr. L.J. 633=63 Ind. Cas. 369. The appointment of a receiver is not prohibited by this proviso, but he has not and cannot exercise all the powers of one appointed under S 146, infra. A receiver appointed under this proviso must be treated only as an agent or servant of the Magistrate whose order is only an administrative order passed for the management of the property, 13 Cr. L.J. 255=14 Ind. Cas. 752. This view receives support from sub section (1) newly added. It is competent to a Magistrate under this proviso to order the attachment not only of the land about the possession of which there is a dispute but also of the crops harvested and rents received since the beginning of the disturbance, 13 Cr. L.J. 255=14 Ind. Cas. 759. An elephant cannot be attached under this of land refuse to allow a tenant of the land an opportunity to show that there was no dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace, 37 C. 283. Proceedings under this section should terminate in one or other of the ways contemplated by law and it is improper for the Magistrate to stop proceedings by recording an order "parties absent, case filed," 6 C.W.N. 523; 20 Cr. L.J. 464=51 Ind. Cas. 352. Where both the parties admitted that there was no likelihood of a breach of the peace, the Magistrate is not bound to enquire into the matter, 33 C.L.J. 69, where there is undeniable evidence that the parties have compromised and settled their dispute, the compromise may be taken as evidence to drop proceedings under this sub-section, 3 Fac. 233, and where he finds that there is no likelihood of a breach of the peace and refuse to take action he cannot direct the proceeds of the sale of attached crops to be handed over to one of the parties, 17 L.W. 421. When proceedings started with regard to a dispute to a ferry was stayed owing to the parties referring their differences to arbitration and the Magistrate passed an order "further proceedings are unnecessary and they are therefore stayed," held that the order was one in terms of this sub-section and directly it was passed, the Magistrate ceased to have jurisdiction. When once proceedings are cancelled under this sub-section the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to allow one of the parties to reap the crops to the exclusion of the other, 3 C.L.J. 573=3 Cr. L.J. 466. Any party interested may intervene under this sub-section for the purpose of showing that no such dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace concerning any land exists or has existed but he cannot become nor can he be made a party to the dispute, 30 C. 155; 3 C.W.N. 323; 5 C.W.N. 900. A Magistrate has jurisdiction to cancel the order of his predecessor made under sub-section (1) and stay proceedings under this sub-section and also to order the restitution of property attached and placed in the hands of a receiver Weir II, 103. When a Magistrate cancels his preliminary order under this sub-section on the ground that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace no longer existed whatever be the source of his information, the High Court has no power to interfere in revision with the order of the Magistrate, 30 C. 112; 47 M. 713; 47 M.L.J. 784=22 L.W. 524=(1525) M.W.N. 732. Nor can a District Magistrate, revise an order once cancelled by a Subordinate Magistrate under this sub-section, 20 C. 729, but a District Magistrate may initiate proceeding under this section independently, 23 C. 242. A Magistrate is not entitled to strike off proceedings under this section. There must be some evidence before him that there is no apprehension of a breach of the peace and in that case only he is entitled to drop proceedings 26 Cr. L.J. 105=33 Ind. Cas. 665; 3 Fac. 288. To stop proceedings (1) a party may disclaim the lands in dispute thereby showing no likelihood of a breach of the peace and no necessity to continue the inquiry, (2) one of the parties may show that title to the disputed land is already before the Civil Court and so there is no necessity for putting the parties to expense and trouble by continuing the proceedings. A decision arrived at incidentally by a criminal or even by a Civil Court is of no avail to stop proceedings, 26 Cr. L.J. 870=86 Ind. Cas. 806. When a Magistrate drops proceedings under this section, the sale proceeds of the crops on the land deposited in Court may be ordered to be restored to the persons who raise them. But it is also proper to order that deposits made in Courts may be kept in Court, until one party or other obtains an order from a Civil Court, 47 M. 713; 20 L.W. 124; 17 L.W. 429; 1 L.W. 1032; 16 Cr. L.J. 103=27 Ind. Cas. 152. But in 45 M. 232 it was held that it was not right for the Magistrate after having dropped proceedings under this sub-section to make any further order in the matter. He must leave the parties to settle their rights in the manner they think best, meanwhile holding his hands and the money realised by the sale of the crops will have to be kept in Court deposit and not handed over to any party until a decree of the Civil Court is produced entitling to receive the same. After cancelling the order the Magistrate cannot attach the subject of dispute, 5 Cr. L.J. Rev. 402. See also 20 C. 867 and 6 C.W.N. 923. Where it was held that once proceedings have been dropped, fresh proceedings can be initiated on fresh materials on record.

Any person interested.—These words are important. A third party can intervene and satisfy a Magistrate that no dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists or existed. Such a person joins the proceedings to bring the proceedings to a determination, 30 C. 155; 5 C.W.N. 329. But it is doubtful whether such party can appear to prove his own possession under sub-section (1) or (4) as he does not become a party to the proceedings. Where proceedings were drawn up under this section with regard to a plot of land, a person who is a tenant of a part of the property in dispute ought to be allowed an opportunity to show that there is no dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace, 11 C.L.J. 414.

Sub-section (6).—This sub-section and form No. 22 of Sch. V of the Code permit a Magistrate to give directions as to possession with a legal effect that it is valid until actually evicted or ousted in due course of law and not merely until the institution of a civil suit for determining the legal rights to the property in dispute, 27 Bom. L.R. 1353=27 Cr. L.J. 661 (2); 94 Ind. Cas. 709 (2). By the addition newly made to this sub-section power has been expressly given to the Magistrate to restore to possession a party forcibly and wrongfully dispossessed. "The object of the section is to enable a Magistrate to intervene and to pass a temporary order in regard to the possession of the property in dispute, to have effect until the actual right of one of the parties has been determined by any competent Court. It is consequently his duty when that right has been declared within a time not remote from his taking proceedings under this section to maintain any order which has been passed by any competent Court and therefore to take proceedings which necessarily must have the effect of modifying or even cancelling such orders is to assume a jurisdiction which the law does not contemplate. The duty of the Magistrate was to carry out the orders of the Civil Court and to maintain those orders by assisting the possession of any person whose title is found by that Court," 26 C. 625 at 628, 629. This view has been accepted and followed in 29 C. 203 at 210. The final order under this section decides no question of title. It merely maintains the possession of the successful party who can only be evicted in due course of law by one who can establish better right to possession. 29 C. 187 (P.C.) at 197—199. The order is no bar to a suit and decree under S. 9 of the Specific Relief Act and the remedy of the unsuccessful party in that suit is to file a suit based on his title, 6 Ran. 667 following 30 A. 331. The order is valid until the actual right of one of the parties is determined by a competent Court, 2 C.L.R. 62; 26 C. 625; 29 C. 203; 35 C. 795; the order is merely declaratory and the Magistrate cannot order specific acts to be done by way of consequential relief, 27 A. 309; 17 C.W.N. 205. Where possession of immoveable property is delivered to an auction purchaser under O. 21, r. 35, O.P.C. a Magistrate acts without jurisdiction in proceeding under this section, as such possession is actual possession and not symbolical possession, 5 Pat. L.J. 104; 25 Cr. L. J. 88=76 Ind. Cas. 24; 39 C.L.J. 353. It seems contrary to all principles of justice that a judgment-debtor should be allowed to retain possession against his decree-holder who has actually been given possession, against him, by a Civil Court and in a criminal proceeding, to assert that possession and by force of the order of the Magistrate drive the decree-holder and auction-purchaser back to the Civil Court for a further declaration of his right, 23 C.L.J. 553; 40 C. 982. Where the rights of parties are determined by a competent Court the dispute is at an end and the successful party should be maintained in possession; the defeated party will not be allowed to seek further redress in a Criminal Court alleging existence of the breach of the peace, 6 C. 835. See also 37 C.L.J. 123=20 C.W.N. 796. When once the rights of the parties have been determined by a competent Court the dispute is at an end, and the defeated party will not be allowed to seek the assistance of a Criminal Court and the police to neutralize the effect of the decree of a competent Civil Court, 6 C. 835 at 841; 16 W.R. (Cr.) 24; 24 W.R. (Cr.) 17, but a Magistrate is competent to proceed under this section with regard to properties which form the subject-matter of a pending suit under S. 9 of the Specific Relief Act 35 C. 370 and can also pass a prohibitory order under this section for preserving the public peace, notwithstanding that the Civil Court had refused an injunction, 7 M. 460. A Magistrate is bound to maintain possession of the person who had been actually put in possession by the Civil Court, 6 W.R. (Cr.) 10, and he cannot go behind the order of the Civil Court delivering possession to a party, 6 C.W.N. 841; 24 B. 527; 9 C.W.N. 392; 37 C.L.J. 123. If a decree-holder or auction-purchaser who obtained actual possession through the Civil Court or such possession as in the eye of law is equivalent to actual possession is subsequently forcibly and wrongfully dispossessed by the judgment-debtor, he can come to the Magistrate within two months of the dispossession under sub-section (4) supra, and the Magistrate can reinstate him in possession but if he does not do so within the two months and sleeps over his rights the claim for reinstatement by the Magistrate becomes so to speak barred by limitation, 53 C. 233 (F.B.). When the defeated party is attempting to regain possession which he had lost in execution of the decree of the Civil Court, and a breach of the peace is apprehended, the proper course for the Magistrate to adopt is to bind down that party to keep the peace, 7 C.L.R. 515 but the decree of the Civil Court must be recent, 8 C.W.N. 719; 6 C.W.N. 33 and 161; 32 C. 796; but (1914) M.W.N. 798, where Ayling, J., not accepting the view taken in the Calcutta decisions held that the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to take proceedings under this section is not affected by the existence of a decree of the Civil Court re the possession and title of one of the parties, and where the Magistrate is satisfied of a breach of the peace, and records a formal order under Sub-section (1) his proceedings are not ultra vires, as the whole scheme of the chapter contemplates an inquiry solely with reference to the fact of actual possession irrespective of title, but where no possession either actual or symbolical was given to a purchaser at a Court sale but he obtained only delivery certificates he cannot on the strength of such certificates alone be declared in possession under this section, 31 M. 416 distinguishing, 32 C. 793 and 6 C.W.N. 38. An order for possession could not be made against a mere servant without his master being on record, 6 C.L.R. 193 followed in 9 Cr. L. Rev. 17. An order under this sub-section binds only the actual parties to the proceedings, Weir II, 106, 18 M. 51; 3 C.W.N. 329, but this view has not been followed in 11 Bom. L.R. 377; 33 C.W.N. 1002 at 1003 where it was held that the provisions of this section make it clear that the parties whom the Magistrate has to deal with are not merely the actual parties before him, but all persons who may be concerned in the dispute. A Magistrate has jurisdiction to make an order in favour of a manager when the actual proprietors are non-residents of the place, 31 C. 43; 24 B. 527; 25 C. 423, "such possession" in sub-section (1) must mean actual possession; the possession of an agent or manager where the proprietors are absent is within the section. In 32 C. 287 it was held that when the proprietor was residing within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate was a mere irregularity or at the most an error of law to make the manager a party to the proceedings, and such procedure did not affect the Magistrate's jurisdiction. See also 27 Cr. L.J. 142 = 21 Ind. Cas. 815. When the manager who was made a party instead of his employer and he filed a written statement on behalf of his employer and asserts the claim of his employer, the order against the manager is proper and valid.

For form of order declaring a party entitled to retain possession of land, etc., see Sch. V form No. 22 infra.

Shall issue an order.—The order contemplated is the final order deciding the question of possession of the subject of dispute and is only a police order made to prevent a breach of the peace. It decides no question of title, 29 C. 187 (P.C.) The magisterial order is to remain in force until the Civil Court has seen of the matter, 3 B.L.R. (Ap. Cr.) 27; 2 C.L.R. 52. A disobedience of the order is punishable under S. 188, I.P.C.

Declaring such party to be entitled to possession.—The Magistrate by his order declares that the party found by him to be in actual possession should be permitted to retain possession until evicted therefrom in due course of law. This is made clear by the marginal note to sub-section (6) and also the language used in form No. 22 in Sch. V infra, to the effect "entitled to retain such possession until ousted in due course of law." The word "entitled" is not happily used, as its use is likely to form an impression that the decision is on the question of title which the Magistrate is prohibited from going into under sub-Section (4). There is no specific provision in the Code authorising a Magistrate to take proceedings in the nature of execution after passing a final order under this section. The final order merely declares the right to possession of the successful party. Apparently any disobedience of the order can be dealt with by a prosecution under S. 198, I.P.C. but it is very doubtful whether they could otherwise be enforced. Form No. XXII, of Sch. V infra shows how a formal order declaring possession and forbidding all disturbances of such possession is to be drawn up and it contains no indication directing the police or any other officer to deliver possession to any of the parties, 14 C.W.N. 78 = 11 Cr. L.J. 26 = 5 Ind. Cas. 40.

The addition newly made towards the end of sub-section (6) supra now authorizes the Magistrate to restore to possession a party who has been forcibly and wrongfully dispossessed and this means that the Magistrate will have to take proceedings in such a case to put the party dispossessed in possession.

Until evicted in due course of law.—The expression "in due course of law" does not necessarily mean a decree of the Civil Court but an order which evicts a party must be either an order of a Civil Court or of a Court acting under a statutory authority. In the latter case, there must be a clear indication express or implied in the terms of the statute itself to show that the order has the effect of a decree, 18 Cr. L.J. 682 at 633=40 Ind. Cas. 330, following 12 C.W.N. 686=7 C.L.J. 547. The expression 'evicted in due course of law' is as much applicable to proceedings under the Tenancy Act as it is to ejectment under the decree of a Civil Court, 32 Ind. Cas. 651. The Civil Court decrees need not be between the same parties, 5 C.W.N. 563.

This sub-section and the connected form No. 22 of Sch. V infra allow a Magistrate to give directions as to possession with a legal effect that is valid until the actual eviction or ouster by due course of law and not merely till a suit is filed in the Civil Court for an adjudication of the rights of the parties, 27 Bom. L.R. 1353=27 Cr. L.J. 661=24 Ind. Cas. 709.

Sub-section (7).—Proceedings under this section do not terminate with the death of any party to the dispute and there was no express provision to bring on record the legal representative. Now provision is made by this sub-section expressly authorizing the Magistrate on the death of a party to make his legal representative party to the proceedings and if necessary to decide who such legal representative is. Express provision is now made for bringing on record the legal representative of a deceased party, and rival claimants even can be added as parties without determining which of them is the legal representative, 21 C. 405, is no longer law. But when during the pendency of a Revision Petition in the High Court, the petitioner dies, it was held, before the amendment, that his legal representatives have no right to be brought on record to enable them to continue the proceeding in the High Court, 31 M.L.J. (Sh. n) 18=17 Cr. L.J. 389. See also 1919 P.R. (Cr. J) 23; 1893 P.R. (Cr. J) 6. These rulings hold good even now after the amendment. The words of the sub-section are "when a party to any such proceeding dies the Magistrate may cause the legal representative of the deceased party to be made a party to the proceeding and shall thereon continue the enquiry" and cannot apply to proceedings in revision in the High Court.

Sub-section (8).—This new sub-section empowers the Magistrate to pass necessary orders for the custody or sale of property in dispute which is subject to speedy and natural decay if such an order would be for the benefit of the parties. Power is also given to the Magistrate upon the completion of the inquiry to make such orders as to the disposal of the property or the sale proceeds thereof as he thinks fit.

Sub-section (9).—This is new. On the application of either party the Magistrate, if he thinks fit, may issue summons to witnesses to attend the Court to give evidence or to produce any document or thing. The wording before was 'receive the evidence produced by the parties.' This worked great hardship as Magistrates refused to assist parties to secure attendance of witnesses holding that they were not bound to issue summons to witnesses under this section; the decisions in 32 C. 1098, 31 C. 24; 17 M.L.T. 225, held a Magistrate was not bound to assist parties to secure witnesses, but 18 C.W.N. 53, took a different view. See also 21 C. 29; 30 C. 508, 10 Cr. L.J. 221=3 Ind. Cas. 64; 10 Cr. L.J. 231.

Sub-section (10).—Is new and is in accordance with the view expressed in 33 C. 150 (F.B.); 26 M. 471; 25 B. 179. This section is not the only weapon which a Magistrate is entrusted for maintenance of peace in connection with disputes over land. He has power under S. 107 if he is of opinion that an order under S. 107 will meet the case and without taking action under this section an order under S. 107 can be passed binding the parties to keep the peace. In exercising his discretion the Magistrate will regard as supreme the necessity of maintaining the public peace, 55 C. 220 (F.B.); where there is a keen dispute between two parties about certain lands the proper procedure would be to institute proceedings under this section and to decide the dispute as to possession once for all so far as the Criminal Court is concerned. Another course which is open to the Magistrate is to proceed under S. 107 supra against both parties as the Magistrate is empowered to do under this sub-section and to bind down the party who is proved not to be in possession. It is not proper to proceed against one of the parties alone under S. 107 supra and to bind him over without determining the question of possession 30 Cr. L.J. 492=115 Ind. Cas. 545; where there is a dispute as to a water course likely to cause a breach of the peace, the action of the Magistrate in taking security proceedings under S. 107 supra against both parties leaving them to have their rights determined by a Civil Court was held proper, 28 Bom. L.R. 438=27 Cr. L.J. 704=95 Ind. Cas. 662; 12 C.W.N. 606=7 Cr. L.J. 403. So also in a case, where a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists with regard to a bund put up in a channel, one party alleging that it was newly put up to prevent his irrigating his land, the Magistrate has no power to order the removal of the bund under S. 147 infra but he ought to proceed under S. 107 supra. 27 Cr. L.J. 801=95 Ind. Cas. 465; 33 C.W.N. 1003. The fact that one party has been bound over under S. 107 supra does not take away the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to act under this section when the circumstances of the case require such action being taken, 13 Cr. L.J. 432=13 Ind. Cas. 830.

Powers of High Court in revision.—Orders passed under Chapter XII of the Code are now held to be proceedings revisable under S. 435 infra, by the repeal of sub-section (3) to S. 435, 1929 M.W.N. 708, and the High Court's power to revise is not limited to matters of jurisdiction only, i.e., to cases in which the Magistrate taking proceedings under this section acts without jurisdiction as was held in the following decisions, 26 C.225; 23 C. 416; 30 C. 155; 31 M. 318; 36 M. 275; 19 C.W.N. 123; 33 C. 68; 35 C. 774; 43 C. 522. The object of the law being prevention of a breach of the peace, by determining actual possession and declaring the possession of one of the parties, the Legislature intended that the party dissatisfied with the order of the Magistrate should obtain a final decision of the question in dispute elsewhere. The High Court when exercising its powers of revision will not promote uncertainty and restlessness by an overnice scrutiny of proceedings that aim at promptness rather than refinement, 1 Pat.L.J. 336=17 Cr.L.J. 369=35 Ind. Cas. 801, following, 30 C. 155; 7 B. 341 at 363. In 36 M. 275 the power of the High Court was very much restricted and in 25 A 134, the power of the High Court to interfere under S. 15 of the Charter Act was even doubted. There is no longer any necessity to resort to the provisions of S. 107 of the Government of India Act and orders under S. 145 can be revised now under Ss. 435 and 439 of the Code. But the High Court will not interfere with the Magistrate's discretion in starting proceedings as he thinks proper according to his judgment, 37 C.L.J. 39. Where the Magistrate has decided on the evidence in favour of one party as being in possession of the land in dispute the High Court cannot reconsider the Magistrate's decision, 15 W.R. (Cr.) 36; 25 W.R. (Cr.) 16, unless he has acted illegally or with material irregularity, 30 Cr. L.J. 381=114 Ind. Cas. 810. Ordinarily the High Court will not interfere with the findings of fact in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction. But there can be no doubt that it has jurisdiction to review even questions of fact as the words of S. 435 clearly indicate, and it will do so where there is a clear miscarriage of justice. A perverse finding of fact contrary to a mass of un rebutted evidence regarding possession of one of the parties is liable to be set aside in revision, 25 Cr. L.J. 1068=81 Ind. Cas. 890. It is for the Magistrate to decide who is in actual possession at the date of his preliminary order and if there is material before the Magistrate he is the only judge as to whether the material is sufficient or not, and the High Court cannot interfere in such a case with the findings arrived at by the Magistrate, 27 Cr. L.J. 471=93 Ind. Cas. 695. The High Court in revision ought not to enter on the question of sufficiency of evidence in support of the finding arrived at by the Magistrate, where there is evidence on record to support the finding of the Magistrate, 18 Cr. L.J. 301=38 Ind. Cas. 333; 14 C. 169; 22 C. 998 at 1001; 19 C.W.N. 123; 22 C.W.N. 499. The High Court should not lightly interfere in revision with orders under this section made solely to preserve peace of the locality, pending the settlement of the dispute between the parties by a competent Civil Court, 17 Cr. L.J. 143=33 Ind. Cas. 319; 18 Cr. L.J. 23=36 Ind. Cas. 855; 1 Pat. L.J. 336 (Sp.B.) The High Court has no power to entertain a petition for the appointment of a receiver pending a Criminal Revision against the order of the lower Court 49 M. L. J. 593=22 L.W. 723=(1925)

M.W.N. 772, where the order is partly good and partly bad, e.g. by attachment of certain mica mines and also the mica stored in a godown, the High Court in revision will sever the good from the bad rejecting as bad the attachment of the mica in the godown and confirming the good namely, the attachment of the mica mines 2 Pat. L.J. 637=18 Cr. L.J. 756=41 Ind. Cas. 132. In setting aside an order passed by the Magistrate the High Court in revision has no power itself to pass such an order as should have been passed by the Magistrate in the case, 22 C. 297, nor can the High Court require the Magistrate to proceed under Chapter XII when setting aside the order, as the matter is entirely within the discretion of the Magistrate who must be satisfied of a likelihood that a breach of the peace still existed, 23 W.R. (Cr.) 58; where Magistrate passed not final order under sub-section (6) but stopped proceedings warning one of the parties that if he persisted interfering with the possession of the other party he will be constrained to start security proceedings against him under S 107 supra, the High Court in revision declined to interfere with such an order, 1918 M.W.N. 37, but the High Court may point out to the Magistrate that mere binding over both parties to keep the peace in a dispute concerning land does by no means put an end to the contention whereas by taking proceedings under this section an order declaring and maintaining the possession of one of the contending parties until the right is established in a Civil Court may be passed, 3 C.W.N. 297; the High Court also cannot direct the revival of proceedings when the Magistrate in the exercise of his discretion dropped further proceedings, 30 C. 112. Where the High Court decided that a particular case fell under Chapter XII of the Code and directed the Magistrate to take the case on his file and dispose of it according to law and the District Magistrate under his powers transferred the case to another Magistrate, the latter Magistrate was bound to inquire into the matter and it is not open to him to go behind the High Court's order. 3 Bom. L.R. 416. Persons who are not parties to the proceedings in the lower Court have no right to apply to the High Court in revision. 25 Cr. L.J. 1033=87 Ind. Cas. 923.

The High Court has interfered in revision in the following cases (1) When the Magistrate has passed an order disregarding the decree of a competent Civil Court, 29 C. 208; 26 C. 825; 5 C.W.N. 563; 2 A.L.J. 274=2 Cr. L.J. 236; 2 C.L.J. 147; 6 Bom. L.R. 246, (2) when the Court below has refused to examine witnesses produced by the parties, 29 M. 56; 31 C. 685; 34 C. 840; 11 A.L.J. 586; 15 Cr. L.J. 470=24 Ind. Cas. 350, (3) where the Magistrate initiates proceedings when there was no likelihood of a breach of the peace, 11 C.W.N. 193 and 835, (4) where the Magistrate failed to record a finding as to possession on the date of his preliminary order 16 Cr. L.J. 239; (M.H.C.) Cr. R.C. Nos. 301 and 588 of 1908 and 205 of 1909, (5) when the Magistrate passed his final order without issuing a preliminary order which is the foundation of his jurisdiction, 1907 A.W.N. 43; 34 C. 840; 30 C. 443; 32 C. 552, 4 Lah. 66; 23 Cr. L.J. 1177=88 Ind. Cas. 631, 23 Cr. L.J. 973=103 Ind. Cas. 683; 30 M. 543, (6) where the Magistrate passed his final order on mere local inspection without recording evidence, 31 M. 82; 3 M.L.T. 422=8 Cr. L.J. 150; 38 M.L.J. 73=11 L.W. 283; 45 C. 1065; 4 C.W.N. 779; (7) rejection of material evidence by the Magistrate and then passing a final order, 19 Cr. L.J. 529=45 Ind. Cas. 337; 22 C.W.N. 499. When an inquiry has been properly entered upon, it is not every error which makes the result invalid. The distinction must not be neglected between things done without jurisdiction and things done within jurisdiction though erroneously and irregularly, 2 M.I.A. 293. Before want of jurisdiction can be predicated a vice must clearly be established which infects the whole proceedings. There must be an illegality as opposed to irregularity 22 C.W.N. 312. It has been definitely settled that the High Court will not interfere in revision unless it is satisfied that the party invoking it and has been prejudiced by the proceedings had in the Court below. It is unquestionably a sound principle that the High Court's judicial discretion instead of being crystallised ought to be fairly exercised according to the exigencies of each individual case, 33 C. 68 (F.B.); 33 C. 33. The High Court will not interfere except in very exceptional cases, 17 Cr. L.J. 286.

High Court's power to transfer.—It was held in 26 M. 183 that the High Court has power both under S. 526 infra and S. 29 of the Letters Patent to transfer a case under this section. It was argued on the strength of 25 B. 179 that proceedings under this section is not a 'criminal case,' but their Lordships held that they were unable to agree with the decision of the Bombay High Court and that if this was not a criminal case it was difficult to conceive what it was. In 23 C. 709 the Calcutta High Court held that the Magistrate taking cognizance of a case under this section is a Criminal Court and the High Court has power to transfer such a case both under the Charter Act and the Letters Patent, but the power to do so under S. 526 infra was doubted. But in 2 C.L.J. 615, it was held that under S. 526, infra, a transfer can be made as proceeding under this section is a criminal case, explaining 23 C. 709 and following 22 C. 893 and 26 M. 188. See also 34 A. 533. See 7 Cr. L.J. 423 where it was held following 26 M. 188 that proceedings under this section are criminal cases within the meaning of the words in S. 526, infra, and so S. 526 applied to such proceedings; but sub-section (8) of S. 526 infra, does not apply to proceedings under this section. The parties to the proceedings under this section are described as parties and the use of the words 'complainant accused,' public prosecutors' and non mention of party in sub-section (8) of S. 26 of infra, make it perfectly clear that it was not the intention of the Legislature to include proceedings under the section within sub section (8) and it is not obligatory on the Magistrate to adjourn the proceedings pending an application for transfer to the High Court, 50 C.L.J. 331.

Powers of Sessions Judge or District Magistrate to revise or make reference to High Court.—Proceedings under Chapter XII of the Code are now proceedings with regard to which a Sessions Judge has power of revision or reference he has the power to call for records in such proceedings. The decision in 28 C. 416 is no longer law. A Sessions Judge has power also to draw the attention of the Magistrate to the nature of the dispute in the trial before the Judge, so that the Magistrate might exercise his own discretion whether proceedings under this section were necessary to settle matters pending the regular determination by a competent Civil Court, 20 C. 520 at 526. A District Magistrate has no power to set aside an order passed by a Magistrate under the section because such an order is neither a dismissal of a complaint nor a discharge of the accused within the meaning of S. 436 infra 6 Ran. 655; but if he is satisfied that the order passed is erroneous, the proper course open to him after due notice to the opposite party is to make a reference to the High Court under S. 438 infra, 28 Cr. L.J. 1166; 89 Ind. Cas. 526; 6 Ran. 655. In a reference under this section, it is not the duty of the High Court to examine the evidence to consider whether it might have come to a different finding from that arrived at by the Magistrate 28 Cr. L.J. 901=105 Ind. Cas. 229.

Review and revival of the previous order.—The section gives the Magistrate an absolute discretion to initiate proceedings when he thinks that proceedings are necessary to preserve the peace of the division under his charge. No private person has any right whatever to insist proceedings being initiated under this section when the Magistrate cancels his preliminary order or refuses to make an order at all or to contest the Magistrate's proceedings refusing to make an inquiry under this section, 38 C. 23; 30 C. 112; 30 A. 41. There is no authority for holding that a Magistrate can review a final order passed by himself under this section, 35 C. 330; 21 Ind. Cas. 477; Weir II, 107 nor can he revive his proceedings after the dispute has been settled and an order has been passed striking off the case. An order passed under this section is a final order and it is not open to a Magistrate who passed the same or his successor to review it or set it aside in any way, 48 A. 238. A new proceeding could not be started on the old materials, 20 C. 867; 27 C. 931. To enable a Magistrate to take fresh proceedings it would be necessary to set forth new materials, 6 C.W.N. 923; 20 C. 867; 9 C.W.N. 923, and the Magistrate will have to pass a fresh preliminary order under sub-section (1). Fresh proceedings cannot be started unless it is shown that the order declaring possession has been vacated in due course of law or possession has been surrendered amicably and fresh proceedings started without the above condition is without jurisdiction, 18 Cr. L.J. 682=40 Ind. Cas. 330, followed in 21 Cr. L.J. 753=58 Ind. Cas. 337. In 4 C.L.J. 418, pending a revision in the High Court and after a rule has been issued on the District Magistrate to show cause why his order should not be set aside, a Magistrate subordinate to the District Magistrate instituted fresh proceedings on the old materials. The High Court held that during the pendency of the rule in the High Court proceedings in the lower Court in the same matter must be considered to have been stayed and the institution of proceedings by a subordinate Magistrate was highly improper. The High Court can interfere in revision if after initiation of proceedings the Magistrate refuses to exercise jurisdiction without sufficient cause, 38 C. 24; 4 C.W.N. 799; 1931 A.W.N. 154. The High Court is entitled to require from the trying Magistrate a statement of his reasons for his decision, sufficient to enable the High Court to determine whether he has or has not complied with sub-section (4) of this section and whether he has directed his mind to the consideration of the effect of the evidence adduced, 39 C.L.J. 366. The possession of a receiver appointed under this chapter should properly be regarded as possession on behalf of the party who should ultimately be found by the Magistrate to be in possession, 22 M.L.J. 154. Where the Deputy Commissioner quashed the proceedings of a Deputy Magistrate without a full consideration of all the facts and without hearing all the objections, the High Court quashed the proceedings and sent it for fresh disposal, 13 C.W.N. 125=10 Cr. L.J. 860=4 Ind. Cas. 354.

Costs of proceedings under this section.—See notes under S. 148, infra. Proceedings under this section is a quasi civil case and according to the law as enacted in S. 148, infra, the successful party may recover his costs from his adversary in such a case, 8 C.W.N. 178. The costs contemplated as specified in sub-section (3) of S. 148 may include any expenses incurred in respect of witnesses and pleaders' fees which the Court may consider as reasonable, 27 Cr. L.J. 474=93 Ind. Cas. 693. The High Court has no power to award costs incurred before it when disposing of a Revision case against an order of the Magistrate under this chapter as S. 148, infra, empowers only the Magistrate passing a decision to award costs, 43 M. 262 (F.B.) but the Bombay High Court took a different view in 27 Bom. L.R. 1353=27 Cr. L.J. 661 (2)=94 Ind. Cas. 709 (2). Costs cannot be awarded as payable by a party who is not a party to the proceedings but can be made only with regard to the parties before the Court, 27 Cr. L.J. 21=91 Ind. Cas. 83.

Limitation for suits by unsuccessful party.—Article 47 of the second schedule to the Limitation Act, 1908, applies to a suit for possession of land in respect of which an order under this section has been passed even though the Magistrate acted illegally and with material irregularity provided the plaintiff had notice of the proceedings even though the notice was not served in due course of law. The suit must be brought within three years from the date of the order, 38 M. 432; 43 M.L.J. 372; 23 C. 731; 19 C. 646; 9 M.L.T. 91. Where a Hindu father acted as manager of the Joint family in proceedings under this section, the final order of the Magistrate is binding on all the other members of the family though they were not parties and a suit to recover possession of the property by a member after settling aside the Magisterial order is governed by Article 47 of the 2nd Schedule of the Limitation Act and must be brought within 3 years of the date of the final order, 55 M.L.J. (Sh. n) 14. The period of three years runs from the date of the order of the Magistrate and not from the date on which a rule issued by the High Court under S. 15 of the Charter Act was finally disposed of, 12 C.W.N. 340, 6 C. 709, and not from the date of attachment, 28 C. 680. The effect of the order of the Magistrate under the section is that on a failure by the unsuccessful party to sue, to get rid of the order in three years the successful party acquires title under S. 28 of the Limitation Act, 13 Ind. Cas. 24. See also 22 C.W.N. 342.

146. (1) If the Magistrate decides that none of the parties was then in such possession, or is unable to satisfy himself as to which of them was then in such possession of the subject of dispute, he may attach it until a competent Court has determined the rights of the parties thereto, or the persons entitled to possession thereof :

Power to attach subject of dispute.
Provided that the District Magistrate or the Magistrate who has attached the subject of dispute may withdraw the attachment at any time if he is satisfied that there is no longer any likelihood of a breach of the peace in regard to the subject of dispute.

(2) When the Magistrate attaches the subject of dispute, he may, if he thinks fit, and if no receiver of the property, the subject of dispute, has been appointed by any Civil Court, appoint a receiver thereof, who, subject to the control of the Magistrate, shall have all the powers of a receiver appointed under the Code of Civil Procedure.

Provided that, in the event of a receiver of the property, the subject of dispute, being subsequently appointed by any Civil Court, possession shall be made over to him by the receiver appointed by the Magistrate, who shall thereupon be discharged.

Amendment.—Provisos to sub-section (1) and sub-section (2) are new, and in sub-section (2) the words "if no receiver of the property, the subject of dispute, has been appointed by a Civil Court" have been newly added.

Scope of the section.—This section is a sort of corollary to the preceding section and its legality depends upon the strict observance of the provisions of the preceding section, i.e., the Magistrate holding an inquiry as to the fact of actual possession and finding either that none of the parties were in actual possession at the date of his preliminary order or that he was unable to decide as to which party was in such possession, 40 C. 105; 34 C. 840; 14 C.W.N. xci; 9 C.W.N. lxxv; 11 Cr.L.J. 90; 16 M.L.T. 52; Weir II, 108 and 110; 10 C.W.N. 1088; 11 C.W.N. 512; 17 C.W.N. 205. This section cannot be applied where the Civil Court has not only determined the rights of the parties but has also determined the possession so far as it was in its power to do, 43 A. 397. The jurisdiction of the Magistrate to attach property under this section arises only when he has made the inquiry contemplated by S. 145, infra, and considered the evidence produced by the parties and he cannot then satisfy himself as to which of the parties is in actual possession of the subject-matter in dispute, 15 Cr. L.J. 470; 24 Cr. L.J. 880=74 Ind. Cas. 80; 6 Bom. L.R. 723; 23 Cr. L.J. 117= Ind. Cas. An order of attachment made without recording evidence is bad in law, 32 C.W.N. 843. The Magistrate is neither called upon nor empowered to consider the question of rightful possession, 7 Bom. L.R. 18; 3 L.W. 164. An attachment can only be made after the Magistrate had made a reasonable effort varying, of course, with the circumstances of each particular case, to decide the question of possession. When under extraneous consideration and without considering the evidence a Magistrate attaches the property the order of attachment is bad, 24 Cr. L.J. 734=74 Ind. Cas. 258; 40 C. 105; 20 Cr. L.J. 17=43 Ind. Cas. 497; 27 C. 785; 22 C. 297; 14 C. 361; 9 C.W.N. 887; 16 M.L.T. 52; 17 Bom. L.R. 382; 7 Bom. L.R. 18; 6 Bom. L.R. 723; 16 Cr. L.J. 235=27 Ind. Cas. 911. When the Magistrate finds that neither party is in possession of the immovable and moveable property of a certain mull in dispute and there is a likelihood of a breach of the peace, he can attach the property both moveable and immovable under this section, the moveable property being appurtenant to the mull and therefore the attachment is valid 24 A.L.J. 383=27 Cr. L.J. 429=63 Ind. Cas. 157, following 1 Pat. L.J. 355=18 Cr. L.J. 287=38 Ind. Cas. 319. It should be held as a very important principle in cases under S. 145, supra, that a Magistrate should be extremely reluctant to attach property in dispute. Where land is admittedly subject year by year and season by season to cultivation, it is his duty to collect and sift the evidence and come to a conclusion as regards possession, 23 Cr. L.J. 1293=82 Ind. Cas. 366. An order of attachment made without recording his inability to find possession with either party is ultra vires, 27 Ind. Cas. 911. See 29 Cr. L.J. 861=111 Ind. Cas. 445. Where proceedings have been instituted in respect of two plots of land and the Magistrate found one plot to be in the possession, of one of the parties and with regard to the other attached the same, finding that both the parties were in possession held, that the order of attachment was ultra vires as this section had no application when parties were in joint possession the section applying only when the Magistrate finds that neither of the parties is in possession, 9 C.W.N. 887; 27 M.L.J. 169; 15 Cr. L.J. 572=25 Ind. Cas. 324. Where each of the parties had the keys of certain rooms in dispute and the Magistrate made an order of attachment under this section saying he was unable to find which of them was in possession his order was held bad, Weir II, 774 (2nd Ed). It was recently held by the Madras High Court that if the parties were in possession by turns, it was possible for the Magistrate to make an order under S 145, supra, by declaring who was in possession at the date of the preliminary order and consequently no attachment could be made; when land in dispute is not in the possession of two rival contending parties an order for attachment was held good, 5 C.W.N. 105. Once an order has been passed by a Court it can come to an end only in one or two circumstances, first being, that there is no longer any likelihood of a breach of the peace in regard to the subject of dispute, in which case the Magistrate would be justified in withdrawing the attachment at any time. Secondly, the Magistrate is competent to release the subject-matter of dispute from attachment if a competent Court has decided the rights of the parties thereto, 26 Cr. L.J. 1035=87 Ind. Cas. 975. See also 17 M.L.T. 332=16 Cr. L.J. 481=29 Ind. Cas. 321; 24 A.L.J. 399=27 Cr. L.J. 559=93 Ind. Cas. 1055. Where an attachment was raised by the lower Court relying solely on the entry in a record of rights, the High Court set aside the order and directed the land to be attached holding that the entry could at the most be treated as a presumptive evidence of a relation of landlord and tenant existing, but could not be considered as a final decision of a competent Court, 30 C.W.N. 616. It is obvious that orders of this sort attaching property might easily be turned to the prejudice of the party in actual possession, e.g., in a sham dispute between A and B when no evidence is offered by either party the Magistrate might proceed to attach the property and the person actually in possession might thereby be ousted, 24 W.R. (Cr.) 40. When one party is in possession of a portion but not in possession of the whole of the property in dispute and the effect of declaring possession was to place the party in possession of the portion in the possession of the other party, the proper order under the circumstances was to attach the whole property under this section, 22 C. 297. If the component parts of the subject-matter in dispute are distinct and separate, the Magistrate may, if necessary, deal with different parts separately, 5 C.W.N. 710. The jurisdiction of a Magistrate to act under this section is not ousted by the fact that he had passed a previous order under S. 107, supra, against the parties when he finds that neither party is in actual possession, 18 Cr. L.J. 1007=42 Ind. Cas. 735; 39 C. 150 (F.B.)

Unable to satisfy himself as to possession—The special provision of this section is not meant to relieve the Magistrate from his duty of deciding on the merits but only allows an order for attachment to be made, when it is impossible to decide which party is in possession, Weir II, 110. The doubt on which a Magistrate can act arises from his inability to decide on the evidence offered by the contending parties as to the actual possession and not on a doubt entertained without inquiry, 1 C.L.R. 273. Until the Magistrate has received and considered the evidence produced by the parties he has no power to attach the property in dispute under this section, 20 Cr. L.J. 117; 40 C. 103; Ind. Cas. 12 C.W.N. 896; 34 C. 840; Weir II, 110; 14 C.W.N. 80; 11 Cr. L.J. 90; 32 C.W.N. 843, 6 M.H.C.R. Appx. 4; 18 Cr. L.J. 357=39 Ind. Cas. 701. A summary order of attachment cannot be made without passing a preliminary order under S. 145, supra, 1 C.L.R. 86; 15 Cr. L.J. 470=24 Ind. Cas. 350; 16 M.L.T. 52; 30 C. 918; 40 C. 103. When a Magistrate is in an indecisive state of mind he should record a clear finding that he is unable to satisfy himself as to who is in possession of the subject of dispute at the date of his preliminary order and then proceed to attach the property if there is still an apprehension of a breach of the peace. A failure to record an express finding and consequent disregard of the express provision of the section are very much to be deprecated and failure to record a finding of a negative character is calculated to involve the order for attachment in obscurity and to the risk of being misunderstood 29 Cr. L.J. 861; 115 Ind. Cas. 445. Proceedings under this section are legal only if proceedings under S. 145, supra are legally and properly taken, 16 M.L.T. 42; 2 A.L.J. 139. An order for attachment made without examining any witness although a number of them were present in Court was invalid, 35 C.L.J. 291; 32 C.W.N. 843; (1922) Pat. 543=23 Cr.L.J. 277. When a Magistrate after refusing to grant time to a party to produce evidence heard the parties and being unable to satisfy himself as to which of them was in possession attached the subject-matter in dispute, it was held he acted without jurisdiction, 12 C.W.N. 896; 17 Bom. L.R. 382; 18 Cr. L.J. 413=33 Ind. Cas. 573. But it was held in 13 C.W.N. 80, distinguishing the decision in 12 C.W.N. 896, that when on the date fixed for filing written statement, both parties failed to appear before the Magistrate and to adduce evidence as to the fact of actual possession, an order under this section may be perfectly justifiable. In proceedings under S. 147, infra, instituted with regard to a dispute as to the right to use a well by turns the Magistrate cannot attach the well in dispute. 4 Cr. L. Rev. 474.

Decides that none of the parties was then in such possession.—The word "then" refers to sub-section (4) of S. 145, supra. The words "if possible decide" are very significant. To enable a Magistrate to make an order of attachment he must decide either that one of the parties was in possession as defined by S. 145, infra, or that he is unable to satisfy himself as to which of them was in possession. This is the plain meaning of the section apart from authorities and an order made without one or the other of these findings is without jurisdiction, 18 Cr. L.J. 557=39 Ind. Cas. 701. A Magistrate acting under this chapter unlike a Civil Court is not bound to come to a conclusion on the question of possession. The law says it is only when the Magistrate decides that none of the parties was in possession or is unable to satisfy himself as to which of them is in possession that he can attach the property under this section. When the Magistrate finds that neither party is in possession but a third party is in actual possession but he does not claim possession, the proper course is to attach the property, 20 Cr. L.J. 215=49 Ind. Cas. 778. When the Magistrate finds that both the parties were in possession by receipt of rent from tenants of different portions of the land in dispute, it was open to him to find that neither party was in possession, 1 C.L.J. 331; 9 C.W.N. 887. In the absence of information the Magistrate himself may hold a local inquiry under S. 148, infra, or in various ways may inform himself as to the facts of the case. He may send a Kanungoo out to the spot and make him submit a report or send for the headman of the village and ask him what the facts were. If he had done these, he would have fully armed himself with jurisdiction; but when he did nothing of the kind but passed the order "no evidence produced by either side, land attached" under S. 146 the order was set aside and attachment raised, 40 C. 103; 9 Cr. L.J. 272; 12 C.W.N. 893; 14 C.W.N. 80; 15 Cr. L.J. 470=23 Ind. Cas. 350. Such possession means actual possession from the date of the preliminary order under S. 145, 7 Bom. L. R. 18.

Competent Court.—Originally the expression was "Civil Court" and it was held in 15 A. 394 that the section did not give jurisdiction to pass an order of attachment of the subject-matter in dispute which would have to be determined in a Revenue Court. The words "competent Court" are not confined to mean only competent Civil Court. The words "competent Civil Court" occurred in the Code of 1882, but the word "Civil" was deliberately omitted in 1891 amendment. An order of a Revenue Court directing mutation to be made in favour of a certain person is an order of a competent Court within the meaning of this section, 46 A. 879. An order by the survey authorities under S. 41, Bengal Tenancy Act, has the force of Civil Court decree, 37 C. 331. This section is not exclusive and an attaching Magistrate has inherent power to release from attachment when the likelihood of a breach of the peace has disappeared and he cannot refuse to raise the attachment in such a case, holding that no competent Court had determined the rights of the parties, 1 Lah. 451. A Magistrate acts ultra vires in refusing to act up to the terms of a Civil Court's decree, 20 M.L.T. 247; 17 M.L.T. 392; 19 C.W.N. xci.

proviso to sub-section (1).—This proviso is new and empowers the District Magistrate or the Magistrate who attaches property to withdraw the attachment if he is satisfied without the parties obtaining the decision of a competent Court as to their rights, that there is no longer any likelihood of a breach of the peace in regard to the subject in dispute. This is a very salutary provision and the decision in, 2 Cr. L. Rev. 441, which held that a Magistrate who attached the property cannot review his order and raise the attachment is no longer law. It is open now to the Magistrate under this proviso to make over possession to any person he thinks fit. But he must exercise a judicial discretion in the matter of handing over possession. He is not bound to make over possession to anybody and there may be cases in which it is sufficient for him to make an order withdrawing the attachment and leave some party to take possession, but he is not bound to direct the receiver to hand over property without making over possession of the books of account to anybody and thus leave the party to scramble for the estate, 26 Cr. L.J. 1623=90 Ind. Cas. 925. Where a Sub-divisional Magistrate attached certain lands and appointed a receiver under this sub-section until a competent Civil Court decided the rights of parties, he cannot refuse to put the party who has succeeded in establishing his rights to the attached property in the Civil Court on the ground that the unsuccessful party was going to appeal from the Civil Court's decree and the order of the Magistrate refusing to put the successful party in possession is clearly without jurisdiction, 15 Cr. L.J. 500=24 Ind. Cas. 588. See also 20 M.L.J. 247=17 M.L.T. 392; 19 C.W.N. and xci.

Effect of Attachment—An attachment under this section connotes more than a Civil Court's attachment and implies the taking and keeping possession of the attached property by the Magistrate, 21 Cr. L.J. 73=54 Ind. Cas. 473; 3 Pat. L.J. 147. Although an attachment under this section interferes with the physical possession, it does not affect the legal rights of the parties concerned and the property under attachment is held for the person ultimately shown to be entitled to the same, 15 C.W.N. 163; 20 C.W.N. 431=22 C.L.J. 283=31 Ind. Cas. 242, where 30 M. 12 is followed. An attachment under this section operates in law for purposes of limitation, simply as a detention or custody of the property by the Magistrate who, pending the decision of a competent Court, holds it merely on behalf of the party entitled on the date of attachment, whether he be one of the actual parties to the dispute before him or any other. For purposes of limitation the seisin or legal possession will, during the attachment, be in the true owner, and the attachment will not amount to a disposssession of the owner. The Magistrate's possession is on behalf of the particular party who may be able to establish his right to possession in a competent Civil Court and the title of the true owner cannot be extinguished however long such attachment may continue, 26 M. 410; 10 M.L.T. 573; 28 C. 86; 32 C. 856. A magistrate is not entitled to treat the profits of the land attached as derelict and treat it as lapsing to Government, 12 Cr. L.J. 403=11 Ind. Cas. 557. A civil suit for mere declaration only under S. 42 of the Specific Relief Act will lie without asking for recovery of possession, 15 C.W.N. 758. If subsequent to the attachment by Magistrate the land is left waste, damages cannot be recovered by a successful party by a suit from the defendant, as the loss of produce was not the probable result of the defendant's act but the consequence of the Magistrate's order, 12 Cr. L.J. 14=9 Ind. Cas. 137; 14 C.W.N. 96; 6 M. 426. When a temple, the subject-matter of dispute, is attached, it does not necessarily follow that the temple is to be closed altogether. Weir II, 110 and 112. The Magistrate should after determination of the rights withdraw the order of attachment and release the property, 17 M.L.T. 392. An attachment cannot be kept in force merely on the ground that the unsuccessful party in the Civil Court intends to file an appeal, 15 Cr. L.J. 500=24 Ind. Cas. 588. A Magistrate is not entitled to retain in his hands the profits of the attached property 1913 A.W.N. 100, and can not treat it as derelict and treat it as having lapsed to Government when the parties had not gone to the Civil Court and obtained a decision, 1911 P.L.R. 123 but Magistrate is entitled to sell perishable articles after attachment of the property, 1 L.W. 1032. If a forest is attached, livestock such as cattle, elephants, etc., found in it can be kept under attachment, 1912 M.W.N. 540; 1 Pat. L.J. 356. On the passing of an order adjudicating rights with respect to the attached land the attachment should be raised, 37 C. 331. A Magistrate is not entitled after the decision of the Civil Court to withhold the profits of the attached property during the period of attachment, 1893 A.W.N. 103. After attaching the property the Magistrate is entitled to lease out the properties, 17 W.R. (Cr.) 35, or to cancel an existing lease and make other proper arrangements, 29 C. 331. After leasing out he is not precluded from proceeding under S. 107, infra, if an emergency arises. Where a Magistrate after attaching the property leased the lands to a lessee for a stipulated rent and a dispute arose between the said lessee and other rival claimants, it cannot be said that the Magistrate was precluded from proceeding against the lessee under S. 107, supra, as the lessee cannot claim any such exemption. The Magistrate was perfectly competent in spite of his letting out the land to one party to bind that party and the rival party to keep the peace if there is a likelihood of a breach of the peace, 18 Cr. L.J. 1007=42 Ind. Cas. 735.

Sub-section (2).—A receiver cannot be appointed before completing the inquiry under S. 145, supra, and such an order of appointment is ultra vires, 13 Cr. L.J. 535=15 Ind. Cas. 808. A Magistrate should on appointing a receiver under the section give him proper instructions with regard to the management of the property attached, 18 C.W.N. 1245. It is a well settled rule that as a matter of principle a person ought not to be appointed a receiver who has shown a partiality for one of the parties and that a party to the action should not be appointed unless by consent or unless there are special circumstances justifying his appointment in preference to others. The rule is not a technical one but is founded on the desire of the courts to see that the parties are placed on a footing of equality. A receiver is an officer of court and has to act under its directions and it is far less mischievous to appoint a party to a proceeding as a receiver than to place him exactly in the position which he would have occupied if an adverse order has not been made against him 28 Cr. L.J. 776=104 Ind. Cas. 104. The remuneration of a receiver appointed under the Code should not in any case exceed the net annual income realized by the receiver from the property in his custody and management, 27 Cr. L.J. 22=94 Ind. Cas. 54.

The words "and if no receiver of property, the subject of dispute, has been appointed by the Civil Court" have been newly added. The Magistrate may appoint a receiver only if no receiver is appointed by a Civil Court, and thus emphasising that it is the proper function of a Civil Court to appoint a receiver pending the civil suit instituted to adjudicate title to the property. The amendment removes the difficulty of two receivers being appointed, one by the Civil Court and the other by the Magistrate under this section.

The proviso newly added makes the intention of the Legislature very clear and restricts the power of the Criminal Court to appoint a receiver very much.

Revision.—The amendment newly made provides that orders under this section are subject to the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court for the restriction which existed before the amendment in S. 435 (3) has now been repealed but the High Court should not lightly interfere with an order under this section passed for the management of attached properties. The question is not one of want of jurisdiction now but the proper exercise of the discretion by the Magistrate and where the order passed offends against an elementary rule founded on the desire of the Magistrate to place both the contending parties on a footing of equality, the High Court can in revision set aside the order, 7 Pat. 1. When an order passed under this section is on the face of it ultra vires, the High Court will interfere in revision, 15 Cr. L.J. 600; 14 C. 361; 18 M. 14; 22 C. 297. When a Magistrate attached certain property and appointed a receiver under sub-section (2) of this section but refused to make over the property to the successful party in the District Court, on the ground that the other party was going to prefer an appeal his order was set aside as one made without jurisdiction, 15 Cr. L.J. 500=24 Ind. Cas. 588; when a Subordinate Magistrate attached certain lands and leased out the same but the District Magistrate cancelled the lease and made another arrangement for management, held, the High Court had no jurisdiction to revise the order of the District Magistrate, 29 C. 382.

For Form of warrant of attachment, See Form No. 23 of Sch. V, infra.

147. (1) Whenever any District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class is satisfied, from a police report or other information, that a dispute likely to cause a breach of peace exists regarding any alleged right of user of any land or water as explained in section 145, sub-section (2) (whether such right be claimed as an easement or otherwise), within the local limits of his jurisdiction, he may make an order in writing stating the grounds of his being so satisfied and requiring the parties concerned in such dispute to attend the Court in person or by pleader within a time to be fixed by such Magistrate and to put in written statements of their respective claims and shall thereafter inquire into the matter in the manner provided in section 145, and the provisions of that section shall, as far as may be, be applicable in the case of such inquiry.

(2) If it appears to such Magistrate that such right exists, he may make an order prohibiting any interference with the exercise of such right :

Provided that no such order shall be made where the right is exercisable at all times of the year, unless such right has been exercised within three months next before the institution of the inquiry, or where the right is exercisable only at particular seasons or on particular occasions, unless the right has been exercised during the last of such seasons or on the last of such occasions before such institution.

(3) If it appears to such Magistrate that such right does not exist, he may make an order prohibiting any exercise of the alleged right.

(4) An order under this section shall be subject to any subsequent decision of a Civil Court of competent jurisdiction.

Amendment.—This section which deals with disputes concerning easements, etc., has been re-drafted in order to make its meaning clearer. The principal changes introduced are—(1) the definition of the subject-matter in dispute has been modified so as to avoid difficulties which have been created by decisions raising doubts as to the applicability of the section, to rights not resembling easements or to rights acquired by contract; (2) the specific reference to the rights of way has been omitted as it has been questioned whether it may not, by implication exclude negative easements from the scope of the section; (3) the nature of the orders which a Magistrate may pass and their continuance pending the order of a competent Civil Court to the contrary have been clearly defined—St. of Obs. and Reas.

From a police report or other information.—These words are new. Before the amendment the word “as aforesaid” occurred in the section. Now the language in this and §. 145 supra, is identical. For commentaries see p. 223 supra.

Dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists.—Unless there are special circumstances giving rise to an apprehension of a breach of the peace there is no jurisdiction to make an order under this section, 23 Cr. L.J. 333=77 Ind. Cas. 289 For commentaries see p. 224 supra.

Scope of the section.—The words of the section as amended do not give the Magistrate any power of directing one of the parties to do a positive act by way of a mandatory injunction, say, directing a party to demolish a wall built by him. It seems that the power given to a Magistrate under this section is analogous to the power given to a Civil Court to grant a temporary injunction restraining a person from doing a certain act, but the section does not authorize the Magistrate to make an order in the nature of a mandatory injunction directing a party to perform a certain act. The order of the Magistrate may be declared erroneous by a Civil Court which grants a mandatory injunction with great care and caution. It was never intended that the Magistrate should exercise the power of making such an order by a summary procedure. Form No. 24, Sch. V, gives a form of the order under this section and it merely contains a direction that the person against whom it is made, shall not do certain things. The change in the wording of the section was made with a view to make it clear that the Magistrate has only the power to issue a prohibitory order restraining any person from doing any act of interfering with the right of another when the Magistrate finds that the right exists and no order can be passed, such as to demolish a wall put up, 30 C.W.N. 238=41 C.L.J. 568=26 Cr. L.J. 1265=88 Ind. Cas. 1041. This section is not confined as to the use of private property although S. 145 (1) supra is so confined but also relates to the use of a public street by one section which is resisted by another opposing section of the public, 51 M. 174. The provisions of this section are of an emergency character and are of a summary nature. The Magistrate is not to usurp the functions of a Civil Court. If a Magistrate on perusing the evidence produced holds that reasonable grounds have been shown that a bona fide claim of right exists, he is justified in passing such order, as he thinks fit, and it is unnecessary that full proof of the existence of the right claimed should be given, because the actual rights of the parties is for the Civil court to decide; 'such rights exist' mean such right as is claimed to exist, (1926) Pat. 187=27 Cr. L.J. 841=95 Ind. Cas. 761. A dispute concerning a right to take water from an artificial water channel for irrigation comes within this section. 20 Cr. L.J. 209=49 Ind. Cas. 769, but where there is a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace with regard to a bund put up in an irrigation channel, which one party alleges as having been newly put up by the opposite party to prevent his irrigating his land, the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to direct the removal of the bund but the proper order is to take action under S. 107 supra against both parties and leave them to have their right adjudicated by a Civil Court, 27 Cr. L.J. 801=95 Ind. Cas. 465, where the dispute between the parties is with regard to an existing and complete bund at the end of a bit and not with regard to a right to erect a bund, this section has no application but action is to be taken under S. 145 supra if there is a likelihood of a breach of the peace, 33 C.W.N. 1004 where 15 C.L.J. 267 and 4 C.W.N. 779 are distinguished. If a subject matter in dispute has already been adjudicated by a competent Civil Court, then clearly a Magistrate has no jurisdiction to inquire into the claim which is entirely contrary to the decree of the Civil Court, 29 Bom. L.R. 715=28 Cr. L.J. 578=102 Ind. Cas. 546, following 11 B. 584.

Regarding any alleged right of use of any land or water.—The words before the amendment were 'the right to use any land or water including any right of way.' The language of the section as it stood before the amendment was very much criticised in 5 C.W.N. 67 by Prinsep, J., as inartistic and meaningless. It was held in 4 M. 121 that a Magistrate has no jurisdiction to direct the removal of an obstruction as the proper course is to proceed under Chapter X of the Code for removal of an unlawful obstruction from a thoroughfare; but in 25 M.L.J. 233=15 M.L.T. 230=(1914) M.W.N. 394=15 Cr. L.J. 352=23 Ind. Cas. 780, it was held dissenting from 4 M. 121, that the fact that S. 183 supra, expressly provides for an order by the Magistrate directing the removal of obstruction to pathways did not necessarily imply that a similar order cannot be passed under this section. It was further held that the section applied both to public and private pathways. But see 39 C. 560. There is nothing to prevent a party claiming a pathway as a personal easement as well as public right. If the pathway is proved to be a public one then no question of easement arises, but if he fails to prove the public nature of the path, then he may prove his right of easement, (1926) Pat. 187=27 Cr. L.J. 841=95 Ind. Cas. 761. The words concerning the use of land cannot be altogether qualified and section construed as if it contained words that the user to which the dispute relates is a user by a party other than the person in possession. This is a very restricted construction. The alteration of the language of the section seems rather to enlarge the scope than restrict it, 15 M.L.J. 894=3 Cr. L.J. 31, where 4 C.W.N. 779 is disapproved and 11 C. 52; 7 M. 460 are referred to A dispute as to a right to enter a temple and officiate at a ceremony whenever necessary is a dispute within the scope of this section, 27 M.L.J. 587=16 M.L.T. 427=15 Cr. L.J. 671=5 Ind. Cas. 999; 48 M.L.J. 528=26 Cr. L.J. 1057=88 Ind. Cas. 2; 11 M. 323; 29 M. 237. But a mere right to perform pūja of an idol without any dispute as regards the temple or any land belonging to the idol, cannot be said to be a right of user of any land as explained in S. 145, supra, and therefore such a dispute cannot be considered as one coming under the provisions of this section, 52 C. 959. So also a dispute to collect offerings at a temple which dispute cannot be said to come within S. 145 supra 5 Pat. L.J. 246=21 Cr. L.J. 572=57 Ind. Cas. 92 following 38 C. 38. A right to worship at a particular grave does not exist, for example, at the grave of a Peer situated in the land of another person without whose express or implied permission, no Mahomedan can, under Mahomedan law utter prayers at such a grave on the land of another and therefore the ancillary right to go over the land to the grave cannot exist, (1925) Pat. 64=27 Cr. L.J. 44 (1)=91 Ind. Cas. 76 (1). Right to worship for one day in a year and the right to make due and proper preparation for the holding of that worship by erecting huts for the pūja is in the nature of an easement and comes within this section and not under S. 145, supra, 17 C.W.N. 205=13 Cr. L.J. 789=17 Ind. Cas. 553. So also a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace concerning a right to perform a religious ceremony in a mosque, 11 M. 323; 29 M. 237; 24 B. 527, but a contrary view was taken in 37 C. 578, which was dissented from in 27 M.L.J. 587. See 52 C. 959. A right to use a privy was held to be within the section, 15 Bom. L.R. 329=14 Cr. L.J. 400=20 Ind. Cas. 224. It is doubtful whether the right of using a highway is within the scope of this section. The carrying of a corpse along a highway is not an unlawful use of the highway except when danger to public health is occasioned thereby, and therefore an order preventing a Hindu funeral procession from passing along a highway to which the Mahomedans objected is bad in law, 7 M. 49; 6 M.L.J. 193; 6 M. 203. The expression 'land or water' as used in this section does not necessarily refer to private property as in S. 145 (1) supra. The right of the Hindus to use a public street, which user was asserted and exercised previously but had been resisted by the Mahomedans is within this section and a valid order prohibiting the Mahomedans can be made under this section, 51 M. 174 following, 26 M.L.J. 233 and 31 Ind. Cas. 367 and 7 M. 49 and 6 M.L.J. 193. This section in no sense authorizes a Magistrate to prohibit the use of a public highway by any class of persons unless he apprehends a breach of the peace which cannot be avoided without an order from him. But when no present breach of the peace is apprehended, no action can be taken under the section, 15 Cr. L.J. 291=23 Ind. Cas. 499. The right to drag a car in procession along a highway to a temple is a right of user of land within this section. 27 Bom. L.R. 1058=26 Cr. L.J. 1422=89 Ind. Cas. 846. A right of mooring boats and drying fishing nets by one party on the land of another, without any claim to the land is an easement right coming within this section and not under S. 145 supra, 21 Cr. L.J. 697=57 Ind. Cas. 937. The right to bury the dead in a burial ground is within this section and the Magistrate has to see whether the right which is exercisable on particular occasions was in fact exercised during the last of such occasions and improper use of a vacant portion of a burial ground for cultivation will not take away the right of persons entitled to bury their dead when occasion arises, 51 M. 522, no order can be passed under this section on proceedings taken under S. 193, supra. The two proceedings are entirely distinct, 15 C.W.N. 667=12 Cr. L.J. 43=9 Ind. Cas. 262.

Whether such right be claimed as an easement or not.—The language of the section is made very clear now. The claim to a pathway as an easement is not inconsistent with a public right of way. It is not necessary under this section to give full proof that a right exists. That is for a Civil Court to decide. The inquiry contemplated herein is more or less of a summary character and reasonable ground of a bona fide claim is to be shown; the Magistrate is not to usurp the functions of a Civil Court in a dispute under this section, (1925) Pat. 187=27 Cr. L.J. 841=95 Ind. Cas. 761. A Magistrate has power under this section to issue an order protecting persons exercising their right of taking water from a well when the right is threatened to be interfered with by others, 21 M.L.J. 430=

(1911) 1 M.W.N. 44. So also where the dispute relates to the right of the use of a well on two days out of every eight days, this section applies, not S. 145 supra, 4 Cr. L. Rev. 473; 21 M.L.J. 486=9 M.L.T. 209=(1911) 1 M.W.N. 44=11 Cr. L.J. 721=8 Ind. Cas. 843; but in disputes regarding easements the provisions of this section are to be used with care, as inquiries by Magistrate may lead to injustice being done by defective procedure which may involve complicated questions relating to rights of parties which can only be determined only by a Civil Court, 21 C. 727; 4 C.W.N. 779; 23 C. 557; the proper course for the Magistrate to adopt is to take action under Chapter VIII of the Code.

May make an order in writing.—Doubt was expressed in 21 C. 727 whether a Magistrate was bound to pass a preliminary order under this section also as he was bound to do under sub-section (1) of S. 145, supra. This doubt has now been cleared, by enacting "he may make an order" etc.; compare the language used in S. 145 (1), supra, "shall make an order in writing." It is only after serving the order on the parties concerned requiring them to attend the Court on a fixed date and put in their written statements of their claims that the Magistrate gets jurisdiction to inquire into the matter as provided in S. 145, supra.

Shall thereafter inquire in the manner provided in S. 145.—The inquiry contemplated by this section is an inquiry by the Magistrate and not by the police and the Magistrate cannot act on the result of a police inquiry, 53 C. 831. An order under this section is not bad merely because the Magistrate has not formally recorded a proceeding that there is likelihood of a breach of the peace. 27 M.L.J. 587 where 2 C.W.N. 670 is followed. What the section says is that he may make an order in writing and inquire in the manner provided by S. 145, supra. It may not be obligatory on him to record a formal proceeding stating the grounds or his being satisfied that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists before issuing process. The inquiry contemplated by this section is a judicial inquiry after due notice to the parties concerned and the Magistrate is to form a judicial opinion based upon evidence legally recorded by him in the manner provided by S. 356 infra, 21 C. 727; 2 C.W.N. 670. A person against whom proceedings are taken under this section is entitled to produce evidence to prove that the case does not fall within this section. In 19 M.L.J. 48, when objection was taken that the case did not fall within the section as the Magistrate made an order under S. 145, supra, without notice to the parties of his intention to proceed under this section and without a preliminary order under sub-section (1) of S. 145 supra, it was held that the Magistrate acted without jurisdiction.

Make an order prohibiting any interference of such right.—It was held by the Calcutta High Court in 5 C.W.N. 67 and 335, that the Magistrate was competent to direct the removal of an obstruction to the exercise of a right, but the Madras High Court held in Weir II, 119; Weir I, 153; that an order directing the removal of a fence so as to allow the use of a right of way cannot be passed under this section. But the section as amended authorizes the issue of a prohibitory order only and does not give a Magistrate any power of directing one of the parties to do a positive act by way of a mandatory injunction, e.g., to demolish a wall shutting out light and air of the other party. The power is analogous to the power given to the Civil Court to issue a temporary injunction restraining a person from doing an act interfering with the right of another, 30 C.W.N. 238=41 C.L.J. 568=26 Cr. L.J. 1265=88 Ind. Cas. 1041. In 26 M.L.J. 233, it was held that an obstruction to a private or public pathway could be ordered to be removed by the Magistrate under this section. In 13 Cr. L.J. 184=13 Ind. Cas. 1000. It was held that a Magistrate has power to invoke police assistance to carry out an injunction issued by him under this section to have an obstruction removed. But in 38 C. 923 it was held that this section contemplates orders directed to the parties to the dispute and does not enable the Magistrate to enforce his orders thereunder through the agency of the police, and that an order passed sometime after the termination of the proceedings under this section directing the removal of a bund by the police is without jurisdiction. This section does not enable a Magistrate to make a declaratory order but only enables him to forbid arbitrary interference of rights actually enjoyed, 5 C. 194. This section does not authorize a Magistrate to attach the subject of dispute, 5 Cr. L. Rev. 474.

If it appears that such right exists.—The words 'such right exists' mean such right as is claimed by the party, (1926) Pat. 187=27 Cr. L.J. 841=95 Ind. Cas 761 (2). An order under this section cannot be made without legal proof. An order passed solely on the written statement of one of the parties without recording some evidence in proof of the allegations contained in the statement is illegal even though the other party remains ex-parte, 30 C. 913, but when allegations of one party are admitted by the other party no evidence is necessary, 7 C.W.N. 351. Where the only evidence is that of user, it should be such as to show some considerable length of time. 4 M.H.C.R.; Appx. xxiv. In the absence of a finding that the right has been exercised within the period specified by this section the final order cannot be maintained, 25 Cr. L.J. 996=81 Ind. Cas 703, but where the non-exercise of the right within the period specified was due to circumstances beyond the control of the person claiming to exercise the right, this proviso cannot apply. 27 Bom. L.R. 1038=26 Cr. L.J. 1422=89 Ind. Cas. 845.

Proviso to Sub-section (2).—The inquiry contemplated by this proviso is the inquiry by the Magistrate and not the inquiry by the police and the magisterial inquiry begins when the proceedings are drawn up under this section. Where proceedings are drawn up more than 3 months after an alleged obstruction to a pathway, the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to proceed under this section, 53 C. 851. 'The institution of the inquiry' within the meaning of this proviso does not refer to the date when formal proceedings are drawn up by the Magistrate. Such an interpretation would make its working difficult. An inquiry is instituted within 3 months of the obstruction complained of by a party within the meaning of this section when the Magistrate hears the pleadings of the parties concerned in the dispute and directs a local inquiry within 3 months of the date of the obstruction even though the formal order is drawn up after the expiry of the period of three months and the words of the section are wide enough to justify this conclusion, 28 Cr. L.J. 1=99 Ind. Cas 33. When once the condition in this proviso as to the exercise of the right asserted is found the order is good and cannot be questioned in revision, 51 M. 174, but an order under this section is made without jurisdiction if it is made in the absence of a finding that the right was exercised within three months anterior to the inquiry, 14 Cr. L.J. 303=19 Ind. Cas. 359; 20 Cr. L.J. 558=51 Ind. Cas. 846. When a right which is exercisable only on particular occasions e.g. the right to bury dead bodies in a burial ground, what the Magistrate has to see is whether the right was exercised on last of such occasions and the fact that a portion of the burial ground was ploughed and sown is no ground for holding that the ground is not a burial ground and then finding it to be in the possession of the person who had ploughed and sown it and directing the continuance of possession, 51 M. 522. Under this section the Magistrate has no power of attaching the subject-matter in dispute, viz., a well, the right to use the water of which by turns was in dispute, the order of attachment of the well was held to be made without jurisdiction, 4 Cr. L. Rev. 474.

Sub-section (3).—This sub-section is new and enacts that if the Magistrate finds that the right claimed does not exist the Magistrate is entitled to make an order prohibiting the exercise of the alleged rights.

Sub-section (4).—This sub-section is new. When a competent Civil Court has given a decree as to the rights of the parties, the magisterial order is vacated. The sub-section expressly says that the order of the Magistrate under this section is subject to any subsequent decision of a competent Civil Court. See 2 C.L.J. 535 (F.B.) For Form of the order under this section See Form No. 24 of Sch. V, infra.

148. (1) Whenever a local inquiry is necessary for the purposes of this chapter, any District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate may depute any Magistrate subordinate to him to make the inquiry, and may furnish him with such written instructions as may seem necessary for his guidance, and may declare by whom the whole or any part of the necessary expenses of the inquiry shall be paid.

(2) The report of the person so deputed may be read as evidence in the case.

(3) When any costs have been incurred by any party to a proceeding under this chapter the Magistrate passing a decision under section 145, section 146, or section 147, may direct by whom such costs shall be paid, whether by such party or by any other party to the proceeding, and whether in whole or in part or proportion. Such costs may include any expenses incurred in respect of witnesses and of pleaders' fees which the court may consider reasonable.

Order as to costs.

Amendment.—The words "all costs so directed to be paid may be recovered as if they were fines" have been now omitted on account of the amendment in S. 547 infra, which deals with the recovery of all monies other than fines ordered to be levied under the provisions of the Code. The last portion of sub-section (3) is new and it is now made clear what legitimate costs are meant to be included within this section.

Whenever a local inquiry is necessary.—The local inquiry referred to in the section should be restricted solely to some question relating to the features of the property about which the dispute has arisen and not to any matter which can be proved before the Magistrate by oral evidence such as the question of actual possession. 3 C.L.R., 134 at 136. The rule that in criminal cases, courts are only justified in holding local inspection in order to explain the facts appearing does not apply to cases under S. 147, supra; nor is there anything in the law to prevent the presiding Magistrate making a local investigation himself provided he records what is said and does not act on hearsay evidence, 15 C.L.J. 267=12 Cr. L.J. 319=10 Ind. Cas. 615. An order of the Magistrate referring the case to a Magistrate subordinate to him for local inquiry under this section should point out how any local inquiry is necessary. Such reference cannot be made merely because a case of criminal trespass is pending before the subordinate Magistrate 3 M.L.T. 402=8 Cr. L.J. 153. Before a Magistrate begins to record evidence he may make a local inspection to see the exact lie of the land and its features and when he restricts his inquiry to those points and makes a note of the area, and prepares a plan and places it on record, he will not be acting outside his jurisdiction. 24 Cr. L.J. 507=72 Ind. Cas. 991; See also 24 Cr. L.J. 487=72 Ind. Cas. 951. The result of the local inquiry may be used to test the evidence recorded but the Magistrate cannot discard the evidence on what he may have seen and heard and inferred from such inquiry when there is nothing on record on that subject. If he does so he acts without jurisdiction, 10 C.W.N. 181. A Magistrate is entitled to inspect a place in order to understand the evidence but if he receives impression in favour of one party he should give an opportunity to the other party against whom he forms the impression to explain away, if possible, the impression created in his mind by his local inspection and if he without doing so, allows the impression created in his mind to outweigh the evidence on record, his proceedings will be set aside 54 M.L.J. 442=27 L.W. 654. The object of local inspection is to understand and appreciate the topography of the land in dispute, in order to aid the Magistrate in appreciating the evidence offered in Court. But the local inspection cannot take the place of legal evidence, much less the result thereof be used as a basis for the decision, 25 Cr. L.J. 412=77 Ind. Cas. 492; 25 Cr. L.J. 545=81 Ind. Cas. 33; 61 Ind. Cas. 712; (1921) Pat. 74.

May Depute any Magistrate Subordinate to him.—The power to depute does not necessarily imply that the Magistrate before whom the proceedings are pending may not himself hold the local inquiry as is provided for by this section, 5 C.W.N. 686. The duty of making the local inquiry should be deputed to a Magistrate and not to a Kanungo, 7 C.L.R. 352 but it was held in 12 Cr. L.J. 480=12 Ind. Cas. 88, that this section is an enabling section and the deputation of a Kanungo to make an investigation under this section is not bad under the general provision of law; anybody who has seen a place may be examined as to what he saw and the Kanungo may give evidence and his report is admissible under S. 157 Ind. Ev. Act to corroborate his sworn testimony. In 1 Pat. 75 it was held that a Magistrate, had no jurisdiction to direct a pleader as commissioner to hold a local inquiry and to receive in evidence a report submitted by him after completing the inquiry.

Furnish him with written instructions for his guidance.—The instructions contemplated herein, may include instructions to examine witnesses, inspection of the locality, time and place of inquiry or local inspection, the nature of the report to be submitted, the date on or before which proceedings are to be returned, etc.

The report may be read as evidence.—The Magistrate ought not to depute to a Subordinate Magistrate the whole investigation under S. 145, supra, but on receipt of the report of such Magistrate, he should himself take written statements from the parties and receive the evidence produced by them and conclude the investigation, Weir II, 118; 31 M. 82. The report is evidence without the Magistrate being called on to prove it. 1 Pat. 75. When an inquiry has been made and the result reported, it becomes part of the proceedings in the case and the party affected by it is entitled to be acquainted with the result thereof and to have an opportunity of rebutting the report of such inquiry if he thinks necessary, 21 W.R. (Cr.) 25.

Sub-section (3): Order as to costs.—Whether an order for costs is to be made in any particular case or not must depend on the facts of each case. The word used is the 'Magistrate may direct thereby,' indicating that a discretion is given to the Magistrate, 29 Cr. L.J. 957=111 Ind. Cas. 441. A Magistrate has power under this section to direct by whom any costs incurred by the parties in a proceeding before him under this chapter are to be paid. The costs include any expense incurred in respect of witnesses and pleaders, fee which is considered reasonable and these items can be awarded as costs, 8 Lah. 47 costs cannot include penalty paid by a party on a document not properly stamped, 13 M.L.T. 224=144 Cr. L.J. 210=19 Ind. Cas. 306. The costs referred to in this section are evidently the costs incurred in the Magisterial proceedings. This sub-section gives a wide discretion to the Magistrate for awarding and assessing costs but his jurisdiction is limited to the costs which might have been incurred and admissible under the much wider provisions of the Code as to costs incidental to the proceedings. The words 'which the Court may consider reasonable,' are very significant. All costs incurred cannot be awarded. The whole of the pleader's fee certified cannot be allowed unless the Court considers the sum to be reasonable, otherwise a rich party by the employment on high fees of pleaders or counsel from a distance might effectively prevent a poorer party from taking part in the proceedings lest he might have, in the case of an adverse finding against him have to pay an enormous bill of costs incurred by the opposite party nor should costs include additional costs for extra fees and travelling and other expenses etc., incurred by bringing a pleader from a distance, 9 C.W.N. 837, 14 C.W.N. 1xiii 21 Cr. L.J. 625=57 Ind. Cas. 449. It cannot include the expense for cutting crops which have been incurred, 32 C. 602. The Magistrate should not arbitrarily decide what the costs should be (1922) Pat. 564; 23 Cr. L.J. 508. Power to award costs is a good deal restricted now, and can be exercised with regard to parties to the proceeding only, 27 Cr. L.J. 21=93 Ind. Cas. 53. A wide discretion is given to the Magistrate to award costs by this section and with the exercise of that discretion the High Court will not ordinarily interfere in revision, 13 Cr. L.J. 297=14 Ind. Cas. 761.

The Magistrate passing a decision may direct.—As to the mode of recovery, see S. 547, infra S. 336 only refers to cases where there has been a conviction and sentence of which fine forms a part, 24 Cr. L.J. 126=71 Ind. Cas. 254. A dismissal for default is not such a "decision" as is referred to in this section as will entitle a Magistrate to award costs and the order made was set aside as one passed without jurisdiction, 4 Cr. L. Rev. 253. An order allowing proceedings initiated under S. 145, supra to be withdrawn is not a "decision" within the meaning of this section and an award of costs is illegal and made without jurisdiction, 9 M.L.T. 324=12 Cr. L.J. 49=8 Ind. Cas. 239, but in, 29 Cr. L.J. 837=111 Ind. Cas. 441, a different view was taken and 9 M.L.T. 324 was dissented from holding that a final irrevocable order staying proceedings initiated under S. 145, supra, indicated that a Magistrate has applied his mind to the case and had arrived at a conclusion on the evidence placed before him that no dispute exists justifying his continuing the proceedings and thus destroying the proceedings altogether. In such a case it is a decision by the Magistrate that no dispute exists. Sub-section (5) of S. 145, supra, does not prevent the Magistrate from arriving at that decision without recording evidence whatever by acting on the admissions of a party who wishes to withdraw the proceedings that no dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists and the Magistrate acting on such admission allows the withdrawal of the proceedings decides no dispute exists. So he is competent to pass an order as to costs under this section. This appears to be within the express provisions of the statute and the intention of the Legislature and to hold otherwise would lead to manifest inconvenience and injustice. The award of costs should be made by the Magistrate at the time of passing his decision, yet the fact that costs were awarded subsequently would not render the award invalid especially where the circumstances of the case necessitated the postponement of the question, 29 M. 373; 16 L.W. 613; 24 Cr. L.J. 80=71 Ind. Cas. 128. An order as to costs does not become illegal simply because it was not made at the time of pronouncing judgment in the proceedings under Chapter XII, 29 M. 373; 23 C. 37; 24 C. 757; 21 C. 609; 11 Cr. L.J. 335=5 Ind. Cas. 943; in 47 C. 974 it was held that an order under this section although it may be made subsequent to the passing of the judgment must be made by the Magistrate who originally disposed of the case. There it was pointed out that an application for costs which is not made at the time of pronouncing the order ought to be made within a reasonable time and should be based on proper materials vis., the actual costs incurred as pleader's fee and cost of witnesses, 30 Cr. L.J. 252=114 Ind. Cas. 193 following 21 Cr. L.J. 625=57 Ind. Cas. 449. Such an order will be good if it is made within a reasonable time while the same Magistrate is sitting and after notice to the parties and allowing them an opportunity of being heard, 22 C. 384 and 387; 23 C. 757 47 C. 974; 15 C.W.N. 649=15 C.L.J. 267=12 Cr. L.J. 319=16 Ind. Cas. 615. But if made without notice and without giving the party an opportunity of contesting the award, the order is one made without jurisdiction, 28 C. 302; 24 Cr. L.J. 80=71 Ind. Cas. 128. The order ought to be made only in the presence of both parties, 10 C.W.N. 1030; 12 C.W.N. ccvii; 13 C.W.N. clxxx. If at the time of passing the decision the Magistrate awarded costs, there is no objection to the amount or such costs being assessed afterwards by his successor, 22 C. 384 and 387; 23 C. 37; (1913) M.W.N. 771; 27 M.L.J. 613=16 M.L.T. 218=(1914) M.W.N. 790=15 Cr. L.J. 676=23 Ind. Cas. 1004; 21 C. 609. The assessment of costs by a separate order after hearing parties is not illegal if provision for costs is made at the time of passing the order, (1913) M.W.N. 771=14 M.L.T. 195=21 Ind. Cas. 170. A successor can not pass an order for costs when the predecessor's order is silent, 11 Cr. L.J. 335=5 Ind. Cas. 943; but it is settled law that provided the trying Magistrate has made an order as to costs his successor is competent to assess the same, if an application for assessment is made within a reasonable time, 23 C. 37; 22 C. 384 and 387; 29 M. 373; 27 M.L.J. 613; 10 C.W.N. 1030; 23 C. 302. This section evidently contemplates costs incurred in the Magisterial proceedings. When the High Court sits in revision it is not exercising the powers of a Magistrate under this chapter and therefore the costs in the revision proceedings cannot be included. The question whether the High Court exercising its powers of revision has inherent power to award costs to the successful party has been settled by the Full Bench decision, 45 M. 913. It is true that S. 261-A infra has been newly enacted to save the inherent powers of the High Court. But the Court cannot by invoking its inherent powers extend the powers given to it by the statute; nor can the award of costs be treated as incidental or consequential to the disposal of a revision petition within the meaning of S. 423 (1) (d), infra, for it does not necessarily follow from an order passed in revision, 45 M. 262 (F.B.). The Bombay High Court in 27 Bom. L.R. 1353 has taken a different view and held that the High Court can award costs in a revision petition under S. 145 supra.

Revision—The High Court is now empowered under S. 439 infra, to revise orders as to costs, the restriction which existed in S. 435 (3) having been removed. The High Court will not interfere in revision with an order under this section on the ground that the costs are either deficient or excessive, 15 C.W.N. 811; 17 Cr. L.J. 339=35 Ind. Cas. 515; 43 C. 1143. A wide discretion to award costs is given to a Magistrate by this section, and the High Court has no power in revision to interfere with the exercise of that discretion by the Magistrate if exercised properly, 9 C.W.N. 887. See also 13 Cr. L.J. 297=14 Ind. Cas. 761. In the absence of materials to show that the assessment of costs was not proper the Court refused to interfere in revision, 28 M.L.J. 134=16 Cr. L.J. 156=27 Ind. Cas. 220.

CHAPTER XIII.

PREVENTIVE ACTION OF THE POLICE.

149. Every police-officer may interpose for the purpose of preventing, and shall, to the best of his ability, prevent the commission of any cognizable offence.

Police to prevent cognizable offences.

Police-officer may interpose for the purpose of preventing.—S. 151 infra empowers a police-officer to arrest without warrant if it appears to him that the commission of an offence cannot be otherwise prevented, and S. 60 supra lays down the subsequent procedure to be adopted by him. See S. 55 supra, which empowers officers in charge of police stations to arrest, for the purpose of restraining bad characters to prevent commission of crimes.

Cognizable offence.—For definitions see S. 4 (1) (f) supra. See Sch. II infra as to what offences are cognizable.

150. Every police-officer receiving information of a design to commit any cognizable offence shall communicate such information to the police-officer to whom he is subordinate, and to any other officer whose duty it is to prevent or take cognizance of the commission of any such offence.

Information of design to commit such offences.

Information of a Design to commit.—This section relates to the design to commit a cognizable offence and not to the actual commission of such an offence.

Shall communicate such information.—Every police officer is bound to give information to his superior officer of the design to commit a cognizable offence and his failure to do so is an offence punishable under S. 176 I.P.C. He is also bound to give information to any other officer whose duty it is to prevent or take cognizance of the commission of such an offence, e.g. an officer in charge of a police station ought to be informed of the design to commit a cognizable offence within the limits of the station.

151. A police-officer knowing of a design to commit any cognizable offence may arrest, without orders from a Magistrate and without a warrant, the person so designing, if it appears to such officer that the commission of the offence cannot be otherwise prevented.

Arrest to prevent such offences.

Knowing of a Design.—The word used is "knowing;" mere suspicion is of no avail. See S. 157 infra, as to the procedure to be adopted when a cognizable offence is suspected.

May Arrest without warrant—Under S. 62, supra, all arrests made without warrant under this section must be reported to the District or Sub-Divisional Magistrate. After arrest the provisions of Ss. 60 to 63, supra, should be followed. A Police-Officer may also arrest any person obstructing him while in the execution of his duty under S. 54 (1) fifth clause, supra.

152. A police-officer may of his own authority interpose to prevent any injury attempted to be committed in his view to any public property, moveable or immovable, or the removal or injury of any public landmark, or buoy, or other mark used for navigation.

Prevention of injury to public property.

Scope of the section.—This section is intended to prevent injury to public property made punishable under Ss. 420 to 423, I.P.C., and the Police officer can arrest without a warrant as the offence is a cognizable one. If not cognizable, he must apply for warrant authorizing him to arrest. He is entitled to arrest under S. 54 (1) cl. 5, if he is obstructed in the execution of his duty. If the injury is already committed and the offence is non-cognizable, the Police-officer under S. 24 of Act V of 1861 (Police Act) can only take the name and address of the offender with a view to prosecute the offender.

153. (1) Any officer in charge of a police station may, without a warrant, enter any place within the limits of such station for the purpose of inspecting or searching for any weights or measures or instruments for weighing, used or kept therein, whenever he has reason to believe that there are in such place any weights, measures or instruments for weighing, which are false.

Inspection of weights and measures.

(2) If he finds in such place any weights, measures or instruments for weighing which are false, he may seize the same, and shall forthwith give information of such seizure to a Magistrate having jurisdiction.

Officer in charge of a police-station.—For definition, see S. 4 (1) (p) supra.

Within the limits of such station.—The power is to be exercised by the officer within the limits of his station and not outside. Chapter XIII, I.P.C., deals with offences relating to weights and measures. See Act XXXI of 1871 which relates to weights and measures of capacity and S. 11 of the Act empowering rules to be framed.

This section does not apply to the Police in the Towns of Calcutta and Bombay. In Madras Act, III of 1888, S. 12 empowers the Commissioner of Police to keep in his office Standard weights and measures.

Give information of seizure to a Magistrate having jurisdiction.—See Sch. II, Col. 8 and Chapter XIII, I.P.C. offences relating to weights and measures. The Magistrate having jurisdiction as specified in Col. 8 of Sch. II is a Presidency Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first or second class.

PART V.

INFORMATION TO THE POLICE AND THEIR POWERS TO INVESTIGATE.

CHAPTER XIV.

154. Every information relating to the commission of a cognizable offence, if given orally to an officer in charge of a police-station, shall be reduced to writing by him or under his direction, and be read over to the informant; and every such information, whether given in writing or reduced to writing as aforesaid, shall be signed by the person giving it, and the substance thereof shall be entered in a book to be kept by such officer in such form as the Local Government may prescribe in this behalf.

Information in cognizable cases.

Information.—The word 'Information' is not defined in the Code. The information contemplated by this section is a statement made by informants of their own initiative and before the commencement of the investigation. This will be the first step for commencing an investigation. A telegram received by a police officer informing him of the commission of a cognizable offence is not information recorded under this section. In the first place it is difficult to see how the telegram can be a statement contemplated in this section. Such statement, if orally given, has to be reduced to writing and read over to the informant and if it is given in writing signed by the person giving it. Here it was not certainly reduced to writing from an oral statement nor is it a writing given to the Police signed by the person making it. It cannot therefore be the document referred to in this section, 55 M.L.J. 231—29 Cr. L.J. 717—110 Ind. Cas. 461. Information on which an investigation has commenced is the first information of the occurrence. The law does not contemplate that when in the course of investigation something has been elicited; a first information can thereon be recorded. In every trial it is important that it should be known to the judicial officer what are the facts given out immediately after the occurrence and reported to the police and the object of the first information is to make him so acquainted. In addition to the entry of the first information in the diary, if the police-officer makes any memorandum of what the first informant said, that memorandum should be produced, 7 C.W.N. 345; 21 Cr. L.J. 486—56 Ind. Cas. 532. Where A gave information of the Commission of arson to a village headman who under B. 45, supra reported the same to the police, and a police-officer came to the village and took a statement from A, it was held that A's statement was one taken under this section, 28 M. 565, but a different view was taken in 31 M. 506 where it was held that such statement was one taken under S 162 infra. The Full Bench decision in 32 M. 258 did not approve of the decision in 31 M. 506 and drew a distinction between cases where the village headman was bound by law (S. 45 supra) to pass on the information and in cases where he was bound to report to the police or to the Magistrate and in the former class of cases, any statement taken by the police-officer from the person who gave the statement to the police will be treated as information to the police under this section. The object of a first information being to show what was the manner in which the occurrence was related when the case was first started, it should always be carefully and accurately recorded, 11 C.W.N. 554 at 566. The law requires that the first information should be the statement of the person himself giving the information, and it becomes valueless if it is drawn up by some one other than the proper informant. A statement recorded several days after the commencement of the investigation and after there had been some development, is not only no first information but has very little or no value at all, 25 M.L.T. 379; 11 C.W.N. 554 and 7 C.W.N. 343; 27 Cr. L. J. 121=91 Ind. Cas. 697. First information report is information received under this section. It is not information received after the commencement of the investigation which comes under Ss. 161, and 162 infra. It is information on the initiative of an informant on which an investigation is commenced and which, though not substantive evidence is yet of acknowledged value, because it shows the material on which the investigation commenced and the manner in which the occurrence was related when the case was first started. It may be used to corroborate or contradict the author of it. The first information is the basis of the case and whether it be true or false it, at any rate, usually represents what is intended by the informant to be the case set up by him at the time. In view of the notorious tendency in this country to improve upon the original statement of facts, to strengthen the case as it proceeds, and sometimes to add to the persons originally named as offenders, it is of great importance to know what was said in the first instance, 30 Cr. L.J. 38 at 39=112 Ind. Cas. 902 following 17 C.W.N. 1213=14 Cr. L.J. 632=21 Ind. Cas. 882. The statement of a person recorded under this section as first information can be proved only to corroborate that person's evidence in Court under the provisions of S. 157 of the Ind. Ev. Act or to impeach his credit under S. 145 Ind. Ev. Act but it cannot be used as substantive evidence against the maker who is subsequently charged with the offence, 29 Cr. L.J. 277=107 Ind. Cas. 701. The statement which is not substantive evidence can only be used to contradict the maker thereof. It cannot be used to contradict various other witnesses whose evidence is all uniform 29 Cr. L.J. 343=108 Ind. Cas. 162 referring to 8 Lah. 605. See also 29 Cr. L.J. 734 (2)=110 Ind. Cas. 596 (2). The first information is always of great importance in a criminal case and where it has been made a considerable time after the occurrence and by a person who knew the facts well, no person whose name is not disclosed in it should be convicted, 11 Cr. L.J. 93=4 Ind. Cas. 980. A first information drawn up by a police-officer and finally settled by an attorney is not a first information within this section, 16 C.W.N. 146=13 Cr. L.J. 65=13 Ind. Cas. 721. The first information if recorded as directed by this section at the time it is made is of considerable help at the trial because it shows on what materials the investigation commenced and what was the story then told, 11 C.W.N. 554. The first information is the first step in the proceeding, 32 M. 238. The report made at a Police Station of the Commission of an offence reduced to writing and entered in the station diary is alone first information and subsequent statement made by the informant to the police is only statements made in the course of police investigation and therefore wholly inadmissible in evidence and cannot be treated as first information, 21 Cr. L.J. 743=58 Ind. Cas. 247. First information under this section is not a statement under S. 162 infra, and is therefore not excluded from formal evidence, 54 C. 237 followed in 30 Cr. L.J. 38=112 Ind. Cas. 902. First information is what is given first to the police in point of time whoever the informant may be, and not what the police may select and record as first information, 8 C.W.N. 218; 8 C.W.N. 921; 7 C.W.N. 343; 47 A. 280. Statements made in the course of investigation can be proved only by examining the police-officer to whom the statement was made, 22 Cr. L.J. 410=81 Ind. Cas. 630. First information report, is the well known technical description of a report under this section giving first information of a cognizable crime which is usually made by the complainant or some one on his behalf. The language is inapplicable to a statement made by the accused, 23 Cr. L.J. 490=77 Ind. Cas. 890. Mere absence of detail in the first information report as compared with the subsequent statements of the same person as a witness is no ground for discrediting his evidence given as a witness nor can the prosecution case be discredited on account of the delay in giving the first information provided the delay is explained, 8 Lah. 803.

Relating to the commission of a cognizable offence.—The offence may have been committed within or without the local limits of the particular police station. See Ss. 155-157 as to local limits of police station. See also S. 4 (1) (q). supra, as to definition of cognizable offence.

If given orally.—An information under this section could be given either orally or in writing; if given orally, the police-officer is required to record it and every such information whether given in writing or reduced to writing requires to be signed by the person giving it. Such information forms the basis upon which the investigation under this chapter commences. A police-officer making an investigation has power under S. 160, infra, to require the attendance of witnesses who appear to be acquainted with the circumstances of the case and examine them. Such persons are bound to attend and are bound to answer all questions relating to the case, other than questions the answers to which would incriminate them. S. 162 lays down that no statements made by a person to a police-officer in the course of such investigation shall, if reduced to writing be signed by him, 3 Ran. 577.

A police-officer is bound to receive a complaint when it is preferred to him or where the commission of an offence is reported to him orally he is to take down the complaint in writing. But a suit for damages cannot be maintained against a police-officer merely because he refused to receive a complaint of theft preferred to him. If he fails to perform his duty as a public servant, he does not render himself liable for damages, but can only be dealt with by his superior officer for neglect of duty, 49 M.L.J. 450=89 Ind. Cas. 945.

To an officer in charge of a police station.—For definition of an officer in charge of a police station, see S. 4 (1) (p), supra.

Shall be reduced to writing.—An information to a police-officer should not be made on oath. If it is false it cannot be made the subject of a charge under S. 193, I.P.O., but it might come under S. 182 or 211, I.P.O., but if the person giving the information is examined under S. 161, infra, he will be liable under S. 193, I.P.O., if he has intentionally given a false statement, S. B. 216. But a statement, recorded by the police-officer under S. 161 cannot be treated as information given to the police under this section and is false punishable under S. 182, I.P.O. The word "give" in S. 182, I.P.O., does not bear the restricted meaning of the word "volunteer," 3 Ran. 577. The complaint or information reduced to writing forms part of the first information report. The writing containing the first information is not a judicial record and is no evidence of the existence of facts mentioned therein, 1897 A.W.N. 47.

Shall be signed.—A person giving the information is to sign the statement reduced to writing unlike Ss. 161 and 162 infra, and refusal to sign is punishable under S. 180, I.P.O.

Entered in a book to be kept by such officer.—This book is the general diary also known as "the station diary" or "station-house register" kept under S. 44, Act V of 1861. Under S. 172 (2), infra, any Criminal Court may send for police diaries of a case under inquiry or trial in any such Court and may use such diaries not as evidence in the case but to aid it on such inquiry or trial; neither the accused nor his agent shall be entitled to call for such diaries nor shall he or they be entitled to see them merely because they are referred to by the Court; but if they are used by the Police-Officer who made them to refresh his memory or if the Court uses them for the purpose of contradicting such Police-Officer the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, S. 145 or S. 161 shall apply. The Code is silent as to what a Station House Officer should do when he receives information as to the commission of an offence outside his station. There is nothing to prevent him from receiving and recording the information though he may not have power to investigate, 13 Cr. L.J. 622 = 3 Cr. L. Rev. 245=25 Ind. Cas. 630. A false entry in the station diary is punishable under S. 177, I.P.O., 20 A. 151.

- 155. (1) When information is given to an officer in charge of a police-station of the commission within the limits of such station of a non-cognizable offence, he shall enter in a book to be kept as aforesaid the substance of such information, and refer the informant to the Magistrate.

Information in non-cognizable cases.

(2) No police-officer shall investigate a non-cognizable case without the order of a Magistrate of the first or second class having power to try such case or commit the same for trial, or of a Presidency Magistrate.

Investigation into
non-cognizable cases.

(3) Any police-officer receiving such order may exercise the same powers in respect of the investigation (except the power to arrest without warrant) as an officer in charge of a police-station may exercise in a cognizable case.

Object of the section.—The object of the Legislature in enacting this section is to allow aggrieved persons direct access to justice without the intervention of the Police. This is the only section in Chapter XIV of the Code which applies to the Police in Calcutta, 15 C. 595 at 606 (F.B.); it also applies to the Police in the town of Bombay, 21 B. 495.

Non-cognizable offence.—For definition of non-cognizable offence, see S. 4 (1) (n), supra.

Shall enter in a book to be kept as aforesaid.—This book is what is called the Station or general Diary. See in this connection, 20 A. 151.

Refer the informant to the Magistrate.—The Police-Officer receiving the information can now submit a report to the Magistrate in non-cognizable cases and Magistrates are entitled to take cognizance of non-cognizable offences upon police reports without examining the police-officer on oath, 49 M. 523 (F.B.) followed in 23 Cr. L.J. 821=104 Ind. Cas. 437; 25 Cr. L.J. 1361=82 Ind. Cas. 753; 29 Bom. L.R. 742=28 Cr. L.J. 939=105 Ind. Cas. 439. If the alleged offence had been committed in his view, and he makes a formal report, it was held that it will amount to a complaint as defined in S. 4 (1) (h), supra, 26 B. 150 (F.B.). In 6 M.L.T. 239=11 Cr. L.J. 156=4 Ind. Cas. 1043, it was held that when on a certain information received, the police finding that the facts disclosed a non-cognizable offence, reported the case to the Presidency Magistrate for orders under sub-section (2) of this section, it was competent for them to do so under sub-section (2) and the Magistrate had jurisdiction to pass orders without first taking cognizance of the case in one of the three ways mentioned in S. 190, infra. See also 11 A.L.J. 331. This section deals only with powers of a police-officer. It confers no power on Magistrates to direct a local investigation by the police or to call for a police report 12 B. 161; but such a power to order an investigation is conferred in cognizable cases on Magistrates empowered under S. 190, infra, by S. 136 (3), infra. A Magistrate is competent to order an investigation under this section when he receives a police report in a non-cognizable case if he has reason to doubt its correctness, 16 Cr. L.J. 97=27 Ind. Cas. 145. If a Magistrate not being empowered erroneously and in good faith orders a police investigation in a non cognizable case his proceedings shall not be void, S. 529 (b), infra.

Or of a Presidency Magistrate.—This is the only section in this chapter which applies to the police in Calcutta. But this section is not sufficient to amount to a provision that the whole chapter is applicable to the police in Calcutta or to give them any power to make an investigation under it 15 C. 595 at 606. See also 52 C. 67; 5 Pat. 171, 54 C. 218.

156. (1) Any officer in charge of a police-station may, without the order of a Magistrate, investigate any cognizable case which a Court having jurisdiction over the local area within the limits of such station would have power to inquire into or try under the provisions of Chapter XV relating to the place of inquiry or trial.

cognizable cases.

(2) No proceeding of a police-officer in any such case shall at any stage be called in question on the ground that the case was one which such officer was not empowered under this section to investigate.

(3) Any Magistrate empowered under section 190 may order such an investigation as above-mentioned.

Scope of the section—This section is not limited in its application to offences only, but extends also to matters mentioned in S. 55, supra, dealing with the arrest of bad character, etc. The reference in this section to Chapter XV, infra, is only as to the venue, 1893 A.W.N. 124.

Officer in charge of a police-station.—For definition, see S. 4 (1) (g), supra.

Investigate any cognizable case.—For definition of "investigation" and "cognizable offence," See S. 4 (1) (f) and supra. Having regard to the definition of judicial proceeding in S. 4 (1) (m), supra, the investigation by a police-officer is not in any stage a judicial proceeding, as he has no power to record evidence on oath and though persons examined by him are bound to answer under S. 161 (2) all questions put to them, yet they are no longer bound to answer truly.

Within the local limits of such station.—Under this section the local limits within which an officer in charge of a police-station can investigate is defined. No provision is made here for an indiscriminate power of such an officer to enter houses in the neighbourhood of the place where a cognizable offence may have been committed. The only authority which a police officer making an investigation has to enter a house without a search warrant is when he has reasonable grounds for believing that anything necessary for purposes of an investigation into an offence which he is authorized to investigate may be found in any place within the local limits of the station he is in charge. Obviously the search indicated here is for stolen property or some other document or some tangible object such as may be summoned to be produced by a Court under S. 94, supra, 26 A.L.J. 410=29 Cr.L.J. 272=107 Ind. Cas. 683.

Sub-section (3).—This sub-section enables a Magistrate who under S. 190, infra, can take cognizance of an offence, to order a police investigation if it is a cognizable case. An order by a Sessions Judge directing the police to make an inquiry under this section is ultra vires, 11 Cr. L.J. 330=5 Ind. Cas. 915. Under S. 202, a local investigation by the police may be ordered only after the examination of the complainant, and before issue of process to the accused, here a reference could be made to the police before examining the complainant and the issue of process, 9 M. 282. This sub-section is not intended to provide an alternate procedure to that laid down in S. 200, which finds a place in Chapter XVI and not in Chapter XIV which deals with the procedure and powers of the police, 10 M.L.T. 120=12 Cr. L.J. 463=11 Ind. Cas. 999=(1911) 2 M.W.N. 74. After he has issued process the Magistrate has no power to refer the case to the police for inquiry and report and the police inquiry so started would be illegal, 30 Cr. L.J. 326=114 Ind. Cas. 365. But it was held in 8 Bom. L.R. 589 and 30 C. 923 that under this sub-section the Magistrate may direct the police to investigate, and upon receipt of the police report may hold a judicial inquiry himself under S. 150, infra, without proceeding under this Chapter. It is the duty of the committing Magistrate, and falling him, of the Sessions Judge to inquire fully into the circumstances of the delay in the investigation of the police and to consider its bearing on the prosecution story, 2 Bom. L.R. 1092. This sub-section cannot have any application to a case where a District Magistrate taking cognizance under S. 200, infra, directs a police investigation under S. 202, infra and orders that if the charge is made out to file a charge sheet before a competent Magistrate without himself passing an order under S. 204, infra, or direct a transfer under S. 192, infra, 54 C. 303 referred to in 31 Bom. L.R. 86.

Chapter V, Ss. 1, 129, p. 89. Orders of the Madras Police, give the form showing the proper procedure under the Code on receipt of a of the commission of a cognizable offence and on receipt of an order investigate a non-cognizable offence.

CIRCUMSTANCES.

Cognizable Cases.

proviso (a)]

2. The facts do not appear to constitute an offence, or in cases of a petty nature, there is no chance of procuring any evidence so that the Police think that there is no necessity for entering on investigation [Proviso (b), S. 157, Cr. P. C.]

3. Accused arrested on sufficient grounds. Investigation cannot be completed within 24 hours.

(a) On completion of the investigation, the case is found to be true.

(b) On completion of the investigation, the case is found to be false.

4. On completion of the investigation, the case is found to be true, the Police have done all in their powers to find the offender or offenders and have failed.

5. The accused arrested. Inquiry likely to be completed within 24 hours.

(a) On completion of the investigation, the case is found to be true.

(2) On completion of the investigation the case is found to be false or evidence is insufficient to justify transmission of the accused to Magistrate.

6. The accused not found, but after investigation the case is found to be true, and such facts elicited as would justify his arrest.

7. The accused not arrested or no person accused. After full investigation it is found that no offence has been committed.

8. After investigation it is found that the facts constitute an offence of a less grave nature than at first alleged, e.g., charge of robbery found to amount in fact only to theft.

8-A. After investigation it is found that the facts constitute a graver offence than at first alleged.

9. The parties concerned in a compoundable cognizable case request the Police to stop investigation on the ground that a compromise has been effected.

Send original information, whether it be the Village Magistrate's report or the information written or dictated by complainant or informant, with Occurrence Report, Form No. 44, Volume II, to the Magistrate having jurisdiction.

Send original information, whether it be the Village Magistrate's report or the information written or dictated by complainant or informant, with Occurrence Report, to the Magistrate having jurisdiction, explaining reasons for not investigating.

Case in the station house report.

Note.—If the accused is forwarded to a Magistrate other than the Magistrate having jurisdiction, Occurrence Report as in case 1 must be sent to the latter.

Send Charge Sheet, Form No. 45, Volume II, to the Magistrate having jurisdiction.

Send Referred Charge Sheet, Form No. 46, Volume II, to the Magistrate having jurisdiction through the Divisional Inspector.

Send Form No. 47, Volume II, through the Inspector of the Division, to the Magistrate having jurisdiction.

Detain the accused, Send Occurrence Report as in case 1.

Send the accused, or in bailable cases, Bail bond, Forms Nos. 48, 49 and 50, Vol. II, with Charge Sheet to the Magistrate having jurisdiction.

Release the accused on bail and send bond with Referred Charge Sheet, through the Divisional Inspector to the Magistrate having jurisdiction.

Send Charge Sheet to the Magistrate having jurisdiction asking for warrant.

Send Referred Charge Sheet, through the Divisional Inspector, to the Magistrate having jurisdiction.

Send Referred Charge Sheet through the Divisional Inspector, to the Magistrate having jurisdiction, asking for authority to correct the record.

Send a Supplemental Occurrence Report to the Magistrate having jurisdiction.

Send Referred Charge Sheet, through the Divisional Inspector, to the Magistrate having jurisdiction, for orders.

Non-Cognizable Cases.

|---|---|
| 1. After investigation ordered by Magistrate, case found to be true. | Send Charge Sheet to the Magistrate by whom the case was referred, Vide also P.O. No. 136 (b). |
| 2. After investigation ordered by Magistrate, case found to be false. | Send Referred Charge Sheet to the Magistrate by whom the case was referred, through the Divisional Inspector. |
| 3. Accused arrested under S. 57, Cr. P.O. name and residence not ascertained within 24 hours. | Send the accused with Occurrence Report to the Magistrate having jurisdiction. |
| 4. Accused arrested under S. 57, Cr. P. O. name and residence ascertained within 24 hours. | Release the accused and send bond with Occurrence Report to the Magistrate having jurisdiction. |

Note.—(1) Station-house officers should endeavour to ascertain the truth and real nature of the case from the complainant, and get the charge put up in its true character.

(2) A report will be made to the Magistrate under S. 173, Cr. P. O., in all cases investigated by the police, irrespective of results.

(3) An investigation is held to be completed—

(a) when the police have done all in their power to find the offender or offenders and have failed.

(b) when the police arrest and charge an offender,

(c) when the police refer as false a charge that they have investigated.

(4) The results of police investigation into cases connected with other Government departments should be communicated at once by the police-officer making the investigation to the local head of such department or establishment.

157. (1) If, from information received or otherwise, an officer in charge of a police-station has reason to suspect the commission of an offence which he is empowered under section 156 to investigate, he shall forthwith send a report of the same to a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of such offence upon a police-report, and shall proceed in person, or shall depute one of his subordinate officers not being below such rank as the Local Government may, by general or special order, prescribe in this behalf, to proceed to the spot to investigate the facts and circumstances of the case and, if necessary, to take measures for the discovery and arrest of the offender:

Provided as follows:—

(a) when any information as to the commission of any such

Where local investigation dispensed with. offence is given against any person by name and the case is not of a serious nature, the officer in charge of a police-station need not proceed in person or depute a subordinate officer to make an investigation on the spot;

Where police officer in charge sees no sufficient ground for investigation.

(b) if it appear to the officer in charge of a police-station that there is no sufficient ground for entering on an investigation, he shall not investigate the case.

(2) In each of the cases mentioned in clauses (a) and (b) of the proviso to sub-section (1), the officer in charge of the police-station shall state in his said report his reasons for not fully complying with the requirements of that sub-section, and, in the case mentioned in clause (b), such officer shall also forthwith notify to the informant, if any, in such manner as may be prescribed by the Local Government, the fact that he will not investigate the case or cause it to be investigated.

Amendment.—In sub-section (1) the words “if necessary to take measures” make it clear that the police have a discretion in arresting a person accused in a cognizable case; the rank of subordinate officer in this sub-section is now to be fixed by the Local Government. The addition made to the end of sub-section (2) provides that if the police do not investigate a complaint the complainant shall be informed to that effect. It is left to the Local Government to prescribe the manner in which the communication shall be made.

Shall Forthwith send a report.—Reports relating to investigations by the police are: (1) report under S. 157, (2) report under S. 167, (3) report under S. 168 and (4) report under S. 173. The first, under this section is the preliminary report before commencing investigation and the one under S. 168 is the final report after completing the investigation. Report under S. 157 is sent when the investigation cannot be completed within 24 hours as prescribed by S. 61 or within the period specified in S. 167. The report under S. 173 is the completion report called the charge sheet. The report required by this section to be sent is the first report of an offence, what is generally called the Occurrence Report. The sending of the report is an essential preliminary to the commencement of an investigation, (1914) M.W.N. 382=1 L.W. 355=3 Cr. L. Rev. 245=15 Cr. L.J. 622=25 Ind. Cas. 630 but it is left to the Magistrate to take action on it under S. 190 (1) (b) or to drop the matter, Weir II, 119; omission to send a report under this section to a Magistrate is a serious neglect of duty liable to result in a failure of justice and will lay the police to grave suspicion of concoction of evidence. 11 Cr. L.J. 498=7 Ind. Cas. 601.

Information received.—This section empowers a police-officer to take action when he has reason to suspect the commission of a cognizable offence from information received or otherwise. The expression “information received” undoubtedly refers to information furnished under S. 154, supra. A mere telegram giving information of the commission of an offence is not such an information. The words “or otherwise” are no doubt wide enough to cover the receipt of a telegram or even less definite or less satisfactory source of information. (1914) M.W.N. 382=1 L.W. 355=3 Cr. L. Rev. 245=15 Cr. L.J. 722=25 Ind. Cas. 630. See 53 M.L.J. 231=29 Cr. L.J. 717=110 Ind. Cas. 461, where it was held that a mere telegram giving information as to the commission of a cognizable offence cannot be acted upon by a police officer for so far as its authenticity goes to stands in no better position than village gossip and there is no guarantee that it has been sent by the person who purported to send it; in such a case it is the duty of the officer concerned to verify if the fact that it was really sent by the person purporting to send it. See also 14 C.W.N. 326. A police report submitted under this section entitles a Magistrate to proceed under S. 159, infra 43 C. 1152.

Officer in charge of a police station.—Ss. 157-167 make it clear that a station-house officer or his superior officer, within the limits of the local area of his jurisdiction is alone entitled to investigate an offence. A C.I.D. Inspector is therefore not legally competent to investigate and his evidence is inadmissible under S. 156, Indian Evidence Act. The power to investigate must be given to him by law, 35 M. 247 and 397.

158. (1) Every report sent to a Magistrate under section 157 shall, if the Local Government so directs, be submitted through such superior officer of police as the Local Government, by general or special order, appoints in that behalf.

how submitted.

(2) Such superior officer may give such instructions to the officer in charge of the police-station as he thinks fit, and shall, after recording such instructions on such report, transmit the same without delay to the Magistrate.

Under S. 157 supra the officer in charge of the police-station shall forthwith send a report to the Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence. The object of this provision is that the Magistrate who is primarily responsible for the condition of the District as regards responsible crimes should know of the occurrence as soon as possible and should watch the various steps taken by the Police and advise them in all cases whenever necessary. This section also emphasises that the report must be submitted without delay by the superior officer after recording the instructions he had given to the police-officer submitting the report, S. 159 infra indicates the procedure to be adopted by a Magistrate on receipt of a report.

159. Such Magistrate, on receiving such report, may direct an investigation, or, if he thinks fit, at once proceed, or depute any Magistrate subordinate to him to proceed, to hold a preliminary inquiry into, or otherwise to dispose of, the case in manner provided in this Code.

Power to hold in-
nary inquiry.

On Receiving report may direct investigation or preliminary inquiry.—An inquiry can be made under this section only when a police report within the terms of S. 157 is submitted, i.e., a report before the completion of the police investigation or inquiry; but when such report is submitted after investigation the Magistrate has no power to act under this section. In 4 C.W.N. 351 followed in 32 A. 30 on information laid before the Police charging a person with house trespass with intent to commit adultery, the Police reported the case to be one of criminal trespass disbelieving the intent with which the trespass was committed. This report of the Police was not one coming under S. 157 supra and the Magistrate was therefore not entitled to act under this section, and his action not being a judicial proceeding, the direction of the Magistrate to prosecute the complainant under S. 211, I.P.O., was held bad. The object of the inquiry is to ascertain whether there are grounds for believing the accusation to be unfounded and when the Police after full inquiry report the commission of an offence, the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to hold a preliminary inquiry under this section or to make a further inquiry under S. 202, infra, 1899 A.W.N. 87; 32 A. 30; 17 C.W.N. 825; 43 C. 1152. This section will apply only when a police report is received, not when the complaint is made direct to a Magistrate in which, case the Magistrate is bound to proceed under S. 200, infra, 30 C. 923; 10 M.L.T. 120—12 Cr. L.J. 463=11 Ind. Cas. 999. When a Magistrate having taken cognizance of a case refers it to the police for inquiry and report, the police have no power to prefer a charge-sheet before another Magistrate and such other Magistrate has no jurisdiction to take of the case, 16 Cr.L.J. 466=29 Ind. Cas. 99; 11 C.W.N. 832.

Has reason to suspect.—Compare the language of this section with that of S. 154, supra. Under the latter section every information relating to the commission of a cognizable offence must be reduced to writing. But under this section it is only when the information gives a reasonable suspicion as to the commission of an offence that compels the officer to take action. It can hardly be contended that every inquiry which a police officer makes must necessarily be an investigation under this section. Most investigations are initiated on information recorded under S. 154 supra and vouched for by the informant. But the police must frequently hear of alleged offences from less reliable sources, e.g., village gossip or the receipt of a telegram which so far as authenticity goes stands in no better position. In such cases it is discretionary with the officer to take action or not, before deciding as to the course he may adopt. He may frequently deem it well to make few preliminary and informal inquiries as to whether there is anything in what he has heard to render a formal investigation desirable and such action will not amount to an investigation under this section, (1914) M.W.N. 382=1 L.W. 355=3 Cr. L. Rev. 245=15 Cr. L.J.=622 25 Ind. Cas. 630.

Shall not investigate.—As a rule every complaint of a cognizable offence should be investigated either at the station or by visiting the scene of alleged crime. Investigation should only be refused on the ground of (1) the severity of the offence (2) the absence of any procurable evidence in cases of a petty nature, mere suspicion that the evidence offered is false is no reason for non-investigation and whenever the complainant alleges the existence of any evidence the case should be inquired into. Madras Police Manual Vol. 1, p. 311. By the addition now made in sub-section (2) it is provided that when investigation is refused the officer should forthwith give notice of this fact to the informant.

Depute any subordinate magistrate to proceed.—On receiving a police-report if a case is made over to a Subordinate Magistrate under this section he is certainly required to dispose of it judicially, and if he holds a local inquiry and examines the accused he must be careful to observe the requirements of S. 164 and S. 364, infra; otherwise any statement so obtained may be inadmissible in evidence, 2 C.W.N. 702.

Otherwise dispose of the case.—He may dismiss the complaint. If the police send a report that there is no sufficient ground for entering on an investigation the Magistrate may dismiss the complaint. But if a complaint is made to a Magistrate himself he is bound to proceed under S. 200, infra, 30 C. 923; (1911) 2 M.W.N. 74=10 M.L.T. 120=12 Cr. L.J. 463=11 Ind. Cas. 999.

160. Any police-officer making an investigation under this Chapter may, by order in writing, require the attendance before himself of any person being within the limits of his own or any adjoining station who, from the information given or otherwise, appears to be acquainted with the circumstances of the case; and such person shall attend as so required.

Police-officer's power to require attendance of witnesses.

Scope of the Section.—This section does not authorise a police-officer to require the attendance of an accused person with a view to his answering the charge. The intention of the Legislature seems to have been only to provide a facility for obtaining evidence and for procuring the attendance of the accused who may be arrested at any time, if necessary, without a warrant. The police may order any person whom they believe to be in a position to give information to attend and do so and the person so ordered may decline to make any incriminating statement, but he cannot be summoned to answer the complaint, 7 M. 274 (F.B.) Weir II, 121; 33 C. 1023. Examination of women, especially of pardanashin ladies should be conducted in their own houses and not in the police station. 2 C.W.N. 199=2 Cr. L.J. 51; see 5 Bom L.R. 644, where it was held that a police-officer had no power under this section to call upon the accused to produce any documents in his possession before him. Neither is a police-officer authorised to take a security bond for the production of any person before the police, 11 C. 77. Nor can a police-officer require a surety to attend the police-station to be examined and to give information as to the person for whom he stands surety, 1885 A.W.N. 43. Under this section a police-officer is not empowered to arrest or detain persons whose evidence is required for investigation, 7 W.R. (Cr.) 3 nor can he take a security bond for the production of any person before the Police, 11 C. 77. A Magistrate cannot direct witnesses to attend a police investigation and cannot issue a warrant for the arrest and production of a person to give evidence under this section 24 C. 320, Ratanlal 133.

By order in writing require the attendance.—The order must be in writing. Where a police officer sent a constable without an order in writing to inform and bring two witnesses but the accused induced them not to go and give evidence, it was held that no conviction under Ss 180-182, I.P.C. can legally be sustained Ratanlal 850. When the order is not in writing non-attendance is not punishable under S. 174, I.P.C., Weir I. 86; II, 123; 20 Cr. L.J. 48=48 Ind. Cas. 688; a witness failing to attend before a police-officer making an investigation is liable to be prosecuted under S. 174, I.P.C., 24 C. 320, but a Magistrate is not competent to issue a warrant for the arrest and production of a person to be examined by the police. Refusal to accept the notice issued by the police requiring attendance is not an offence punishable under S. 179, I.P.C., 24 A.L.J. 215=27 Cr. L.J. 284=52 Ind. Cas. 460.

161. (1) Any police-officer making an investigation under this Chapter or any police-officer not below such rank as the Local Government may, by general or special order prescribe in this behalf acting on the requisition of such officer may examine orally any person supposed to be acquainted with the facts and circumstances of the case.

Examination of witnesses by police.

(2) Such person shall be bound to answer all questions relating to such case put to him by such officer, other than questions, the answer to which would have a tendency to expose him to a criminal charge or to a penalty or forfeiture.

Amendment.—The addition of the words in sub-section (1) "or any police-officer not below such rank as the Local Government may, by general or special order, prescribe in this behalf acting on the requisition of such officer" enables an investigating police-officer to examine witnesses. But it is left to the Local Government to prescribe the rank of such police-officer.

Scope of the section.—This section makes a person interrogated by the police making an investigation bound to answer all questions relating to the case put to him by the police officer. The investigation dealt with by this section is limited to an investigation made under Chapter XIV of the Code which relates to information as to the commission of a cognizable offence but not to merely threatened or contemplated offence—in which case action is to be taken under the preventive sections of the Code. It is possible to argue that the words 'every information relating to the commission of a cognizable offence' occurring in S 154 supra may be held to cover information relating to the threatened commission of a cognizable offence. It would have been much better if the Code had contained a general power to Magistrates to refer any matter brought to their notice for investigation to the police—without confining it to Chapter XIV. Petitions under S. 107, supra, are habitually referred for investigation to police by Magistrates which is a great safeguard to the subject and no class of cases require more scrutiny from the very nature of the allegations made. Any allegation that a man has not committed an offence but contemplates committing one can obviously be made of recklessly. It will be well that the Code should be revised and that an express provision should be made conferring power in terms upon Magistrates to refer petition under S. 107 supra for investigation, 49 M. 315 at 319 referring to Weir II, 51.

May examine orally.—The words previously were 'and reduce into writing any statements made by the persons so examined.' The reason for the change is that statements before the police may be hurriedly taken down on rough notes; the police-officer is not trained in taking evidence and the notes are often fairied out by another officer. They bear no resemblance to depositions and ought to have no weight as such attached to them. Ss. 164 and 364 infra do not apply to examination of witnesses under this section nor can the witnesses be put on oath, 15 A. 11.

Any person—These words are wide enough to include the person arrested or to be arrested. This may include as remarked in 3 Ran. 72 the examination of the accused or suspected persons as such persons are examined in the capacity of persons who are supposed to be acquainted with the facts and circumstances of the case; but a clear distinction is drawn in S. 173 infra between 'persons who appear to be acquainted with the circumstances of the case' and the accused and this must raise a doubt whether the 'phrase persons supposed to be acquainted with the facts and circumstances of the case' in this section includes an accused after arrests. As this doubt exists, the marginal note to this section may be looked into and used to assist to come to a conclusion that this section was not intended to apply to an arrested accused-person as the marginal note is 'examination of witness by the police' 29 Cr. L.J. 400 at 402=108 Ind. Cas. 442. When a police officer has evidence before him sufficient to justify the arrest of the person accused he should not preliminary to the arrest examine such person and record a statement from him in writing under this section and then immediately afterwards arrest him, 4 G.W.N. 129 at 140.

Shall be bound to answer all questions.—The word 'truly' which occurred previously has been omitted. The Select Committee in omitting the word observe thus. "We have amended this clause by reverting to the law as it stood under the Code of 1861 and 1872 and a practice which had existed for nearly fifteen years has been deliberately departed from." The result therefore is that there is now no legal obligation on a witness to state the truth in police investigation and consequently a conviction for perjury in an alternative charge of making contradictory statements before the Police and the Magistrate can no longer be had, 23 M. 544. The Select Committee further observe, "It seems to us unfair that a man should be liable to be convicted of giving false evidence on the strength or by the aid of a statement supposed to have been given to a police officer but which is not given on oath, which he has not signed and which he had no opportunity of verifying. They bear no resemblance to depositions and ought to have no weight as such attached to them. We are aware that there are inconveniences in abolishing direct liability for giving false evidence to the police but the balance of expediency seems to us to be in favour of the old law. The provisions of Ss. 202 and 203, I.P.C. appear to us to afford sufficient safeguard against false information." The law as it now stands is in accordance with the rulings in 7 C. 121 (F.B.) In S. 175 infra the word 'truly' is still retained and every person summoned shall be bound to answer truly all questions put by the police-officer. A statement to question put by a police officer under this section is privileged and cannot be made the ground of a charge of defamation, 16 M. 233, nor will a civil action for damages lie, 29 C. 794. It is highly improper for a police-officer to obtain a statement from an accused person professedly under this section and reduce it to writing, 27 C. 235. A refusal to answer questions asked by a police-officer under this section is not punishable under Ss. 176, 179 and 187, I.P.C. as a person legally bound to state the truth or by any express provision of law to state the truth, 23 M. 544; 7 C. 121 (F.B.). Answers to questions put by police-officer under this section do not amount to institution of criminal proceedings within the meaning of S. 211, I.P.C. nor does he thereby charge any person within that section, 6 M.L.T. 133=4 Ind. Cas. 1081; 31 M. 506, 20 M.L.J. 132; Weir I. 193. A statement made by witness to a police-officer in the course of an investigation under this chapter and recorded by him under this section cannot be treated as information given to a police-officer under S. 154 supra, and therefore, if false, cannot be punished under S. 187, I.P.C., 26 Cr. L.J. 1532=80 Ind. Cas. 318.

162. (1) No statement made by any person to a police-officer in the course of an investigation under this Chapter shall, if reduced into writing, be signed by the person making it ; nor shall any such statement or any record thereof, whether in a police-diary or otherwise, or any part of such statement or record, be used for any purpose (save as hereinafter provided) at any inquiry or trial in respect of any offence under investigation at the time when such statement was made :

Statements to police not to be signed. Use of such statements in evidence.

Provided that, when any witness is called for the prosecution in such inquiry or trial whose statement has been reduced into writing as aforesaid, the Court shall on the request of the accused, refer to such writing and direct that the accused be furnished with a copy thereof, in order that any part of such statement, if duly proved, may be used to contradict such witness in the manner provided by section 145 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872. When any part of such statement is so used, any part thereof may also be used in the re-examination of such witness, but for the purpose only of explaining any matter referred to in his cross-examination :

Provided further, that, if the Court is of opinion that any part of any such statement is not relevant to the subject-matter of the inquiry or trial or that its disclosure to the accused is not essential in the interest of justice and is inexpedient in the public interests, it shall record such opinion (but not the reasons therefor) and shall exclude such part from the copy of the statement furnished to the accused.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to apply to any statement falling within the provisions of section 32, clause (1), of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872.

Amendment.—This section has been redrafted "There has been some conflict of authority as regards the bearing of S. 157 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872 on S. 162 of the Code, as regards the use which may be made of a statement made by any person to a police officer in the course of an investigation. The amendment provides that when such a statement or any part of it is used to impeach the credit of the witness, it may also be used to corroborate his evidence. Reference may be made to the decision in 36 C. 291".—Statement of Objects and Reasons. See 39 B. 58 at 66 67, where conflicting rulings of the various High Courts are collected and considered, and the new amendment is in accordance with the view expressed therein. Shah. J., pointed out "that the anomaly, if any, can be remedied by the Legislature and the duty of the Court plainly is to construe the section without straining the language used by the Legislature." The various rulings which held that the statements can be used only to impeach the credit of a witness, i.e., may be used as evidence for the accused and not against the accused are no longer law and need not be considered after the amendment.

Scope and object of the section.—The provisions of this section have been deliberately enacted by the Legislature and are entitled to respect not merely in the letter but also in spirit so long as the section remains unamended, 29 Bom. L.R. 996 at 1005. The first paragraph provides that no statement made to the police in the course of their investigation shall be admissible at the trial of an offence under investigation at the time the statement was recorded; consequently no witness may be asked what he said to the police during their investigation nor may any police officer be asked what a witness told him during his investigation nor may any bystander be questioned as to what he heard another person say to the police during their investigation. The second paragraph, however, loosens the rigidity of the first to a certain extent namely when a witness for the prosecution is examined, if the accused has reason to believe that the statement of the witness in Court differs from his statement to the police, then he or his advocate may ask the court to refer to the record of any statement made by the witness to the police and if there is any variation in the statement, the defence is entitled to a copy of the statement to the police and that copy may be proved and the witness cross-examined on that statement under S. 145, Indian Evidence Act and the witness's attention must be drawn to the particular points of difference 6 Ran. 137. This section plainly constitutes an exception to the ordinary rule of evidence, 32 B. 111 (F.B.) Its purpose is to amend certain sections of the Indian Evidence Act which state what evidence is admissible and inadmissible in certain circumstances 45 C. L.J. 199 = 28 Cr. L.J. 446 = 101 Ind. Cas. 478. This section in no way concerns the giving of oral evidence of the statement either by the prosecution or defence. Both sides are at full liberty to give oral evidence of the statement made in accordance with the provision of the Evidence Act for impeaching credit or corroborating and to use the writing for refreshing the memory of the witness. This section only prohibits the use of the writing "as evidence under S. 35 of the Evidence Act and nothing more. The reason is plain enough "such statements are recorded by police officers in the most haphazard manner. Officers conducting an investigation not unnaturally record what seems in their opinion material to the case at the stage and omit many matters equally material and it may be of supreme importance as the case develops. Besides that in most cases they are not experts, of what is and what is not evidence. The statements are recorded often hurriedly in the midst of a crowd and confusion, subject to frequent interruption and suggestion from bystanders. Over and above all, they cannot be in any sense trained depositions, for they are not prepared in the way of a deposition. They are not read over to, nor are they signed by the deponents. There is no guarantee, that they contain much more or much less than what the witness had said." 15 A. 207 at 208 See also the remarks of Sir George Knox, J., in 7 A. L.J. 468 = 6 Ind. Cas. 101, to the same effect. The provisions of this section are enacted in the interests of the accused and have the effect of ensuring that the statement contained in the document can only be proved by calling the officer to whom the statements were made and thus affording the accused an opportunity of cross-examination. Had it been intended to rule out all reference to the statements themselves and to exclude wholly the operation of S. 157 of the Indian Evidence Act the language of the section would have been different, 6 Pat. L.J. 241 at 243. Standing by themselves the police proceedings under this section are not substantive evidence in the case and cannot be used to test the correctness of the evidence given on oath in Court. The entries in the police diaries can be used for the limited purpose of contradiction of the witnesses for the prosecution after duly proving those entries. 29 Cr. L.J. 493 = 109 Ind. Cas. 221. See also 29 Cr. L.J. 282 (2) = 107 Ind. Cas. 766 (2) and 32 C.W.N. 280 = 29 Cr. L.J. 531 = 109 Ind. Cas. 335. The words such statement' occurring in different portions of the section emphasise the view that oral evidence is not excluded, 48 M. 640, but this decision has been overruled by the Full Bench decision in 51 M. 967. (F.B.) which held statement whether written or oral are excluded altogether by this section. It is quite clear that under this section as amended, it is not now permissible that statements to the police, whether oral or written to be put in evidence to corroborate a prosecution witness or to contradict a defence witness. To this extent the rulings in 22 B. 596 and 39 B. 53 which held that evidence of the kind is permissible are superseded by the enactment of the Legislature. It is quite clear from the very strong terms of the present section that a statement to the police can only be used for one purpose and that is by the accused to contradict a prosecution witness in the manner provided by S. 145, Indian Evidence Act, 26 Bom. L.R. 965 = 26 Cr. L.J. 223 = 83 Ind. Cas. 1007. The application of the amended section as before is to the written record, but the new section gives the accused a right to have a copy of such written statement for the purpose of using it to contradict the witness for the prosecution, 43 M. 640. But see 51 M. 567 (F.B.) which overruled this decision and also 30 C.W.N. 112 = 27 Cr. L.J. 272 = 92 Ind. Cas. 174, where it was held that the statement made to a police officer is inadmissible in evidence and the police officer cannot be examined to prove whether he examined certain witnesses called by the accused as defence witnesses who denied their presence at the scene of occurrence. See also 27 Cr. L.J. 263 = 92 Ind. Cas. 439. Statements to a police officer are inadmissible for any purpose save as provided by this section and the Judge is not entitled to use those statements confronting the witnesses, 27 Cr. L.J. 277 = 92 Ind. Cas. 433. It is quite true that under this section statements made to the police by witnesses can only be used by the defence for the purpose of contradicting a prosecution witness. But where after a witness had made some statement before a Magistrate he was asked if he had made that statement to the police and thereafter when the sub-Inspector of police was examined he was asked whether the witness had made that statement to him, neither the witness nor the sub-Inspector having been asked what statements they made and no statement being introduced into the evidence as having been made by the witness before the sub-Inspector, it was held this section did not prevent the prosecution after the witness has made a statement from asking him simply whether he made that statement to the police, or when a witness has made a statement in his evidence, from asking the sub-Inspector whether in fact the witness had made that statement to him, and in so doing there is no use of the statement recorded by the police during their investigation as the witnesses or the sub-Inspector are merely asked as to a certain fact. 4 Pat 204 at 209. This section does not apply to an investigation by the Calcutta Police ordered by the Presidency Magistrate under S. 156 (3), supra. All investigation by the Police must be controlled in the Muffassil by this Code and in Calcutta by the Police Act or by Circular Orders issued and the Police have no inherent power in Calcutta beyond that conferred by the Police Act or circular orders. So the Police in Calcutta cannot take statements generally apart from the provisions of the Act and then put the statements so taken in evidence against persons who made them. That would be to strike at the principles to preserve which the provisions of this section were enacted and would introduce a very dangerous principle. 53 C. 650 at 658. Judging from the cursory way in which these statements are recorded, this section aims at preventing undue importance being attached to the written record which would undoubtedly put too much power in the hands of the police. See 16 A. 207 at 208. Before the F.B. decision in 51 M. 567, it has held that the word "such statement" used in the amended section may be vague to include oral and written statements, but the whole design of the section implies otherwise. The provisos clearly apply only to written statement and exclude oral statements. If otherwise, the section would prevent an accused person using in his favour oral statements and the section did not intend such a result. When the section uses "such statement" it is clear that "such" means "if reduced to writing." The old section had nothing to do with statements not reduced to writing and was designed to prevent entries in police diaries from being used against accused persons. Considering the voluminous case law interpreting the whole section, if the new section was intended to be much wider to cover oral statements also it would have been unequivocally said so. The second proviso is meaningless if "such statement" means "oral statement." If the section is intended to prohibit the use of oral statements made to the police, an amendment of S. 27 of the Indian Evidence Act would have been made. Thus the new section is confined as the old section to written record. The new section was intended to confer on the accused a legal right which he did not possess before and as regards proof and use of oral statements the law is unaltered and is as it was before. All oral statements which were previously admissible under the Indian Evidence Act the use of which is not prohibited by this Code are still admissible and may be used, 43 M. 640 at p. 645-6. But the Full Bench decision in 51 M. 937 has overruled 48 M. 640 and held that on the principle that a general rule is affected by a special rule and not the special by a general rule, S. 27 Ind. Ev. Act is not affected by this section but this section is affected by the former and S. 27 Ind. Ev. Act relates to a more particular matter creating an exception to the general admissibility of statements to the Police. The pronominal use of the word 'such' is a very common expediency in legislation.

to avoid repetition of a long descriptive phrase or clause used earlier. The phrase 'such statement' is intended to avoid a repetition of the statement already described. The words are 'made by any person to a police officer in the course of an investigation under this Chapter.' These are only words descriptive of the word 'statement' and it is to avoid the repetition of such description the word 'such' is used. The words 'reduced to writing' are not parts of the word 'statement' in the opening clause. If the word 'such' is intended to cover also the words 'reduced to writing' in the earlier part of the section the section would have run differently. The Legislature has used the grammatical form. This view is now in accordance with that expressed by other High Courts and the conflict is set at rest. In 42 C.L.J. 524=27 Cr. L.J. 263=92 Ind. Cas. 439 and 42 C.L.J. 528=27 Cr. L.J. 277=92 Ind. Cas. 453, where such statements were held inadmissible for all purposes except as provided in paragraph (2) of sub-section (1). The Lahore High Court has also taken the same view and held this section as it existed prior to the amendment of 1923 expressly prohibited the use of the record containing the statement to the police as evidence against the accused, and while the High Courts were at variance as to the admissibility of the oral evidence of such statements to corroborate the prosecution witnesses, they were unanimous that the writing could not be admitted in evidence against the accused. Even the controversy as to the admissibility of oral evidence has now been set at rest by the amendment in 1923 which substituted the words "nor shall any such statement or any record thereof be used for any purpose" for the words "nor shall such writing be used as evidence" which occurred prior to the amendment. The result is that not only the record of the statement of a witness taken under S. 161 supra is excluded from evidence, but also the proof of such statement by oral evidence for corroborating the testimony of prosecution witnesses, 6 Lah. 171 at p. 174 followed in 7 Lah. 264. See also 6 Lah. 23; 29 Cr. L.J. 343 at 345=103 Ind. Cas. 162. See also 30 Cr. L.J. 268 (F.B.)=114 Ind. Cas. 273 where it was held that the provisions of S. 27 Ind. Ev. Act are quite independent of this section and when this section was amended in 1923, the Legislature did not intend that it should repeal or in any way affect S. 27 of the Ind. Ev. Act. The Patna High Court has pronounced in the clearest terms against the admissibility of oral evidence. "The effect of the Amending Act of 1923 which is very great has not yet been fully appreciated by the Subordinate Courts. The new Act has substituted a section which prohibits any statement (now covered by S. 32 (1), Indian Evidence Act) or any record of it, whether in a police diary or otherwise or any part of such statement or record for any purpose at any inquiry or trial. The expression "for any purpose" is very important and should be given full weight. If the Legislature means merely to prohibit the use of writing as evidence there is no point in amending the section or substituting the present stringent sub-section (1). It is not merely use as evidence of the statement or the record thereof that is prohibited by sub-section (1) but use of it for any purpose unless such use comes within subsequent specific provisions of the Code. There is for all practical purposes no such provision except in the first proviso to sub-section (1) and in sub-section (2), for this section governs also S. 172 (2). Sub-section (2) excludes from the operation of the prohibition cases covered by S. 32 (1), Indian Evidence Act. The first proviso to the section makes an exception in favour of an accused but it is an exception most jealously circumscribed under the proviso itself. Any part of such statement reduced to writing may be used to contradict the witness who made it. The limitations are strict, (1) only the statement of a prosecution witness can be used; (2) only if it has been reduced to writing; (3) only a part of the statement recorded can be used; (4) such part must be duly proved; (5) it must be a contradiction of the evidence of the witness in Court; (6) it must be used as provided in S. 145 Indian Evidence Act, i.e., it can be used after the attention of the witness has been drawn to it. Such a statement which does not contradict the testimony of a witness cannot be proved in any circumstances. Unquestionably the new sub-section has greatly enhanced the difficulty of trials by excluding what was previously admissible in evidence. It is unfavourable to the prosecution and to a less but still considerable extent to the defence. Experience points to the conclusion that the Courts do apply the provisions against the prosecution but fail to do so against the defence. It is not a sufficient ground for deviating from what is intended to be a rigid rule that such deviation will favour the accused. It is incumbent on Courts loyally to observe the prohibition of the Legislature in all cases where it is applicable. The Legislature has employed firm language palpably intended to make a clean sweep of the use at the trial any statement to police during investigation not only in evidence but for any purpose restricted to one exception. The danger of endeavouring to temper this provision in favour of the defence and to widen the exception is not warranted, 27 Cr. L.J. 362=92 Ind. Cas. 874. The Rangoon High Court in 4 Ran. 72 (F.B.) has also expressed the same view and held that the words 'any such statements' in sub section (1) apply both to oral statements and those reduced to writing. It is clear that the actual wording of the section makes no exception in respect of statements made by accused persons. The words are "no statement made by any person" and must include statements by accused persons. There is nothing in the section as worded to suggest that they ought to be read as if they were "any person other than an accused person," 4 Ran. 72 at 85 but see 29 Cr. L.J. 430 at 402=103 Ind. Cas. 422. No statement taken under this section during the police investigation should be used at the trial unless (1) the accused asks to the Court to refer to the police record, (2) the accused is furnished with a copy of the statement including portions not relevant to the trial or inexpedient or not essential to disclose to him, (3) the statements have been duly proved when they may be used to contradict the witnesses, 4 Ran. 236. See also 27 Cr. L.J. 352 at 368=92 Ind. Cas. 874; 25 Bom. L.R. 955=26 Cr. L.J. 323=83 Ind. Cas. 1007; 51 M. 967 (F.B.). For the application of this section there must be a statement which is capable of being recorded and reduced into writing and therefore if a witness says 'I did not make a statement to the police' it cannot be a statement under this section, 53 C. 931. When a witness who made a statement before a committing Magistrate and who was not cross examined by the accused dies before the Sessions trial, the police officer who recorded the statement of the witness and which was repeated before the Committing Magistrate cannot be cross-examined with regard to the particular statement as this section has no application to such a case, 31 C.W.N. 410=23 Cr. L.J. 435=101 Ind. Cas. 661. There is nothing in the language of the section which supports the view that the provisions of the section do not apply to the case of a complaint made after the police had refused to take action holding that the matter was one of a Civil nature, 23 Cr. L.J. 14=99 Ind. Cas. 48. See 50 M. 750 as to the right of the accused to get copies of the statement at the inquest and the post-mortem certificate.

No statement by any person if taken down in writing shall be signed.—The statement of "any person" refers to the one made by a person examined as a witness during police investigation and not to statements of accused persons in respect of whom such investigation is being held, 54 C. 237. followed in 33 C.W.N. 237. The statement made by an approver to the police before he was tendered the pardon is within this section and the accused is entitled to have a copy of his statement and to have cross-examination of the approver with regard to that statement, B. 172, supra, has no application to such a statement, 9 Lah. 389. The section prohibits the use of the statement of a witness at the trial held in respect of some offence which was under investigation except for contradicting such witness as provided by S. 145, Indian Evidence Act. An accused's statement to the police not amounting to a confession is not ipso facto excluded from evidence, 26 Cr. L.J. 897=86 Ind. Cas. 981; 1926 Pat. 13=27 Cr. L.J. 753=95 Ind. Cas. 273; 5 Pat. 63; 27 Cr. L.J. 456=93 Ind. Cas. 248 following 26 Cr. L.J. 778=86 Ind. Cas. 410; 4 Ran. 72; 29 Cr. L.J. 400 at 402=103 Ind. Cas. 422. Under this section the statement need not be a complete statement recording every word uttered by the witness. It is immaterial whether the statement is recorded in the actual words used by the witness. It is sufficient if the statement is recorded in the form of a Memorandum which is available to contradict the witness. The very words used by the witness are not necessary, 31 C.W.N. 940=28 Cr. L.J. 805=104 Ind. Cas. 243. Reading S. 161 and this section it is clear that the main object of the Legislature is to prohibit the use of intention of the Legislature. It is important for the Court to know the defence set up by the accused at the earliest moment. If this section is given the meaning which is sought to be given, accused persons would be most seriously prejudiced and the only object of S. 163, infra, would be to enable the police to get clues for the purpose of investigating the charge. If that were the case the Court would be deprived of much valuable material for testing the truth of the defence. To shut out corroborative evidence such as statements made by defence witnesses during investigation is prejudicial enough but unless compelled to do so, we should not add to the prejudice by shutting exculpatory statements by accused and if the new amendment does not operate to exclude such statements then S. 27 of the Evidence Act remains unrepealed. This section applies to the statements of witnesses examined by the police in the course of the investigation and not to the statement of the accused person and it does not override or modify S. 27 of the Indian Evidence Act, 7 Lah. 83 at 87; 5 Pat. 63. It is contrary to the policy of this section to prosecute a person for denying his signature to a statement made before the Police as the law expressly prohibits the writing being signed by the deponent, 14 Cr. L.J. 302=19 Ind. Cas. 958. It was apparently considered unsafe to assume that a police-officer making an investigation would correctly record statements made to him. It is therefore provided that the statements should not be signed by the witness and should not be admissible in evidence. At the same time it was regarded as proper to make the police-officer's record of such statements available to the accused for the purpose of cross-examining any witness called for the prosecution, 38 M. 337 at 540. The mere fact that the statements are signed contrary to the provisions of this section will not make them admissible under S. 154, supra, 23 Cr. L.J. 401=77 Ind. Cas. 481.

In the course of a police investigation.—Investigation here means some action taken by the Police to collect evidence. When the police examines a person going to the place from which a telegram informing them of the commission of a cognizable offence to verify the fact that it was really sent as it purports to have been sent and the person confirms the fact of sending it and gave other details of the alleged offence, it can not be said that the police were investigating into the offence and collecting evidence. Their purpose was not to collect evidence but to see that the suspicion that an offence had been committed was justified. Any statement then made cannot be said to be statement taken in the course of the investigation, 55 M.L.J. 231=28 L.W. 187=29 Cr. L.J. 717=110 Ind. Cas. 461 following 1914 M.W.N. 382=1 L.W. 355=15 Cr. L.J. 622=25 Ind. Cas. 630, see also 62 C. 499; 1 Pat. 401; 2 Pat. 417. The wording of the section does not prohibit the use of the statements made to the police in the course of their investigation in proceedings under S. 476, infra, in cases where the alleged offence which is under consideration in S. 476 proceedings was not under investigation at the time when the said statements were made, 28 Cr. L.J. 433 at 437=101 Ind. Cas. 463. Statements recorded in a confidential inquiry into a charge of corruption against a Magistrate by a police officer are not statements within the meaning of this section, 23 Bom. L.R. 996.

Sub-section (1).—Two different constructions are possible of this sub-section. First is that the words "nor shall any such statements" mean and refer to a statement (a) made by any person to a police officer and (b) in the course of an investigation under this Chapter. In this construction the words "if reduced into writing" only apply to the words "be signed by the person making it." The alternative construction, is that the words "nor shall any such statement" mean a statement made to a police-officer in the course of an investigation and reduced into writing. The words following however "nor shall any such statement—" seem to favour the former construction rather than the latter because if the words any such statement, were to be confined to written statement, there would seem to be no object in adding "or any record thereof"; this view taken in, 43 M. 640 at 645 accepting the second construction is unsound because in the provisions the context clearly shows that it is only statements reduced to writing that are referred to. If oral statements are to be excluded nothing would have been ampler for the Legislature to say "made by any person to a police-officer in the course of investigation under this chapter and reduced to writing." Instead of this it has used a hypothetical phrase which, in its ordinary grammatical sense might be taken only to apply and qualify the words be signed by the person making it. A comparison of the amended sub-section with the sub-section as it stood before the amendment makes this point clear. The words "such writing" has been dropped by the Legislature now. A statement reduced to writing might be presumed to be more accurate and reliable than an oral. If written statements are to be excluded it cannot be presumed that the Legislature intended to leave the less reliable oral statements admissible without any safeguard or limitation. 3 Ran. 72 (F.B.) at 82. The Full Bench in 51 M. 967 has followed the Rangoon view and overruled, 41 M. 640. See also 26 Bom. L.R. 965=23 Cr. L.J. 223=83 Ind. Cas. 1977; 6 Lah. 21 and 171, 7 Lah. 254; 4 Pat. 234; 5 Pat. 63; 27 Cr. L.J. 362=57 Ind. Cas. 878; 42 C.L.J. 524 and 525; 56 C. 237.

Statement whether in a Police diary or otherwise.—It is quite true that an accused person is not entitled to see the police diaries, but when the statements of the prosecution witnesses made before the investigating officer have been reduced to writing whether in a police diary or otherwise, the accused is entitled under this section to have copies of statements of the witnesses, in spite of the fact that the statements are recorded in the police diary. It is clear from the language of the section that the accused is entitled to ask the Court to refer the statement whether in a police diary or otherwise and to furnish him with a copy thereof. It is obviously not in the interests of public justice that police officers who are charged with the duty of investigating crimes should be in a position to take the statements of witnesses, extract as much as they think is relevant or important for entry in their diaries and then destroy the original statement. Such a practice is illegal in so far as it deprives the accused of an important right and it may result in the destruction of valuable evidence in favour of the accused, 6 Ran. 672.

Proviso (1).—This section provides for facilities to the accused to obtain copies of the police records, 3 Pat. L.J. 533. The words in this proviso are "when any witness is called for the prosecution." The accused will not be entitled to have a copy of the statement made to the police unless the person who made the statement is called as a prosecution witness when a person is not admittedly a prosecutor witness but was summoned and examined by the Court at the suggestion of the defence the proviso is inapplicable and the statement of such a witness was rightly held to be inadmissible as one made to the police, 23 Cr. L.J. 828=104 Ind. Cas. 444. When a witness is tendered by the prosecution but was discharged without being examined or cross-examined, the accused is not entitled to a copy of the statement made by that person to the police, 7 Pat. 133. A Magistrate is not justified in referring to statements made to the police which are recorded in the police diaries unless and until the witness who had made the statements have been put in the witness-box and confronted by those statements. 27 Cr. L.J. 607=94 Ind. Cas. 271. Under the Code before the amendment in 1928, the right to obtain a copy was entirely in the discretion of the Court and it was only if the Magistrate considered it expedient in the interests of justice to grant copies of the statements made to the Police that the accused can obtain copies, 26 M.L.J. 182. The amended Code now gives an accused person a right to ask the Court to send for and peruse statements of witnesses and to have copies of statements furnished to him before the beginning of the preliminary inquiry unless the Court thinks that any part of such statement is irrelevant or opposed to public interest or not in the interests of justice, 29 Cr. L.J. 297=107 Ind. Cas. 817. See also 3 Ran. 356. If reasonable facilities for obtaining copies of the statements made under this section by a witness who is called as a prosecution witness be not given to the accused it would be a good ground for objecting to the fairness of the trial, 49 C.L.J. 197 at 200-201 and refusal to grant copies vitiates the trial, 28 Cr. L.J. 14=99 Ind. Cas. 45. See also 28 Cr. L.J. 897=102 Ind. Cas. 773. The words "if duly proved" clearly show that the record of the statement cannot be admitted in evidence straightway, but the officer before whom the statement was made should ordinarily be examined as to any alleged statement or omitted statement that is relied on by the accused for contradicting the witness and S. 67, Indian Evidence Act, applies to this case as well as to any other similar case. If a particular police-officer who recorded the statement is not available any other means of proving the statement may be availed of, e.g., evidence as to the hand writing of that officer, 26 Bom. L.R. 965=23 Cr. L.J. 223=83 Ind. Cas. 1077.

followed in 52 B. 195 at 199. It is quite true that under this section statements made by witnesses to the police can be used by the defence for contradicting prosecution witnesses, but where a witness had made some statement before a Magistrate he was asked if he did so to the police and thereafter when the sub-Inspector of police was examined he was asked whether the witness made the statement to him, neither the witness nor the sub-Inspector having been asked what statements they made and no statement being introduced into the evidence as having been made by the witness before the sub-Inspector, it was held that this section did not prevent the prosecution after the witness has made a statement from asking him simply whether he made that statement to the police or when witness has made a statement in his evidence from asking the Sub-Inspector whether in fact the witness had made that statement to him and in so doing there is no use of the statement recorded by the police during their investigation as the witnesses or the sub-Inspector are merely asked as to a certain fact 4 Pat. 204 at 209 followed in 5 Pat. 336 where 27 Cr. L.J. 362 = 92 Ind. Cas. 874 is not followed.

The decision in 30 M. 466 is no longer law after the amendment. The right to obtain copies under this section is restricted entirely within the scope of this proviso. The accused according to this proviso is to satisfy the Magistrate that the investigating police-officer has taken down in writing a statement made to him by a witness or has entered it in his diary and this could be known only after the examination of the police-officer in most cases. The proper procedure is for the accused at the time the witness, whose statement is so recorded appears before the Court to ask the Court to refer to such writing and furnish him with copies thereof. This is a practice, it is not difficult to carry out. It only requires a little adjustment of the time of the Court in cases where the diaries do not happen to be in Court or require translation, 33 C. 1023 at 1027. The amendment is in accordance with these observations. There is a divergence of opinion between the various High Courts as regards the stage at which the accused is entitled to get copies of statements of prosecution witnesses recorded by the police under this section. The Madras and Bombay High Courts, 22 L. W. 784 and 52 B. 195, restrict the right to get copies till a late stage of the trial, i.e., only after some foundation is laid in cross-examining the witnesses that there is some contradiction between the evidence given in Court and that he stated to the police. But the Calcutta High Court now and the Patna High Court, take a literal reading of the section that the accused is entitled to copies when the witness is called. See 49 C. L.J. 197 not following, 54 C. 507 and 7 Pat. 205. The words of the first proviso 'when any witness is called for the prosecution in such inquiry or trial' must refer to the time when an inquiry or trial in which such witness is called is in progress and excludes the possibility of an order being made either by the committing Magistrate after commitment to the Sessions, or by the Sessions Judge in anticipation. An order may only be made 'when any witness is called.' The opportunity before the Committing Magistrate had gone and that before the Judge will arrive only on that point of time being reached. As soon as a request for copies is made the Court shall refer to such writing, and do so before allowing copies to be furnished. The object of this is found in the second proviso which requires the Court first to satisfy itself whether any part of any such statement is not relevant to the inquiry or trial or its disclosure to the accused is not essential in the interest of justice or is inexpedient in the public interest. Clearly the Court to satisfy itself on a question of relevancy is the Court before which the inquiry or trial is in progress. The statement in the decision in 54 C. 307 to the effect that there must be sufficient foundation laid by way of cross-examination of the witnesses, the copy whose statement is asked for, showing the statement was required to contradict the witness is not correct. It was not the intention of the amended section that a Judge has to consider whether sufficient foundation by cross-examination had been laid. There is a certain amount of confusion between what the section says the Court shall do and what it says later on as to the object with which that point of time at which an ing on from day to-day there without delaying the proceedings or embarrassing the defence but such difficulties will disappear as Courts and practitioners become accustomed to the provision of this section, 49 C.L.J. 197 at 203-204.

wherein was expressly taken away by the Legislature and hence the Court cannot refuse the granting of a copy till the accused by his cross-examination showed that there is a contradiction. It cannot be laid down as a general rule that all omissions are contradictions. It is for the Court to decide in each case whether a particular omission is a contradiction, 29 Cr. L.J. 348=108 Ind. Cas. 167. The right procedure when a witness is contradicting himself is to ask the Judge to look into the diary and decide whether the accused should have a copy of the statement and if the copy is granted, the witness's attention must be called to the same before the investigation officer is called to prove the record made by him, 26 A.L.J. 139 at 142 where 39 B. 441 is followed. The only way to contradict a witness by a statement made by him to the police under this section is to prove that portion of his statement to the police which contradicts his evidence and put it to him under S. 145, Ind. Ev. Act, so that the witness may have an opportunity of explaining the contradiction. Statements made to the police at their investigation cannot be used at the trial in any other way. 8 Lah. 603.

If duly proved.—The words 'if duly proved' indicate that the record of the statement cannot be admitted in evidence straightway but the officer before whom the statement was made should ordinarily be examined as to any alleged statement which is relied on by the accused for the purpose of contradicting the witness under this section must therefore, be either proved by the investigating officer or must be admitted by the witness in his cross-examination or must be proved in some other way before it is put to the witness under S. 145 of the Ind. Ev. Act, 52 B. 193 at 199 following 26 Bom. L.R. 965 at 967=26 Cr. L.J. 223=83 Ind. Cas. 1007.

The accused shall be furnished with a copy thereof.—The effect of the amendment is to annul the discretion of the Magistrate or Judge and to make it obligatory on him to give the accused copies of the statements subject only to the exclusion of irrelevant matters which the public interest requires should not be disclosed, 54 C. 307; 29 Cr. L.J. 297=107 Ind. Cas. 817. There is no obscurity in this section so far as the grant of copy is concerned. Two points in particular stand out, and strict adherence to them which unfortunately is rare will obviate much confusion. First the question of furnishing copies of statements recorded by the police do not at all arise until the witness is called for the prosecution, second that the accused be furnished with copies of statements unless they contain something which constitutes a contradiction to what the witnesses state in Court. These two circumstances must coexist, 6 Pat. 39; 7 Pat. 205. Under the code before the amendment there was a discretion left to the Court in the matter of granting copies and the rulings before the amendment would show that the Court could refuse to grant copies for sufficient reasons; but as the section now stands an accused person has an absolute right to get a copy of the statement of a witness that has not been refused for reasons stated in the last paragraph of sub-section (1). The Court could not therefore refuse copies because upon a perusal of the statement previously recorded it considers there is no contradiction between it and the evidence given at the trial, 30 Cr. L.J. 728 at 729=117 Ind. Cas. 213 following 7 Pat. 205.

Proviso (2).—This proviso is new and empowers the Court to exclude any part of the statement from the copy furnished to the accused on the ground of its being not relevant or on grounds of public policy after recording its opinion to that effect. The ruling in 26 M.L.J. 182 which held that the Magistrate when refusing copies is not bound to say that he considered it inexpedient to grant them is no longer law and the amendment is in accordance with 35 C. 560.

Sub-section (2).—S. 82, Ind. Ev. Act, deals with a statement by a person as to the cause of his death or to any of the circumstances which resulted in his death. The dying declaration of a deceased person must be taken in the presence of the accused. If not so taken the writing cannot be admitted to prove the statement made. It may however, be proved in the ordinary way by a person who heard it and the writing may, be used for refreshing the witness's memory, 8 C. 211. Where the dying declaration was recorded by the police and attested by certain witnesses and the writing was sought to be admitted in evidence, it was held that it could not be so admitted, but the statement of the deceased might be proved by the persons who heard what was stated by the deceased, 8 C.W.N. 921; 16 Cr. L.J. 759; 36 C. 659; but to render the statement admissible under this section the accused must be on his trial for causing death, 23 B. 43. In 7 A. 355 (F.B.) it was held that signs made by the deceased in response to questions put as to the cause of his injury which resulted in his death are verbal statements within the meaning of S. 82 of the Ind. Ev. Act and therefore evidence of questions put and signs made by the deceased were admissible in evidence.

163. (1) No police-officer or other person in authority shall offer or make, or cause to be offered or made, any such inducement threat or promise as is mentioned in the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, section 24.

No inducement to be offered.

(2) But no police-officer or other person shall prevent by any caution or otherwise any person from making in the course of any investigation under this Chapter any statement which he may be disposed to make of his own free will.

No police-officer.—The term "Police-officer" should be read in its more comprehensive and popular meaning, 1 C. 207; 1 C.L.R. 21; 17 B. 435. A village headman in Madras is not a police-officer and therefore a confession made to him is not inadmissible in evidence, 7 M. 237. See the explanation to S. 26 of the Evidence Act which says that a Magistrate in that section does not include the head of a village in Madras or Burmah or elsewhere discharging magisterial functions unless such headman is a Magistrate exercising powers of a Magistrate under the Code.

Person in authority.—There is no definition of this expression in the Code or anywhere else. "The test would seem to be, has the person authority to interfere with the matter, and any concern or interest in it, would appear to be sufficient to give him authority"—per Sergeant, C.J., in 9 B.H.C.R. 368 at 369. A Magistrate recording a confession, 10 C. 775; 2 A. 260, an Honorary Magistrate, 1 W.R. (Cr.) 24; a Village Magistrate, 26 M. 33; a Panchayatdar, 11 C.W.N. 904; 9 C.W.N. 474 (contra 4 Bom. L.R. 785; 4 A. 46) have been held to be "persons in authority," but not a medical officer, 8 Bom. L.R. 507=4 Cr. L.J. 49. The master of a vessel is person in authority, 10 B.L.R. Appx. 1.

Shall offer any inducement.—It was argued in 31 A. 594 (F.B.) that the provisions of this section were not merely directory but imperative and prohibitive and when there is nothing in the Code to show what will be the result of any disobedience of the law, the general rule that such illegality resulted in a nullification of all that followed or could be said to follow directly from it; but it was held that it is to the Indian Evidence Act and not to the Code of Criminal Procedure that we have to look as to whether the evidence in point is or is not admissible, the more so as the Code contains Chapter XLI entitled "Special Rules of Evidence." Inducement must have reference in any charge against the accused, 4 A. 46. Mere caution, promise of secrecy, is not inducement, threat or promise within this section, 3 Bom. L.R. 404. When there was any inducement held out to the accused to confess, such confession is inadmissible in evidence against him, 10 C. 775; but the discovery of some fact in consequence of the information so obtained from the accused may make it evidence in so far as it relates to that fact, 26 M. 33. An admission obtained from the accused by persuasion or promise of immunity by the police is inadmissible in evidence, 9 W.R. (Cr.) 16.

Threat or promise.—All oppression and treachery in regard to obtaining confessions are to be avoided by the police under pain of the severest penalties and the practice of employing private individuals to worm out confessions from accused persons is strictly prohibited. Nothing so clearly shows want of defective tact, talent and resource and of patient industry in a police-officer as the resort to foul means to obtain confessions. The most wherein was expressly taken away by the Legislature and hence the Court cannot refuse the granting of a copy till the accused by his cross-examination showed that there is a contradiction. It cannot be laid down as a general rule that all omissions are contradictions. It is for the Court to decide in each case whether a particular omission is a contradiction, 29 Cr. L.J. 349=108 Ind. Cas. 167. The right procedure when a witness is contradicting himself is to ask the Judge to look into the diary and decide whether the accused should have a copy of the statement and if the copy is granted, the witness's attention must be called to the same before the investigation officer is called to prove the record made by him, 26 A.L.J. 139 at 142 where 39 B. 441 is followed. The only way to contradict a witness by a statement made by him to the police under this section is to prove that portion of his statement to the police which contradicts his evidence and put it to him under S. 145, Ind. Ev. Act, so that the witness may have an opportunity of explaining the contradiction. Statements made to the police at their investigation cannot be used at the trial in any other way. 8 Lah. 605.

If duly proved.—The words 'if duly proved' indicate that the record of the statement cannot be admitted in evidence straightway but the officer before whom the statement was made should ordinarily be examined as to any alleged statement which is relied on by the accused for the purpose of contradicting the witness under this section must therefore, be either proved by the investigating officer or must be admitted by the witness in his cross-examination or must be proved in some other way before it is put to the witness under S. 145 of the Ind. Ev. Act, 52 B. 193 at 199 following 26 Bom. L.R. 965 at 967=26 Cr. L.J. 223=83 Ind. Cas. 1007.

The accused shall be furnished with a copy thereof.—The effect of the amendment is to annual the discretion of the Magistrate or Judge and to make it obligatory on him to give the accused copies of the statements subject only to the exclusion of irrelevant matters which the public interest requires should not be disclosed, 54 C. 307; 29 Cr. L.J. 297=107 Ind. Cas. 817. There is no obscurity in this section so far as the grant of copy is concerned. Two points in particular stand out, and strict adherence to them which unfortunately is rare will obviate much confusion. First the question of furnishing copies of statements recorded by the police do not at all arise until the witness is called for the prosecution, second that the accused be furnished with copies of statements unless they contain something which constitutes a contradiction to what the witnesses state in Court. These two circumstances must coexist, 6 Pat. 39; 7 Pat. 205. Under the code before the amendment there was a discretion left to the Court in the matter of granting copies and the rulings before the amendment would show that the Court could refuse to grant copies for sufficient reasons; but as the section now stands an accused person has an absolute right to get a copy of the statement of a witness that has not been refused for reasons stated in the last paragraph of sub-section (1). The Court could not therefore refuse copies because upon a perusal of the statement previously recorded it considers there is no contradiction between it and the evidence given at the trial, 30 Cr. L.J. 728 at 729=117 Ind. Cas. 213 following 7 Pat. 205.

Proviso (2).—This proviso is new and empowers the Court to exclude any part of the statement from the copy furnished to the accused on the ground of its being not relevant or on grounds of public policy after recording its opinion to that effect. The ruling in 26 M.L.J. 182 which held that the Magistrate when refusing copies is not bound to say that he considered it inexpedient to grant them is no longer law and the amendment is in accordance with 35 C. 560.

Sub-section (2).—S. 52, Ind. Ev. Act, deals with a statement by a person as to the cause of his death or to any of the circumstances which resulted in his death. The dying declaration of a deceased person must be taken in the presence of the accused. If not so taken the writing cannot be admitted to prove the statement made. It may however, be proved in the ordinary way by a person who heard it and the writing may, be used for refreshing the witness's memory, 8 C. 211. Where the dying declaration was recorded by the police and attested by certain witnesses and the writing was sought to be admitted in evidence, it was held that it could not be so admitted, but the statement of the deceased might be proved by the persons who heard what was stated by the deceased, 8 C.W.N. 921; 16 Cr. L.J. 757; 38 C. 639; but to render the statement admissible under this section the accused must be on his trial for causing death, 23 B. 43. In 7 A. 335 (F.B.) it was held that signs made by the deceased in response to questions put as to the cause of his injury which resulted in his death are verbal statements within the meaning of S. 82 of the Ind. Ev. Act and therefore evidence of questions put and signs made by the deceased were admissible in evidence.

163. (1) No police-officer or other person in authority shall offer or make, or cause to be offered or made, any such inducement threat or promise as is mentioned in the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, section 24.

No inducement to be offered.

(2) But no police-officer or other person shall prevent by any caution or otherwise any person from making in the course of any investigation under this Chapter any statement which he may be disposed to make of his own free will.

No police-officer.—The term "Police-officer" should be read in its more comprehensive and popular meaning, 1 C. 207; 1 C.L.R. 21; 17 B. 453. A village headman in Madras is not a police-officer and therefore a confession made to him is not inadmissible in evidence, 7 M. 237. "The test would seem to be, has the person authority to interfere with the matter, and any concern or interest in it, would appear to be sufficient to give him authority"—per Sergeant, C.J., in 9 B.H.C.R. 368 at 369. A Magistrate recording a confession, 10 C. 775; 2 A. 260, an Honorary Magistrate, 1 W.R. (Cr.) 24; a Village Magistrate, 26 M. 33; a Panchayatdar, 11 C.W.N. 904; 9 C.W.N. 474 (contra 4 Bom. L.R. 783; 4 A. 46) have been held to be "persons in authority," but not a medical officer, 8 Bom. L.R. 507=4 Cr. L.J. 49. The master of a vessel is person in authority, 10 B.L.R. Appx. 1.

Shall offer any inducement.—It was argued in 31 A. 592 (F.B.) that the provisions of this section were not merely directory but imperative and prohibitive and when there is nothing in the Code to show what will be the result of any disobedience of the law, the general rule that such illegality resulted in a nullification of all that followed or could be said to follow directly from it; but it was held that it is to the Indian Evidence Act and not to the Code of Criminal Procedure that we have to look as to whether the evidence in point is or is not admissible, the more so as the Code contains Chapter XLI entitled "Special Rules of Evidence." Inducement must have reference in any charge against the accused, 4 A. 46. Mere caution, promise of secrecy, is not inducement, threat or promise within this section, 3 Bom. L.R. 404. When there was any inducement held out to the accused to confess, such confession is inadmissible in evidence against him, 10 C. 775; but the discovery of some fact in consequence of the information so obtained from the accused may make it evidence in so far as it relates to that fact, 26 M. 38. An admission obtained from the accused by persuasion or promise of immunity by the police is inadmissible in evidence, 9 W.R. (Cr.) 16.

Threat or promise.—All oppression and treachery in regard to obtaining confessions are to be avoided by the police under pain of the severest penalties and the practice of employing private individuals to worm out confessions from accused persons is strictly prohibited. Nothing so clearly shows want of defective tact, talent and resource and of patient industry in a police-officer as the resort to foul means to obtain confessions. The most ignorant and clumsy can make out a case, if he can torture the culprit till he tells him all about it. The detective talent and sagacity manifest themselves in patient and unremitting industry in weaving round the culprit such a network of undoubted facts and damning circumstances gathered from a variety of sources that he cannot escape Madras Police Manual, Vol. I, p. 95. The precautions contemplated herein for the purpose of recording the confession of an accused person are mandatory and cannot be evaded by the Police. This precaution affords to the accused an opportunity to explain to the Magistrate that he was making the confession not voluntarily but under police pressure or in pursuance of a promise made to him, 29 Cr. L.J. 697-110 Ind. Cas. 329.

164. (1) Any Presidency Magistrate, any Magistrate of the first class and any Magistrate of the second class specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government may, if he is not a police-officer, record any statement or confession made to him in the course of an investigation under this Chapter or at any time afterwards before the commencement of the inquiry or trial.

(2) Such statements shall be recorded in such of the manners hereinafter prescribed for recording evidence as is, in his opinion, best fitted for the circumstances of the case. Such confessions shall be recorded and signed in the manner provided in section 364, and such statements or confessions shall then be forwarded to the Magistrate by whom the case is to be inquired into or tried.

(3) A Magistrate shall, before recording any such confession, explain to the person making it that he is not bound to make a confession and that if he does so it may be used as evidence against him and no Magistrate shall record any such confession unless, upon questioning the person making it, he has reason to believe that it was made voluntarily; and, when he records any confession, he shall make a memorandum at the foot of such record to the following effect :—

"I have explained to (name) that he is not bound to make a confession and that, if he does so, any confession he may make may be used as evidence against him and I believe that this confession was voluntarily made. It was taken in my presence and hearing, and was read over to the person making it and admitted by him to be correct, and it contains a full and true account of the statement made by him.

(Signed) A. B.,
Magistrate."

Explanation.—It is not necessary that the Magistrate receiving and recording a confession or statement should be a Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case.

Amendment.—The words in italics in sub-section (1) are new; third-class Magistrates are now not empowered to record confessions, and second-class Magistrates are to be specially empowered. In sub-section (3) the italicised words are new and are introduced to give better guarantee as to the genuineness of the confession and its voluntary character.

Scope and object of the section.—S. 162, supra, prohibits the written record of statements taken by the police in the course of an investigation being used as evidence, and therefore it is found necessary to have a prima facie correct record made by a Magistrate and which can, without danger, be admitted under S. 35 of the Evidence Act. This section may be regarded as supplementary to the preceding sections of the Code regulating the powers of the police to record statements. This section is not intended to make Magistrates the instruments of police for the purpose of recording statements at their desire. The Magistrate should abstain from recording the evidence of witnesses unless he has some assurance from the witnesses that they attend voluntarily and are making statements to him of their own accord, 7 C.W.N. 345; 4 C.W.N. 49. This section is not confined to the confession of the accused 22 Bom. L.R. 996 at 1003. This section does not apply to a confession recorded in Presidency-town in the course of a police investigation not held under the orders of a Presidency Magistrate under Ss. 155 and 156 (3) supra, 52 C. 67 following 15 C. 515 but see 54 C. 23 and 5 Pat. 177; where it was held distinguishing the Calcutta cases that the change in the law in 1923 was obviously made to allow a Presidency Magistrate to record a confession in the course of a police investigation, otherwise the amendment would be altogether meaningless and S. 1 of the Code bars the application of the section to the police and not to a Magistrate not being a police officer. This section is one of the exceptions to the main principle of evidence that a document recording the confession may not be given in evidence, when the witness to the statement can be produced and can prove it by oral testimony. This section is an exception to the well established rule of law and applying as it does to criminal proceedings its provisions must always be complied within the strictest possible manner. The essentials are, the Magistrate recording the confession shall, before doing so explain to the accused (1) that he is not bound to make a confession at all; (2) that if he does so it may be used as evidence against him and no Magistrate shall record a confession unless upon questioning the accused he has reason to believe the confession to be voluntary and the document when reduced to writing must contain at the foot of it a memorandum of the essentials as stated above. The provisions of this section as amended are somewhat fuller and two new provisions, viz., that the person making it is to be warned that he need not make any confession at all and that if he does so it may be used as evidence against him. If the memorandum contains the proper note at the foot of it it shall be presumed that all the formalities referred to in the footnote have been complied with. Where however it is defective, under S. 483, infra the defect may be cured by examining the Magistrate as a witness who recorded the confession and if his evidence shows that the requirements have been complied with then the confession becomes admissible in evidence, 6 Lah. 53. Under S. 533 infra a defect in form is curable and a defect in substance is not. If the warning was given by the Magistrate, but he failed to embody the fact in the memorandum such a defect is curable. But if the warning had not in fact been given the defect cannot be cured, as the statement cannot be held to have been duly made, 6 Lah. 415. Punctiliousness and care in the recording of a confession are of the utmost importance and it is essential that the Magistrate should satisfy himself in every reasonable way before recording it that it is made voluntarily. The Magistrate should question the person, to find out whether he is making the statement voluntarily. Such questions must be directed to eliciting facts which will enable the Magistrate to judge of the character of the confession and not merely to repeat some formulae which the accused can scarcely appreciate, 28 Cr. L.J. 782-86 Ind. Cas. 414. The Magistrate ought to be satisfied before he proceeds to record the statement or confession that it is voluntarily made, 5 A. 253. The Magistrate cannot under this section require the attendance of any person and has no power to put questions to the witness except to make the meaning of the deponent clear. Nor can a police-officer compel a witness to go before a Magistrate to make a statement under this section, 29 C. 483; 6 C.W.N. 596. If a police-officer has reason to believe that the witnesses are likely to be gained over he should send without any delay the accused and the witnesses to the Magistrate having jurisdiction. This section was not intended to enable the police to obtain an incriminating statement from some person, and as it were to put a seal on that statement by sending in that person to a Magistrate practically under custody, to be examined before the judicial inquiry or trial, and therefore compromised in his evidence when judicial proceedings are regularly taken, 27 C. 295 at 300; see also 29 Bom. L.R. 996 at 1003, where it was held that the very fact that the statements are recorded under this section lead to the presumption or the showing of the prosecution itself that the witnesses whose statements taken down are weak; if the police take the risk and their action is not outside the law it is difficult to see how the Courts can prevent or discourage their doing so. This section only applies to statements recorded before inquiry or trial commences, 32 C. 1085; 16 M. 421; 8 Bom. L.R. 589. Under this section the Magistrate recording a confession is bound to record every question put to the person making the confession. It is of great importance that the provision of law should be obeyed. Otherwise it would be impossible to tell how far the deponent has deposed voluntarily and how far his statement was got out of him by cross-examining him by means of questions put to him, 26 Cr. L.J. 1209=88 Ind. Cas. 729.

Any Presidency Magistrate, etc.—As to power of Presidency Magistrates to record confessions see 5 Pat. 177 distinguishing the cases in 52 C. 67 and 15 C. 595. See also 54 C. 23. All Magistrates are not empowered now to record confessions. Third-class Magistrates have no power to record confessions and second-class Magistrates have to be specially empowered. The explanation to this section makes it clear that neither the fact that a Magistrate has no jurisdiction to inquire into or try the case nor the fact that he will be the Magistrate who will have to try the case later on, will disentitle him from recording a statement or confession under this section. In 3 C.W.N. 387 it was held that if after recording a confession under this section the same Magistrate holds the subsequent inquiry it will not make the confession inadmissible, see also 37 C. 467. Confession to a Magistrate in England or in a foreign country say French possessions is admissible in evidence, 1929 M.W.N. 383.

If he is not a police-officer.—This expression is not defined in the Code. See S. 4 (1) (p) supra, which defines officer in charge of a police station as including the police-officer above the rank of a constable. In 9 M. 97, it was held that there being no definition of the term "police-officer" in the Abkari Act, the definition of the General Police Act XXIV of 1859, S. 1, must be applied. The powers are to be exercised by Magistrates who are not police officers. Even a police officer cannot be employed as a scribe to take down a confession, 9 C. L.J. 55=10 Cr. L.J. 325=3 Ind. Cas. 625. Police officers having Magisterial powers are disqualified from recording statements or confession, 1 C. 207. A village paisi in Bombay and village headman in Madras are not competent to record confession, 17 B. 485; Mad. G. O. No. 2833 J. dated 17-12-1887 but see 7 M. 287. An Abkari officer who is in the conduct of an investigation of an offence punishable under that Act exercises the powers conferred by this Code upon an officer in charge of a police station for the investigation of a cognizable offence, is a police officer within S. 25 of the Ind. Ev. Act and any confession made to him in the course of his investigation under the Abkari Act or under this Code is inadmissible in evidence 51 B. 78 (F.B). So also an inculpatory statement to an Abkari peon who in relation to an Abkari Inspector is in the position of a police constable, 31 Bom. L.R. 49, following 51 B. 78 (F.B.)

May record any statement or confession.—The statement which this section contemplates is the statement of a witness and not of an accused. Such a statement is admissible in evidence to corroborate the statement by a witness before the Committing Magistrate and from which the witness resiles in the Sessions Court, 43 M. 768. The previous statement of a witness recorded under this section is admissible only for the purpose of impeaching the credit of the witness under Ss 144 and 145 of the Ind. Ev. Act and cannot be used as substantive evidence against the accused or for any other purpose. S. 288 infra does not apply to such statements as that section enacts a special provision for the admission against the accused at a Sessions trial of statements made by witnesses before the committing Magistrate after the accused had an opportunity of cross-examining the witnesses, 25 A.L.J. 993 at 993 following 34 Ind. App. 53, 26 M. 191. Sub section (2) of this section requires that the statement contemplated by this section should be recorded in the manner provided by S. 864 infra and the mode prescribed for recording evidence (Ss. 355 to 363) can only relate to the statements of witnesses, while the manner provided by B. 264 infra relates to all statements of accused persons whether amounting to confession or not. If the section had intended the term "statement" as used in it to include statements of accused persons as well as those of witnesses it might have directed the former class of statements to be recorded in the manner prescribed in B. 264 infra instead of directing as it does, that statements within the meaning of the section are to be recorded in the manner prescribed in B. 264 infra. The reason is that the section relates to a stage of the case, namely, the police investigation stage, at which statements of the accused which are other than voluntary confessions and which are to be elicited by his examination are not intended to be obtained from him. Ss. 202 and 312 which are the only provisions of the Code authorising the examination of the accused clearly showing the object of the examination is not to obtain incriminating statements from the accused, but is only to enable him to explain circumstances against him in the evidence adduced, 2 C.W.N. 702 at 715-716; 2 Lah. 129. There is a very clear and important distinction drawn in this section; a statement is to be recorded in one of the modes in which evidence is to be taken; a confession in the manner required by B. 264, infra. The taking of a "statement" appears to presuppose a charge or a reasonable suspicion against some person other than the person making such statement, 9 M. 228 at 233; 39 M. 977 at 979; see also 2 B. 643; 2 Lah. 129 and 8 C.W.N. 22. It is not obligatory under this section on a Magistrate holding an investigation or preliminary inquiry under B. 159, supra to record in writing a confession made to him by an accused, and such confession may be proved by oral testimony of the Magistrate to whom the confession was made, 43 M. 230, but see 49 C. 167 where oral evidence was held inadmissible. Where an accused person makes a statement under this section before a Magistrate not being a confession but of an exculpatory character such statement is still admissible in evidence against the accused at his trial as evidence of a fact relative to the prosecution case. 4 Pat. 327 where 49 C. 167; 2 C.W.N. 702 and 7 A. 646 are referred to. See also 28 Cr. L.J. 1279=88 Ind. Cas. 1055 where it was held that the word "statement" occurring in this section is not limited to a statement by a witness but includes also one made by an accused person not amounting to a confession.

In the course of an investigation or at any time afterwards before commencement of the inquiry or trial.—A confession by an accused person may be recorded in the course of an investigation before the commencement of the magisterial inquiry or trial or during an inquiry or trial and when the accused is examined. This section applies gation is defined in B. 4 (1), (i) supra as including all proceedings under the Code for the collection of evidence by the police. There is nothing to show that investigation must necessarily terminate before the inquiry or trial begins. Both may be simultaneous. The condition requiring a confession to be prior to the commencement of the inquiry is only imposed when the investigation has ceased and not when it is made in the course of the investigation, 37 C. 467 at 496. An admission or confession made by a person complained against before a Magistrate holding an inquiry under B. 202, infra is not a statement recorded under this section or B. 264, infra. It is not recorded under this section because it is not made during the course of an investigation and it is not recorded under B. 264, infra because the person complained against is not an accused, he being not tried for an offence. The Code does not contemplate a statement on the examination of the petitioner, being recorded in such a proceeding, and therefore such a statement is inadmissible in evidence, 32 C. 1085 at 1089. Where an accused is sent to a Magistrate by the police to have his confession recorded and before the Magistrate he makes a statement which did not amount to a confession, nevertheless the statement so recorded was held admissible in evidence as evidence of conduct, 6 Pat. 737. Rule 195 Mad. Cr. Rules of Pr., prohibiting a village Magistrate from recording a confession after the commencement of the police investigation is not a rule of law but is merely a departmental rule violation of which will not render the confession so recorded inadmissible in evidence, 51 M. 167. This decision is criticised in 28 L.W. (Jour.) 58, and good reasons are given for not attaching the same weight to confessions recorded by village Magistrates as is attached to confessions recorded by higher Magistrates and the rule contained in the Cr. Rules of Practice so long as it is not ultra vires of the power of the rule making authority is as much a rule of law as this Code and the Ind. Ev. Act.

Sub-section (2).—This sub-section deals with the manner of recording a confession. It was held in 29 M. 89, following 16 M. 421 that a Magistrate taking statements under this section is acting in discharge of duties imposed on him by law and he is empowered to administer an oath under Ss. 4 and 5 of the Oaths Act, and an investigation under Chapter XIV of the Code is a stage of a judicial proceeding, and a person making on oath a false statement in the course of such an investigation commits an offence under S 193, I.P.C.; see also 22 A 115 and 2 B. 643. But this sub section says that "Such statement shall be recorded in such of the manners hereinafter prescribed for recording evidence," referring evidently to Chapter XXV of the Code which makes no reference as to putting the person on oath. Where a Magistrate records the accused's confession not in the form prescribed by law but puts down the gist of the confession in a narrative form and the only warning given was by asking the accused whether he is willing to make a confession voluntarily but did not put questions to find out the voluntary character of the confession, it was held that there was no compliance with the requirements of law, 30 C.W.N. 354=27 Cr. L.J. 621=94 Ind. Cas. 365. Reading this sub-section with Chapter XXV of the Code there is no necessity to administer an oath. Moreover, with regard to the confessions, no oath could be validly administered to the person making this confession, and the confession so taken on oath is no confession, and is inadmissible in evidence. The object of the section as pointed out already is merely to secure a formal record of statements including confessions prima facie accurate, before a competent authority, so that they may be admissible in evidence, and for this purpose it is not quite necessary to administer an oath; confessions are to be recorded and signed in the manner provided in S. 364, infra, and are to be forwarded to the Magistrate by whom the case is to be inquired into or tried. A confession duly recorded by a Magistrate in a Native State in proceedings under the provisions of the Code is admissible in evidence in a trial before a Magistrate in British India, 12 A. 593; 22 B. 233, but a confession made before a foreign Court cannot be used against an accused person unless it is sworn to, like confessions made to private individuals, Weir II. 125. A Confession made to a Magistrate in England or in a foreign country say the French Possessions is admissible in evidence 1929 M.W.N. 383.

Sub-Section (3).—The whole object and policy of putting questions to the accused before recording a Confession as suggested by Rule 186 of the Mad. Cr. Rules of Practice is that a Magistrate should be satisfied that there was no compulsion by the Police or ill-treatment so as to raise a suspicion as to the voluntary character of the statement and when the spirit of the rule is satisfied it is undesirable that the question should be put in the form showing a total want of trust in the Police. The questions to be put as given in this rule seem to be leading questions suggesting torture or other ill-treatment by the Police and it seems undesirable to put such questions in the form mentioned in the rule 51 M 167. The question of torture or ill-treatment by the police may be omitted to meet this objection. The provisions of this section read with S. 361, infra are imperative and S 559, infra will not render a confession admissible when no attempt has been made to conform to its provisions, 9 M. 224; 39 M. 977; 17 C 862; 18 Cr. L. J. 623=39 Ind. Cas. 991; 18 Cr. L.J. 721=49 Ind. Cas. 721. Failure to give the necessary warning to the accused that if he does make a confession it might be used as evidence against him would render the confession recorded inadmissible in evidence against the accused. 6 Lah 183. Where the certificate appended to the record of the confession did not comply with the provisions of this sub-section, the defect can be cured by examining the Magistrate who had recorded the confession and then it becomes admissible in evidence, 6 Lah. 58; 26 Cr. L.J. 1458=89 Ind. Cas. 1026. The questioning mentioned herein refers only to questioning the accused in order to find out whether the confession is made voluntarily or not, 1 Bom. L. R. 357. Where a Magistrate instead of asking the accused as to the voluntary character of the confession made in the beginning, asked him after the confession was recorded, it was held that the defect was merely one of form and not altering the character of the confession, 40 C. 873. This has no reference to the questioning of the accused as to the subject-matter of his confession, and nothing in the nature of cross-examination of the accused is permissible; questions tending to make a person incriminate himself are highly improper, Weir II, 136; 45 A. 166; 23 B. 221, but where the confession was recorded not in the shape of questions and answers as required by S. 304, infra, but in a simple narrative form and there was nothing to show that the accused was prejudiced thereby, the error will not affect the admissibility of the confession, 8 C. 618; 14 C. 539; 3 A. 233 at 238; 45 A. 166; 23 B. 221. The exact words of the warning which under the provisions of this section must be given to a person making a confession are not very material, provided the Magistrate explains and the person making the statement clearly understands that he need not make the confession, 26 Cr. L.J. 1433=89 Ind. Cas. 1026. When a confession is taken down in a narrative form it is only an irregularity which could be cured by the examination of the Magistrate under S. 533 infra, 9 C.L.J. 55=10 Cr. L.J. 325=3 Ind. Cas. 625. In 13 C.W.N. 861=9 C.L.J. 663=10 Cr. L.J. 125=2 Ind. Cas. 691, it was held that there was no warrant or justification for the intervention of a third party as a questioner, directly or indirectly, of a confessing prisoner. To say the least, the practice is objectionable; nor can the police record a confession and give the same to the Magistrate to enable him to question the accused, 7 C.W.N. 220. It would be going too far to say that a Magistrate recording a confession should not put any question to the person making the confession. But it is equally certain that his position when recording such statement or confession is merely that of a recording Magistrate and that he is in no sense inquiring into the case and that he is in no sense an investigating officer, 23 A.L.J. 719=26 Cr. L.J. 1209=83 Ind. Cas. 729. Under this section the Magistrate should make a serious attempt to satisfy himself that the confession he is to record is voluntary. The expression used is "has reason to believe" Unless the Magistrate is affirmatively satisfied as to the voluntary nature of the confession he ought not to record one, or give the certificate, 25 B. 168. "If a confession proceeds from remorse or a desire to make reparation for the crime, it is admissible; if it flows from hope or fear exacted by a person in authority it is inadmissible."

"In the case of a confession before a Magistrate or before any other person, unless it be shown affirmatively on the part of the prosecution that it was made without the defendant's being induced to make it by any promise of favour or by menaces, or undue terror, it shall not be received in evidence against him" Arch. Cr. Pl. Ev. and Pra. p. 375.

The provisions of this section require that a Magistrate shall not record a confession unless upon questioning the person making it he has reason to believe that he has confessed voluntarily. The duty imposed upon a Magistrate before whom a person is brought to make a confession is plain. He must question the prisoner to discover the voluntary nature of the confession and this questioning must be in pursuance of a real endeavour to find out the object of it, the requirement not being satisfied by a few formal questions. In fact the wording of the sub-section contemplates that the Magistrate shall hear the confession first without making a record that he shall then put questions to ascertain its voluntary character and if he has reason to believe that it is voluntary he may record the confession writing out in full every question put by him and every answer given and following the provisions of S. 364 infra the questioning of the person before recording a confession is a matter of substance and not of mere form and the omission cannot be cured by any evidence under S. 533 infra. In view of the propensity of the police to induce prisoners to confess, the Legislature has imposed on Magistrates the duty of making a substantial inquiry for themselves as to the voluntary nature of a confession and unless such inquiry is made, a confession made even before a Magistrate is not admissible in evidence, 3 L.B.R. 173=4 Cr. L.J. 198. Asking the accused about the voluntary nature of the confession at the end of the statement instead of at the beginning is only a defect in form and does not alter the character of the confession. The whole confession should not be rejected merely because it is partly bad, 40 C. 873. Care and circumspection is to be exercised in recording a confession. Questions put to the accused to ascertain the volun.

tary nature of the confession should be recorded. An accused should be warned of the consequences if he falsely implicates himself in the hope of release and should be asked if the police or any other subjected him to ill-treatment. It is not sufficient for a Magistrate to put one comprehensive question as to the nature of the confession. The Magistrate should consciously satisfy himself that the man is a free agent and his confession is voluntary, 15 Cr. L.J. 633=25 Ind. Cas. 833. Where the committing Magistrate who recorded a confession did not sign the certificate as required by this section and did not ask the accused whether the statement which he was going to make, was voluntary, but merely put the question whether he made the statement out of his free will, it was held that the evidence of the recording Magistrate saying that he had observed all the provisions of this section was sufficient to make the confession admissible and the question put by him whether the confession was made out of accused's free will was equivalent to asking him whether he made the confession voluntarily, 3 Pat. 872; 24 Cr. L.J. 618=73 Ind. Cas. 506.

Where the confession is made to a Magistrate during the course of a police investigation, there is a duty cast on the Magistrate to question the accused to satisfy himself, that the statement was made voluntarily and when such confession is subsequently retracted, the Court before admitting it in evidence must come to a definite conclusion as to its voluntary character, 25 Cr. L.J. 116=76 Ind. Cas. 180. The Magistrate should be particularly careful when the accused is produced before him from police custody. The first question which a Magistrate should put in such a case is how long has the accused been in police custody, 25 B. 543, and this fact and the length of time during which the police custody continued are to be considered as very material in judging whether a confession is voluntary or not, 13 C.W.N. 861=9 C.L.J. 663=10 Cr. L.J. 125=2 Ind. Cas. 681; 7 C.W.N. 457; 22 M. 15. A confession should be recorded in the actual words used by the accused, 4 A 46. The memorandum under this section is quite distinct from the memorandum required under S. 364 (2) infra. An English memorandum is not required in the case of a confession recorded under this section, 14 C. 539. The memorandum to be valid need not be written on the same day the confession is recorded, 6 B. 283, but a confession does not become inadmissible merely because the memorandum has not been written in the exact form prescribed, 3 A. 338; 22 M. 15. The memorandum need not be in the Magistrate's handwriting, 8 W.R. (Cr.) 53, but it must appear at the foot of record and signed by him, 3 C.W.N. 381. When there is no memorandum at all the Court refused to admit the confession, in evidence, 2 C.W.N. 702; but oral evidence as to the confession may be taken when the Magistrate had not properly recorded a confession under this section, 2 B.H.C.R. 397. When a Magistrate inadvertently omits to certify the voluntary nature of a confession recorded by him under this section, the defect may be cured by the evidence of the Magistrate as a witness, 12 Cr. L.J. 15=9 Ind. Cas. 143. See also S. 533 infra which cures defects of this sort; when a Magistrate who recorded a confession appended to it a certificate that he believed the confession was not voluntary, held that the confessional statement was inadmissible for want of a certificate under sub-section (3) of the section, 7 Cr. L. Rev. 38. See also 9 Cr. L.J. 297=1 Ind. Cas. 444. Where the certificate required by the section is duly recorded under this sub-section and appended to the record of the confession the presumption is that the precaution described in the section was duly taken. The law does not anywhere state what questions the Magistrate who is asked to record a confession must put in order to satisfy himself as to the direction contained in the section, 28 Cr. L.J. 107=104 Ind. Cas. 247. There is nothing in this or any other section in the Code which prohibits the Magistrate from recording a statement if the accused chooses to make one before he is placed on his trial. Such a statement if proved to be voluntary is not only admissible, but is of the greatest value as a fact relevant to the probability or improbability of his guilt, 24 Cr. L.J. 723=73 Ind. Cas. 863. The previous statement of a witness recorded under this section can be used as provided by Ss. 145 and 155 Ind. Ev. Act but it cannot be used as substantive evidence of the defects contained therein, 50 A. 242.

Explanation.—The explanation to this section was added in the Code of 1893 to meet the divergent views which existed in the Allahabad and Madras High Courts. Where a third-class Magistrate not empowered to commit for trial records a statement under this section in a case triable exclusively by a Court of Session the statement is not evidence in a stage of judicial proceeding within Fs. 191 and 193, I.P.C., and when such a statement is subsequently retracted before a Magistrate having jurisdiction, that will not furnish a basis for an alternative charge of giving false evidence in a judicial proceeding. 14 Bom. L.R. 753=13 Cr. L.J. 707=16 Ind. Cas. 517.

165. (1) Whenever an officer in charge of a police-station, or a police-officer making an investigation has reasonable grounds for believing that anything necessary for the purposes of an investigation into any offence which he is authorised to investigate may be found in any place within the limits of the police-station of which he is in charge, or to which he is attached, and that such thing cannot in his opinion be otherwise obtained without undue delay, such officer may, after recording in writing the grounds of his belief and specifying in such writing, so far as possible, the thing for which search is to be made, search, or cause search to be made, for such thing, in any place within the limits of such station.

(2) A police-officer proceeding under sub-section (1) shall, if practicable, conduct the search in person.

(3) If he is unable to conduct the search in person, and there is no other person competent to make the search present at the time, he may, after recording in writing his reasons for so doing require any officer subordinate to him to make the search, and he shall deliver to such subordinate officer an order in writing specifying the place to be searched and, so far as possible, the thing for which search is to be made; and such subordinate officer may thereupon search for such thing in such place.

(4) The provisions of this Code as to search-warrants and the general provisions as to searches contained in section 102 and section 103 shall, so far as may be, apply to a search made under this section.

(5) Copies of any record made under sub-section (1) or sub-section (3) shall forthwith be sent to the nearest Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence and the owner or occupier of the place searched shall on application be furnished with a copy of the same by the Magistrate:

Provided that he shall pay for the same unless the Magistrate for some special reason thinks fit to furnish it free of cost.

Amendment.—Sub-sections (1) and (2) of this section which deal with searches by police-officers have been redrafted in order to obviate the difficulties arising from the decisions of the Calcutta High Court in 12 C.W.N. 1016 and 13 C.W.N. 343. The amendment in sub-section (3) is only verbal and sub-section (4) applies to provisions of Fs. 102 and 103 as to searches made under a warrant to searches made under this section.—Statement of Objects and Reasons. Sub-section (5) is new.

Scope of the section.—The power of search given under this section is incidental to the conduct of investigation into an offence which the police-officer is authorized by law to investigate, Ss. 155 and 156 supra. Therefore if he makes an investigation into a non-cognizable offence without the order of a Magistrate, he has no right to enter into a house to make a search under this section, 24 C. 691. The provisions of this section are so strict that before entering a house an investigating officer has to specify in writing the thing for which search is to be made and also the grounds of his belief that such a thing would be found in the house which he desired to enter. A promiscuous entry into a house is not permitted to an investigating officer simply to satisfy himself as to the truth of an allegation made by a complainant or an accused person or a witness and by such a promiscuous entry the police-officer cannot be said to be acting in the discharge of his duty as a public officer, 26 A.L.J. 410. Before the amendment the section authorized a search for a specific document or thing but now the power to search is very much wider. The section seems to authorize a general search but at the same time the object seems to be to discourage a general search by requiring as far as possible to specify the thing for which the search is to be made. Search warrants are a species of process exceedingly arbitrary in character and inasmuch as they are resorted to only for very urgent and satisfactory reasons, the rules of law which pertain to them are of more than ordinary strictness. In the first place, it is common learning that they are only to be granted in the cases expressly authorized by law and not generally in such cases until it has been shown before a responsible officer on oath that a crime has been committed and the officer has reason to believe that the offender or the property which is the subject or the instrument of crime is concealed in some specified house or place. The law clearly intends that evidence shall be given of such facts as shall satisfy the officer issuing the warrant that there is reason to believe that a house or room or place contains property which is the subject of the offence. Search warrants are always open to very serious objection and very great particularity is justly required by law in cases, where they are authorized before the privacy of man's premises is allowed to be invaded by the minister of the law, 53 C. 718. But the section requires two safeguards that a police-officer is to record in writing the grounds of his belief and give his reasons as required by this section and the thing to be searched should be specified as far as possible, see 23 A.L.J. 1037. This section requires, before it can be brought into operation, that there must be an offence which the police-officer is authorized to investigate. As soon as the police-officer suspected that a person is not producing the real thing, and there was in his opinion an offence committed, he could act under this section, but the suspicion that there is an offence committed and therefore a search is to be made, must be formed honestly, 27 B. 590 at 593. This section now authorizes a general search on the chance that something may be found, differing from the view expressed in 35 C. 304; 16 C.W.N. 1078; 38 A. 14. In the Joint Committee's report we find that the amendment was made to counteract the effect of the Calcutta decisions only in 38 C. 304 and 12 C.W.N. 1016, which had created unnecessary difficulties, 13 A.L.J. 691. It was held in 41 C. 261 that this section authorises the search of the house of an accused person for specific documents and things necessary to the conduct of an investigation into an offence but now the words 'anything necessary for the purpose of an investigation into an offence' give much wider power of search. See 23 A.L.J. 1037= 27 Cr. L.J. 11=91 Ind. Cas. 43.

Anything necessary for the purposes of an investigation.—A promiscuous entry into houses is not permitted simply to satisfy as to the truth of the allegations made by a complainant or an accused person or a witness but before entry the officer has to specify in writing the thing for which a search is to be made and the ground of his belief that such a thing necessary for the purpose of his investigation will be found in the house he desired to enter, 26 A.L.J. 410. A general search means a search not in respect of specific documents or things which the officer considered were necessary or desirable for the purpose of the investigation in hand but a roving commission for the purpose of discovering documents or things which might involve persons in criminal liability. If for instance to go and search the house of a well-known budmash with the hope of finding stolen property in his house, not the property involved in a case which the police might have been investigating or for any specific article that would be described as a general search for stolen property; in other words where the police search a house for stolen articles generally and not for specific articles mentioned by a complainant as having been stolen, 27 Cr. L.J. 1195 at 1197=97 Ind. Cas. 933 where 35 C. 354 dissent. This section does not empower a police officer to search for the purpose of discovering arms generally. The things searched for, must be necessary for the purposes of the investigation into any offence which he is authorized to investigate, 8 C.L.J. 75. Search is to be conducted only as a step in the investigation of a completed crime which he is authorized to investigate.

Sub-section (2).—This sub-section does not mean that the investigating officer personally conducting the search must himself make the search, e.g., ransack boxes, examine the roof, dig the floor, or otherwise seek for the property, nor is it necessary that these must take place under his very eyes. The meaning of the sub-section is that the officer should be present on the spot and should exercise a general supervision and in case he is unable to be present at the search, he is to depute in writing one of his subordinates to search in his stead under sub-section (3), 23 M.L.J. 445=(1912) M.W.N. 1111=13 Cr. L.J. 763=17 Ind. Cas. 75.

Sub-section (3).—The object is to discourage general search by insisting that the officer should specify as far as possible the thing for which search is to be made. Where the S. H. O. or the officer conducting the investigation is unable to conduct the search in person, he may depute a subordinate officer by a written order to conduct the search, 17 M.L.J. 323=6 Cr. L.J. 103, 23 M.L.J. 445=13 Cr. L.J. 763=17 Ind. Cas. 75. An order in writing specifying the document or thing for which search is to be made should be delivered to the subordinate officer and a search conducted without such written order is illegal and any resistance is no offence, 38 A. 14; 13 A.L.J. 691; 6 C.L.J. 753, 7 N.W.P.H.C.R. 209, 7 B.H.C.R. (Cr. Cas.) 50; 16 Cr. L.J. 753=31 Ind. Cas. 353. When an Inspector of Police acting under this section sent a constable to search the house, himself sitting outside, the accused asked for a list of articles he had come to search for and the list was not produced, whereupon the accused objected to the search and pushed the constable out held that no offence was committed by the accused as the Inspector should have himself conducted the search and was not justified in sitting outside and asking the constable to search without giving him a written order specifying the articles to be searched for, 17 M.L.J. 323=6 Cr. L.J. 103. If a constable searches without a written order he does not exercise the power of a public servant under this sub-section and S. 99, I.P.O., has no application to such a case, 6 C.L.J. 753; see also 38 C. 433, where it was held that a public functionary authorized by statute to make a search must in exercising that authority act within the limits of the statute itself.

Sub-section (4).—Before the amendment it was held in 23 M.L.J. 445=1912 M.W.N. 1111=13 Cr. L.J. 736=17 Ind. Cas. 75, that the provisions of S. 103 supra, did not apply to a search under this section but now the provisions of Ss. 102 and 101 supra are made applicable. See Ss. 96, 98, 100, 105 and 151 as to search-warrants. For powers to search under Special laws see the Arms Act XI of 1878, Excise Act, Opium Act, Gambling Act, etc., which contain special provisions regarding searches. See also S. 153, supra, as to inspection of weights and measures.

Sub-section (5).—This is a new provision introduced in the Code by the Amending Act 1923 and it is obviously intended as an extra safeguard to protect individuals against general or roving searches. To hold that an omission to comply with the provisions of this sub-section did not affect the powers of search given to police officers under the Code would have the effect of rendering this sub-section in many cases a dead letter. It is essential that a police officer conducting a search under this and S. 166, infra, should send forthwith to the nearest Magistrate copies of the record that he has prepared before conducting the search and when this is not done a conviction for resisting the police and deterring them from discharging their duty to search a suspected person's house cannot be sustained, 43 C.L.J. 164=27 Cr. L.J. 542 (1)=93 Ind. Cas. 1038 (1). The right to apply for copies is now embodied in this sub-section. The order directing it to be filed by the Magistrate is tantamount to a refusal to grant copies applied for. Such order cannot be treated as an extra judicial or executive order when a statutory duty is cast upon the Magistrate to grant the application and the order which is actually in disregard to the specific provisions of law is therefore illegal. The powers of the High Court under S. 435, infra, are very comprehensive and such an order comes within the purview of that section, 26 A.L.J. 703=29 Cr. L.J. 663=110 Ind. Cas. 215.

166. (1) An officer in charge of a police-station or a police-officer not being below the rank of Sub-Inspector making

When officer in charge of police station may require another to issue search-warrant, an investigation may require an officer in charge of another police-station, whether in the same or a different district, to cause a search to be made in any case, in which the former officer might cause such search to be made, within the limits of his own station.

(2) Such officer, on being so required, shall proceed according to the provisions of section 165, and shall forward the thing found, if any, to the officer at whose request the search was made.

(3) Whenever there is reason to believe that the delay occasioned by requiring an officer in charge of another police-station to cause a search to be made under sub-section (1) might result in evidence of the commission of an offence being concealed or destroyed, it shall be lawful for an officer in charge of police-station or a police-officer making an investigation under this Chapter to search, or cause to be searched, any place in the limits of another police-station, in accordance with the provisions of section 165, as if such place were within the limits of his own station.

(4) Any officer conducting a search under sub-section (3) shall forthwith send notice of the search to the officer in charge of the police-station within the limits of which such place is situate, and shall also send with such notice a copy of the list (if any) prepared under section 103, and shall also send to the nearest Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence, copies of the records referred to in section 165, sub-sections (1) and (3).

(5) The owner or occupier of the place searched shall, on application, be furnished with a copy of any record sent to the Magistrate under sub-section (4):

Provided that he shall pay for the same unless the Magistrate for some special reason thinks fit to furnish it free of cost.

Amendment.—Sub-sections (3), (4) and (5) are new, and added in certain circumstances to empower an S. H. O. to search or direct a search of places within the limits of another station.

Under this section if a theft is committed within the limits of a police-station and if the property is concealed within the limits of another station, the officer in charge of the station where the theft was committed can requisition the aid of the officer in charge of the station where the thief had secreted the property to cause a search to be made, 42 M. 446 at 449.

167. (1) Whenever any person is arrested and detained in custody, and it appears that the investigation cannot be completed within the period of twenty-four hours fixed by section 61, and there are grounds for believing that the accusation or information is well founded, the officer in charge of the police-station or the police officer making the investigation if he is not below the rank of Sub-Inspector shall forthwith transmit to the nearest Magistrate a copy of the entries in the diary hereinafter prescribed relating to the case, and shall at the same time forward the accused to such Magistrate.

(2) The Magistrate to whom an accused person, is forwarded under this section may, whether he has or has not jurisdiction to try the case, from time to time authorise the detention of the accused in such custody as such Magistrate thinks fit, for a term not exceeding fifteen days in the whole. If he has not jurisdiction to try the case or commit it for trial, and considers further detention unnecessary, he may order the accused to be forwarded to a Magistrate having such jurisdiction :

Provided that no Magistrate of the third class, and no Magistrate of the second class not especially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government shall authorise detention in the custody of the police.

(3) A Magistrate authorising under this section detention in the custody of the police shall record his reasons for so doing.

(4) If such order is given by a Magistrate other than the District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate, he shall forward a copy of his order, with his reasons for making it, to the Magistrate to whom he is immediately subordinate.

Amendment.—The italicised words in sub-section (1) and the proviso to sub-section (2) are new. By the new amendment Third Class Magistrates are deprived of the power of ordering detention in police custody under this section and Second Class Magistrates are to be specially authorised by Local Government for ordering detention in police custody,

Scope of the section.—This section applies only to proceedings under Chapter XIV of the Code and not to those under S 110 supra, where the Magistrate has no power to remand an accused person to custody, 39 M. 928. S 344 contains a similar provision to remand but it refers to cases in which inquiry or trial has already begun by a Magistrate or is about to begin, 51 C. 402 ; 23 B. 32 ; 54 C. 218 at 230. Under the section the accused is not before a Magistrate for inquiry or trial and the police are to complete, if possible their investigation and place the accused before the Magistrate for an authorisation to detain the accused in their custody, see 11 M. 93.

Any investigation under this Chapter.—This section in terms applies only to investigation under Chapter XIV of the Code and gives no power to a Magistrate to remand an accused person in custody under Chapter VII of the Code, 39 M. 928 ; 5 Bom. L.R. 27 ; 8 C.W.N. 779.

Shall forthwith transmit to the nearest Magistrate a copy of the entries in the diary. It is only when the investigation cannot be completed within the twenty-four hours prescribed by S. 61, supra that the police-officer is to transmit a report under this section. The nearest Magistrate may be one having jurisdiction or not. It is upon these entries in the special diary that the Magistrate is to decide and to form his opinion as to whether or not the accused is to be detained in custody. This must contain at least a summary of the statements made by the persons who had been examined under S. 161, supra, by the police-officer making the investigation, 19 A. 330 at 404. The Magistrate may, on a perusal of the entries in the diary relating to the case to which the accused has no access, from time to time, authorize the detention of the accused in custody for a term not exceeding 15 days on the whole, 36 C. 166.

Shall at the same time forward the accused to such Magistrate.—The accused should be brought promptly before the Magistrate. No detention longer than is necessary of the accused is permitted by law. For the words "accused if any" the words "accused if in custody" have been substituted in consequence of the amendment in S. 157, supra.

May authorize the detention of the accused in such custody.—Detention in police custody is different from remand. The detention contemplated herein is practically time granted to the police to complete their investigation and decide either to release the accused on his own bond for appearance in Court or to send up a charge sheet under S. 170, infra, for inquiry before a Court, 50 B. 741. S. 344, infra contemplates a remand to custody in inquiries or trials. The remand is to Magisterial lock-up or to jail and not to police custody. This section contemplates custody during police investigation, whereas S. 344 refers to cases already on the file of the Magistrate in which the inquiry or trial has begun or is about to begin. The investigating police-officer may apply immediately to the nearest Magistrate for an order authorising detention of the accused in police custody. The Magistrate must be satisfied that there are substantial grounds for suspecting that the accused has committed a definite offence and his remaining in the custody of the police is really necessary, 7 C.W.N. 457; 11 C.W.N. 554.

For a term not exceeding fifteen days on the whole.—The words "on the whole" were introduced in the 1898 Code. The sum total of the periods of detention in custody must not exceed 15 days, 41 M. 98; 23 B. 32; 51 C. 402 and the term must be limited as much as possible, 11 C.W.N. 554. The intention of the Legislature is that an accused person should be brought before the Magistrate competent to try or commit for trial with as little delay as possible, 51 C. 402; 6 M. 63. The law as laid down in the section of the Code vis., S. 61, this section, S. 169 and S. 170 seems to be this, that after the expiration of the maximum period of 15 days' detention of an accused person and the additional time necessary to bring him before the Magistrate allowed under S. 61 and this section, an accused person must either be released by the police under S. 169 infra, security for his appearance, if and when so required being taken, or the Magistrate empowered in that behalf must either take cognizance if he has before him a police report (which ordinarily be a report in the form laid down in S. 173, and which he thinks makes out a prima facie case) or he must release him, 28 C.W.N. 490 at 492=26 Cr.L.J. 68=83 Ind. Cas 628. The power to remand given under this section, is to detain the accused person in custody while the police make their investigation and in a proper case to commence the inquiry. But the period of detention is limited to 15 days on the whole, the custody contemplated by S. 344 infra is quite different and is intended for under-trial prisoners. Detention after a police report that there was no evidence against the accused is illegal unless there is a re-arrest of the accused under S. 55 supra, 43 A. 186; 41 A. 483.

Proviso.—This proviso is new. Third class Magistrates and Second class Magistrates, unless specially empowered, are not entitled to authorize detention in police custody now.

Shall record his Reasons.—The section requires that before a Magistrate remands an accused person to custody, the accused must first be produced before the Magistrate and he must also record his reasons for so remanding, 16 C.W.N. 445=13 Cr. L.J. 65=13 Ind. Cas. 721. Whenever a Magistrate remands an accused person to police custody under this section he should record his reasons for his order G O. No. 918 Jud. dated 16-9-10, Rule 52 Mad. Cr. Ruls of Pr. and under Rules 53, copies of orders of remand to be sent by Subordinate Magistrates to the superior Magistrates within 24 hours.

168. When any subordinate police-officer has made any investigation under this chapter, he shall report the result of such investigation to the officer in charge of the police-station.

Report of investigation by subordinate police-officer.

This section directs that a subordinate police-officer who has made any investigation shall report the result of such investigation to the officer in charge of a police-station. The report of the result of an investigation cannot be said to be an act or record of an act of a public servant, 20 M. 139 (F.B.) at 193. The report made under this section is not a public document within the meaning of S. 74 of the Evidence Act and consequently an accused person is not entitled before trial to have copies of such report, 20 M. 189 (F.B.) See S 173 (4) which enacts that the accused is entitled to such copies before the commencement of the trial.

169. If, upon an investigation under this Chapter, it appears to the officer in charge of the police-station or to the police-officer making the investigation that there is not sufficient evidence or reasonable ground of suspicion to justify the forwarding of the accused to a Magistrate, such officer shall, if such person is in custody, release him on his executing a bond, with or without sureties, as such officer may direct, to appear, if and when so required, before a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence on a police-report and to try the accused or commit him for trial.

Release of accused when evidence deficient.

Amendment.—The words "to the officer making the investigation" have been newly added and this gives power to such an officer to release an accused person on bail if there is not sufficient evidence against him. This is in accordance with paragraph 156 of the Report of the Police Commission.

Release accused on Executing bond.—The power of a police-officer to admit to bail is only provisional, and when the Magistrate determines that there is a prima facie case of non-bailable offence, the accused should be re-arrested and forwarded to the Magistrate. Ratanlal 121. But a police officer cannot entertain an application for withdrawal of the complaint or for compounding the offence, which is a judicial act, the exercise of which is for the Magistrate under Ss 248 and 245, infra. The power under this section may be exercised by a superior police-officer under S. 559, infra although such superior officer may not have made the investigation himself. The liability of a surety is strictly conditioned by the terms of his bond and if he binds to produce the accused at a particular time and place and does so, his liability is discharged, and he cannot be held liable for subsequent non-appearance of the accused, 23 Cr. L.J. 68=65 Ind. Cas. 420, For form of bond see form No. 25 of Sch. V.

If and when so required.—The use of the word 'if' is significant as in most cases the Magistrate will not require the appearance of the person released under this section. Where, however, his appearance is required an order fixing a day for appearance is to be made as in the next section, without which there cannot be any forfeiture of the bond for any failure to comply with its terms.

170. (1) If, upon an investigation under this Chapter, it appears to the officer in charge of the police-station that there is sufficient evidence or reasonable ground as aforesaid, such officer shall forward the accused under custody to a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence upon a police-report and to try the accused or commit him for trial or, if the offence is bailable and the accused is able to give security, shall take security from him for his appearance before such Magistrate on a day fixed and for his attendance from day to day before such Magistrate until otherwise directed.

Case to be sent to Magistrate when evidence is sufficient.

(2) When the officer in charge of a police-station forwards an accused person to a Magistrate or takes security for his appearance before such Magistrate under this section, he shall send to such Magistrate any weapon or other article which it may be necessary to produce before him, and shall require the complainant (if any) and so many of the persons who appear to such officer to be acquainted with the circumstances of the case as he may think necessary, to execute a bond to appear before the Magistrate as thereby directed and prosecute or give evidence (as the case may be) in the matter of the charge against the accused.

(3) If the Court of the District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate is mentioned in the bond, such Court shall be held to include any Court to which such Magistrate may refer the case for inquiry or trial, provided reasonable notice of such reference is given to such complainant or persons.

(4) Repealed by Act II of 1926, Section 2.

(5) The officer in whose presence the bond is executed shall deliver a copy thereof to one of the persons who executed it, and shall then send to the Magistrate the original with his report.

Shall forward the accused under custody, etc.—When the police investigation discloses a prima facie case against the accused he should at once be sent in custody to the Magistrate having jurisdiction, 5 W.R. (Cr.) 6 if the offence is bailable and if the accused is able to furnish security then the police-officer shall take security for his appearance before the Magistrate on a particular day.

Shall take security.—This is the only section which empowers a police-officer to take security for the appearance before a Magistrate, but for exercising this power the investigation must be complete and a substantial case is to be made out against the accused.

For form of bond, see Sch. V form No. 25.

Empowered to take cognizance of the offence upon police report.—Having regard to these words, it was contended that S. 170 (1) (b) infra can only refer to non-cognizable offences and not to cognizable offences, and that in the case of cognizable offences by the clear words of this section a Magistrate can only take cognizance upon a police report as contemplated by S. 173, infra and upon no other report. But the contention was overruled and it was held the Magistrate is empowered by S. 100 (1) (b) to take cognizance of both cognizable and non-cognizable offences upon a police report 28 C.W.N. 490. See in this connection the Full Bench ruling in 49 M. 525 followed in 28 Cr. L.J. 821—104 Ind. Cas. 437; 51 B. 493; 9 Lah 230.

Appearance before such Magistrate on a day fixed.—A recognizance taken from an accused person binding him to appear in Court should specify the particular day he is to appear in Court.

Sub-section (2).—This sub-section and S. 173, infra refer only to witnesses for the complainant and cannot refer to the witnesses of the accused. The day fixed for the attendance of witnesses should as a rule be the same day fixed for the appearance of the accused or the probable date of his reaching the Magistrate's Court. S. 171 expressly refers to complainant's witnesses who can be detained in custody under special circumstances. Further Ss. 121, 124 and 247 assume that when the case is heard by the Magistrate, witnesses for the accused will not generally be present.

For form of bond, see Sch. V form No. 25.

Sub-section (5).—The report referred to herein is the report contemplated by S. 173, infra.

Complainants and witnesses not to be required to accompany police-officer.

171. No complainant or witness on his way to the Court of the Magistrate shall be required to accompany a police-officer, or shall be subjected to unnecessary restraint or inconvenience, or required to give any security for his appearance other than his own bond :

Complainants and witnesses not to be subjected to restraint.

Provided that, if any complainant or witness refuses to attend or to execute a bond as directed in section 170, the officer in charge of the police-station may forward him in custody to the Magistrate, who may detain him in custody until he executes such bond, or until the hearing of the case is completed.

Recusant complainant or witness may be forwarded in custody.

Scope of the Section.—This section refers to the sending up of the complainant and his witnesses under S. 170 (2) for recording their evidence in the inquiry or trial and does not justify taking a bond or sending up in custody a witness, whose statement the police wish to have recorded under S. 164, supra. In 4 C.W.N. 49 at 54. Prinsep and Hill, JJ., observed "there is no warrant for the police to subject a witness to any unnecessary restraint whatsoever. The law enables the police to send a witness, who shows an indication of unwillingness to attend the Court, to custody but beyond that they have no power over such persons. The control admittedly exercised over Koshila was, in our opinion, an unnecessary restraint or inconvenience in direct disregard of S. 171 and certainly not justified under the explanation given by the police and accepted by the Sessions Judge. It is impossible to accept the evidence so obtained as that of a witness speaking voluntarily, and if it be said that the witness did not speak voluntarily before the Magistrate, but under the influence of the police, it is impossible to say how far any of the statements can be accepted as true. It would be impossible to convict the appellants solely on such evidence." There is however nothing in the section preventing the complainant and the witnesses from going with the police-officer, especially when they have to go through wild and uninhabited tract, to the Court, and the escort of the police and their protection will be quite welcome to them. The words 'shall be required' leave an option to the complainant and the witnesses,

172. (1) Every police-officer making an investigation under this Chapter shall day by day enter his proceedings in the investigation in a diary, setting forth the time at which the information reached him, the time at which he began and closed his investigation the place or places visited by him, and a statement of the circumstances ascertained through his investigation.

(2) Any Criminal Court may send for the police-diaries of a case under inquiry or trial in such Court, and may use such diaries, not as evidence in the case, but to aid it in such inquiry or trial. Neither the accused nor his agents shall be entitled to call for such diaries, nor shall he or they be entitled to see them merely because they are referred to by the Court; but, if they are used by the police-officer who made them, to refresh his memory, or if the Court uses them for the purpose of contradicting such police-officer, the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, section 161 or section 145, as the case may be, shall apply.

Scope and object of the section.—This section does not deal with the recording of statements made by witnesses and in this section no mention whatever is made as to the recording of statements of witnesses. Ss. 161 and 162 supra deal with different portions of the investigation. What is intended to be recorded under this section is what investigating officer did, the places where he went, the people he visited and what he saw etc. So the statement recorded under this section is a privileged one. But there is no distinction between statements recorded under S. 162 supra and a statement recorded under this section. If a police officer purports to record a statement, the amended new S. 162 supra comes into play and the police can no longer claim any privilege in respect of that statement on the ground that was not recorded under S. 162 supra but under this section. It is quite immaterial whether the statement is labelled as recorded under this section 31 C.W.N. 940=45 C.L.J. 561 at 563=28 Cr. L.J. 803=104 Ind. Cas. 245. This section does not provide for recording statements and statements recorded in whatever form the defence has a right to ask for copies of such statements and use them to contradict the prosecution witnesses 32 C.W.N. 280=26 Cr. L.J. 531=109 Ind. Cas. 355. The object of case diaries under this section is that as the early stages of the investigation which follows the commission of a crime must necessarily in the vast majority of cases be left to the police until the honesty, the capacity, the discretion and judgment of the police can be thoroughly trusted, it is necessary for the protection of the public against criminals, for the vindication of the law and for the protection of those who are charged with having committed a criminal offence that the Magistrate or Judge before whom the case is for investigation or for trial should have the means of ascertaining whether the information was true, false or misleading which was obtained from day to-day by the police-officer investigating the case and what were the lines of investigation upon which the police acted. 16 C.W.N. 145 at p. 179=13 Cr. L.J. 65=13 Ind. Cas. 721, relying on 19 A. 390 at 397.

Shall day by day enter his proceedings in a diary.—The diary kept under this section is generally known as the special or case diary in which the police officer is required to enter his proceedings day by day, and it does not, in the list of matters to be entered therein, appear to allow any oral statement of witnesses to be recorded. It is strictly privileged and may only be used by the Court, not as evidence in the case but to aid it in the inquiry or trial, neither the accused nor his agents shall be entitled to call for such diaries, nor shall they be entitled to see them merely because they are referred to by the Court; but

If they are used by the police-officer who made them to refresh his memory, or if the Court uses them for the purpose of contradicting such police-officer, the provisions of S. 161 or S. 145 of the Indian Evidence Act shall apply, 33 C. 1023 at 1026; 19 A. 390 (F.B.); 44 C. 876 (P.C.); 10 C.W.N. 600=3 Cr. L.J. 408; 27 C. 293; 23 C. 361; 9 C. 455; 21 A. 159; 1908 A.W.N. 22, but whether the statements of witnesses should be entered in the special diary or not, there is a conflict of opinion. Diaries prepared prior to the commencement of the investigation into an offence are not part of the special diary and the provisions of this section do not apply to them, 14 C.W.N. 1114. See the observations of Edgo, C.J., in 19 A. 390 at 397-89 as to the object of the case diaries: "any one of the public may be the victim of a crime or may be unjustly charged with the commission of a crime. The early stages of the investigation which follows on the commission of a crime must necessarily in the vast majority of cases be left to the police, and until the honesty, the capacity, the discretion and judgment of the police, can be thoroughly trusted, it is necessary for the protection of the public against criminals, for the vindication of the law, and for the protection of those who are charged with having committed a criminal offence that the Magistrate or Judge before whom the case is for investigation or for trial, should have the means of ascertaining what was the information, true, false, or misleading, which was obtained from day to day by the police officer who was investigating the case, and what were the lines of investigation upon which such police-officer acted. A properly kept special diary would afford such information, and such information would enable the Magistrate or Judge to determine whether persons referred to in the special diary, but not sent up as witnesses by the police, should be summoned to give evidence in the interest of the prosecution or of the accused. It must also be remembered that it is the duty of the Magistrate or of the Judge before whom a criminal case is, to ascertain if possible on which side the truth is, and to decide accordingly. It must happen that a police officer, who is investigating a criminal case, receives some true information, some false information, some misleading information and it must happen that such police-officer forms no doubt sometimes prematurely, a theory about the case to which having committed himself, he probably adheres. An ordinary knowledge of the infirmities of human nature and a knowledge of what does in fact take place in some cases teaches that in many cases the inclination of a police-officer, who in his early investigation of a criminal case has committed himself honestly or dishonestly to a theory as to the case, is to work the case so as to support the theory whether the vindication of justice is to be the result or not. It is consequently essential that the Magistrate or Judge who has to hold the scales of justice evenly between the Crown and the accused, should have some means of ascertaining what was the information obtained by the police-officer each day in the course of the investigation and what were the lines upon which the investigation proceeded". It is repugnant to all principles of criminal law to compel a person to give evidence in the very matter in which he is accused or liable to be accused and then base a charge on such evidence and use such evidence at the trial to prove his guilt, 50 B. 56 at 61. Entries in police diaries ought not to be referred to by the court as corroboration of the prosecution evidence 15 Cr. L.J. 256=23 Ind. Cas. 208.

Setting forth the time, place and a statement of circumstances.—This section does not contain an exhaustive list of the matters which may with propriety be entered in the diary. There is much which may tend to the furtherance of the objects for which the diary has been instituted which would not fall within the language of the section but which may with great advantage be entered in the diary and when so entered be protected from disclosure for reasons of public policy, 19 A. 390 at 414.

Sub section (2).—This sub-section lays down very distinctly that the Court may not use such diaries as evidence in the case but only to aid it in the inquiry or trial. The aid which a Court can receive from the entries in such a diary is usually confined to utilising the information contained therein as foundation for questions to be put to the witness and in using the diary the Court should always employ very great caution. The comments of Sir John Edgo (19 A. 390) are as valuable to-day as when they were made, although the law on the subject has been slightly modified since the decision. Even when it is permissible to utilise the record of statements made by a Police Officer in the course of an investigation and entered in the diary, the Courts should remember the principles laid down that such statements are recorded by the Police in a most haphazard manner, in which the investigating officers not unnaturally record what seems to be their opinion material to the case at that stage and omit many matters equally material and may be of supreme importance as the case develops. Police officers, are not experts as to what is and what is not evidence and statements are often recorded hurriedly in the midst of crowd and confusion subject to frequent interruptions and suggestions by bye-standers 23 Cr. L.J. 134 at 136=99 Ind. Cas. 332. The police diaries cannot be used to discredit the defence version on the ground that it is now here mentioned in them and thereby strengthening the prosecution story, 27 Cr. L.J. 572=94 Ind. Cas. 140. It is the duty of the Court to bring on record by evidence any material facts that may come within its knowledge and it is for that purpose the Court is empowered to use the police diaries, 29 Cr. L.J. 26 at 29=106 Ind. Cas. 442. The privilege of using the diary to contradict a police officer belongs exclusively to the Court, 8 C. 153. The Court may send for the special diary and may use the same to assist it in the inquiry or trial by suggesting means of further elucidating points which need clearing up and which are material for the purpose of doing justice between the Crown and the accused, 23 Cr. L.J. 251. A Judge could refer to the diaries even after the verdict because the trial does not end with the verdict of the jury for the Judge still has to decide whether he will accept the verdict or refer the case to the High Court and if referred, the trial continues in the High Court, 56 C. 150 at 153. Entries in the special diary cannot by themselves be taken as evidence of any date, fact or statement contained therein. The Court cannot make a general order for the production of police diaries in all cases coming before it, as the law nowhere empowers the Court to issue such a general order, but it has power only to call for the diaries when used as required in each particular case, 1894 A.W.N. 81. The special diary may also be used by the Court for the purpose of contradicting the police-officer who made it, and it may be used by the police-officer who made it for refreshing his memory, but no other witness is entitled to use the same for that purpose. The accused cannot insist that a police officer should refresh his memory and thus obtain access to the diary in an indirect manner, 8 C. 154. Ordinarily the accused is not entitled to see the contents or to have a copy, but if the diary is used by the police-officer for refreshing his memory or by the Court to contradict his evidence, then the accused shall be entitled to be furnished with a copy unless the Court thinks it inexpedient in the ends of justice. The accused may look at the particular entry before or at the time the witness tries to refresh his memory 8 C. 739. See 19 A. 390 (F.B.) The facts stated in the diary must be proved by oral evidence, Wells II, 142 and 143; 1893 A.W.N. 143; 27 C. 295; 15 C.W.N. xivii. See also 10 C.W.N. 600=3 Cr. L.J. 423 where it was held that facts and statements appearing in the diary cannot be used as materials to help the Court in a criminal trial to come to a finding on the evidence in the case, and what the Court should do, is to call for necessary evidence to have the matter legally proved when some matter of importance bearing upon the case is discovered from a perusal of the diary, but notes of seditious speeches made by a police-officer may be allowed to become part of the record in a trial under S. 134A, I.P.C., 32 M 3; 25 Cr. L.J. 409=77 Ind. Cas. 489. When a confession is made to the police and recorded in the police diary, the diary cannot be used by the Court for any purpose other than to assist it in the inquiry or trial, or to enable the defence under certain circumstances to contradict the witnesses for the prosecution, 29 Cr. L.J. 26 at 29=106 Ind. Cas. 442. Police diaries cannot be placed before the Jury. As provided by this section they are useful not as evidence but to aid the court in the trial so as to enable it to make a thorough inquiry on all material points and to elicit in the examination of the witnesses and especially police witnesses the real facts of the case 27 C. 295

173. (1) Every investigation under this Chapter shall be completed without unnecessary delay, and, as soon as it is completed, the officer in charge of the police-station shall—

Report of police-officer.

(a) forward to a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence on a police-report a report, in the form prescribed by the Local Government, setting forth the names of the parties, the nature of the information and the names of the persons who appear to be acquainted with the circumstances of the case, and stating whether the accused (if arrested) has been forwarded in custody, or has been released on his bond, and, if so, whether with or without sureties, and

(b) communicate in such manner as may be prescribed by the Local Government, the action taken by him to the person, if any, by whom the information relating to the commission of the offence was first given.

(2) Where a superior officer of police has been appointed under section 158, the report shall, in any cases in which the Local Government by general or special order so directs, be submitted through that officer, and he may, pending the orders of the Magistrate, direct the officer in charge of the police-station to make further investigation.

(3) Whenever it appears from a report forwarded under this section that the accused has been released on his bond, the Magistrate shall make such order for the discharge of such bond or otherwise as he thinks fit.

(4) A copy of any report forwarded under this section shall, on application, be furnished to the accused before the commencement of the inquiry or trial :

Provided that the same shall be paid for unless the Magistrate for some special reason thinks fit to furnish it free of cost.

Amendment.—Sub section (1) has been redrafted and the principal change effected is to prescribe that the police shall communicate the result of their investigation to the person by whom the first information was given. Sub-section (4) is new and provides for a copy of the report or charge-sheet being furnished to the accused before the commencement of the inquiry or trial.

Scope of the section.—There are three sections in the Code relating to final reports viz., S. 169, S. 170 and this section. S. 169 supra relates to cases in which no person is sent up for trial. S. 170 supra relates to cases in which some person is sent up and this section relates to general direction relating to both. The three sections must be read together. 7 Cr. L.J. 414 at 415 = 1 L.B.R. 137. The final report under this section by the Police after the completion of their investigation is known as the 'charge-sheet.' The other reports dealt with in this chapter are (1) occurrence report under S. 157 supra, (2) report under S. 166 for extending remand of accused by transmitting the case diary, if investigation cannot be completed, (3) report under S. 168 supra stating the result of the investigation held. The final report under this section is to be made after full investigation and if in the opinion of the investigating officer reasonable grounds exist for initiating proceedings against the person reported against before a Magistrate.

Empowered to take Cognizance of the offence upon a Police report.—These words refer to 199 (1) (b) infra which empowers a District Magistrate, Sub-divisional

Sub-section (4).—This sub-section is new; it was held by the Full Bench decision in 20 M. 189, that an accused person is not entitled to have a copy of the charge-sheet before the commencement of the inquiry or trial as the charge-sheet was held to be not a public document within the meaning of S. 70, Indian Evidence Act. This worked as a great hardship to accused persons but this new sub-section specially provided for a copy of the charge-sheet being furnished to the accused on his application before the commencement of the inquiry or trial free of cost at the discretion of the Magistrate.

174. (1) The officer in charge of a police-station, or some other police-officer specially empowered by the Local Government in that behalf, on receiving information that a person—

and report on sulcide, etc.

- (a) has committed suicide, or
- (b) has been killed by another, or by an animal, or by machinery, or by an accident, or
- (c) has died under circumstances raising a reasonable suspicion that some other person has committed an offence, shall immediately give intimation thereof to the nearest Magistrate empowered to hold inquests, and, unless otherwise directed by any rule prescribed by the Local Government, or by any general or special order of the District or Sub-divisional Magistrate, shall proceed to the place where the body of such deceased person is, and there, in the presence of two or more respectable inhabitants of the neighbourhood, shall make an investigation, and draw up a report of the apparent cause of death, describing such wounds, fractures, bruises and other marks of injury as may be found on the body, and stating in what manner, or by what weapon or instrument (if any) such marks appear to have been inflicted.

(2) The report shall be signed by such police-officer and other persons, or by so many of them as concur therein, and shall be forthwith forwarded to the District Magistrate or the Sub-divisional Magistrate.

(3) When there is any doubt regarding the cause of death, or when for any other reason the police-officer considers it expedient so to do, he shall, subject to such rules as the Local Government may prescribe in this behalf, forward the body, with a view to its being examined, to the nearest Civil Surgeon, or other qualified medical man appointed in this behalf by the Local Government, if the state of the weather and the distance admit of its being so forwarded without risk of such putrefaction on the road as would render such examination useless.

(4) In the Presidencies of Fort St. George and Bombay, investigations under this section may be made by the head of the village who shall then report the result to the nearest Magistrate authorized to hold inquests.

(5) The following Magistrates are empowered to hold inquests, namely, any District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrates of the first class, and any Magistrate especially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government or the District Magistrate.

Amendment.—The addition of the words “or Magistrate of the first class” in sub-section (5) empowers all Magistrates of the first class to hold inquests.

Some other police-officer specially empowered.—Local Governments are empowered to appoint special police-officers to hold inquests. Officers in charge of police-stations often find it difficult to hold inquests in consequence of other pressing work or from local considerations. Hence the necessity to appoint special police-officers for this purpose.

Unless otherwise directed by general or special order of District Magistrate, etc.—This section gives a discretion to the District or Sub-divisional Magistrate who may order the police-officer to dispense with a formal investigation in any particular case or classes of cases chiefly for the purpose of saving time.

In the presence of two or more respectable inhabitants.—These persons are generally called inquest panchayatdars and their attendance may be enforced when necessary under S. 175, infra; the persons so summoned are bound to attend and answer truly all questions put to them.

Shall make an investigation.—The investigation under this section is made by a police-officer and the statements taken down are therefore statements made to the police in the course of an investigation under S. 162, supra. The fact that the investigation is held in the presence of two or more respectable inhabitants does not render the statements taken any-the-less statements made to a police-officer. Such statements are not therefore public documents of which the accused is entitled to a copy and the procedure governing grant of such copies of statements under S. 162 supra governs also the grant of copies of inquest statements 50 M. 750 where 22 L.W. 784=27 Cr. L.J. 100=97 Ind. Cas. 532 is referred to, see also 54 C. 370 and 28 Cr. L.J. 14=99 Ind. Cas. 46. The provisions of the Code apply, unless there is anything in any enactment for the time being in force regulating the manner of investigation of offences connected with a Railway accident, to the contrary, 52 B. 238. Proceedings taken under this section should be kept distinct from the proceedings had under S. 202, supra, on a complaint made to the Court, 28 Cr. L.J. 26=99 Ind. Cas. 58.

Draw up a report.—An inquest report is generally written up and completed at the spot where the inquest is held in the presence of the inquest panchayatdars and invariably handed over to the constable who takes the corpse for post mortem examination to be handed over to the Magistrate. It contains the injuries noted on the corpse at the inquest, the statements of blood relations of the deceased and the other witnesses who speak to the cause of death, the names of the persons who are suspected and the apparent cause of death the opinion of the panchayatdars etc. The inquest report must be confined to the points specified in this section. There is nothing in the Code to prevent statement of witnesses being recorded in full. A verbatim report of such statements may be of great help to the Court in testing the value of the evidence subsequently given in Court, 9 M.L.T. 321=(1911) 1 M.W.N. 138=12 Cr. L.J. 124=9 Ind. Cas. 730. An accused person on a charge of murder is entitled to a copy of the statement made by the witnesses at the inquest inquiry under this section. If the report was not in Court the Magistrate has power under S. 94, supra to call upon the police to produce the same and then grant a certified copy to the accused, 20 L.W. 745=26 Cr. L.J. 426 (1)=85 Ind. Cas. 42 (1). But see 50 M. 750 which places inquest reports on the same category as statements made under S. 162, supra, Sub-section (3).—This sub-section enables the police officer in case of doubt as to the cause of death to send the body for post mortem to the nearest civil surgeon. It also enables the Local Government to appoint a qualified medical officer not in Government employment for the purpose of holding a post mortem in special cases. In India it is very rare to find a dead body free from traces of putrefaction for more than 24 hours after death, 28 Cr. L.J. 185=99 Ind. Cas. 857.

Sub-section (4) permits that the investigation under this section may be made by the heads of villages in the Presidencies of Fort St. George and Bombay. S. 18 of Madras Regulation, XI of 1816 lays down the procedure to be followed by the heads of villages on discovery of dead bodies, and procedure to be followed by them when the nearest police-officer fails to appear to conduct the inquiry after due notice given to him of the discovery of the dead body. If the police-officer arrives in time he must resign the superintendence of the inquiry into his hands. If he does not arrive in time, the head of the village must cause the Kurnam to take down in writing, the evidence of the persons who may be examined and record the necessary particulars as to the appearance of the body and frame a report of the procedure which must be signed by the village headman and two or more inhabitants present at the investigation and by the Kurnam also. The entire records are to be submitted to the police-officer of the district. The village headman has the powers of a police-officer under S. 175, infra, 8 M.L.T. 193=11 Cr. L.J. 500=7 Ind. Cas. 557. See also S. 11 of Bombay Village Police Act VIII of 1867 which authorizes police Patels to hold inquests in cases of sudden or unnatural death.

175. (1) A police-officer proceeding under section 174 may, by order in writing, summon two or more persons as aforesaid for the purpose of the said investigation, and any other person who appears to be acquainted with the facts of the case. Every person so summoned shall be bound to attend and to answer truly all questions other than questions the answers to which would have a tendency to expose him to a criminal charge, or to a penalty or forfeiture.

(2) If the facts do not disclose a cognizable offence to which section 170 applies, such persons shall not be required by the police-officer to attend a Magistrate's Court.

The word "truly" has been retained in this section but omitted in S. 161, supra. See notes at p. 280. A person not summoned but voluntarily comes forward to give evidence is not bound to answer truly, 23 Cr. L.J. 82=65 Ind. Cas. 434.

Scope of the section—This section is not applicable to the town of Madras where the office of the Coroner was abolished by Act V of 1839. S. 4 of the said Act enacted with certain modifications, Ss. 174, 175 and 176 of the Code. The information under S. 174 is to be given to the Commissioner of Police and the investigation is to be made in the presence of five or more respectable inhabitants and the report is to be forwarded to the Commissioner of Police. Special rules are made when the deceased person is an European or East Indian to the effect that the Commissioner himself may discharge the functions of an S.H.O., or depute an officer not lower than the rank of an Inspector of Police who is himself a European or East Indian. See Notification No. 187 Fort. St. George Gaz. 1839, Pt. I, p. 336. It is repugnant to all principles of criminal law to compel a person to give evidence in the very matter in which he is accused or liable to be accused and then base a charge on such evidence and use such evidence at the trial to prove his guilt. The spirit of the Coroner's Act is that all persons acquainted with the circumstances and cause of death of a person excepting persons directly implicated should be examined on oath by the Coroner.

But if by an inadvertence a person accused of an offence is examined on oath the moment the mistake is found out, it should be struck off the record, 50 B. 56. But statements made voluntarily and after due warning, by persons suspected of the crime and in Police custody are admissible in evidence at the subsequent trial. The Coroner's Act distinctly contemplated that such a person might make a statement and S. 20 provided that the Coroner should be deemed to be a Magistrate for the purposes of S. 26 of the Indian Evidence Act, and when the statement is entirely voluntary it is admissible either as a confession under S. 26 of the Indian Evidence Act or the statement of a party to a proceeding under Ss. 18 and 21 of the same Act, 50 B. 111. See 30 Bom. L.R. 84=29 Cr. L.J. 234=107 Ind. Cas. 272 where 50 B. 56 and 511 are referred to. The finding at a Coroner's inquest is equivalent to a finding of Grand Jury and a defendant may be prosecuted for murder or manslaughter upon such an inquisition, which is the record of the "finding of a jury sworn to inquire concerning the death of the deceased super visum corporis. Such an inquisition amounts to an indictment," Arch. Cr. Pl. Ev. and Pr. p. 137. An inquisition under the Coroner's Act cannot be quashed by the High Court on the ground that the findings of the jury are opposed to the evidence in the case. The High Court may interfere with an inquisition upon a reference made by the Coroner but upon an application by a party affected by the inquisition and the High Court can also amend the inquisition in cases of technical defects, 51 B. 300. See the Coroner's Act IV of 1871 as amended by Act V of 1889. It is a fatal irregularity for a Coroner to be present with a jury in their retiring room while they are considering their verdict and in such a case the inquisition was quashed, [1928] 1 K.B. 302.

By order in writing.—The words also occur in S. 160, supra, empowering a police-officer to enforce attendance of witnesses at the investigation. Issuing a summons or a warrant for enforcing attendance of witnesses is a prerogative of the Court or Magistrate only.

Shall be bound to attend.—S. 174, I.P.C., makes disobedience of the order issued under this section punishable with simple imprisonment for one month or fine of Rs. 500, or both. But refusal to sign at the inquest is not an offence, 8 M.L.T. 198=11 Cr. L.J. 500=7 Ind. Cas. 557.

To answer truly all questions.—S. 179, I.P.C., makes punishable, a refusal to answer questions put by a police-officer under this section with simple imprisonment for 6 months or fine of Rs. 1,000 or both. The word "truly" is retained in this section although it is omitted in S. 161, supra, which refers to an investigation under this chapter, viz., Chapter XIV of the Code which includes this section also and there is no special reason for omitting the word in S. 161, supra, and retaining it in this section. The Legislature could not have intended to make any distinction between an investigation under this section and one under S. 161, supra. The use of the word "under this Chapter" in S. 161, supra, negatives any such distinction being present in the mind of the Legislature when retaining the word "truly" in this section. In 2 Cr. L.J. 590, a nice distinction is drawn between S. 161, supra, and this section. It is this. S. 161 supra, refers to investigations into offences whereas this section applies only to investigation in the nature of inquests, investigations as to the apparent cause of death, and in such cases the witnesses are bound to speak truly. Such an investigation ceases where the cause of death is ascertained, i.e., when it is determined whether death is natural, suicidal, homicidal or accidental. In the case of homicidal death investigation, as to the guilt of the person concerned, becomes an investigation under S. 161, supra. The statements of the witnesses examined at the inquest may be recorded in full; verbatim reports of such statements will be of great help to the Court in testing the evidence subsequently given, (1911) 1 M.W.N. 139=12 Cr. L.J. 124=9 Ind. Cas. 730.

Sub-section (2).—S. 170, supra refers to investigation into a cognizable offence by a police-officer and his report upon completing the investigation to a Magistrate. If the facts did not disclose a cognizable offence the witnesses shall not be required to attend the Magistrate's Court. This sub-section refers only to those witnesses who have been examined at the inquest and not to witnesses who may be examined long after in connection with the investigation into the offence by the police.

176. (1) When any person dies while in the custody of the police, the nearest Magistrate empowered to hold inquests shall, and, in any other case mentioned in section 174, clauses (a), (b) and (c) of sub-section (1), any Magistrate so empowered may hold an inquiry into the cause of death, either instead of, or in addition to, the investigation held by the police-officer, and, if he does so, he shall have all the powers in conducting it which he would have in holding an inquiry into an offence. The Magistrate holding such an inquiry shall record the evidence taken by him in connection therewith in any of the manners hereinafter prescribed according to the circumstances of the case.

(2) Whenever such Magistrate considers it expedient to make an examination of the dead body of any person who has been already interred, in order to discover the cause of his death, the Magistrate may cause the body to be disinterred and examined.

Scope of the section.—This section proceeds upon the basis that inquiry into a suspicious death should not depend upon the opinion the police may form, but that there should be a further check by enabling a local Magistrate to hold an independent inquiry and sub-section (2) empowers him to exhume the body and examine witnesses in connection with the matter, 30 Bom. L.R. 1050 at 1054=29 Cr. L.J. 1063=112 Ind. Cas. 567.

Whenever any person dies while in the custody of the Police.—When a person dies in police custody the inquiry as to cause of death is imperative but in other cases mentioned in S. 175 (1) (a), (b) and (c) it is discretionary with the Magistrate to enquire. The evidence is to be recorded by the Magistrate under Chapter XXV but there is nothing in the section which makes it imperative on the Magistrate to make a report or to come to a definite finding on the evidence recorded by him. See 3 C. 742.

This section is not applicable to the town of Madras. See S. 4 of Act V of 1889 which enacts that inquiry is to be held by the Chief Presidency Magistrate or such Presidency Magistrate as he deposes in this behalf and power to disinter bodies is given to the Commissioner of Police or a Presidency Magistrate. A Magistrate not empowered by law to hold an inquest under this section does so his proceedings are not void, S. 529 (c), infra.

Revision.—The language of the section makes it clear that the proceedings under this section are judicial. The Magistrate is empowered to hold an inquiry as to the cause of death either instead of or in addition to the investigation held by the police and if he does so, he is invested with all the powers of conducting it which he would have in holding an inquiry into an offence. This would bring the proceeding within an inquiry as defined in S. 4 (1), supra, and a judicial proceeding as defined in S. 4 (1) (m) supra, Sub-section (3) of S. 435, infra, which expressly excluded the revisional powers of the High Court of proceedings under the section has now been repealed and there is nothing now to debar the High Court from exercising its jurisdiction under Ss. 435 and 439, infra, in matters falling under this section. Apart from that S. 561A, infra, gives inherent power to the High Court to make such orders as may be necessary to secure the ends of justice and the High Court revised the order of the Collector and District Magistrate who interfered with the judicial inquiry of a Magistrate under this section and virtually stopped it as illegal, 30 Bom. L.R. 1050=29 Cr. L.J. 1063=112 Ind. Cas. 567. The decisions in Ratanlal 843 and 3 C. 742, which negatives the power of revision are no longer law after the amendment of the Code. See 51 B. 300, where the High Court interfered in revision with inquest proceedings.

CHAPTER XV.

OF THE JURISDICTION OF THE CRIMINAL COURTS IN INQUIRIES AND TRIALS.

A.—Place of Inquiry or Trial.

Venue.—In general the offence must on the face of the indictment appear to have been committed within the jurisdiction of the Court before which the prisoner is tried and if it appears by the evidence that the venue of the offence, i.e., the place where it was committed, is not the same as that mentioned in the indictment the variance unamended would be fatal only two objections are now of much importance with respect to the venue, (1) that on the face of the record it appears that the Court has no jurisdiction (2) that the evidence shows that the Court has no jurisdiction. And even the first of these objections may sometimes be overcome by an exercise of the power of amendment, Roscoe Cr. Ev. and Pr., p. 210.

177. Every offence shall ordinarily be inquired into and tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction it was committed.

Ordinary place of inquiry and trial.

Scope of the section.—The jurisdiction conferred by the provisions of the Code do not affect any special jurisdiction conferred by any law in force at the time when the Code came into force, 10 B. 181. This section lays down that every offence shall ordinarily be inquired into or tried where it was committed. The use of the word "ordinarily" indicates that this rule is subject to any special provisions of law which may qualify it, and the rule is relaxed or modified in several succeeding provisions of the Code. This section lays down the general law and which again has been repeated in and made part of the special provisions in S. 181 (2) infra, which applies to a case of criminal breach of trust and not S. 179, supra 26 Cr. L.J. 725=86 Ind. Cas. 213; 23 Cr. L.J. 490=68 Ind. Cas. 26. The special provision contained in S. 197 (2) of the Code, viz., the power of Government to determine the person by whom and to specify the Court before which the trial of public servants is to be held overrides the general rule contained in this section 8 Cr. L.J. 70=4 L.B.R. 265. The provisions of this section are subject also to the power of the High Court to transfer cases under S. 526 infra. The fact that the place where an offence was committed by an Indian British subject was transferred to a native state will not deprive the Sessions Court of the place where the offence was committed of its jurisdiction to try the offence especially when the offender, an Indian British subject resided in British India, 34 A. 451. The High Court has also power to direct that a trial should take place in one or the other district, 25 Cr. L.J. 81=76 Ind. Cas. 17.

Every offence shall ordinarily be tried.—For definition of the word "offence" see S. 4 (1) (c) supra and S. 40, I.P.C. The word 'ordinarily' must be taken to mean except in the cases provided hereafter to the contrary, 30 Bom. L.R. 337=29 Cr. L.J. 533; 109 Ind. Cas. 339, following 3 Pat. 417. The use of the word 'ordinarily' indicates that the rule contained in the section is to be read subject to any special provisions of law which may modify it and the rule is relaxed or modified in several of the succeeding sections, of the Code e.g. 197 (2) Infra which overrides the general rule contained in this section, 8 Cr. L.J. 70=4 L.B.R. 265. When two offences are committed in the course of the same transaction, they should be tried by a Magistrate having jurisdiction to try both the offences and not by different Magistrates. Weir II, 144.

OF THE JURISDICTION OF THE CRIMINAL COURTS IN INQUIRIES AND TRIALS.

A.—Place of Inquiry or Trial.

Venue.—In general the offence must on the face of the indictment appear to have been committed within the jurisdiction of the Court before which the prisoner is tried and if it appears by the evidence that the venue of the offence, i.e., the place where it was committed, is not the same as that mentioned in the indictment the variance unamended would be fatal . . . only two objections are now of much importance with respect to the venue, (1) that on the face of the record it appears that the Court has no jurisdiction (2) that the evidence shows that the Court has no jurisdiction. And even the first of these objections may sometimes be overcome by an exercise of the power of amendment, Roscoe Cr. Ev. and Pr., p. 210.

177. Every offence shall ordinarily be inquired into and tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction it was committed.

Scope of the section.—The jurisdiction conferred by the provisions of the Code do not affect any special jurisdiction conferred by any law in force at the time when the Code came into force, 10 B. 181. This section lays down that every offence shall ordinarily be inquired into or tried where it was committed. The use of the word "ordinarily" indicates that this rule is subject to any special provisions of law which may qualify it, and the rule is relaxed or modified in several succeeding provisions of the Code. This section lays down the general law and which again has been repeated in and made part of the special provisions in S. 181 (2) infra, which applies to a case of criminal breach of trust and not S. 179, supra 26 Cr. L.J. 723=86 Ind. Cas. 213; 23 Cr. L.J. 490=68 Ind. Cas. 26. The special provision contained is S. 197 (2) of the Code, viz., the power of Government to determine the person by whom and to specify the Court before which the trial of public servants is to be held overrides the general rule contained in this section 8 Cr. L.J. 70=4 L.B.R. 265. The provisions of this section are subject also to the power of the High Court to transfer cases under S. 526 infra. The fact that the place where an offence was committed by an Indian British subject was transferred to a native state will not deprive the Sessions Court of the place where the offence was committed of its jurisdiction to try the offence especially when the offender, an Indian British subject resided in British India, 34 A. 431. The High Court has also power to direct that a trial should take place in one or the other district, 25 Cr. L.J. 81=76 Ind. Cas. 17.

Every offence shall ordinarily be tried.—For definition of the word "offence" see S. 4 (1) (c) supra and S. 40, I.P.C. The word 'ordinarily' must be taken to mean except in the cases provided hereafter to the contrary, 30 Bom. L.R. 387=29 Cr. L.J. 533; 109 Ind. Cas. 359, following 3 Pat 417. The use of the word 'ordinarily' indicates that the rule contained in the section is to be read subject to any special provisions of law which may modify it and the rule is relaxed or modified in several of the succeeding sections, of the Code e.g. 197 (2) infra which overrides the general rule contained in this section, 8 Cr. L.J. 70=4 L.B.R. 265. When two offences are committed in the course of the same transaction, they should be tried by a Magistrate having jurisdiction to try both the offences and not by different Magistrates. Weir II, 144.

Within the local limits of whose jurisdiction it was committed.—All crime is local and the jurisdiction over the crime belongs to the country where the crime is committed. The Legislature has no power over any person except its own subjects, that is persons who are natural born subjects or residents or whilst they are within the limits of the kingdom.—per Lord Halsbury, L.C. in [1891] A.C. 435 at 458, followed in 29 Cr. L.J. 1089=112 Ind. Cas. 673. Crimes in the nature are local and the jurisdiction of crimes is local, 2 William Blackstone p. 1058. The accused is to be tried according to the law of the place where the crime was committed and not according to his nationality, 1894 A.C. 670. The fundamental principle laid down in this section is to the effect that the competency of a forum to take cognizance of an inquiry into, and trial of an offence as defined in S. 4, supra, is determined by the place in which the offence is committed, 9 B. 40 at 48. The ordinary rule as to jurisdiction is that it is the area within which the offence is committed and not the place where the offender may be found that determines the Court which has jurisdiction to try the offence, 43 M. 14 at 18. The provisions of the Code are also applicable as lex fori, 17 B. 369 at 371. Though the commitment of an accused by a wrong Court may be an irregularity a commitment made to a wrong Court is illegal and liable to be quashed, 36 M. 337. But if the trial is proceeded with and a decision arrived at, the defect is cured, 42 M. 791. See notes under S. 531 infra. The accused a recruit induced a person at Cawnpore to go to Fiji to work, but on the way, at Arrah where they stopped the accused induced him to proceed to Sylhet and sent him there with another man in contravention of S. 104 of the Assam Labour and Emigration Act, held, that the accused was rightly tried at Arrah and no offence under the Act was committed at Cawnpore, 37 C. 27, but where an accused is charged with kidnapping a girl at Bombay and with having abetted rape on her at Ahmedabad, a commitment to the Bombay High Court on both the charges is illegal as the second offence cannot be tried at Bombay, 30 Bom. L.R. 1253=30 Cr. L.J. 191 (1)=113 Ind. Cas. 617 (1). It is the Court which has territorial jurisdiction at the place where a bigamy was committed that can try the offence under S. 494, I.P.C. The offence of abetment of bigamy can be tried by the Court within whose territorial jurisdiction the abetment takes place, 3 Pat. 417. Similarly a charge of misappropriation under S. 403, I.P.C., can be tried only at the place where the sum was misappropriated by the accused, 25 Cr. L.J. 377=77 Ind. Cas. 425. A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to try an accused for an offence committed outside his jurisdiction, 30 Bom. L.R. 387. 'Jurisdiction' may be defined as the power of a Court to hear and determine a cause, to adjudicate or exercise any judicial power in relation to it, such jurisdiction naturally divides itself into three broad heads with reference to (1) the subject matter, (2) the parties (3) particular question which calls for decision 5 C.L.J. 611.

See S. 531, infra, which validates proceedings had in a wrong local area. No finding, sentence or order regularly passed by a Court in the case of an offence committed outside its local area can be set aside, when no failure of justice has taken place, 30 M. 94; 42 M. 791. Ss. 177, 179, 180, 181 and 183 must be read together with S. 531, infra. As a rule the plea of want of jurisdiction must be taken before the trial Court, but want of jurisdiction may be taken in the High Court for the first time, 16 W.R. (Cr.) 79; but see 4 B.H.C.R. (Cr. Ca.) 33. An objection, to want of jurisdiction can be taken for the first time in the appellate court and the court cannot decline to consider the objection on the ground that it was never taken in the lower court. 28 Cr. L.J. 452=101 Ind. Cas. 484, objection as to jurisdiction might also be raised at a re-trial ordered although it was not taken originally at the trial or in the court of appeal, 33 C. 22.

Various special Acts make express provision for place of trial of offences created by those Acts, e.g., Act IX of 1890 (Railway), S. 134; Act X of 1889, (Indian Posts), S. 60 (1) Act II of 1899 (Stamp), S. 72; Act XIV of 1895 (Pilgrim Ships); Act XIV of 1887 (Indian Marine), Ss. 44 and 48. See also S. 549, infra, as to delivery of military offenders to be tried by Court-martial.

Power to order case to be tried in different sessions divisions.

178. Notwithstanding anything contained in section 177, the Local Government may direct that any cases or class of cases committed for trial in any district may be tried in any sessions division:

Provided that such direction is not repugnant to any direction previously issued by the High Court under section 15 of the Indian High Courts Act, 1861, or section 107 of the Government of India Act, 1915, or under this Code, section 526.

Scope of the section.—Under this section the Local Government is empowered to direct that any case or classes of cases committed for trial in any district, shall be tried in a specified sessions division but it cannot direct that a case should be tried by a particular Court as such a direction is beyond the scope of this section. It was held in 10 C. 543 that the Local Government has no power to transfer for trial to a Court of Commissioner a case duly committed for trial to the Court of the Recorder of Rangoon who exercises all the powers of a Court of Session to the Sessions division of Pegu, S. 267 infra lays down that in all criminal cases transferred to a High Court under this Code, or under the Letters Patent of any High Court, established under the Indian High Courts Act, 1861, trial may, if the High Court so directs, be by jury. See S. 537, infra, which empowers the Governor-General in Council to transfer criminal cases and appeals from one High Court to another, or from any Criminal Court subordinate to one High Court to any other Criminal Court of equal or superior jurisdiction subordinate to another High Court for the ends of justice or for general convenience of parties.

Proviso.—The proviso to the section was relied on in 28 C. 709 at 717, 718 for transferring proceedings under S. 145, supra, as clearly indicating that the High Court has power to make an order of transfer either under S. 526 of the Code or under S. 15 of the Charter Act.

179. When a person is accused of the commission of any offence by reason of anything which has been done, and of any consequence which has ensued, such offence may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any such thing has been done, or any such consequence has ensued.

Accused triable in district where act is done or where consequence ensues.

Illustrations.

(a) A is wounded within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court X, and dies within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court Z. The offence of the culpable homicide of A may be inquired into or tried by X or Z.

(b) A is wounded within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court X, and is during ten days within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court Y, and during ten days more within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court Z, unable in the local limits of the jurisdiction of either Court Y or Court Z to follow his ordinary pursuits. The offence of causing grievous hurt to A may be inquired into or tried by X, Y or Z.

(c) A is put in fear of injury within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court X, and is thereby induced, within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court Y, to deliver property to the person who put him in fear. The offence of extortion committed on A may be inquired into or tried either by X or Y.

(d) A is wounded in the Native State of Baroda, and dies of his wound in Poona. The offence of causing A's death may be inquired into and tried in Poona.

Scope of the section.—This section is controlled in respect of certain offences by S. 181, infra 25 Cr. L.J. 923. But see 27 Cr. L.J. 992=96 Ind. Cas. 636, where it was held that this section is in no way modified by the provisions of S. 181 (2) infra. This section does not apply to questions of jurisdiction of Courts to try the offence of criminal breach of trust, 26 Cr. L.J. 136=83 Ind. Cas. 696; 25 Cr. L.J. 410=77 Ind. Cas. 490; 16 Cr. L.J. 775=31 Ind. Cas. 375; 41 C.L.J. 80=26 Cr. L.J. 725=86 Ind. Cas. 213. This section will not in terms apply to the case of an offence which does not depend on the consequences which has ensued but only on the act which has been done 44 C. 912.

Commission of offence by reason of anything done.—The word "act" will include illegal omission also, see S. 4 (2) supra. The act must be one constituting an offence. This section only applies when a person is accused of the commission of any offence by reason of anything which he has done. In a case of falsification of accounts under S. 477A, I.P.O., the offence is complete when accounts are falsified with intent to defraud, and it is not apparent how a person accused of falsification of accounts can be said to be accused by reason of any consequence which has ensued within the meaning of the section, 4 M.L.T. 481; 41 C. 305; 33 A. 29. Where a petition under the Income-tax Act, S. 21 was verified at a place in Tanjore District but presented in Ramnad District and on a complaint for an offence under S. 177, I.P.O., and S. 40 of the said Act, was filed in Ramnad, held, as the offence was committed in Tanjore District, the Ramnad Magistrate had no jurisdiction to entertain the complaint 43 M.L.J. 475=16 L.W. 333. A, carrying on business at Gaya gave a cheque to B, which was dishonoured at Calcutta and on further correspondence the crucial letter which disclosed that B was cheated, was received at Buxar by B who filed his complaint of cheating at Buxar; it was held that the Buxar court had jurisdiction to entertain the complaint. 23 Cr. L.J. 81=76 Ind. Cas. 17. The words 'anything which has been done' mean some act constituting the offence. See 6 Agra 136 and 46.

Any consequence which has ensued.—The words "and of any consequence which has ensued" in this section embrace only such consequences as modify or complete the act alleged to be an offence, 1909 A.W.N. 115=5 A.L.J. 333=7 Cr. L.J. 394; 1901 P.R. (Cr. J) 7. The word "consequence" means a consequence which forms a part and parcel of the offence and not a consequence which is not such a direct result of the act of the offender as to form no part of that offence, 34 A 487. Upon the wording of the section and the authorities dealing with it there cannot be little doubt that the consequence referred to herein must be one of the facts to be proved to establish the offence. The consequence must form an integral part of the offence and need not, only be a consequence arising from it. The words of the section embrace only such consequences as modify or complete the act alleged to be an offence. The offence of infringing copyright in a book of which the complainant is the author is complete as soon as the book is printed without permission and the loss to the complainant is not an essential ingredient of the offence though loss undoubtedly arises by the commission of the offence, 18 Cr. L.J. 353=38 Ind. Cas. 737. See also 21 Cr. L.J. 139=54 Ind. Cas. 677. The word 'consequence' has however been held to be not restricted to mean consequence which is a necessary ingredient of an offence under S. 409, I. P. O. and ought to have its usual meaning, 29 Cr. L.J. 1033=112 Ind. Cas. 361 relying on 46 B. 641 and (1905) 2 K. B. 67 and distinguishing, 38 M. 639; 39 M. 576; 34 A. 437; 44 C. 912; 51 B. 101. The words 'any consequence' used in this section must be given a wide grammatical meaning; it is not restricted in its meaning to any consequence which is a necessary ingredient of the offence 30 Cr. L.J. 249=114 Ind. Cas. 99 following 46 B. 641. The words "any consequence" mean a consequence which must be one of the facts to be proved to establish the offence and will not include remote consequences arising from the offence having been previously committed and not forming an integral part of the offence, 10 Cr. L.J. 86=2 Ind. Cas. 545. See also 21 Cr. L.J. 149=54 Ind. Cas. 677. Where a remarriage and adultery against the accused took place at B. a trial of the accused held by the Sessions Judge of S. is invalid, where the consequence of the offence of remarriage and adultery ensued at the place S. i.e., the complainant being kept deprived of his wife from the time she went into the keeping of the accused, 24 A.L.J. 155 at 160=27 Cr. L.J. 101=91 Ind. Cas. 533. This section can be applied only to cases in which the consequence necessary to constitute the offence ensues, in some place other than that in which the accused's act is done, 39 M. 576 at 578, but where a value payable parcel was sent by accused from Madras to Hyderabad and the complainant took delivery of the parcel at Hyderabad after making the payment and found that the parcel contained only saw dust instead of tea, a complaint of cheating at Madras cannot be entertained as the cheating was complete when the amount was paid at Hyderabad post office and subsequent payment by the post office at Madras is no ingredient of the offence so as to give jurisdiction to the Madras Court, 52 M.L.J. 511=1927 M.W.N. 221=28 Cr. L.J. 452 (2)= 101 Ind. Cas. 484 (2) distinguishing 39 M. 576. When the act constituting the offence was complete outside British India and no ingredient of the offence had ensued within British India as a consequence of anything done outside British India, the accused could not be tried in British India. In the illustration (d) to this section it will be seen that until A died in Poona of the injuries received at Baroda, the offence was not complete till his death. Causing grievous hurt was complete outside before the complainant came to British India for treatment, 8 Bom. L.R. 513 at 516. Where the accused on false representation induced complainant to part with money at Meerut, and the complainant on discovering the fraud practised on him at Agra charged the accused at Agra for offences under Ss. 420 and 265, I.P.O. held, that the Magistrate at Agra had no jurisdiction, as both the offences were committed at Meerut and the section did not apply inasmuch as the discovery of the fraud after delivery of the article was not a consequence which had ensued within the meaning of this section, 13 A.L.J. 1067. But in the next case the accused, a trader in Salem, in the Madras Presidency, deceived a trader in Dhulia in Bombay Presidency by leading him to believe that he was buying clean ground-nut oil when as a matter of fact he was buying a mixture of ground-nut oil with rock oil, and the Dhulia trader was induced by the deceit to pay the price agreed upon on the understanding that it was pure oil, held, that the complainant was deceived in Dhulia and the Courts at Dhulia had jurisdiction to hear the case, 17 Bom. L.R. 389. See also 46 B. 641 which dissented from 38 M. 639 and followed 33 A. 29; 41 C. 305; 44 C 912; 23 Cr. L.J. 743=69 Ind. Cas. 631. This section must be read with the definition of breach of trust in S. 405, I.P.O.; it would appear clear that breach of trust is complete by reason of misappropriation of the money and not because of the consequent loss of money. The gist of the offence is the dishonest misappropriation, conversion or disposal of the property and loss which is a consequence is not an integral part of it. The consequence must be part and parcel of the offence. It does not mean a consequence which is not a direct result of the act of the offender as to form no part of the offence, 21 Cr. L.J. 443=54 Ind. Cas. 677 where 33 A. 487; 38 M. 639 are followed and 19 A. 111 is distinguished.

The offence of criminal breach of trust is completed by the misappropriation or conversion of the property dishonestly. It is the intention which is essential, and whether wrongful gain or loss actually results is immaterial. It is a consequence but not an essential part of the offence, and a person is not accused of the offence by reason of it. Where the accused who were brothers living in Bombay were charged with criminal breach of trust at Erode in respect of certain Hundi's sent from there for encashment by the complainants, and the Hundi's were cashed in Bombay and the proceeds misappropriated at Bombay, it was held that this section did not give the Erode Magistrate jurisdiction to try the case, 38 M. 639; 44 C. 912; 23 Cr. L.J. 743=69 Ind. Cas. 631; 1 Ran. 56. But see 46 B. 641 where it was held that "consequence" bears its ordinary grammatical meaning not restricted to a consequence which is the necessary ingredient of the offence. Where the accused who was the Agent of the complainants' firm at Nandyal for sale of oil, sold goods and failed to account for the sale proceeds and absconded, a complaint was preferred to the Presidency Magistrate of criminal misappropriation and breach of trust, held, that the Madras Court had no jurisdiction to try the case, the conversion and loss having occurred at Nandyal, the offence of breach of trust is constituted by dishonest conversion and loss which ensues as its consequence, and the loss ensues immediately on the conversion, 39 M. 576. See 52 M.L.J. 511=1927 M.W.N. 221 decided by a single Judge. But in 39 M. 576 their Lordships dissented from the view held in 38 M. 639 that the existence of the dishonest intention and not the ensuing loss that was the essential element of the offence of breach of trust and that there was no question of consequence or of the application of this section. See also, on this question, 35 A. 29; 34 A. 487; 32 A. 397; 28 C. 746; 1 Ran. 56. A charge of breach of trust against an agent can be tried by the Court within whose jurisdiction the principal resides and the agent has to render account. It is not necessary to have the accused tried by the Court within whose jurisdiction the property misappropriated was actually received or retained by the agent. Great inconvenience would result to firms which employ agents in up country if they go from place to place and misappropriate property belonging to the firm. In such a case it would be difficult for the firm to establish where any property belonging to the firm was actually received or retained by the agent or where the actual offence was committed unless the words "consequence has ensued" are applied in the wider sense 30 Cr. L.J. 249 = 114 Ind. Cas. 99 following 45 B. 641. It was held in 38 M. 779 that when offence of criminal breach of trust was committed outside British India by a British subject, the entrustment having taken place in British India, and the consequent loss ensues in British India the accused could be tried in British India and no certificate of the Political Agent was necessary under S. 188 infra. Where the complainant authorized the accused to withdraw money belonging to him at Rangoon and remit the same to him at Maymyo and the accused after drawing the money failed to do so and was charged with misappropriation it was held that the Rangoon Court had jurisdiction to try him as the money had been received and misappropriated at Rangoon, 21 Cr. L.J. 149 = 54 Ind. Cas. 677. See also 21 Cr. L.J. 519 = 56 Ind. Cas. 775. Falsification of accounts is an offence complete when accounts are falsified, with intent to defraud and the person cannot be said "by reason of any consequence which has ensued" within the meaning of this section. Therefore only that Court within whose jurisdiction the accounts are falsified is competent to try, 4 M.L.T. 431 = 9 Cr. L.J. 92 = 1 Ind. Cas. 796; 18 M.L.T. 23. Where a defamatory letter was posted in Madras addressed to Tinnevely, it was held that the offence could be tried either in Madras or in Tinnevely, 44 M.L.J. 643 = 32 M.L.T. 164.

Illustration.—The illustration to a section cannot justifiably be held to control the wide language of the section, 29 Cr. L.J. 545 = 109 Ind. Cas. 481. The illustrations are not exhaustive and to hold that the consequences prescribed in the section as conferring jurisdiction are ejusdem generis with the consequences specified in the illustrations is not warranted by the language of the section, 8 Cr. L.J. 75. Illustrations to section do not strictly form part of the Act, 1 A. 34 at 36; they are not to be construed as limiting the right given by the section, 23 M. 57. They furnish some indication as to intentions of Legislature, 15 B. 491 at 496; 43 C. 388. The weight to be attached to apparent statements of law in illustrations used in the Act has been the subject of consideration in many cases (see Woodroffe and Ameer Ali's Ind. Ed. Act, p. 98. 6th Ed.) The general consensus of opinion is that they cannot be taken as laying down substantive law, and they merely go to show the intention of the framers of law, and in that and other respects they may be useful provided they are correct. Substantive law can only be made by express enactment in an Act, 17 Cr. L.J. 49 at 50 (F.B.) = 32 Ind. Cas. 641. In 21 Bom. L.R. 558 (P.C.) it was held that illustrations are to be taken as part of the statute. When the Court is called upon to interpret an enactment which comprises both the substantive provision and an illustration of the same, the Court is not justified in rejecting the illustration as a guide in the interpretation of the substantive provision. Illustrations do not stand on the same footing as marginal notes which may not be notes enacted by the Legislature and they cannot be referred to for the purpose of construing the enactment. On the other hand, illustrations are part and parcel of the enactment, 3 Luck. 244.

180. When an act is an offence by reason of its relation to any other act which is also an offence or which would be an offence if the doer were capable of committing an offence, a charge of the first-mentioned offence may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction either act was done.

(a) A charge of abetment may be inquired into or tried either by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the abetment was committed, or by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the offence abetted was committed.

(b) A charge of receiving or retaining stolen goods may be inquired into or tried either by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the goods were stolen, or by any Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any of them were at any time dishonestly received or retained.

(c) A charge of wrongfully concealing a person known to have been kidnapped may be inquired into or tried by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the wrongful concealing, or by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the kidnapping, took place.

Scope of the section.—This section is subject to the provisions of S. 188, infra, 8 M.L.T. 54 = (1910) M.W.N. 143 = 11 Cr. L.J. 376 = 6 Ind. Cas. 308 but see 18 C.W.N. 1178 where a different view is taken. It provides for place of trial where act is an offence by reason of its relation to any other act which is also an offence. This section provides for an alternative jurisdiction in regard to related offences such as abetment in relation to a principal offence or offences like receiving or retaining stolen property in relation to theft or concealing persons in relation to kidnapping etc. The words of the section clearly exclude from its scope cases where the offences constituted by abetment of a contemplated act which if done would have been an offence but which was not in fact done.

Illustration (a).—When a foreign subject resident in foreign territory instigated the commission of an offence which in consequence was committed in British territory, it was held that the instigation not having taken place in any district created by the Code, he could not be tried in British India, 10 B.H.C.R. 358; 1880 P.R. (Cr.) 35; 1878 P.R. (Cr.) 20, but where a foreigner in foreign territory initiates an offence which is completed in British territory, he is liable to be tried by the British Court within whose jurisdiction the offence was completed, 14 Bom. L.R. 147; Weir I, 153. When a person instigates another to commit an offence by means of a communication sent through post, the offence of abetment is complete as soon as the contents of the letter become known to the addressee, and such offence may be tried at the place where the communication is received, 16 A. 339.

(2) The offence of criminal misappropriation or of criminal breach of trust may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any part of the property which is the subject of the offence was received or retained by the accused person, or the offence was committed.

Criminal misappropriation and criminal breach of trust.

(3) The offence of theft, or any offence which includes theft or the possession of stolen property, may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such offence was committed or the property stolen was possessed by the thief or by any person who received or retained the same knowing or having reason to believe it to be stolen.

(4) The offence of kidnapping or abduction may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the person kidnapped or abducted was kidnapped or abducted or was conveyed or concealed or detained.

Kidnapping and abduction.

Amendment.—The amendment in sub-section (3) is of a verbal character eliminating "stealing" and substituting the word "theft."

This section provides for the place of trial of offences of being a thug, belonging to a gang of dacoits, criminal misappropriation, breach of trust, theft and kidnapping and abduction.

Scope of the section.—This section is intended to regulate the jurisdiction of Courts in British India in respect of offences committed in British India and cannot vary or abrogate the ordinary rule that no foreign subject can be tried in British India for an offence committed outside British India, 28 A. 372; 2 Bom. L.R. 337. Ordinarily the provisions of this section should receive effect unqualified by the provisions of S. 179 supra.

Sub-section (1).—See S. 310, I.P.C., as to the definition of a thug. Being a thug is punishable under S. 311, I.P.C. Gangs of persons habitually associated for the purpose of decoying and murdering travellers to take their property, etc., are designated as thugs. Escape from custody is punishable under S. 224, I.P.C. A convict escaping from custody should be tried for the offence under S. 224, I.P.C., in the district in which he escaped and a Magistrate of another district has no jurisdiction to try him, 1 B.H.C.R. 138. The word "is" after the word "charged" occurring in this sub-section gives the Magistrate jurisdiction whether the accused has come within his jurisdiction, of his own accord or has been brought there by force, 12 Cr. L.J. 113=9 Ind. Cas. 677 where 25 C. 20; 6 B. 622 are referred to; see also 26 M. 124; 35 B. 223; 29 Cr. L.J. 1089=112 Ind. Cas. 673. A foreigner who is not a servant of the Queen within S. 188 infra cannot be tried in British territory for having committed dacoity in a Native State, but he could be convicted for retaining stolen property in British territory under S. 412, I.P.C., 1 B. 50; 6 C. 307; 10 B. 186; 28 A. 372.

Sub-section (2).—For place of trial in cases of criminal breach of trust and misappropriation, see note under S. 179, supra. This sub-section does not in any way modify the provisions of S. 179; supra. Under this sub-section an offence of criminal misappropriation or breach of trust may be inquired into where the offence was committed but where the breach of trust was committed in the Native State of Bhopal and in consequence money was taken out of the pocket of a British subject in British India, the offence can be said to have been committed in both the places and the accused can be tried in either place. There is no divergence as there cannot be in such an excellent Code as the Cr. P.C., between Ss. 179 and 181 (2), 27 Cr. L.J. 932=96 Ind. Cas. 656. It is not essential under this sub-section that at the time the property is said to have been received or retained by the accused, he must have a dishonest intention to misappropriate or to commit criminal breach of trust with reference to it. It is enough for the purposes of this sub-section if the property which is the subject of the offence was received or retained by the accused at a particular place to try the case. Even if the property was received quite properly and innocently at one place and was subsequently dealt with at another place dishonestly so as to constitute misappropriation or breach of trust, he would be triable at the place where he received or retained it, 51 B. 101 relying on 38 M. 779 and 46 B. 641. Where goods were entrusted to a carrier at Mysore to be delivered at Mangalore, where on delivery it was found that the contents of certain bags were abstracted and tailings of no value had been substituted, it was held that the Mangalore Magistrate had jurisdiction to inquire into the complaint under S. 407 I.P.C. as prima facie the violation of the contract to deliver the goods intact was in Mangalore and it was for the accused to prove that the contract was violated elsewhere than at Mangalore, 55 M.L.J. 499=1928 M.W.N. 791=28 L.W. 843. A Railway receipt for goods entrusted with instructions to take delivery of them at their destination in another district cannot be held to be 'any part of the property which is the subject of the offence' within the meaning of this sub-section. The property which is the subject of the offence when the accused is charged under S. 406, I.P.C. is the money which he recovered by sale of the goods which he took delivery by means of the Railway receipt and therefore the Magistrate at P where the receipt was handed over to the accused had no jurisdiction to try the offence but only the Magistrate at the place where the goods were sold and the sale proceeds misappropriated, 18 Cr. L.J. 633=43 Ind. Cas. 233. Where the accused, employed by the complainant on a monthly salary at Rangoon was entrusted with certain promissory notes and hundies with instructions to collect the amounts from various firms in different places collected and remitted a portion of the amount collected to the complainant at Rangoon but misappropriated the balance collected, he can be prosecuted for breach of trust at Rangoon and the Rangoon Court had jurisdiction to try the offence, 6 Rau. 333. An offence under S. 409, I.P.C. can be tried by a Magistrate within whose jurisdiction the property was received or retained, 4 M.L.T. 481=9 Cr. L.J. 92=1 Ind. Cas. 796; 21 Cr. L.J. 149=54 Ind. Cas. 677; 21 Cr. L.J. 319=56 Ind. Cas. 775. A firm doing business in Calcutta employed an agent in Singapore, and prosecuted him at Calcutta for breach of trust committed at Singapore, but accountable for the moneys at Calcutta. Held, that the Court in Calcutta had jurisdiction to entertain the complaint, 26 C.W.N. 175 where 26 C. 746 and 44 C. 912 are referred to; see also 1 Rau 56. This sub-section only applies as between Courts of different local areas whose jurisdiction has been limited by S. 12, supra, and to which the Code applies. A British Magistrate cannot take cognizance of a breach of trust committed in a Native State merely because part of the property is retained within his jurisdiction, 21 M.L.J. 441; 13 Cr. L.J. 530=15 Ind. Cas. 802 but see 38 M. 779. The jurisdiction of a Court to try an offence of criminal misappropriation or breach of trust is governed by this sub-section and not by S. 179, supra. The resulting loss, though a normal result in such cases is not an ingredient of those offences and cannot therefore be described as a consequence within S. 179, supra, 25 Cr. L.J. 410=77 Ind. Cas. 490. When the accused is under a liability to render accounts at a particular place and fails to do so by reason of having committed criminal breach of trust which is alleged against him, the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction that place is situate may inquire into and try the offence under this sub-section and S. 179, supra, has no application to the case, 41 C.L.J. 80=29 C.W.N. 432=26 Cr. L.J. 725=86 Ind. Cas. 213, followed in 27 Cr. L.J. 900=95 Ind. Cas. 212=following 29 C.W.N. 432; 41 C.L.J. 80; 26 Cr. L.J. 725=86 Ind. Cas. 213.

Sub-section (3)—A British Magistrate has no jurisdiction to try a person who is the subject of a Native State and not a subject of the Crown for the offence of theft committed in that State, 2 Bom. L.R. 337. See 7 Cr. L.J. 184=12 M.C.O.R. 54, which is a converse case and it was held there that the trial and conviction of an accused in Mysore Territory by a Magistrate for theft of a bullock in British India and arrest in Mysore Territory while attempting to sell it there was without jurisdiction; the case should have been tried in the Mysore Territory if the British Government had waived their right to demand the surrender of the accused and the District Magistrate was directed to take the necessary steps to ascertain this from the British Government. This sub-section as amended means that the offence of being in possession of stolen property may be inquired into either in the district where it was stolen or where it was found to be dishonestly possessed. This, indeed, is expressly stated in Illustration (b) to S. 160, supra. It must be conceded that the language of this sub-section as amended is open to objection. The context requires that the words "such offence" in this section should mean the offence of theft whereas grammatically they should mean any offence of possession. An accused can be tried for retention of a stolen bullock at Algarh when the theft took place at Muttra, 24 A.L.J. 143=27 Cr.L.J. 21=91 Ind. Cas. 53.

Sub-section (4).—This was introduced in the Code of 1893 and was intended to provide for the case of an offender proceeding from one local jurisdiction to another in British territory. The decisions in 18 A. 350; 27 C. 1041; 2 C.W.N. 81 and 1883 A.W.N. 164 are no longer law. A person charged with having committed the offence of kidnapping in a Native State cannot be tried by a Court in British India within the local limits of which the person kidnapped may be conveyed or concealed or detained. The operation of the Code cannot be extended beyond British territory and allow a case to be tried within British dominion for an offence committed in a State beyond British India, 20 C.W.N. 62; 18 C.W.N. 1178=20 Ind. Cas. 599. It is to be noted that the offences of kidnapping and abduction are not continuing offences, and become complete the moment the person is removed from the keeping of the lawful guardian or enticed away. See 5 Pat 536; 33 A. 664; 12 A.L.J. 91; 26 M. 434; 2 C.W.N. 81; 27 C. 1041 (F.B.); 6 Pat. 471.

182. When it is uncertain in which of several local areas an

Place of inquiry or trial where scene of offence is uncertain or not in one district only; or where offence is continuing or consists of several acts offence was committed, or where an offence is committed partly in one local area and partly in another, or where an offence is a continuing one, and continues to be committed in more local areas than one, or where it consists of several acts done in different local areas, it may be inquired into or tried by a

Scope of the section.—This section in reality intends to provide for the difficulty which would arise where there is a conflict between different areas in order to prevent an accused person getting off entirely, because there may be some doubt as to what particular Magistrate has jurisdiction to try the case. See 45 C. 490. Each portion of the section refers to this conflict, 16 C. 667 at 676. The provisions of this section go to show that the policy of the law is to authorize more Courts than one to try offences in case of uncertainty, 2 C.W.N. 450 at 452, but certainly the balance of convenience should be taken into consideration. This section relates to cases of offences only, that is, acts which are punishable by law and a case under S. 145, supra, is not a case relating to an offence, 3 C.W.N. 143 at 150.

Local Area.—The expression "local area" in this section means a local area over which this Code has application. It does not include a local area in foreign country or a portion of the British Empire to which this Code has no application, 16 C. 667. S. 532, infra, clearly shows that a sessions division, district or sub-division is within the meaning of the Act, and is intended to be included in the term local area, 23 C. 838; 12 A.L.J. 1022. If a conspiracy is entered into in District A and acts are committed in pursuance of that conspiracy in District B the Magistrate of District A can try offence of conspiracy, but cannot try the accused in the same trial for offences committed outside his district, 28 C.W.N. 975. See 24 Cr. L.J. 309=72 Ind. Cas. 69, as to defamatory letter sent by post.

183. An offence committed whilst the offender is in the course of performing a journey or voyage may be inquired into or tried by a Court through or into the local limits of whose jurisdiction the offender, or the person against whom, or the thing in respect of which, the offence was committed, passed in the course of that journey or voyage.

Offence committed on a journey.

Whilst the offender is in the course of performing a journey or voyage.— This section applies to offences committed while the offender is in the course of performing a journey or voyage, but it is not necessary that the person injured or the subject-matter of the offence should be on a voyage or journey. The words journey or voyage referred to herein do not include a voyage on the high seas or in a foreign territory, but are confined in their meaning to a journey or voyage within the territories of British India as down the Ganges or Buckingham Canal 5 M. 23; 24 Cr. L.J. 579=73 Ind. Cas. 323. The section only applies where the offence is alleged to have committed in British India. It will not give jurisdiction to a Court in British India merely because the offence is committed in a voyage or journey unless the place is in British India, 53 M. L.J. 499=1923 M.W.N. 791=30 Cr. L.J. 245=115 Ind. Cas. 238. The words "on a journey or a voyage" must, we think, be read as if the provision had been, whilst a journey or voyage or any part of it is being performed by a ship or carriage without particular reference to the terminus; and so, read together with the language of the rest of the section, the proper construction and effect of the enactment is, that if a person is accused of an offence committed whilst a journey or voyage is going on he may be tried if any of that part of the journey or voyage during which the offence of which the person is accused is alleged to have been committed is within the local limits of the Court's jurisdiction. 1 M.H.C.R. 193 at 196. Where a box containing money was misused during a halt at S. in T district from a boat which was on its way to O. district the question arose whether the charge of theft due to the loss of the box could be tried in T or O district, held the journey was not broken by the halt at S. and that under this section the case could be tried in O district, the place of destination, 25 W.R. (Cr.) 43. Where the complainant and accused travelled in a boat from Bombay to Honawar, and during the journey the accused threw overboard a box of the complainant within 9 miles of Janjira State and reaching Honawar the complainant charged the accused before the Honawar Magistrate of having committed mischief it was held that the Magistrate at Honawar, through whose jurisdiction the accused passed on his journey had jurisdiction to try the offence, Ratanlal 181. The journey spoken of is a continuous journey from one terminus to another regard being had for the purpose of estimating the continuity to all the ordinary incidents affecting journeys of the particular kind which may be under consideration, 13 B.L.R. Appx. 4=21 W.R. (Cr.) 68; 23 W.R. (Cr.) 43. The journey referred to is the journey which the offender is performing and the words "that journey" at the end of the section refer to the same journey. Where therefore a Sarang was charged for rashly navigating under S 280, I.P.C., the only Courts which have jurisdiction to try him are the Courts through or into the local limits of whose jurisdiction, he in the course of the journey passed, 1 C.L.J. 334. See also 24 Cr. L.J. 253=74 Ind. Cas. 787 as to the trial of an offence committed on a railway journey in which it was held that it was immaterial at what point the offence was committed in the course of a journey. See 7 Geo. IV, Ch. 6, S. 12 which deals with offences committed during a journey or voyage and the Fugitive Offenders Act 44 and 45 Vict. Ch. 69 (1851).

184. All offences against the provisions of any law for the time being in force relating to Railways, Telegraphs, the Post Office or Arms and Ammunition may be inquired into or tried in a presidency-town, whether the offence is stated to have been committed within such town or not :

Offences against Railway, Telegraph, Post-office and Arms Acts

Provided that the offender and all the witnesses necessary for his prosecution are to be found within such town.

This section applies to the trial of offences against Railways, Telegraph, Post Office and Arms Acts in the presidency-town, irrespective of the place where the offence was committed. See Railways Act IX of 1890, Telegraph Act XIII of 1885 as amended by Act XI of 1888, Post Office Act VI of 1898, Arms and Ammunition Act of 1878.

High Court to decide, in case of doubt district where inquiry or trial takes place.

185. (1) Whenever a question arises as to which of two or more Courts subordinate to the same High Court ought to inquire into or try any offence, it shall be decided by that High Court.

(2) Where two or more Courts not subordinate to the same High Court have taken cognizance of the same offence, the High Court within the local limits of whose appellate criminal jurisdiction the proceedings were first commenced may direct the trial of such offender to be held in any Court subordinate to it, and if it so decides all other proceedings against such person in respect of such offence shall be discontinued. If such High Court, upon the matter having been brought to its notice, does not so decide, any other High Court, within the local limits of whose appellate criminal jurisdiction such proceedings are pending may give a like direction, and upon its so doing all other such proceedings shall be discontinued.

Amendment.—This section is redrafted and the conflict of decisions in 40 M. 835 and 44 C. 595 is set at rest. The Madras view is accepted as correct, and it is now made clear that one High Court cannot by implication or otherwise transfer a case to itself from a Court subordinate to another High Court, and vice versa or decide which of two High Courts or Courts subordinate thereto should try a case. A High Court could give directions only to a Court subordinate to it.

Whenever a question arises.—This section is not restricted to a case in which there is a doubt as to whether one Court or other has jurisdiction, which is dealt with by S. 182 supra. The section will include the case of a choice on the ground of public convenience, 9 Cr. L.J. 581=2 Ind. Cas. 361. See also 17 C.W.N. 761=14 Cr. L.J. 398=20 Ind. Cas. 222; 44 C. 595. The doubt contemplated by this section is only as to the Court by which an offence is to be inquired into or tried and may be founded on a question of law or of fact. The doubt cannot, for example, refer to the competency of a Magistrate to commit the accused for trial to a Court of Session. This section has absolutely nothing to do with transfer, or High Courts' power of transfer, 40 M. 835. This section refers to those cases only where some offence is being inquired into or tried. The term "offence" is defined in S. 4 (1) (c) supra. Proceedings under Chapter XII of the Code are not proceedings relating to any offence, and this section has therefore no application, 12 A.L.J. 390=15 Cr. L.J. 520=24 Ind. Cas. 608.

This section does not warrant interference by the High Court merely upon the ground of convenience. The decision of the High Court within the local limits of whose appellate jurisdiction the offender actually is, can only be sought when a doubt arises as to the Court by which an offence should be inquired into or tried, 9 Cr. L.J. 581=2 Ind. Cas. 361; 44 C. 595. When two Courts are equally competent to exercise jurisdiction in a matter there is no doubtful question to decide for the High Court, 41 C. 305 at 308; 21 C.W.N. 320 (F.B.); 25 Cr. L.J. 929=75 Ind. Cas. 253 and 40 M. 835.

186. (1) When a Presidency Magistrate, a District Magistrate, a Sub-divisional Magistrate, or if he is specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government, a Magistrate of the first class, sees reason to believe that any person within the local limits of his jurisdiction has committed without such limits (whether within or without British India) an offence which cannot, under the provisions of sections 177 to 184 (both inclusive), or any other law for the time-being in force, be inquired into or tried within such local limits, but is under some law for the time being in force triable in British India, such Magistrate may inquire into the offence as if it had been committed within such local limits, and compel such person in manner hereinbefore provided to appear before him, and send such person to the Magistrate having jurisdiction to inquire into or try such offence, or, if such offence is bailable, take a bond with or without sureties for his appearance before such Magistrate.

Magistrate's procedure on arrest.

(2) When there are more Magistrates than one having such jurisdiction and the Magistrate acting under this section cannot satisfy himself as to the Magistrate to or before whom such person should be sent or bound to appear, the case shall be reported for the orders of the High Court.

Object of the Section.—The object of the inquiry by the Magistrate contemplated by this section is only to satisfy himself that there are prima facie grounds for sending a person believed to have committed the offence to a Magistrate having jurisdiction to inquire or try the same, Ratanlal 849. Such inquiry is to be conducted in accordance with Chapter XVIII of the Code.

Specially empowered in this behalf.—When a Magistrate finds he has no power to act under this section, he can decline to exercise jurisdiction, Ratanlal 849. If a Magistrate not empowered by law to issue process under this section for the apprehension of a person, erroneously in good faith does so, his proceedings shall not be set aside merely on the ground of his being not so empowered, S. 529 (d) infra.

May inquire into the offence.—The inquiry contemplated herein is for the purpose of satisfying that there are prima facie grounds for believing the person accused of having committed an offence for sending him to a Magistrate having jurisdiction and such inquiry is to be conducted in the manner prescribed by Chapter XVII, infra.

Compel such person in manner hereinbefore provided to appear before him—See Chapter VI, supra relating to process to compel appearance. It is not necessary for the validity of the process issued that the Magistrate issuing the same should be at the time of issuing it, within his local jurisdiction. 1 B. 340.

Sub section (2).—Where an application is made to the High Court by the complainant under S. 20 of the Letters Patent for a direction that the case against the accused should be investigated by the Presidency Magistrate and committed to the High Court Sessions for trial, it was held that where special provision is made in certain circumstances namely under this section, the procedure must be governed by the special provision and not by the general provision contained in S. 21 of the Letters Patent, which must be resorted to in cases of an extremely exceptional character. The High Court dismissed the application remarking that it will be for the Magistrate to proceed under this section, Weir II, 146.

187. (1) If the person has been arrested under a warrant issued under section 186 by a Magistrate other than a Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate, such Magistrate shall send the person arrested to the District or Sub-divisional Magistrate to whom he is subordinate, unless the Magistrate having jurisdiction to inquire into or try such offence issues his warrant for the arrest of such person, in which case the person arrested shall be delivered to the police-officer executing such warrant or shall be sent to the Magistrate by whom such warrant was issued.

Procedure where
ordinate Magistrate.

(2) If the offence which the person arrested is alleged or suspected to have committed is one which may be inquired into or tried by any Criminal Court in the same district other than that of the Magistrate acting under section 186, such Magistrate shall send such person to such Court.

188. When a Native Indian subject of Her Majesty commits an offence at any place without and beyond the limits of British India, or committed out of British India

when any British subject commits an offence in the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India, or when a servant of the Queen (whether a British subject or not) commits an offence in the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India, he may be dealt with in respect of such offence as if it had been committed at any place within British India at which he may be found :

Provided that notwithstanding anything in any of the preceding sections of this Chapter no charge as to any such offence shall be inquired into in British India unless the Political Agent, if there is one, for the territory in which the offence is alleged to have been committed, certifies that, in his opinion, the charge ought to be inquired into in British India; and, where there is no Political Agent, the sanction of the Local Government shall be required :

Provided, also, that any proceedings taken against any person under this section which would be a bar to subsequent proceedings against such person for the same offence if such offence had been committed in British India shall be a bar to further proceedings against him under the Indian Extradition Act, 1903, in respect of the same offence in any territory beyond the limits of British India.

Amendment.—The opening words of the first proviso "provided that notwithstanding anything in any of the preceding sections of this Chapter" have been added as certain decisions seem to make it doubtful whether this section was subject to the provisions of Ss. 179 to 181. 'For the foreign Jurisdiction and Extradition Act, 1879' the words the Indian Extradition Act, 1903 have been substituted by the Repealing and Amending Act X of 1927.

Scope of the section.—This section has been amended in 1898 so as to conform exactly with the statutes empowering the Indian Legislature. The first paragraph corresponds to the Indian Councils Act, 1869, the second paragraph with the Government of India Act, 1965, and the third paragraph with the Indian Councils Act, 1861. Exactly similar amendments were made in S 4 of the Indian Penal Code by Act IV of 1898. Again the Foreign Jurisdiction and Extradition Act of 1879 has been repealed. Its legislative enactments have been produced in the Indian Extradition Act XV of 1903, while the extra-territorial powers of the Governor-General in Council are now more appropriately declared by the Indian Foreign Jurisdiction Order in Council. The amendment of the proviso to S. 168 seems to have been made with a view to the judgment in 13 B. 147 and in order to avoid a conflict of jurisdiction with the Courts of Foreign Sovereigns and the Courts established by the King by an Order in Council under Ss. 58 and 64 Victoria, Chapter 37, 14 Cr. L.J. 293=19 Ind. Cas. 934. This section does not mention the word 'certificate' at all and there is no direction for the signing of a certificate by any particular person, 7 Lah. 468. No certificate is necessary for offences committed in the High Seas which is not part of the territory of any State. This section refers only to territories of any native Prince or Chief in India, 12 Cr. L.J. 193=10 Ind. Cas. 703.

Commits an offence.—The term offence as used in this section means an offence under the I.P.C. A complaint of offences under Ss. 182, 193 and 211 I.P.C. committed against the Police or in Court of a Native State cannot be entertained in British India as the acts alleged having been committed in or in relation to Courts and authorities outside British India do not constitute offences under the I.P.C. There is no provision in the I.P.C. which constitutes it an offence to lodge a false complaint in a foreign Court or to give false evidence before such courts where the oath is not administered under the provisions of law in British India but under the law of that State; no offence under S. 182, I.P.C. is committed as it was not given to a public servant as defined in the I.P.C., S. 211, I.P.C. contemplates criminal proceedings and false charges instituted and made according to the provisions of the criminal law in force in British India, 47 B. 907 at 912.

Native Indian subject.—The expression means 'native subject de jure and not de facto and occasional residence in British territory cannot be taken to render a person who is not de jure a subject, for the purpose of criminal jurisdiction being exercised over him for an act committed by him in foreign territory which if committed within British territory would have been an offence cognizable by Municipal Courts, 1835 P.R. (Cr. J.) 1. The mere fact of non residence will not divest a person of his nationality, 2 A. 218 (P.B.); 6 B. 622.

Any British subject.—The expression is by no means synonymous with the expression "European British subject" as defined in S 4 (1) (i) supra. Its ordinary meaning is that of a person who owes allegiance to the British Crown as opposed to a foreigner. In the Code the expression "British subject" is used evidently in a limited sense in antithesis to a "Native Indian subject."

Where a servant of the queen, etc.—This clause was introduced for the first time in the 1898 Code to meet the decision in 16 B. 178 which held that a native accused who was not an Indian subject even though he was a servant of the Queen was not within the section as it stood before the amendment. Corresponding change was made in S. 4, I.P.O. also.

At any place at which he may be found.—The words "in any place" include high seas within its ambit, 41 B. 667. The words "at which he may be found" must be taken to mean not where the person was discovered but where he is actually present, 6 B. 622; 13 B. 147; 2 A. 218; 12 Cr.L.J. 113-9 Ind. Cas. 677. "Where a man is in the country and is charged before a Magistrate with an offence under the Penal Code it will not avail him to say that he was brought there illegally from a foreign country. This appears very clearly from Lord Chief Justice Cockburn's charge to the Grand Jury in The Queen v. Nelson and Brand. The principle upon which the English cases are based underlies also S. 188 of the Code," 33 B. 225. See also 17 B. 369; 31 C. 537; 1906 (P.R. Cr.J.) 17. The Court which tries an accused has nothing to do with the mode by which he has been brought before the Court, 26 M. 124.

First proviso.—The opening words "notwithstanding anything in any of the preceding section of the Chapter" have been added as certain decisions, especially in 38 M. 779, seem to make it doubtful whether this section is subject to the provisions of S. 179 to S. 188 supra, and, to clear this up, the words were added. This proviso is universal in its application and is not restricted to Native States in India and was intended to avoid a conflict of jurisdiction with the Courts of Foreign Sovereigns and the other Courts established by the King by an Order in Council under Ss. 53 and 54 Victoria, Chapter 37, 14 Cr. L.J. 298=19 Ind. Cas. 954.

No charge shall be inquired into unless political agent certifies.—For meaning of the term "Political Agent" see S. 3 (40), General Clauses Act X of 1897. The obtaining of a certificate is a preliminary requisite to the holding of the inquiry. The want of a certificate is an absolute bar to the trial, of the accused for an alleged offence committed outside British India, 41 A. 452, following 19 A. 109; 42 A. 89. The defect cannot be cured by S. 537 infra, 24 A. 256; 19 A. 109; 13 M. 423; 24 B. 247; see 5 Lah. 416, and the defect cannot be cured by producing a certificate subsequently but it was held in 12 Bom. L.R. 667 that there is nothing in the language of the proviso making illegal the obtaining of the certificate after the complaint has been filed and before the inquiry has begun; see 8 Bom. L.R. 507 where it was held that a commitment made was good where the certificate was obtained after examining some of the prosecution witnesses. See also 7 Lah. 468 where 24 A. 256 is distinguished. When certificate has once been granted at the request of the accused who wanted to be tried in British India it cannot be subsequently cancelled by the Political Agent on the ground that the Chief wanted the case to be tried in his own Court, 14 Bom. L.R. 377=13 Cr. L.J. 537=15 Ind. Cas. 809. The certificate granted under this section in respect of a certain set of facts will cover every charge which the facts disclosed in the proceedings will suffice to sustain. The certificate is granted on the allegation of certain facts which constitute the charge against the accused and the Magistrate is not restricted to the section which is mentioned in the certificate but at the utmost to the facts, 33 A. 514 at 516. A commitment of the accused on a charge not specified in the certificate of the Political Agent granted for the trial of the accused in British India of the offence charged is good and valid, 8 M.L.T. 203=11 Cr. L.J. 531=7 Ind. Cas. 802.

Sanction of the Local Government.—Where there is no Political Agent the sanction of the Local Government must be obtained before proceedings are taken against the accused. Where the accused, a native Indian subject of the King, was charged with an offence of criminal breach of trust committed at Las Palmas in Spain and objection was taken that he could not be tried in British India without the sanction of the Local Government, S. 537 infra could not be applied at an intermediate stage of the case so as to allow committed in British India shall be a bar to further proceedings against him under the Indian Extradition Act, 1903, in respect of the same offence in any territory beyond the limits of British India.

Amendment.—The opening words of the first proviso "provided that notwithstanding anything in any of the preceding sections of this Chapter" have been added as certain decisions seem to make it doubtful whether this section was subject to the provisions of Ss. 179 to 181. 'For the foreign Jurisdiction and Extradition Act, 1879' the words the Indian Extradition Act, 1903 have been substituted by the Repealing and Amending Act X of 1927.

Scope of the section.—This section has been amended in 1898 so as to conform exactly with the statutes empowering the Indian Legislature. The first paragraph corresponds to the Indian Councils Act, 1869, the second paragraph with the Government of India Act, 1865, and the third paragraph with the Indian Councils Act, 1861. Exactly similar amendments were made in S. 4 of the Indian Penal Code by Act IV of 1898. Again the Foreign Jurisdiction and Extradition Act of 1879 has been repealed. Its legislative enactments have been produced in the Indian Extradition Act XV of 1903, while the extra-territorial powers of the Governor-General in Council are now more appropriately declared by the Indian Foreign Jurisdiction Order in Council. The amendment of the proviso to S. 188 seems to have been made with a view to the judgment in 13 B 157 and in order to avoid a conflict of jurisdiction with the Courts of Foreign Sovereigns and the Courts established by the King by an Order in Council under Ss. 53 and 54 Victoria, Chapter 87, 14 Cr. L.J. 298=19 Ind. Cas. 934. This section does not mention the word 'certificate' at all and there is no direction for the signing of a certificate by any particular person, 7 Lah. 368. No certificate is necessary for offences committed in the High Seas which is not part of the territory of any State. This section refers only to territories of any native Prince or Chief in India, 12 Cr. L.J. 198=10 Ind. Cas. 705.

Commits an offence—The term offence as used in this section means an offence under the I.P.C. A complaint of offences under Ss. 182, 193 and 211 I.P.C. committed against the Police or in Court of a Native State cannot be entertained in British India as the acts alleged having been committed in or in relation to Courts and authorities outside British India do not constitute offences under the I.P.C. There is no provision in the I.P.C. which constitutes it an offence to lodge a false complaint in a foreign Court or to give false evidence before such courts where the oath is not administered under the provisions of law in British India but under the law of that State; no offence under S. 182, I.P.C. is committed as it was not given to a public servant as defined in the I.P.C., S. 211, I.P.C. contemplates criminal proceedings and false charges instituted and made according to the provisions of the criminal law in force in British India, 47 B. 907 at 912.

Native Indian subject.—The expression means 'native subject de jure and not de facto and occasional residence in British territory cannot be taken to render a person who is not de jure a subject, for the purpose of criminal jurisdiction being exercised over him for an act committed by him in foreign territory which if committed within British territory would have been an offence cognizable by Municipal Courts, 1855 P.R. (Cr. J.) 1. The mere fact of non-residence will not divest a person of his nationality, 2 A. 218 (F.B.); 6 B. 622.

Any British subject—The expression is by no means synonymous with the expression "European British subject" as defined in S. 4 (1) (i) supra. Its ordinary meaning is that of a person who owes allegiance to the British Crown as opposed to a foreigner. In the Code the expression "British subject" is used evidently in a limited sense in antithesis to a "Native Indian subject."

only of a cognizable case but also in a non-cognizable one at any rate where the police-officer had no authority to investigate it under S. 155 supra. The wording of this section is quite general and would include even a non-cognizable offence being taken cognizance of by a Magistrate even upon a police report 51 B. 403; See also 49 M 525 (F.B.); 9 Lah. 280. See also 51 A. 332. This section deals with the ordinary ways in which a Magistrate may "take cognizance" of an offence. This section only says "may take cognizance" and it was held by the Allahabad High Court in 1893 A.W.N. 201. that when the matter comes to his notice under sub-section (1) (c) of this section by a communication received through post a Magistrate is not bound to act judicially. The use of the term "may take cognizance of any offence" does not make it optional with a Magistrate to hear the complainant. It refers to the action of the Magistrate in taking cognizance of an offence in either of three specified courses in which the facts constituting an offence may be brought to his notice. It is not competent for him to refuse to take cognizance of an offence on receipt of a complaint of facts constituting an offence but he is rather bound to examine the complainant, 13 C. 334. When a case comes by transfer from one Magistrate to another no question of taking cognizance ever arises as the case must have been taken cognizance of by a Magistrate before it could be transferred to the file of another Magistrate. The object of the Code is that before proceedings are started against an accused, such as would bring him to a Court of Justice, a Magistrate must have before him knowledge independent of his own knowledge based either upon a complaint or upon a police report, 11 A.L.J. 331. The provisions of this section do not apply to proceedings taken under S. 110 supra by a Magistrate when he receives information from any person other than a police officer, 27 Cr. L.J. 1280—98 Ind. Cas. 128; 27 A. 172.

Except hereinafter provided.—See Ss. 195, 198, 476, 480, 485, 561 etc. An offence under S. 211, I.P.C. is a non-cognizable one and the police are not empowered to investigate into it of their own accord and to prefer a charge in respect of it. 26 Cr. L.J. 1550—90 Ind. Cas. 398. If a Court can take cognizance of an offence only with the previous sanction of the Local Government, then till such sanction is received, no Court can take cognizance under this section, 51 A. 377.

Magistrate specially empowered in this behalf.—See S. 201, infra for procedure where the Magistrate to whom a complaint is made is not competent to take cognizance of the case. In such cases the Magistrate shall return the complaint for presentation to the proper Court with an endorsement to that effect. Sch. IV shows that provincial Magistrates are to be empowered to take cognizance of offence under the three clauses of sub-section (1) of this section and S. 529 (c) infra says that if any Magistrate not empowered to take cognizance of an offence under sub-section (1), clause (a) or (b) erroneously in good faith does anything, his proceedings shall not be set aside merely on the ground of his being not so empowered. S. 530 (k) infra says that if any Magistrate not empowered by law takes cognizance under S. 190, sub-section (1), clause (c) of an offence, his proceedings shall be void.

May take cognizance of any offence.—The word "may" is used purposely. A Magistrate is not bound to act judicially whenever any information is given to him. See also S. 200 infra which enacts that if cognizance is taken he shall at once examine the complainant on oath. The terms of the section show that the Magistrate has to take cognizance before he examines the complainant under S. 200 infra, 19 L.W. 461. Taking cognizance is not a judicial act, 30 C.W.N. 276. The expression any offence occurring in this section includes cognizable as well as non-cognizable offences and even a non-cognizable offence can be taken cognizance of by a Magistrate on the report of a police officer, 49 M. 525 (F.B.) followed in 28 Cr. L.J. 821—104 Ind. Cas. 437; 51 B. 498; 9 Lah 280; 51 A. 332. The use of these words does not make it optional with a Magistrate to hear the complainant. They refer to the action of the Magistrate in taking cognizance of an offence in either of the three specified courses in which the facts constituting an offence may be brought to his notice, 13 C. 334 at 336. A Magistrate cannot decline to take cognizance of an offence when a complaint is presented to him if he is competent to take cognizance 12 B. 161. There is no provision in the Code preventing a Magistrate from taking cognizance of an offence because another Magistrate the error to remain uncorrected, 13 Cr. L.J. 298=19 Ind. Cas. 935. It is to be noted that the certificate required under this section is not mentioned in S. 537, infra and that section cannot apply to a case under this section and want of such certificate renders the trial void.

For the territory in which the offence is committed.—The words "territory" used in the first proviso to this section refer only to territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India, and they cannot include the high seas since they are no part of the territories of any State, 12 Cr. L.J. 198=10 Ind. Cas. 705.

is being inquired into or tried, the Local Government may, if it thinks fit, direct that copies of depositions made or exhibits produced before the Political Agent or a Judicial Officer in or for the territory in which such offence is alleged to have been committed shall be received as evidence by the Court holding such inquiry or trial in any case in which such Court might issue a commission for taking evidence as to the matters to which such depositions or exhibits relate.

Court might issue a commission for taking evidence.—See Ss. 503 to 508 infra as to issue of commissions for examination of witnesses.

trate, District Magistrate or Sub-Divisional Magistrate and any other Magistrate specially empowered in this behalf, may take cognizance of any offence—

- (a) upon receiving a complaint of facts which constitute such offence;
- (b) upon a report in writing of such facts made by any police officer;
- (c) upon information received from any person other than a police-officer, or upon his own knowledge or suspicion, that such offence has been committed.

(2) The Local Government, or the District Magistrate subject to the general or special orders of the local Government, may empower any Magistrate to take cognizance under sub-section (1), clause (a) or clause (b), of offences for which he may try or commit for trial.

(3) The Local Government may empower any Magistrate of the first or second class to take cognizance under sub-section (1), clause (c) of offences for which he may try or commit for trial.

Scope of the section.—The amendment of 1923 does not show very clearly that in fact there was an intention to make sub-section (1) (b) of this section cover a report not only of a cognizable case but also in a non-cognizable one at any rate where the police-officer had no authority to investigate it under S. 155 supra. The wording of this section is quite general and would include even a non-cognizable offence being taken cognizance of by a Magistrate even upon a police report 51 B. 403; See also 49 M 525 (F.B.); 9 Lah. 280. See also 51 A. 332. This section deals with the ordinary ways in which a Magistrate may "take cognizance" of an offence. This section only says "may take cognizance" and it was held by the Allahabad High Court in 1899 A.W.N. 201. that when the matter comes to his notice under sub-section (1) (c) of this section by a communication received through post a Magistrate is not bound to act judicially. The use of the term "may take cognizance of any offence" does not make it optional with a Magistrate to hear the complainant. It refers to the action of the Magistrate in taking cognizance of an offence in either of three specified courses in which the facts constituting an offence may be brought to his notice. It is not competent for him to refuse to take cognizance of an offence on receipt of a complaint of facts constituting an offence but he is rather bound to examine the complainant, 13 C. 334. When a case comes by transfer from one Magistrate to another no question of taking cognizance ever arises as the case must have been taken cognizance of by a Magistrate before it could be transferred to the file of another Magistrate. The object of the Code is that before proceedings are started against an accused, such as would bring him to a Court of Justice, a Magistrate must have before him knowledge independent of his own knowledge based either upon a complaint or upon a police report, 11 A.L.J. 331. The provisions of this section do not apply to proceedings taken under S. 110 supra by a Magistrate when he receives information from any person other than a police-officer, 27 Cr. L.J. 1280—93 Ind. Cas. 128; 27 A. 172.

Except hereinafter provided.—See Ss. 195, 198, 476, 480, 485, 561 etc. An offence under S. 211, I.P.C. is a non-cognizable one and the police are not empowered to investigate into it of their own accord and to prefer a charge in respect of it. 26 Cr. L.J. 1530—90 Ind. Cas. 398. If a Court can take cognizance of an offence only with the previous sanction of the Local Government, then till such sanction is received, no Court can take cognizance under this section, 51 A. 377.

Magistrate specially empowered in this behalf.—See S. 201, infra for procedure where the Magistrate to whom a complaint is made is not competent to take cognizance of the case. In such cases the Magistrate shall return the complaint for presentation to the proper Court with an endorsement to that effect. Sch. IV shows that provincial Magistrates are to be empowered to take cognizance of offence under the three clauses of sub-section (1) of this section and S. 579 (c) infra says that if any Magistrate not empowered to take cognizance of an offence under sub-section (1), clause (a) or (b) erroneously in good faith does anything, his proceedings shall not be set aside merely on the ground of his being not so empowered. S. 530 (k) infra says that if any Magistrate not empowered by law takes cognizance under S. 190, sub-section (1), clause (c) of an offence, his proceedings shall be void.

May take cognizance of any offence.—The word "may" is used purposely. A Magistrate is not bound to act judicially whenever any information is given to him. See also S. 200 infra which enacts that if cognizance is taken he shall at once examine the complainant on oath. The terms of the section show that the Magistrate has to take cognizance before he examines the complainant under S. 200 infra, 19 L.W. 461. Taking cognizance is not a judicial act, 30 C.W.N. 276. The expression any offence occurring in this section includes cognizable as well as non-cognizable offences and even a non-cognizable offence can be taken cognizance of by a Magistrate on the report of a police officer, 49 M. 525 (F.B.) followed in 23 Cr. L.J. 821—104 Ind. Cas. 437; 51 B. 498; 9 Lah 280; 51 A. 332. The use of these words does not make it optional with a Magistrate to hear the complainant. They refer to the action of the Magistrate in taking cognizance of an offence in either of the three specified courses in which the facts constituting an offence may be brought to his notice, 13 C. 334 at 336. A Magistrate cannot decline to take cognizance of an offence when a complaint is presented to him if he is competent to take cognizance 12 B. 161. There is no provision in the Code preventing a Magistrate from taking cognizance of an offence because another Magistrate had previously taken cognizance. This only prevents a person being tried twice for the same offence. But there is no provision that if cognizance is taken by two different Magistrates at different times, the trial can be before one of them only. Multiplicity of trials can always be prevented by acting under the sections of the Code providing for transfer of cases, 50 C. 482 at 436. Where a Magistrate refused to take cognizance on the ground that the accused had been improperly arrested and brought before him. It was held that he was bound to take cognizance of the offence as the question of the legality of the arrest did not affect the question whether the accused were guilty or not of the offences charged, 26 M. 124; 35 B. 223; 29 Cr. L.J. 1089=112 Ind. Cas. 673. For a Magistrate to take cognizance of an offence, the complaint made to him must contain distinct allegations of any specific offence, Weir I, 720, II, 149. The expression "to take cognizance" has not been defined in the Code and it is difficult to ascertain at what precise stage of a case cognizance is said to be taken, 17 C.W.N. 793; 41 M. 213; 19 B. 51. The word 'cognizance' latin 'cognitio' means knowing or acknowledging. The words 'taking cognizance' mean taking legal notice of a matter. The expression occurs constantly in the Code. See for example Ss. 191, 193, 194, 195, 196, 196A, 197, 193 and 199 infra. Power to "take cognizance" is distinct "from to inquire or to try" S 201, infra lays down that a Magistrate who has power to "take cognizance" may issue process for the appearance of the accused but if he has no jurisdiction to "inquire or try" he must order the appearance of the accused before a Magistrate having jurisdiction to inquire or try, and S. 201 infra deals with the case where the Magistrates are not empowered to take cognizance at all. Again cases are conceivable where a Magistrate who is not ordinarily taking cognizance of an offence, say a third-class Magistrate, gets jurisdiction to inquire or try of a case duly transferred to him. "Taking cognizance does not involve any formal action or indeed action of any kind but occurs as soon as a Magistrate, as such, applies his mind to the suspected commission of an offence," 37 C. 412 at 416. See also 39 C. 119, 41 M. 213; 19 B. 51; 27 C. 798 and 4 C.W.N. 825. Once a Magistrate takes cognizance of an offence upon complaint it is competent for him to take cognizance of any offence that is disclosed by the evidence before him, 27 Cr. L.J. 663=94 Ind. Cas. 717. The expression is not equivalent to cognizance of any offender, for the definition of complaint under S 4 (1) (A), supra, includes a complaint that some person unknown has committed an offence, 13 Cr. L.J. 389=23 Ind. Cas. 737; 12 Cr. L.J. 399=11 Ind. Cas. 583; 21 C.W.N. 930=18 Cr. L.J. 901=32 Ind. Cas. 133.

Sub-section (1) (a): Complaint.—The term "complaint" has been defined in S. 4 (1) (A), supra. The definition expressly excludes the report of a police-officer which is dealt with in cl. (b) of this sub-section; complaint is distinct from information which is dealt with in cl. (c) of this sub-section. The requisites of a valid complaint are—(1) the facts alleged should prima facie constitute an offence; (2) the facts should be brought to the notice of a Magistrate with a view of taking action, 15 C 707; 6 C.W.N. 925; 15 Cr. L.J. 368=23 Ind. Cas. 737; 43 M. 523 (F.B.) where 22 L.W. 209=(1923) M.W.N. 317 is overruled and 46 C. 807; 11 A.L.J. 331; 8 M.L.T. 239 and 236; 26 B. 115 are referred to. See also 51 B. 498. An order by a District Judge to a Subordinate Magistrate to try an accused could not be held to be a complaint, 23 Cr. L.J. 737=53 Ind. Cas. 431. The mere fact that the Magistrate who happened to be in the village before receiving a written complaint of facts heard orally the story given by the complainant and even visited the scene of occurrence does not bring the case under sub-section (1) (c) but under this clause, 27 Cr. L.J. 1405=93 Ind. Cas. 718. If a Magistrate takes cognizance upon his own information the accused can claim a transfer or commitment under the next section. Where a police-officer files a complaint in a non-cognizable case regarding an offence which it is not his duty to report, such complaint comes within S. 4 (1) (A), supra, and is not a police-report, 32 M. 3; 26 B. 150 (F.B.). The complaint must disclose facts constituting the offence. There is no authority for the proposition that a complainant himself should be witness of the facts. Every member of the public has a right to set the law in motion by a complaint, 13 B. 600; 13 Cr. L.J. 369=23 Ind. Cas. 737; 15 Cr. L.J. 636=23 Ind. Cas. 848; 18 A. 455; 10 Cr. L.J. 18=2 Ind. Cas. 433; 11 C.W.N. 170; 21 Cr. L.J. 318=51 Ind. Cas. 692. If the complaint did not contain any allegation of any specific offence as defined in S. 4 (1) (c) supra having been committed, a Magistrate has no jurisdiction to take cognizance and proceed with the case, Weir I, 720, II, 149. When a complaint presented is not a complaint of facts as contemplated by this sub-section and no objection having been taken at the earliest stage and no prejudice being shown to the appellant, it was held that the appellant could not have the benefit of the objection taken for the first time in appeal, 16 C.W.N. 1103. A complaint is not defective because it did not set out speeches or alleged seditious words which form the subject-matter of the subsequent charge and even if such omission is a defect, it is an irregularity which will be cured by S. 537 (a) infra unless it has occasioned a failure of justice, 32 M. 3 where 22 B. 112 at 150 is distinguished. Where in the course of a trial of S. for the theft of a pony the evidence disclosed that A who was present in custody in Court on another charge, was also involved in the theft the Magistrate was justified in putting A in the dock along with S. and proceeding with the trial against both after re-examining the witnesses. The Magistrate in such a case takes cognizance under this clause and not under cl. (c), 11 Cr. L.J. 439=7 Ind. Cas. 461, see also 14 Cr. L.J. 290=19 Ind. Cas. 636. Where a person is charged with several offences some of which are not triable by any Magistrate for want of a complaint of Court or one by a public servant, there is no objection to the Magistrate proceeding with the trial of such offences as may be separately charged and in respect of which no complaint of Court was necessary even though he may not be competent to try all the offences if a complaint had been made in respect of other offences, 17 M.L.J. 559=7 Cr. L.J. 6 But see the observations in 1929 M.W.N. 196=23 L.W. 687=30 Cr. L.J. 322=114 Ind. Cas. 360, to the contrary. This decision has been doubted on more than one occasion.

Clause (b) : Police report.—The provisions of this section extend to any offence and notwithstanding the use of the word "police report" in S. 173, supra, this section cannot be restricted merely to non-cognizable offences and a Magistrate is empowered by this section to take cognizance both in cognizable and non-cognizable offences upon a report such as is contemplated in this section, 28 C.W.N. 437=26 Cr. L.J. 68=83 Ind. Cas. 628. See also 49 M. 525 (F.B.) under this section, as amended, a Magistrate can take cognizance of an offence upon a report made by any police-officer, but the report must state facts which constitute the offence. A mere assertion that an offence has been committed is not sufficient, 51 C 402; 26 Cr. L.J. 441=85 Ind. Cas. 57. The term "police report" in this clause is not limited to a report mentioned in S. 170, supra, and the preceding section of the Code, viz, Ss. 155, 157, 169, 11 A.L.J. 331=14 Cr. L.J. 218=19 Ind. Cas. 314. The report of an excise Inspector is a report for the purposes of this section, 54 C. 371. In order that a police-report may be acted upon it must set forth the nature of the information against an accused person, 37 C. 49. The Madras Abkari Act is not a self-contained Act in the matter of procedure in the investigation of offences under S. 55. In such a case the procedure laid down in this Code in S. 5 (2), supra, is to be followed, the offence having been committed in the accused's shop would fall under S. 31 and not under S. 84 of the Abkari Act, and the police would have authority to send the accused direct before a Magistrate. It is therefore a case in which the section will apply and the Magistrate has jurisdiction to dispose of the case, 43 M.L.J. 605; 22 L.W. 98=25 Cr. L.J. 1556=90 Ind. Cas. 436. Report of a Sanitary Inspector of Municipality is not a police-report, 18 Cr. L.J. 641=40 Ind. Cas. 289. It includes any information given by a police-officer to a Magistrate, oral information sent by police officer through a private messenger amounts to a police-report within the meaning of this section, 29 C 417, but a report by a police-officer, in a non-cognizable case was held to be a complaint within S. 4 (1) (h) supra falling under cl. (a) and not a police-report within this clause, 26 B. 150 (F.B.); 46 C. 807; 32 M. 3. Police-report in this section includes report made by the police in non-cognizable offences. The section speaks of "any offence" so, to limit the application of the section to one particular class of offences is not warranted by the language used. This section authorises certain Magistrates to take cognizance of any offence upon a report in writing of facts which constitute such offence, made by any police-officer and S. 200 (a) infra provides that where a public servant acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duties makes a complaint of any offence nothing shall require the Magistrate to examine him before taking cognizance of the offences, 49 M. 525 (F.B.) where (1925) M.W.N. 317=22 L.W. 209; (1925) M.W.N. 317=26 Cr. L.J. 1550=90 Ind. Cas. 398, is overruled and 46 C. 807, 11 A.L.J. 331;

6 M.L.T. 259 and 26 B. 150 followed, see also 51 B. 493; 28 Cr.L.J. 821=104 Ind. Cas. 437; 29 Cr.L.J. 65=106 Ind. Cas. 577 See also 29 Cr. L.J. 938=111 Ind. Cas. 858 where the Full Bench decision in 49 M. 525 is followed. The Magistrates mentioned in this section are entitled to take cognizance of non-cognizable offences upon a report made in writing by a police-officer on oath under S. 200 supra, 9 Lah. 280 following 49 M. 525 (F.B.) and 6 Lah. L.J. 608 and 26 B. 150 (F.B.) When an appellate Magistrate reverses the finding and sentence under appeal and makes up his mind to try the offender himself, the offence being ordinarily triable by him, he takes cognizance of the offence under this clause as he has before him the police charge-sheet stating all the facts, and not under cl. (c), 30 M. 228. A case is not legally instituted upon a police-report if the report under S. 173, supra, did not set forth the nature of the information and where the first information under S. 154, supra, was also defective, 37 C. 49. A District Magistrate once having taken cognizance cannot refer the complaint to the police under S. 202, supra, with necessary instructions to submit a charge-sheet if necessary, to the Magistrate concerned on the police charge-sheet and the latter Magistrate cannot take cognizance on the police charge-sheet even though he had jurisdiction to try, 54 C. 303.

Clause (c), information.—The provisions of this clause apply to a case in which a Magistrate while trying one person finds occasion to formulate a charge against some one else, 29 Bom. L.R. 813 at 818 (F.C.)=28 Cr. L.J. 239=100 Ind. Cas. 227. This is a provision of law for enabling a public official to take care that justice may be vindicated notwithstanding that the persons individually aggrieved are unwilling or unable to prosecute, 3 B.L.R. 274. This clause deals with cases where there has been neither a formal complaint nor a police-report and independently of these, the Magistrate takes the initiative upon information received from any person other than a police-officer, or upon his own knowledge or suspicion, 41 C. 1013 at 1020. Information on which a Magistrate takes cognizance under this sub-section must be recorded and the Magistrate is bound to disclose to the accused the information on which he acts and issues warrant, 10 C.W.N. 775=3 Cr. L.J. 473 followed in 33 C. 1076 at 1082 and 37 C. 221. There is no provision in the Code empowering a Magistrate to take cognizance of an offence under this clause or refer it for preliminary inquiry on his own information. He cannot record statement on oath and S. 202 applies only to cases where the Magistrate takes cognizance 14 Cr. L.J. 600=21 Ind. Cas. 472. "It is nowhere laid down and it is probably impossible to state in general terms how much the accused is entitled to have recorded in such cases". Where a Magistrate is given wide powers to take cognizance of an offence on suspicion, it would be disregarding the express language of the Legislature to say that he cannot act if the suspicion or knowledge is based on facts which come within his cognizance or in another capacity, viz., the President of a Local Board. The exercise of such power may in some cases work considerable hardship, but, when the language of the section is clear, the Court has no business to lay down limitations which are unwarranted, 43 M. 709. It is obviously most desirable that a Magistrate should when taking cognizance under this section place on record the ground on which he is taking action, and this, not only in fairness to the person against whom action is so taken and who is entitled to know for what reason he is being arrested but also for his own protection, but omission to do so does not necessarily vitiate the proceedings, 27 Cr. L.J. 413=91 Ind. Cas. 77. Where a Magistrate acting on the facts disclosed in the prosecution evidence recorded by him adds a charge in respect of an act alleged to have been done in pursuance of an alleged conspiracy contained in a complaint presented to him it cannot be said that he is acting on his own knowledge or suspicion within this sub-section. Action taken by the Magistrate is on the original complaint made to him and justified by the provisions of S. 233, infra, 27 Cr. L.J. 669=94 Ind. Cas. 717 where 49 C. 873 is referred to. A communication received through post is an information coming within this clause and may be acted upon by the Magistrate if he chose but he is not bound to deal with it judicially, 1839 A.W.N. 201. It is competent to a Magistrate to receive and take action upon petition relating to a crime when sent to him by post. It frequently happens that information of a valuable character in regard to a crime thus reaches a Magistrate which, if not so conveyed, would be withheld altogether and it would be in most cases inadvisable to shut out such information altogether, whereas in other cases it would be highly indiscreet to take action upon it. A Magistrate in such cases must act upon his own discretion, Weir II, 149. Upon evidence recorded by a Magistrate in trying a case of theft against A it appears that possibly B was guilty and the Magistrate directed B to be tried and he tried and convicted B, it was held that the trial was vitiated by S. 191, infra, 1904 P.R. (Cr. J.) 68 at p. 254 following 4 C.W.N. 367 & 26 C. 786. A Magistrate may take cognizance on an anonymous communication, 3 C.W.N. 65; 51 A. 377 S. 351, infra, is self-contained and complete in itself and is independent of this clause and S. 191, infra, 10 Cr. L.J. 303=3 Ind. Cas. 568 where 3 C.W.N. cclxix is followed 1 C.W.N. 105 not followed 4 C.W.N. 367. This clause does not apply to security proceedings under S. 110, supra, initiated by Magistrates on information he receives from one, other than a police officer and there is no authority for applying the provisions of the clause and limit the wide and unfettered language used in Ss. 110 and 112, supra, 27 Cr. L.J. 1283=93 Ind. Cas. 123 following 27 A. 172. A Magistrate to whom a case is transferred after process had been issued stands in the same position as the Magistrate who originally issued process and when discharging the accused he acts with jurisdiction when he suo motu issues process to another person under this clause. 53 C. 1274 distinguishing 1 C.W.N. 105.

Upon his own knowledge or suspicion.—Under this section a District Magistrate has authority to take cognizance of an offence upon information received from any person or upon his own knowledge or suspicion even in case the knowledge or suspicion is based on an anonymous letter provided there is no bar to his taking cognizance, such as previous sanction, say of the Local Government under S. 197, infra; until such sanction is obtained no Magistrate can take cognizance under this section and any action taken by him without the requisite sanction is wholly without jurisdiction, 51 A. 377. The power of a Magistrate to proceed under this clause is intended to be used where a Magistrate has good reason to believe that there has been a serious infringement of the law but is unable to take action in the ordinary way because the party aggrieved is either unwilling or unable to prosecute, 2 Pat. L.J. 637. A belief founded on private and anonymous information is not knowledge within the meaning of this section, 4 B.L.R. Appx. 1. The knowledge must be either personal or derived from testimony legally given, 5 B.L.R. 274 at 289. Where a Public Prosecutor files a complaint, cognizance is not taken by the Magistrate under this clause, 15 Cr. L.J. 359=23 Ind. Cas. 737. A Magistrate taking action against a witness in a case which is pending before him upon the facts disclosed by the evidence of another witness does so under this section and not under S. 351, infra, 1 C.W.N. 105; 1907 A.W.N. 93. When a Magistrate takes cognizance under this clause upon his own knowledge or suspicion he has no power to refuse to transfer the case, 13 A. 345 but he does not deprive himself from all jurisdiction to hear and determine the case which in fact had been instituted upon his peculiar knowledge of the facts. He may hold a preliminary inquiry preparatory to commitment, 20 Cr. L.J. 47=48 Ind. Cas. 697; 26 C. 786; 21 A. 109; 22 M. 143. In such cases S. 191, infra, enables the accused to apply for a transfer of the case and the Magistrate shall also inform the accused that he is entitled to have the case tried by another Court, but unless the accused exercises that privilege, the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to institute, hear and determine the particular case is unquestionable, 1893' A.W.N. at p. 79.

Sub-section (2).—See S 529 (e), infra, which saves proceedings before a Magistrate not authorized to take cognizance of an offence. See also 5 Pat. 447.

191. When a Magistrate takes cognizance of an offence under Transfer or commitment on application of accused.

sub-section (1), clause (c), of the preceding section the accused shall, before any evidence is taken, be informed that he is entitled to have the case tried by another Court, and if the accused, or any of the accused if there be more than one, objects to being tried by such Magistrate, the case shall, instead of being tried by such Magistrate, be committed to the Court of Session or transferred to another Magistrate.

Object of the section.—The object is that before proceedings are to be taken against an accused such as would bring him before a Court of Justice, a Magistrate must have before him information independent of his own knowledge based either on complaint, or a police-report, 11 A.L.J. 331. The principle underlying the provisions of this section is that when a Magistrate acts on information privately obtained and which is not open to scrutiny by the accused, the Legislature presumes that the Magistrate will probably have formed an opinion on such ex parte materials adverse to the accused which the latter will have no means of correcting. Under the circumstances to dispel any feeling of distrust of the impartiality of the tribunal and to foster confidence in the administration of justice, the Legislature has given the accused the option of asking for a change in the personnel of the Judge, 10 Cr. L.J. 333 at 333=3 Ind. Cas. 563. As stated in the well-known English case of Sargeant v. Dale the principle underlying this section is to clear away everything which might engender suspicion and distrust of the tribunal and to promote the feeling of confidence in the administration of justice which is so essential to social order and security. The principle of this section is applicable to security proceedings though the section is confined to offences. 4 Pat. L.J. 7; 27 A. 172 followed in 72 Cr. L.J. 1280=98 Ind. Cas. 128. Under this section a Magistrate when he takes cognizance under sub-section (1) (c) of S. 190, supra is not precluded from holding a preliminary inquiry and committing the case to the court of sessions, 21 A. 109.

Takes Cognizance of an offence under S. 190 (1) (c).—The expression "taking cognizance of an offence" is not defined in the Code, it is not equivalent to taking cognizance of the offender. It is difficult to ascertain at what precise stage cognizance is taken. When a Magistrate on receipt of police-report makes over the case to another Magistrate for inquiry, and the latter issues process to the accused, the latter and not the former can be said to take cognizance, 17 C.W.N. 795. After taking cognizance of an offence the Magistrate has jurisdiction to inquire into the case of all persons whom the evidence shows as offenders, 21 C.W.N. 959. This section and S. 190, supra only apply to "offences" and need not necessarily govern proceedings under Chapter VIII of the Code dealing with security proceedings, but the principle contained in this section was applied in 29 C. 392 and 4 Pat. L.J. 7; on the ground that no man ought to be a judge in his own case and the case was transferred to another Court, but in 27 A. 172 at 174 Sir George Knox, J., held otherwise, "no authority has been shown to me for this and I am not prepared without authority to apply the provisions of S. 190 and limit by them the wide and unfettered language used in Ss. 110 and 112, Cr. P.O." See 27 Cr. L.J. 1280=98 Ind. Cas. 123 following 27 A. 192. The fact that previous to the making of a written complaint to the Magistrate who happened to be in the village the complainant narrated his story to the Magistrate orally and the Magistrate also inspected the locality does not bring the case within the purview of S. 190 (1) (c) supra 27 Cr. L.J. 1306=98 Ind. Cas. 718.

Accused shall be informed that he is entitled.—These words are mandatory and the competency of a Magistrate to try the accused person for an offence which he has taken cognizance of under S. 190 (1) (c) supra is dependent upon the strict observance of the provisions of this section, and failure to comply with the imperative provisions of law contained herein is a defect which invalidates the proceedings, 51 A. 164; 13 Cr. L.J. 52=13 Ind. Cas. 333, 21 A.L.J. 89=25 Cr. L.J. 656=73 Ind. Cas. 576; 27 Cr. L.J. 325=92 Ind. Cas. 741, 13 A. 345, 17 C.W.N. 795, 27 Cr. L.J. 1037=96 Ind. Cas. 983. The Magistrate has no discretion in the matter and he cannot refuse to transfer or commit, and any trial held after such refusal is not by a Court of competent jurisdiction and the irregularity cannot be cured by S. 537 infra, 13 A. 345 at 347. The right view appears to be that the accused are only entitled to object to the trial by the Magistrate when he has taken cognizance under S. 190 (1) (c) supra. On the objection being raised to a trial by the particular Magistrate, he is not bound to transfer the case; he may elect to commit the case to the Court of Session, 22 M. 143 at 149; 7 Bom. L.R. 637; 26 C. 788. This section does not disqualify a Magistrate who has jurisdiction from holding a preliminary inquiry. What the section provides is that if the Magistrate takes cognizance of an offence under S. 190 (1) (c) and if, before evidence is taken, the accused objects to being tried by such a Magistrate, he may either transfer the case to another Magistrate or commit the case to the Court of Session. He is thus empowered to make a commitment in a case within his cognizance, and he cannot make a commitment without holding a preliminary inquiry, 21 A. 103, or the Magistrate may discharge the accused if no prima facie case was made out, and in deciding which of the three courses he will adopt the Magistrate should exercise a sound judicial discretion. A Magistrate in deciding whether he should under this section commit the case to the Court of Session or transfer it for trial to another Magistrate should exercise a judicial discretion. His decision will depend chiefly upon whether the punishment which a Magistrate is competent to inflict in case of conviction will be adequate or not 10 Cr. L.J. 224 12 C.W.N. 438. Failure on the part of the accused to take objection to the trial is of no avail. An obligation is imposed on the Magistrate to inform the accused of his right to have the case tried by another Court, 3 C.W.N. cclxxix referred to in 41 C. 1013 at 1020 and failure to inform the accused that he is entitled to have his case tried by another Court is a ground for having the proceedings set aside, Weir II, 151. There cannot be any waiver of right by an accused in a criminal trial, 46 M. 117 at 120; 18 M.L.J. 330; 6 C.W.N. 202; 21 A.L.J. 89; 4 Lah. 376. No serious defect in the mode of conducting a criminal trial can be justified or cured by the consent of the counsel or advocate of the accused, 29 Bom. L.R. 813 at 820 (P.C.). No consent of counsel whether for his own convenience, or that of his client or for the convenience of the Court can itself create jurisdiction in the Court to commit irregularities; nor can the commission of irregularities of a serious nature substantially affecting the conduct of the trial and prejudicing the accused be waived merely by consent on the part of the accused's representative, 80 A. 457 at 462, but if the accused after being informed of his right does not choose to exercise it the Magistrate has jurisdiction to try the case, 1893 A.W.N. 79. All that the accused is entitled to is to have the case tried by another Court and the section gives no right to the accused to select or determine by which other Court his case is to be tried, 7 Bom. L.R. 637. The desirability imposed by this section equally applies to the hearing of an appeal by a Magistrate who originally took cognizance of the case under S. 190 (1) (c), supra as a Subordinate Magistrate, 12 C.W.N. 438=7 Cr. L.J. 224, but a contrary view was taken by the Allahabad High Court in 1899 A.W.N. 74. When a Magistrate in the course of the trial of one person has reason to believe another person guilty and institutes proceedings against him, he acts still under S. 190 (1) (a) and the accused is not entitled to have the case tried by another Court; when an appellate Court reverses the finding and sentence of the first Court, and the offence is ordinarily triable by it, and makes up its mind to try the accused, the appellate Court takes cognizance of the offence not under cl. (c) of S. 190 (1) but under cl. (a), 30 M. 228. See S. 351 infra. In a case contemplated by S. 351 the accused is not placed under any liability to combat with the effect of the suspicious circumstances operating in the mind of the Magistrate and influencing his judgment, and he has full information as to the source and particulars of the materials upon which the Magistrate acts.

192. (1) Any Chief Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate may transfer any case,

Transfer of cases of which he has taken cognizance, for inquiry or trial to any Magistrate subordinate to him.

(2) Any District Magistrate may empower any Magistrate of the first class who has taken cognizance of any case to transfer it for inquiry or trial to any other specified Magistrate in his district who is competent under this Code to try the accused or commit him for trial; and such Magistrate may dispose of the case accordingly.

Scope of the section.—This section provides for the distribution of work among Magistrates. It empowers superior Magistrates to transfer any case of which they have taken cognizance, for inquiry or trial to subordinate Magistrates. But after a Magistrate has proceeded under S. 202 infra he cannot make an order of transfer under his section for the purpose of the case being dealt with under S. 203 infra, 29 C.W.N. 508=26 Cr. L.J. 990=87 Ind. Cas. 526. This section deals with transfer of cases for administrative reasons, especially for distribution of work among Magistrates by superior Magistrate to whom a general power of transfer is given by S. 523, infra. This section can be invoked only after taking cognizance of the offence.

Chief Presidency Magistrate.—All Presidency Magistrates, are subordinate to the Chief Presidency Magistrate and so the latter has power to withdraw any case from any one of them and refer the same for inquiry or trial to any other Magistrate, 1 Bom. L.R. 347. See Mad. Cr. Rules of Pr. Rule, 12.

May transfer any case.—Taking cognizance under S. 190, supra is a condition precedent to act under this section. A Magistrate cannot transfer under this section a case which had been transferred to his Court and such transfer is ultra vires, 12 A.L.J. 277=15 Cr. L.J. 357=23 Ind. Cas. 725; 36 A. 166; 7 M.H.C.R. Appx. 33. The words "any case" are wide enough to include miscellaneous proceedings under Chapter VIII and Chapter XII of the Code, 24 A. 511; 35 C. 243 at 256; 31 C. 350; 22 C. 898; 38 C. 370; 10 C.W.N. 1095; 20 A.L.J. 215; 26 M. 188, but this section does not authorise a District Magistrate to transfer for trial a case to a subordinate Magistrate who is not competent to try it either under S. 28, supra or under some special or local law, 23 C. 542. A transfer under this section operates as a transfer of the whole case and not the case against a particular accused and it appears open to considerable doubt whether under this section a case can be transferred piecemeal, 7 C.L.J. 249=7 Cr. L.J. 318; 27 C. 979. This sub-section empowers a transfer for inquiry or trial but its provisions cannot be availed of simply for the purpose of considering the report of an investigation already ordered under S. 202 infra, 29 C.W.N. 508=26 Cr. L.J. 990=87 Ind. Cas. 526. But a Sub divisional Magistrate to whom a District Magistrate transferred a particular case for trial cannot transfer the case again to a Magistrate subordinate to him and such transfer is ultra vires, 36 A. 166. In proceedings under S. 145, supra, this section is applicable only when the property, the subject of dispute, is within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to whom the case is transferred. If otherwise the Magistrate to whom the case is transferred is functus officio and his proceedings are void, 52 M. 241.

For inquiry or trial.—A District Magistrate is not competent to direct a subordinate Magistrate to dispose of a case pending in the Court of the latter in a particular manner, e.g., by commitment, Weir II, 152. The words "for inquiry" cannot mean a preliminary inquiry under Chapter XVIII, 4 M.H.C.R. Appx. xi. The effect of a transfer is that the superior Magistrate becomes functus officio unless he again recalls the case, 32 C. 783; 30 C. 449 followed in 49 C.L.J. 378; 48 C. 854; 23 Cr. L.J. 89=65 Ind. Cas. 451; 4 C.W.N. 560 and 242; 27 C. 979; 9 C.W.N. 810.

Notice.—When a case is transferred under this section immediately after a complaint is received it is not essential to give notice to the parties. It stands on the same footing as a transfer made for administrative purposes which is an exception to the rule that no order to the prejudice of a party is to be made without giving him an opportunity to show cause, 24 M. 317. All the High Courts agree in holding that notice to the parties ought to be given before a case is transferred under S. 623, 81 M. 610; 39 M.L.J. 718; 6 M.L.T. 14; 8 M.L.T. 222; Weir II, 691 and 692; 22 B. 549; 21 Bom. L.R. 276; 6 Bom. L.R. 856; 8 C. 333; 7 C.W.N. 114 and 87; 8 C.L.J. 241; 28 A. 421; 3 A. 749; 13 Cr. L.J. 32=13 Ind. Cas. 224; 22 Cr. L.J. 199; 28 Cr. L.J. 517=102 Ind. Cas. 213; 28 Cr. L.J. 33=93 Ind. Cas. 70. The provisions of this and S. 202, infra are separate and distinct; the powers conferred by the one are not curtailed by the other, 46 C. 854.

193. (1) Except as otherwise expressly provided by this Code or by any other law for the time being in force, no Court of Session shall take cognizance of any offence as a Court of original jurisdiction unless the accused has been committed to it by a Magistrate duly empowered in that behalf.

(2) Additional Sessions Judges and Assistant Sessions Judges shall try such cases only as the Local Government by general or special order may direct them to try, or as the Sessions Judge of the division, by general or special order, may make over to them for trial.

Object of the section.—The object is to secure a preliminary inquiry which has the effect of giving the accused especially in serious cases some information of the case he has to answer and also to find out whether the case is a fit one to be tried by a Court of Session, 3 M. 351; 4 M. 227, but it is well established that the Court of Session, once a case is committed to it, has ample power to alter or amend the original charge on which the accused is committed or to add a new charge provided that the new charge can be supported by the evidence on record, 3 B. 200; 9 A. 525; 3 M. 351, See 11 B.H. C.R. (Cr. Ca.) 278, as to the principle which should guide the Sessions Court in amending charges.

Except as otherwise expressly provided by the code.—In this connection see Ss. 195, 351, 436, 471, 476 to 478, 480 to 482, 485, 532 infra, wherein special provisions are made in the Code.

As a Court of original jurisdiction.—This section provides that except as otherwise expressly provided no Court of Session shall take cognizance of any offence as a Court of original jurisdiction unless the accused has been committed to it by a Magistrate duly empowered in this behalf. The only section which expressly empowers a Court of Session to commit an accused person by itself is S. 477 infra and s 480 infra empowers a Court of Session to take cognizance of offences mentioned in that section without a commitment by a Magistrate. Except these two sections there is no other provision in the Code which empowers a Court of Session to take cognizance of an offence as a Court of original jurisdiction. Under S. 423 (1) (b) infra a Court of appeal may order an accused to be committed for trial which means that a Court of appeal may direct a Magistrate competent to commit, to commit the accused to the Court of Session for trial S. 423, infra, must be read with this section and reading the two sections together it is manifest that except in cases where the Court of Session is expressly empowered to take cognizance, to do so, unless the accused is validly committed to it. 1907 A.W.N. 178=6 Cr. L.J. 7; 22 C. 50. The rule that a Sessions Court cannot take cognizance as a Court of original jurisdiction is also subject to the provisions of Ss. 226 and 227, infra; the added charge must be for an offence made out by the evidence recorded before the committing Magistrate or by the evidence recorded before the Sessions in the course of trial under S. 227 infra, if charge is altered, 8 B 200. As the Sessions Court is not competent to take cognizance as a Court of original jurisdiction the preliminary inquiry is to be held by a Magistrate, and at that inquiry the accused must have information of the case he has to meet, 3 M. 351; 9 A. 525; 4 M. 227.

Unless the accused has been committed to it by a Magistrate.—The object of this restriction was presumably to secure in the case of a person charged with a grave offence a preliminary inquiry which would afford him the opportunity of becoming acquainted with the circumstances of the offence imputed to him, and enable him to make his defence, 3 M 351 at 353; see also 4 M. 227, at 228 where it was observed that the law contemplates "that in serious cases of which a Sessions Court may take cognizance, the accused should have some information of the case he has to answer." Trial of persons by a Court of Session without a valid commitment to such Court is invalid as the defect is one of substance and not of form, 15 M. 352; 22 C. 50. Where an approver rested in the Sessions Court from the deposition he gave before the committing Magistrate and was immediately put on trial with the other accused by the Sessions Court it was held that the conviction was bad for want of a commitment, 10 W.R. (Cr.) 10; 19 W.R. (Cr.) 43; 23 B. 493.

A Magistrate duly empowered in his behalf.—See Ss. 206, 213, 215 and 592, infra. The onus of proving that the commitment was made by a Magistrate not duly empowered is on the party impugning the commitment, 13 W.R. (Cr.) 17.

Additional Sessions Judges and Assistant Sessions Judges.—For definition of these terms see Ss. 9 (3) and 17 (3), supra. There can only be one Sessions Judge for each Sessions division, but there may be more than one Sessions Judge for such Sessions Court. When an additional Sessions Judge is appointed his Court will not be an Additional Sessions Court but the Sessions Court, 1 M.L.J. 397 (F.B.). An Additional Sessions Judge has jurisdiction to hear a reference under S. 123, supra, transferred to him by the Sessions Judge, 50 C. 229.

Try such case.—The word "case" used in this section cannot be extended to appeals or other matters. A Sessions Judge has therefore no power to transfer an appeal filed in his Court to an Assistant Sessions Judge, 37 A. 286 where 9 B. 164; 7 A. 661 and 28 A. 93 are followed and 7 A. 661 is referred to. It is significant that in S. 626 (i) (e), (i) and (iii) and in S. 527 infra a distinction is made between case and appeal and this distinction is kept in view by the Legislature in the Code.

194. (1) The High Court may take cognizance of offences by High Court. zance of any offence upon a commitment made to it in manner hereinafter provided.

Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to affect the provisions of any Letters Patent granted under the Indian High Courts Act, 1861, or the Government of India Act, 1915, or any other provision of this Code.

(2) (a) Notwithstanding anything in this Code contained, the Advocate General may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council or the Local Government, exhibit to the High Court, against persons subject to the jurisdiction of the High Court, informations for all purposes for which Her Majesty's Attorney General may exhibit informations on behalf of the Crown in the High Court of Justice in England.

(b) Such proceedings may be taken upon every such information lawfully be taken in the case of similar informations filed by the Attorney General so far as the circumstances of the case justify a transfer made to the said High Court will admit.

All the fines, penalties, forfeitures, debts and sums of money payable by or for the Government of India.

The High Court may make rules for carrying into effect the provisions of this and S. 202, infra.

(2) in clauses (b) and (c) of sub-section (1) the term "Court" includes a Civil, Revenue or Criminal Court, but does not include a Registrar or Sub-Registrar under the Indian Registration Act, 1877 [1908].

(3) For the purposes of this section, a Court shall be deemed to be subordinate to the Court to which appeals ordinarily lie from the appealable decrees or sentences of such former Court, or in the case of a Civil Court from whose decrees no appeal ordinarily lies to the principal Court having ordinary original civil jurisdiction within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such Civil Court is situate :

Provided that—

(a) where appeals lie to more than one Court, the Appellate Court of inferior jurisdiction shall be the Court to which such Court shall be deemed to be subordinate ; and

(b) where appeals lie to a Civil and also to a Revenue Court, such Court shall be deemed to be subordinate to the Civil or Revenue Court according to the nature of the case or proceeding in connection with which the offence is alleged to have been committed.

(4) The provisions of sub-section (1), with reference to the offences named therein apply also to Criminal conspiracies to commit such offences and to the abetment of such offences, and attempts to commit them.

(5) Where a complaint has been made under sub-section (1) clause (a), by a public servant, any authority to which such public servant is subordinate may order the withdrawal of the complaint and, if it does so, it shall forward a copy of such order to the Court and, upon receipt thereof by the Court, no further proceedings shall be taken on the complaint.

Amendment.—The term "sanction" in connection with these prosecutions has been purposely omitted, and a Court or public servant, when of opinion that the interests of justice require an inquiry should be made, a complaint is to be made, in writing in the same way as a private individual. No cognizance is to be taken by any Court of the offences specified herein, except upon such complaint, and the procedure to be followed is that prescribed by S. 476, infra. The practice of keeping a sanction granted to a private individual over the head of an accused for six months has frequently been utilised for blackmail. Therefore the prosecution is to be launched by the Court or public servant only, by preferring a complaint in writing when the interests of justice require a prosecution, and no limit of time is prescribed. Sub-sections (4), (5) and (6) have therefore been omitted. Sub-section (7) is numbered as sub-section (3), and sub-section (3) as sub-section (4). Sub-section (3) dealing with subordination of Courts is now made clearer. Sub-section (5) is new and provides for withdrawal of the complaint made by a public servant on the direction of his superior. The effect of the amendment is only an alteration in the procedure, 47 M. 384.

Scope and object of the section.—The section as it stood before the amendment imposed a statutory bar to the law taking its usual course by insisting on a sanction being obtained before a prosecution is initiated, 41 C. 446; 11 Bom. L.R. 1164. See the observations in 46 C.L.J. 35 at 38, and to prevent prosecutions by private persons on their own motion to satisfy their private spite by requiring sanction of a Court before instituting proceedings. But now private parties have no locus standi. All provisions relating to grant or revocation of sanction on the application of the parties have been taken away. Private persons are no longer permitted to prosecute for offences connected with administration of justice, 28 Cr. L.J. 16=99 Ind. Cas. 48. The law forbids any prosecution being instituted now, upon sanction granted to a private party, 47 M. 384. After the amended Act XVIII of 1923 came into force on the 1st of September, 1923, sanctions to prosecute were abolished; any sanction granted after that date is illegal and no Criminal Court could take cognizance of offence alleged on the strength of such illegal sanction. Such a valueless and illegal sanction cannot be treated as a good "complaint" under this section or S. 476 infra. In a criminal case involving the liberty of a subject it is not for a criminal appellate court to take a course which will turn it into something which it is not, to get over the difficulty which has occurred by reason of the alteration of the law or to remand the case with a direction that the Lower Court do consider whether on the fact it should make a complaint under S. 476. For in the latter case the Lower Court might take the order of the High Court as an information to it as to the course it should adopt accordingly, 51 C. 652 at 655-656; 26 Cr. L.J. 448=83 Ind. Cas. 64. The new Code envisages an entirely different state of things and for all practical purposes it abolishes sanction entirely. It provides a substitute for the condition precedent not a sanction, but a complaint of Court in writing by the Court before which such proceeding, as the matter arose out of, was tried, or by the Court to which such Court is subordinate, 48 M. 620 (F.B.); 47 M. 384; 2 Ran. 374. Where a sanction granted before the new Act came into force was revoked by the superior Court after the coming into force of the new Act, it was held that the superior Court acted within its jurisdiction in revoking the sanction as the invoking of the aid of the superior Court is a substantive right and not one of procedure only, which cannot be taken away by any change in the law unless a clear intention to that effect is manifested by the new Act, 43 M. 620 (F.B.) followed in 27 Cr. L.J. 181=91 Ind. Cas. 997; 26 Cr. L.J. 90=83 Ind. Cas. 650. By the recent amendment of the Code the necessity for sanction as a pre-requisite to start a prosecution has been done away with altogether and in its place a complaint in writing by the Court has been substituted, 2 Ran. 374. The procedure prescribed by the new Act must be adopted for all prosecutions launched after the new Act came into force, 13 L.W. 463=31 M.L.T. 333; 47 M. 384. See also 7 Lah. 108. A prosecution can be started only on the complaint in writing of a public servant or of a Court, and a large number of rulings of the various High Courts relating to sanction and principles which should guide Courts in granting sanction to private individuals are of little help in construing this section. By the amendment the procedure of grant of sanction to a private party is abrogated. Instead it is enacted that no Court shall take cognizance of certain classes of offences except on the complaint in writing of a public servant or of the Court, 26 Cr. L.J. 751=86 Ind. Cas. 287. A sanction granted after the amendment of the Code in accordance with the old procedure is of no avail and cognizance cannot be taken on such sanction, 26 Bom. L.R. 1233=26 Cr. L.J. 448=83 Ind. Cas. 64; 51 C. 652. Where no complaint had been filed in pursuance of a sanction obtained before the amended Code came into force, no prosecution can be instituted subsequently on the strength of such previous sanction. The new section lays down that a prosecution can only be instituted on a complaint of the Court concerned, 26 Cr. L.J. 383=84 Ind. Cas. 863. When sanction for prosecution was obtained by a party under the old Code and a complaint was also filed before the new Code came into force, held that the case was governed by the old Code and the restriction as to jurisdiction of the Court under the new Code did not apply. 7 Lah. 99 where 6 Lah. 41 and 26 Cr. L.J. 143=83 Ind. Cas. 702 are followed. The provisions of this section cannot be evaded by a device of charging a person with an offence to which this section is not applicable and then convicting him of an offence to which it does apply on the ground that the latter offence is a minor offence of the same character, 47 A. 114. The Court is concerned only where there has been a voluntary obstruction or attempted obstruction of the course of justice in a proceeding before it. The Magistrate has two paramount

(2) in clauses (b) and (c) of sub-section (1) the term "Court" includes a Civil, Revenue or Criminal Court, but does not include a Registrar or Sub-Registrar under the Indian Registration Act, 1877 [1908].

(3) For the purposes of this section, a Court shall be deemed to be subordinate to the Court to which appeals ordinarily lie from the appealable decrees or sentences of such former Court, or in the case of a Civil Court from whose decrees no appeal ordinarily lies to the principal Court having ordinary original civil jurisdiction within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such Civil Court is situate :

Provided that—

(a) where appeals lie to more than one Court, the Appellate Court of inferior jurisdiction shall be the Court to which such Court shall be deemed to be subordinate ; and

(b) where appeals lie to a Civil and also to a Revenue Court, such Court shall be deemed to be subordinate to the Civil or Revenue Court according to the nature of the case or proceeding in connection with which the offence is alleged to have been committed.

(4) The provisions of sub-section (1), with reference to the offences named therein apply also to Criminal conspiracies to commit such offences and to the abetment of such offences, and attempt to commit them.

(5) Where a complaint has been made by a public servant, and the public servant is subordinate may order that if it does so, it shall forward upon receipt thereof by the superior Court on the complaint.

Amendment.—The term "sanction" in the Code was purposely omitted, and a Court or public servant requiring an inquiry should be made, a complaint may be made by a private individual. No cognizance is to be taken of such complaint, except upon such complaint, and the procedure is prescribed by S 476, infra. The practice of keeping a sanction granted over the head of an accused for six months has frequently been used. Therefore the prosecution is to be launched by the Court or public servant. Filing a complaint in writing when the interests of justice require a prosecution. A limit of time is prescribed. Sub-sections (4), (5) and (6) have therefore been omitted. Section (7) is numbered as sub-section (3), and sub-section (3) as sub-section (4). Sub-section (5) dealing with subordination of Courts is now made clearer. Sub-section (5) is now amended to provide for withdrawal of the complaint made by a public servant on the direction of his superior. The effect of the amendment is only a modification in the procedure, 47 M. 381.

Scope and object of the section.—The Code imposed a statutory bar to the law taking effect

orders have been disobeyed or brought into contempt. The second class is the court in which the offence has been committed and sub-section (5) provides a remedy for an aggrieved party, when a public servant takes action under Cl. (1) (a); while S. 476 B. provides for appeals when a complaint of court is made 6 Pat. 39. There is a distinct difference between the procedure to be adopted by a public servant acting under Cl. (1) (a) and that to be adopted by a presiding officer of the Court under Cl. (1) (b) and (c). In the former case the officer is in the position of an ordinary public servant. He exercises no quasi-judicial function of any kind. In the latter case, he is in the position of a presiding officer of a court exercising in quasi-judicial functions. He has authority to make a preliminary inquiry and record a finding under S. 476 infra that it was expedient in the interests of justice that an inquiry into an alleged offence specified in this section and take security for the appearance of the accused but in the case of a public servant acting under Cl. (1) (a) he has no such power and when he takes action under S. 476 infra he acts without jurisdiction and the complaint of court made by him under S. 476 infra is a nullity and S. 537 infra cannot cure the defect. 28 Cr. L.J. 631=103 Ind. Cas. 409 following 1 Luck. 523 and 27 Cr. L.J. 1247=58 Ind. Cas. 63; 29 Cr. L.J. 912=111 Ind. Cas. 672.

Sub-section (1) (a) —Ss. 172 to 188, I.P.C., deal with contempts of the lawful authority of public servants, and S. 21, I.P.C. defines a public servant. The public servant is to complain in writing in respect of these offences, or some other public servant to whom he is subordinate. In most cases the public servant concerned or his superior may not be a judicial officer or an officer exercising judicial functions. It cannot be said that every offence under Ss. 172 to 188 cannot be taken cognizance of without the complaint of a public servant. Where the order disobeyed was the one promulgated by Government, e.g., under the Epidemic Diseases Act III of 1897, this clause cannot apply as it cannot be said that the Municipal Chairman (the public servant) promulgated the order, 24 M. 70. Even before the amendment a public servant himself, concerning whose lawful authority contempt was committed, may make a complaint against the person who committed the contempt and action contemplated by S. 476 was distinct from such complaint, 32 M. 49 at 57-58. A prosecution under S. 181 I.P.C. by a private person is barred by this sub-section which enacts that no court can take cognizance of such an offence without the written complaint of the public servant concerned, 4 Ran. 437. So also an offence under S. 182, I.P.C. except on the complaint of the public servant or some other public servant to whom he is subordinate, 28 Cr. L.J. 902 (2)=105 Ind. Cas. 230 (2); 28 Cr. L.J. 934=105 Ind. Cas. 454. Although an offence under S. 211 I.P.C. includes an offence under S. 182 I.P.C. the converse will not hold good. Where a complaint to the police is followed by one to the Magistrate who dismissed the same as false the accused cannot be prosecuted for an offence under S. 182, I.P.C. on the complaint of the police but can be proceeded against only on a complaint of court for an offence under S. 211, I.P.C. under Cl. (1) (b) as the charge under S. 182 I.P.C. must be abandoned in favour of the more serious charge under S. 211, I.P.C. 6 Ran. 578 where 32 C. 180; 44 C. 650; 4 Pat. 323; 15 A. 336 are referred, but it has been held in 31 Cr. L.J. 272=114 Ind. Cas. 189, that the power of the police to file a complaint in respect of false information given to them is in no way limited by the filing of a complaint before the Magistrate on the same facts. To prosecute a receiver appointed by the Court for preferring a false inventory under S. 176 I.P.C., no leave of court is necessary. To hold otherwise involves an addition to the provision of this sub-section 30 Bom. L.R. 1273 at 1277. The complaint must be in writing of the public servant concerned, and S. 200 (aa) infra provides that the examination of the public servant as complainant shall be dispensed with but the postponement of the issue of process can be made as S. 202 (1) proviso (b) infra says only that when a complaint has been made by a Court no such direction shall be made. The new sub-section (5) provides for the withdrawal of the complaint made under this sub-section at the instance of the superior officer. The aggrieved party is given an opportunity to question the legality, propriety and correctness of the action taken against him. The decisions which held that a complaint once made cannot be questioned as in 23 M. 205; 7 C.W.N. 243; 6 Cr. L.J. 25 are no longer law; a Magistrate acting as a public servant is subordinate to the District Magistrate and not to the Sessions Judge

Sub-section (1) (a)—Ss. 172 to 188, I.P.C., deal with contempts of the lawful authority of public servants, and S. 21, I.P.C. defines a public servant. The public servant is to complain in writing in respect of those offences, or some other public servant to whom he is subordinate. L.J. 272=114 Ind. Cas. 189, that the power of the police to file a complaint in respect of false information given to them is in no way limited by the filing of a complaint before the Magistrate on the same facts. To prosecute a receiver appointed by the Court for preferring a false inventory under S. 176 I.P.C., no leave of court is necessary. To hold otherwise involves an addition to the provision of this sub-section 30 Bom. L.R. 1273 at 1277. The complaint must be in writing of the public servant concerned, and S. 203 (aa) infra provides that the examination of the public servant as complainant shall be dispensed with but the postponement of the issue of process can be made as S. 202 (1) provides (b) infra says only that when a complaint has been made by a Court no such direction shall be made. The new sub-section (5) provides for the withdrawal of the complaint made under this sub-section at the instance of the superior officer. The aggrieved party is given an opportunity to question the legality, propriety and correctness of the action taken against him. The decisions which held that a complaint once made cannot be questioned as in 23 M. 205; 7 C.W.N. 243; 6 Cr. for purposes of sub-section (5) 6 Pat. 29. A head constable was held to be subordinate to an Inspector, 11 W.R. (Cr.) 22. Although the police-officers in a district are generally subordinate to the District Magistrate, the subordination contemplated by this clause is not such subordination. That subordination contemplates some superior officer of police, 27 C. 452, but see 32 C. 180, where the District Magistrate was treated as head of Railway police, and see also 27 A. 292 and 43 A. 135. The Registrar of a Presidency Court of Small Causes was held to be subordinate only to the Chief Judge of the Court, 27 B. 130. Prosecutions for various offences committed in relation to proceedings before public servants are still punishable, but these proceedings are to be initiated on complaints by the public servants concerned ex motu or set in motion by the party aggrieved, 46 M.L.J. 274 and the remedy of a person against whom a complaint is so made by a public servant is that specified in sub-section (5) i.e., to move the authority to which such public servant is subordinate for an order directing the withdrawal of a complaint. If two offences are even remotely connected by the relationship of cause and effect, the first may be said to have been committed "in relation to" the second within this section, 5 Pat. 33, followed in 23 Cr. L.J. 324=100 Ind. Cas. 708, where it was held that a person making a false charge to the police commits an offence in relation to a proceeding in the Sessions Court to which the accused is subsequently committed and the Sessions Court is competent to act under S. 476. See also 23 Cr. L.J. 931=105 Ind. Cas. 454.

Sub-section (1) (b).—A complaint of Court is to be filed by the Court before which the offence is alleged to have been committed and not by the particular officer concerned, who was holding the inquiry 23 Cr. L.J. 643=103 Ind. Cas. 99. Ss. 193 to 211 and 238, I.P.C., occur in Chapter XI of the Indian Penal Code—of false evidence and offences against public justice. The object of this clause seems to be to save the time of Criminal Courts being wasted, and accused persons being needlessly harassed, by safeguarding against rash, baseless and vexatious prosecutions for the offences specified. It aims at doing so by providing that where prior to the institution of a criminal prosecution, a properly constituted judicial tribunal has placed itself in a position to determine whether the facts constituting the offence really exist, the Criminal Court should decline cognizance unless that tribunal has in effect certified that in its opinion the complaint is one worthy of investigation. There is no reason why this safeguard should be limited to cases where the offence is committed pendente lite and should not extend to cases of fabrication of false evidence in advance. Its desirability is just as great in the one case as in the other. It is of course necessary that "proceedings in Court" referred to in this clause should be actually instituted before the Criminal Court is asked to take cognizance of the offence, and once the Court has lawfully taken cognizance of the case its jurisdiction is not affected by the subsequent coming into existence of a circumstance which would have barred its jurisdiction if it had existed at the time of its institution, 39 M. 677 at 679; 30 Cr. L.J. 710 at 715=117 Ind. Cas. 37; 30 Cr. L.J. 534=116 Ind. Cas. 46 but where the alleged fabrication of evidence in a particular case was not with the intention that that false evidence is to be used in a Court of law but only 'with the intention of its influencing the police in the investigation into the circumstances of an alleged offence, this sub-section cannot apply and the mere fact that the question might possibly arise in a Court of law in some future proceeding would not bring the case within the scope of this clause 29 Cr. L.J. 403=108 Ind. Cas. 801 following 43 B. 668. The offences referred to in this clause, fall under two heads, (1) some of them, e.g., those under S. 205, I.P.C., and the following sections are such as can be committed only in, or, in relation to legal proceedings; (2) there are others which may be committed irrespective of any legal proceedings and it is only in regard to offences under the latter head that the qualification "when such offence is committed in or in relation to any proceeding" can have any force. Again some of the offences falling under the second head are such that the accused must have legal proceedings in contemplation, and in such cases legal proceedings must have already been commenced at the time of the commission of the offences, 39 M. 677 at 682-683. This clause and cl. (c) agree in some respects, but differ in this, that the offence is identified in this clause by reference to the fact that it has a direct connection with some proceeding in Court, viz., having been (i) committed in, or (ii) in relation to the proceeding; whereas in cl. (c) the offence has to be connected not with the proceeding, but (i) with a document produced or given in evidence and (ii) by the fact that the document has been produced or given in evidence by a party to a proceeding. In the one case it suffices if the offence has reference to a proceeding; in the other it must have reference to a party to a proceeding and to a document produced or given in evidence by the party. When a complaint was dismissed under S. 203, infra, without examining the complainant as required by that section there is no legal disposal of the complaint and no action can be taken directing the prosecution of the complainant under S. 182 or S. 211, I.P.C., 48 B. 360. Where A after filing a complaint of dacoity before a Magistrate against certain persons repeats his charge before the police who, after investigation found the complaint to be false, he could not be put on his trial for an offence under S. 211, J.P.C. at the instance of the police because the offence had already been committed in or in relation to any proceeding in Court and a complaint of Court is necessary for initiating a prosecution, 24 A.L.J. 816, where 46 A. 43 and 906 are distinguished. In 46 A. 906 it was held that the offence under S. 211, I.P.C. was complete when the charge was laid against a particular person before the police. The mere fact that subsequent proceedings are taken in court either against the person originally charged or someone else cannot affect what was done originally if it was a charge. The offence is complete before the complainant went before the Court and therefore it could not be said that the offence was committed in or in relation to any proceedings in court necessitating a complaint of court 51 A 382 following 46 A. 906 and distinguish 24 A.L.J. 816 and not following 44 C. 650. See also 30 Cr. L.J. 272=114 Ind. Cas. 189. See also 29 Cr. L.J. 605 at 608=109 Ind. Cas. 485 9 Lah 490, but see 6 Ran. 578 which takes a different view and holds that S. 182 I.P.C. must be abandoned in favour of the more serious charge under S. 211 I.P.C. 29 Bom. L.R. 1590=28 Cr. L.J. 934=105 Ind. Cas. 454. and includes in S. 211, I.P.C. See also 27 Cr. L.J. 1014=96 Ind. Cas. 870 where it was held that where a person filed his complaint in Court before he made a statement to the police-officer it was not competent for a police officer to proceed against him, and he cannot be tried for an offence under S. 211 I.P.C. without a complaint of Court. When a complaint is dismissed under S. 203, infra as false and though the Magistrate is of opinion that the complainant ought to be prosecuted for an offence under S. 211, I.P.C. the proper procedure for him to adopt is to make a complaint of Court and not to hold an inquiry himself and then commit the complainant to the Court of Session, 5 Pat. 450. No court can take cognizance of the offence of perjury except on the complaint of a public servant and such complaint should be produced on the date of the prosecution, 23 A.L.J. 35. Assignments of perjury should be clearly stated especially with regard to statements contained in a long deposition, 18 A. 203; 9 W.R. (Cr.) 58; 10 W.R. (Cr.) 41; 17 W.R. (Cr.) 52; 19 B. 362; 36 C. 808; 3 C.W.N. 35; (1925) M.W.N. 470=28 Cr. L.J. 1582=90 Ind. Cas. 661. Mere denials in pleadings cannot be considered as perjury, 6 M.L.T. 846=19 M.L.J. (8h N.) 33. Before taking action under this section for perjury, the Court should bear in mind, (1) whether the statements alleged to be false are intentionally false 6 M.L.T. 91; (2) whether the statements were material; (3) whether they affect the credibility of the witness, 2 A.L.J. 836. Where two apparent contradictory statements in a deposition whose materiality is remote, the Court ought not to take action for perjury, 37 M. 364. If the statement which is false is clearly immaterial and nothing hinges on it, then the case is not a fit one for making a complaint of court against the witness for perjury 28 Cr. L.J. 310=100 Ind. Cas. 534. It is not advisable or reasonable to take action against a witness for perjury or attempt to commit the same, if he corrects in cross-examination what he stated in examination-in-chief or being confronted with an earlier statement made by him, he corrects or qualifies his statement. The gist of the offence of perjury is that the fact that it amounts to an attempt to mislead or deceive the court and the offence will be complete only if the witness leave the court under the lie with which he began deceiving it. It is not also advisable to order a prosecution for perjury or an attempt to commit it if it is of a most technical nature and there is not any large degree of certitude of conviction. 30 Cr. L.J. 724=117 Ind. Cas. 210. It would be a dangerous doctrine to hold that every case where a comparison of the two depositions given by the same witness, one before the committing Magistrate and the other before the Sessions Court discloses contradiction, action should be taken to prosecute the witness for perjury especially where there were indications to show that the witness gave a false story before the Magistrate under police influence, 37 C. 618. It is undesirable to prosecute a witness under S. 193 I.P.O. if he has reverted to the truth in the course of the trial especially when he was not in the first instance a willing false witness 29 Cr. L.J. 1031 (2)=112 Ind. Cas. 466 (2). In considering whether a prosecution for perjury in the alternative based on two contradictory statements is necessary every possible presumption in favour of reconciliation of the two statements should be made 13 Cr. L.J. 485=24 Ind. Cas. 576. In an application for making a complaint of court with regard to two contradictory statements by a witness, if the explanation which appears correct is not put forward first but another considered explanation is given instead, the subsequent explanation though true, must be considered an after-thought and no notice should be taken of it but the question should be left to be decided by the trying Magistrate who ought to give all possible consideration for reconciling the two statements and to the true explanation though belated being delayed by any confusion of mind or other doubtful circumstances and the trying Magistrate is the proper tribunal to consider these questions. It is not the function of an appellate court to allow the person sought to be prosecuted for making two contradictory statements to start a fresh theory in the appellate court though that explanation may be considered by the court trying him. 7 Cr. L.J. 136. A mere attempt to get a medical certificate which was refused will not come within S. 196 I.P.O., there must be something more to show that the party was using or attempting to use anything as evidence, 17 Cr. L.J. 358=33 Ind. Cas. 820.

Committed in or in relation to any proceeding in any Court.—The expression 'in relation to any proceedings' is very general and is wide enough to cover a proceeding in contemplation before a criminal court though the proceedings may not have been commenced when the offence was committed. When a person is tried for an offence under S. 211, I.P.O. for an alleged false accusation against another, it is a question of fact to be decided in the particular circumstances of each case whether he made such false accusation in contemplation of proceedings which he intended to take in a court or not. Where a false accusation was made at the same time in two documents one a petition addressed to the superintendent of Police and the other a complaint posted to a Magistrate to take proceedings, the offence committed by him falls within the purview of the expression 'in relation to any proceedings in a court' within the meaning of this section and a complaint of court is necessary before he is prosecuted under S. 211, I.P.O. 30 Cr. L.J. 732 at 734=117 Ind. Cas. 157 where 24 Bom. L.R. 1153 is followed. The definition of "Court" is wider now. Court includes a Civil, Revenue or Criminal Court, sub-section (2), and not 'means' Civil, Revenue or Criminal Court as before. The opening words of this section "no Court shall take cognizance," clearly limit the meaning of the word "Court" to British Indian Courts to which also the British Indian Legislature could direct the prohibition which follows in the section. Therefore it is difficult to attach a wider meaning to the word "Court in" the remaining clauses of this section. Moreover S. 1 supra, limits the ambit of the Code to British India and no reason is shown for widening the meaning of "Courts in British India" to Courts in Native States, 49 B. 850 where 35 B. 139 is referred to. The term "Court" as used here has a wider meaning than a Court of Justice as defined in S. 20, I.P.C., and includes a tribunal entitled to deal with a particular matter and authorised to receive evidence thereon, 45 C. 585; 17 C. 872. Court means the particular tribunal and not the particular Judge who tried the case, but includes his successor also, 5 C.L.J. 176; 34 C. 531; 11 C.W.N. 119; 33 C. 193; 7 A.L.J. 991. The expression 'Court' is nowhere defined in any of the codes. In 32 C. 505 at 624 it was held that a Land Acquisition Collector is in no sense of the term a judicial officer nor is the proceedings before him a judicial proceeding. The award which he passes does not possess finality so far as the persons interested are concerned and reference for the determination of the question by the Court can be asked for. So the Land Acquisition Collector is not a Court but merely acts as the agent of Government for ascertaining the value of the land acquired and to make a tender, 31 C.W.N. 825=28 Cr. L.J. 809=104 Ind. Cas. 243. See also 27 C. 820; 39 B. 310. The expression "Court" in this section is of a wider scope than the expression "Civil, Revenue or Criminal Court" occurring in S. 476, infra. This is made particularly clear by the amendment in sub-section (2) of this section. It reads in cl. (i) and (c) of sub-section (1) the term includes a Civil, Revenue or Criminal Court. Obviously therefore the word Court is of a wider meaning. 33 A. 60. The 'Court' contemplated by S. 476, supra, is the Court before which the alleged offence has been committed. Where false evidence was given before the Sessions Court of A and subsequently a part of the territory forming that Court's jurisdiction was constituted a new Sessions Court, it was held that the Judge of the new Sessions Court though having territorial jurisdiction had no power to make a complaint of Court regarding the offence of perjury, 28 Bom. L.R. 1223=23 Cr. L.J. 42=22 Ind. Cas. 81. An Insolvency Commissioner is a Court, 35 B. 642 (F.B.). and also a Mamildar holding an inquiry under the Land Revenue Code, 39 B. 310. A District Judge determining the validity of an election under the District Municipalities Act is a Court, 37 B. 393. So also a Tahsildar holding an inquiry under Madras Act III of 1862 as to transfer of names in a land register, 25 M. 121. A Village Munsiff is a Court, 11 M. 375. An Official Assignee is not a Court, 37 M. 107. So also an arbitrator to whom a reference was made by a Court, 17 M.L.J. 422 followed in 15 Cr. L.J. 355=23 Ind. Cas. 725. A Commissioner for the examination of witnesses under S. 503, infra, is not a Court, as Court here means a Court whose duty it is to consider the evidence and to decide whether it is true or false, 11 C.W.N. 119. A Commissioner appointed to examine accounts under O.XXVI rules 11 and 12 of the Code of Civil Procedure and before whom an offence under S. 172, I.P.C., viz., refusal to answer questions put by the Commissioner is committed is not a Court but he is only subordinate to the Court which appointed him. Intention of the Legislature and public policy appear to be that the alleged offence before the Commissioner is more appropriately to be considered as an offence against the Court itself which appointed the Commissioner and the Court alone can file a complaint in respect of the alleged offence, 23 Bom. L.R. 1476. No complaint of Court will be necessary for prosecution under S. 211, I.P.C., when the false complaint was made to the police, 7 M. 292; 3 C.W.N. 33; 4 B. 479; 25 Cr. L.J. 934=103 Ind. Cas. 454, but if a Magistrate dealt with the matter under S. 203 or S. 253, infra, it will be in relation to any proceeding in any Court, 10 M. 232; 43 C. 1152; 44 C. 650 followed in 4 Pat. 323; 5 Pat. 33; 39 M.L.T. 103, but these decisions were distinguished in 23 Bom. L.R. 1593 where it was held that the earlier complaint to the police could not be merged into the subsequent complaint to a Magistrate. 6 Ran. 573 holds that the charge under S. 182, I.P.C., should be abandoned in favour of the more serious offence under S. 211, I.P.C. See also 29 Cr. L.J. 938=111 Ind. Cas. 853; 45 A. 903; 30 Cr. L.J. 272=114 Ind. Cas. 182. Where a person made a complaint at a Thana but did not follow it up by a complaint in Court, it was held that this clause did not apply, as by making the report no offence was committed in or in relation to any proceeding in Court, 30 A. 52; 26 C. 783; 44 C. 650.

Except on the complaint in writing of such court.—S. 4 (1) (h), supra, defining complaint says "orally" or "in writing". A Court once abolished and re-established two years later with its territorial jurisdiction somewhat curtailed was held by the Madras High Court to be not "such a Court" within the meaning of this clause, 16 Cr. L.J. 787=31 Ind. Cas. 643. See 35 A. 8; 26 A. 514 as to what amounts to complaint. The Magistrate to whom the complaint is made is not competent to inquire into it 5 Pat. 450.

Some other court to which it is subordinate.—See sub-section (3) as to the subordination of Courts.

Sub-section (1) (c)—The word "Court" in this sub-section does not include a Court in a Native State such as Baroda. It is difficult to suppose that the Legislature intended that complaints or sanctions should be made or issued by Courts not within the territorial jurisdiction of the Legislature but outside its control, 49 B. 860 where 35 B. 139 is referred to. The expression "Court" in this section is wider than the expression "Civil, Revenue or Criminal Court" in S. 476, infra, 33 A. 60. The words "has been committed" are replaced by the words "alleged to have been committed". In 15 A.L.J. 74 at 77 it was held that the word "committed" meant "alleged to have been committed" as no Court can decide whether an offence has been committed or not until it has taken cognizance. To meet this criticism the alteration has been made. See 5 Pat. L.J. 135. The only offence which this sub-section bars from the cognizance of Magistrates without a complaint by the Court is when such offence is alleged to have been committed by a party to any proceeding before that Court and it is not right to divorce these words or take only a part of the section in endeavouring to discover what the offence referred to in this section, is 2 Ran. 374; 3 Ran. 43. This clause refers only to cases where a forged document has been produced or given in evidence by a party to a proceeding in Court. In this clause the word "offence" is designedly used in a somewhat abstract manner. It is the offence itself and not the particular offender's offence which the section aims at, and that is in accordance with S. 40, I.P.C., where "offence" is defined as a thing made punishable by that Code. In other words, the clause deals with the case where a substantive offence is committed by a party to a proceeding, 12 Bom. L.R. 383 at 385. The object of mentioning S. 463, I.P.C., in this clause is to include all cases of forgery whatever the nature of the fraudulent intention may be, and hence an offence under S. 463, I.P.C., is covered by the term "S. 463," 22 M.L.J. 141 at 153 following 12 B. 36 and 15 C.W.N. 479; 5 Lah. 550; 1 Luck. 523. An offence under S. 466, I.P.C., comes within this clause, Ratanlal 83. As long as the prosecution is confined to offences connected with a document prior to its production in Court this clause has no application, 34 A. 634. Where it is possible that a document was forged by a person but there was no evidence to suggest that he did so for the purpose of using it as evidence in Court or that he used the same in Court, a complaint under S. 476, infra, against him by the Court is not warranted by law, 28 C.W.N. 880=25 Cr. L.J. 1095=81 Ind. Cas. 919. This sub-section is wide enough to include any document produced or given in evidence by a party who is alleged to have committed the offence or any one else and the intention of the Legislature in the framing of the section, as it stands now, was to give authority only to the Court in which a proceeding was pending, to file a complaint in respect of the documents which were produced or given in evidence before it. If there had been any intention to limit the provisions of the section to a document produced or given in evidence by a party to the proceeding then it would have been a simpler matter to insert words to make that intention clear. These words are not there and we can only construe the section as it stands, 49 B. 608 at 614, see also 39 M. 577.

By a party to the proceeding.—This sub-section applies only to parties to the proceeding and does not cover the case of a witness, 29 Cr. L.J. 1061=112 Ind. Cas. 563, 28 Cr. L.J. 986=105 Ind. Cas. 810. A witness is not a party to a proceeding within the meaning of this clause, 3 M. 400. Under this clause the offence must be alleged to have been committed by a party. If therefore the offence has been alleged to be committed by a person not a party this clause is inapplicable, 42 M. 540 at 541. In case of witnesses, there is no necessity to resort to this clause, 3 M. 400; 15 C.W.N. 563; 26 M.L.J. 220; 23 M. 671; 30 M. 226; 32 A. 74; 6 A.L.J. 933; 4 Bom. L.R. 268. In 9 Lah. 678 it was pointed out that S. 190, supra, empowers a Magistrate to take cognizance under certain conditions, i.e., certain offences cannot be taken cognizance of except on complaint of Court. Parties to the proceeding alone are within this sub-section. Against those who are not parties, cognizance can be taken without such Complaint of court and the fact that the party to the proceeding was not proceeded against is no reason for not taking cognizance against a person who is only an abettor, 10 Lah. 442. The question whether, when an offence, say, forgery is committed by several persons, one at least being a party to the proceeding in which the document is produced, the participants who were not parties to the proceeding could be prosecuted otherwise than under the provisions of this and S. 476, infra, primarily depends on the construction of the word 'offence' occurring in this section, whether it refers to the transaction of forgery as a whole so that the Court is debarred from taking cognizance without a complaint of Court of the whole transaction or whether it refers only to the share taken by the party to the proceeding before the Court and not against the non-parties. It is contrary to public policy that some only of the participants in an alleged act of forgery and most probably those who play a subordinate part are exposed to a prosecution, while the party in whose interest the act is said to have been done is protected from prosecution, but the point was left undecided, 66 M L J. 205-28 L W. 687, but this decision is doubted more than once and the decision in 10 Lah. 412 holds that there was nothing in the section to prevent the trial of an abettor of the offence referred to herein committed by a party to the proceeding without action being taken under S. 476 against the principal. The decisions in 32 A. 74; 12 Cr. L.J. 101; 9 Lah. 678 are followed and 32 M. 842 (F.B.) and 12 Bom. L.R. 333 are dissented, see also 9 Lah. 678. A vakil holding a special vakalat is not a party within this clause and cannot be proceeded against and punished in his client's place, 23 L.W. 787=29 Cr. L.J. 1061=112 Ind. Cas. 363. The Court has power to initiate proceedings against a person for forgery whether he is a party or not to the proceeding before the Court, 23 Cr. L.J. 303 (2)=100 Ind. Cas. 522(2) where 43 B. 638 and 24 A.L.J. 122 are followed and 2 Kan. 374 not followed. This sub-section does not prevent the Court from taking action against persons not parties to the proceeding. If the Court desires to proceed against accomplices to a forgery it is right to make an inquiry itself or through the police or through some Subordinate Court and after considering the result of such inquiry, record a finding against each person separately that interests of justice require an inquiry by a Magistrate into the matter of the alleged offence, 23 Cr. L.J. 936=105 Ind. Cas. 810. A claimant who files a claim in an insolvency petition in the High Court is a party to the proceedings. If his claim is disputed he has to appear to support it and then a lis is constituted between himself on the one hand and the Official Assignee as representing the estate of the debtor on the other. If his claim is rejected and he is not satisfied with it, he appeals to the Court just like any other party in other proceedings, 43 M. 1 at 3. 14 A.L.J. 74, 43 A. 60.

In any proceeding in any court—A complaint of Court is necessary under this clause, only if the offence alleged to have been committed in connection with proceedings pending in a Court and not before an executive officer, 29 Cr. L.J. 1023 at 1029=112 Ind. Cas. 336. See 9 Lah. 433.

Produced or given in evidence—The word "produced" was introduced in the Code of 1829 with the set purpose, to give the Courts a larger jurisdiction to regulate the institution of criminal proceedings against parties or other persons who may be concerned in the commission of offences in connection with documents not only given in evidence but produced in the course of any proceedings before them. It is not at all necessary that the proceedings must be pending before the Court. They may even be commenced by the very act of production of the forged document itself before the Court, merely filing a forged document as an annexure to a petition is a sufficient production of the document in Court, 23 Cr. L.J. 338 at 393=100 Ind. Cas. 1041 referring to 22 G. 1004. A document which was tendered by a witness who did not prove it in Court, but inspected by the Court and placed in file by the Court, it was held there was production within this clause, 13 Cr. L.J. 201=13 Ind. Cas. 201 but when certain receipts alleged to be forged were entered in a list of documents which was filed in Court, such filing of the list is not the same as the production of the documents themselves within this clause, 33 G. 820, production of a document in Court is not the same thing as "giving it in evidence." Wide interpretation was given to the word "produce" occurring in this sub-section in 49 B. 608. The words are 'not given in evidence'. The word 'or' which intervenes between the 'word not given in evidence' shows that it is disjunctive and the proceeding in cases where the document has been given in evidence but also in produced and the ambit of the word 'produced' is very wide as it was held that a document presented to the court as evidence rejected by the Court on the ground that it was time-barred within the meaning of this clause and in 52 G. 831 it was held that a document, if filed in support of a pleading even though it was rejected by the Court, 30 Cr. L.J. 238 at 238=113 Ind. Cas. 712. The words refer to the production of the original in Court and not because when a copy is produced the Court will not rest its opinion about the genuineness of the original. But the clause is to be construed to mean making use of a forged document.

and not the Sub-divisional Magistrate, 31 M. 787; 18 M. 487. A Subordinate Judge is subordinate to the District Court. An appeal ordinarily lies to the District Court, 44 M.L.J. 320=17 L.W. 311, but when the value of the subject-matter of the suit exceeds Rs. 5,000, the appeal in such cases lies to the High Court, 7 M. 314; 2 B. 481; 11 B. 438; 17 A. 51; Ratanlal 937. But see 99 Ind. Cas. 957 (a Madras decision) which holds that the appeal lay to the District Court and not to the High Court. See also 8 Pat. 428, which holds that the appeal lies to the subordinate judge from the order of the District Munsif.

In the case of Civil Court from whose decree no appeal ordinarily lies.—An appeal from Bench of Honorary Magistrates ordinarily lies to the District Magistrate, 26 Cr. L.J. 423=35 Ind. Cas. 39. "Where no appeal lies" was the wording before and in 34 A. 197 at 202, it was held that the Legislature had not made any provision as to the subordination of a Court of Small Causes as the words "where no appeal lies" refer to cases in which no appeal lies, and not to Courts against whose decisions no appeal ever lies. To meet this objection the language has been altered to make it clearly applicable to Court of Small Causes. The word "civil" has now been specially added to meet the decision in 31 A. 313 at 314, where it was held that the clause is not limited to Court of Small Causes, but extended to all Courts where the orders are not appealable and the finality of the decision of the Court with reference to the nature of the case and not with reference to the constitution of the Court is the element which determined subordination. In 34 A. 197 at 202, Chamier, J., said: "I can discover no jurisdiction for reading the word 'the principal Court of original jurisdiction' as if they were 'principal Court of original civil jurisdiction,' and the Legislature never intended the principal Court of original civil jurisdiction to revise orders of Criminal and Revenue Courts with which it has no concern as a Civil Court." So the clause contemplates only Courts of Small Causes and they are subordinate to the principal Court of original civil jurisdiction and the concluding words of this clause "such Civil Court is situate" also makes this clear.

Principal Court of ordinary original jurisdiction.—The District Court in the mofussil will be the principal Court having ordinary original jurisdiction so far as Provincial Court of Small Causes is concerned, and the High Court will be the principal Court so far as the Presidency Court of Small Causes is concerned. There is no Court to which appeals ordinarily lie from decrees of Presidency Small Cause Courts and so an appeal from an order under S. 476, infra, lies to the principal Court having ordinary original jurisdiction, i.e., the High Court which exercises ordinary original civil jurisdiction. It has been held that for the purpose of this sub-section the original side of the High Court is not different from the rest of the High Court so the appeal lay to the appellate side of the High Court, 48 M. 395 following 36 M. 183 and 45 M. 928. It is submitted that the addition of the word "ordinary" newly made supports the view that it is to the original side of the High Court. The decision in 21 C.W.N. 654 the High Court from any Proviso (a).—In cases where appeal lies to more than one Court, the Court of inferior jurisdiction shall be the Court to which such Court shall be subordinate. For example, an appeal lies to the District Court from a Subordinate Judge's Court when the value of the subject-matter is less than Rs. 5,000, and to the High Court when the value of the subject-matter is over Rs. 5,000. In such a case the District Court is the Court of inferior jurisdiction to the Court to which the Court shall be deemed to be subordinate, 7 M. 314; 2 B. 481; 11 B. 438; 17 A. 51. See also 22 C. 487; 20 C. 916; 44 M.L.J. 320=17 L.W. 311, but see 99 Ind. Cas. 957. (a Madras decision) which holds that the appeal lay to the District Court and not to the High Court. In 46 A. 511 it was held that the order of a Commissioner hearing an election petition under the Municipal Act directing the prosecution of one of the parties for having committed forgery in connection with a voting paper is not amenable to the Revisional jurisdiction of the High Court. Nowhere is the relation of an election Court to the High Court defined and there is no statutory provision in the Municipal Act reserving the ordinary Civil Revisional jurisdiction of the High Court which is exercised under S. 115, C.P.C.

Proviso (b).—This proviso was enacted in the Code of 1873 in consequence of the difficulties which had arisen in construing the section. See 10 A. 532 (F.B.); 19 A. 121 (F.B.); 1891 A.W.N. 82.

According to the nature of the case.—The words "nature of the case" used in this clause mean "nature of the case pending." The word "case" does not mean "suit" and it would be proper to refer back to the original suit or to consider what its nature was. The proceedings which were pending constituted the "case" and it was the nature of those proceedings which had to be looked to. The offence was alleged to have been committed not in connection with the suit but in connection with the execution proceedings, 34 A. 197 at 198.

Sub section (4).—This sub section was introduced in the Code of 1873. The decision in 25 M. 8 to the effect that this section did not apply to abetment of the offence mentioned herein is no longer law. See S. 210 infra in this connection, where we find the words previous sanction is still retained. See also 33 C. 103, where it was held that when once sanction has been obtained to prosecute for the substantive offence no fresh sanction is necessary to prosecute for abetment of that offence.

Sub section (5).—This sub-section is new and provides for the withdrawal of the complaint made by a public servant on the direction of his superior, 23 Cr. L.J. 547=102 Ind. Cas. 433. The expression, "the authority to which such public servant is subordinate" occurring herein is very wide and connotes apparently a more distant and general entity than a departmental superior and covers the District Magistrate in relation to the police of his district. It would not seem at all unreasonable that the Legislature should restrict the making of the complaint to the department and yet permit the withdrawal thereof (at times perhaps on grounds of policy transcending departmental considerations) by superior authorities also. Therefore where a District Magistrate orders the withdrawal of a complaint made by a police-officer he exercises jurisdiction administratively and his order is not open to interference by a judicial tribunal even in a case where such withdrawal by the District Magistrate rested on misconception of law, 30 Cr. L.J. 710 at 714=117 Ind. Cas. 37 distinguishing 5 Pat. 33 and 28 Cr. L.J. 902=103 Ind. Cas. 230. Where the offence is one falling under sub-section (1) (a) of this section, S. 476 infra, has no application and no complaint of Court can be filed under S. 476 infra. Where a complaint is filed by a public servant with regard to an offence referred to in sub-section (1) (a), no appeal lies under S. 476B infra but the matter can be brought however under the Revisional jurisdiction of the High Court and the High Court when a proper case is made out may direct the withdrawal of the complaint, 6 Ran. 529. A District Magistrate cannot direct the withdrawal of a complaint made by a special Magistrate under S. 476 infra for an offence under S. 211 I.P.O., as such complaint does not fall within this sub-section, 28 Cr. L.J. 543=102 Ind. Cas. 351. Thus where the Registrar of the Presidency Court of Small Causes files a complaint under sub-section (1) (a) as public servant for an offence under S. 182, I.P.O., the Chief Judge of that Court to whom the Registrar is subordinate may order withdrawal of the complaint, 27 B 130. For the purposes of the Code, unless it is shown that there is some express provision to the contrary, the District Magistrate and not the Sessions Judge is the authority to whom the Sub-divisional Magistrate is subordinate and therefore when we find in the Code words relating to an officer to whom the sub-divisional Magistrate is subordinate (See S. 17 (1) and (5) supra), we must construe that as meaning not the Sessions Judge but the District Magistrate. There are exceptions to this, see S. 435, explanation infra. So when a Magistrate files a complaint as a public servant acting under sub-section (1) (a), an application for withdrawal of the complaint lies not to the Sessions Judge but to the District Magistrate, 6 Pat. 39. A District Superintendent of Police is subordinate to the District Magistrate under S. 4 of the Police Act, 45 A. 135. The procedure for the withdrawal is to send a copy of the order to the Court before which the complaint is pending and the Court shall not take further proceedings on the complaint.

Costs.—A proceeding under this section ought not to be treated as a proceeding between private parties. It is done in the interests of administration of justice and so no one can claim costs from the party against whom a complaint of Court is made or where a complaint of Court is refused to be made. A complaint of Court does not establish the guilt of the person proceeded against and it may ultimately transpire that the person is innocent. No costs are to be awarded in proceedings under this section, 13 Cr. L.J. 8=13 Ind. Cas. 99 16 Cr. L.J. 281=28 Ind. Cas. 329. Proceedings under this section must be treated as of a Criminal and not of a civil nature and the Criminal Law of Procedure is to be applied to them. This Code does not authorize an order for payment of costs in this connection and it is not possible to justify an order for cost with reference to any inherent power of the Court. The order for costs made by the Lower Court was set aside by the High Court as unsustainable 17 Cr. L.J. 184 (1)=33 Ind. Cas. 824, following 30 M. 311. In 43 M. 1 at 5 the costs of the respondent the Official Assignee was allowed in a sanction appeal to come out of the estate.

196. No Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under Chapter VI or IXA of the Indian Penal Code (except section 127), or punishable under section 108A, or section 153A, or section 294A, or Section 295A† or section 505 of the same Code, unless upon complaint made by order of, or under authority from the Governor-General in Council the Local Government, or some officer empowered by the Governor-General in Council in this behalf.

Prosecution for offences against the State.

Object of the section.—"The object of the section is to prevent unauthorized persons from intruding in matters of State by instituting State prosecutions and to ensure that prosecutions shall only be instituted under the authority of Government," 22 B. 112. The true implication of the section is that the judgment of the Local Government should be specifically directed to the particular sections of Chapter VI of the Indian Penal Code in respect of which proceedings are to be taken and that the order or authority should be preceded by, and be the result of a deliberate determination that proceedings should be taken, 18 C.L.J. 452 (Sp. B.)=14 Cr. L.J. 321=1 Cr. L. Rev. 430=23 Ind. Cas. 81; 37 C. 437. The question whether where a person is accused of committing acts which constitute a grave offence requiring sanction under this section and also a minor offence which requires no such sanction the omission to obtain the sanction precludes the Court from trying the accused for the minor offence was left undecided in 7 Lah. 218 as in that particular case the High Court was of opinion that on the allegations in the complaint no offence requiring sanction was committed and therefore there was no law which offered any obstacle to the trial of the accused for the minor offence. Where the law has provided certain sanctions, it cannot be permitted that the same action may be taken by adopting a different course. It is wrong to proceed against a person under S. 108 supra when he ought to have been prosecuted under S. 153A. I.P.C. especially where it is obvious that proceedings under S. 108 supra was taken to avoid the trouble and possible refusal of Government to prosecute the person for an offence under S. 153A. I.P.C. When substantive offences are committed the law does not provide an easy way of providing of dealing with them under Chapter VIII of the Code, 30 Cr. L.J. 216=114 Ind. Cas. 48. The provisions of the Code allowing the Court to frame a charge of the offence it finds to be proved, to alter the charge or to convict an accused person of an offence, although he was not charged therewith must be read subject to the provisions of this section, i.e., those powers can be exercised in respect of offences falling within this section when a prosecution for the offence of which it is proposed to charge or to convict the accused has been duly authorised under this section and cannot be exercised when the prosecution has not been so authorised, 4 Ran. 131. There is nothing in the section to warrant the construction that the actual complaint must be authorised by the Local Government. The only question which the Court has to consider with reference to S. 193 is:—"Is the complaint which I am asked to entertain, a complaint made by the order or under the authority of Government?" 32 M. 3 at 9. The substitution of the word "the prosecution has been sanctioned" in sub-section (2) makes this quite clear now. The Government when acting under this section is certainly not acting in a judicial capacity or exercising a judicial † Added by Act XXV of 1927, S. 8 (ii).

Sessions Judge irregularly appointed, 16 C.W.N. 1105=15 C.L.J. 517. Where the law clearly says that it is a condition precedent to the prosecution that a sanction should be obtained from the Local Government, it is not open to any subordinate authority to override the provision of law by saying that the offence falls under another section of the Indian Penal Code, that no sanction was necessary for prosecution under that section and that the offender may be prosecuted without any sanction, 47 A. 268. There is no special mode laid down in the Code whereby the order of sanction of Government is to be conveyed to the officer who puts the law in motion under S. 121 or 121A, I.P.C. It need not contain the charge for the offence. All that the Court has to see is whether the complaint is made by order or under authority of Government, 25 Cr. L.J. 401=77 Ind. Cas. 481. A letter issued from the office of the Chief Secretary to Government conveying sanction under this section to a prosecution under S. 294A, I.P.C., which is not signed by the Chief Secretary but by some other officer on his behalf is no legal proof that the Local Government has ordered or authorised the prosecution. The capacity of the Chief Secretary being that of a delegate of the head of the Local Government, the order could not be certified on his behalf but must be proved under S. 78, Indian Evidence Act, 50 C. 135. The law does not lay down any particular form in which the sanction to prosecute should be accorded. It is sufficient if it names the person or persons to be prosecuted, and specifies the section under which they are alleged to have committed the offence, as also the time and place of the alleged offence. Failure to specify the utterances of the accused will not affect its validity, 25 Cr. L.J. 279=76 Ind. Cas. 871. The order of Government need not be addressed to any determinate person, 44 M.L.J. 166=17 L.W. 100=24 Cr. L.J. 539=73 Ind. Cas. 155. Consent in writing of the authority specified in this section is not necessary to a prosecution for criminal conspiracy to commit a non-cognizable offence where S. 195 (4) supra is applicable, 50 C. 461.

Prosecution for certain classes of conspiracy. 196A. No Court shall take cognizance of the offence of criminal conspiracy punishable under section 120B of the Indian Penal Code,

(1) in a case where the object of the conspiracy is to commit either an illegal act other than an offence, or a legal act by illegal means, or an offence to which the provision of section 196 apply, unless upon complaint made by order or under authority from the Governor-General in Council, the Local Government or some officer empowered by the Governor-General in Council in this behalf, or

(2) in a case where the object of the conspiracy is to commit any non-cognizable offence, or a cognizable offence not punishable with death, transportation or rigorous imprisonment for a term of two years or upwards, unless the Local Government, or a Chief Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate empowered in this behalf by the Local Government, has, by order in writing, consented to the initiation of the proceedings :

Provided that while the criminal conspiracy is one to which the provisions of sub-section (4) of section 195 apply no such consent shall be necessary.

This section was added by Act VIII of 1913, in consequence of the addition of Chapter VA in the Indian Penal Code. For general rule in criminal conspiracy and what a complaint should set forth see the elaborate judgment of Mockerjee, J. in 16 C.W.N. 1105=15 C.L.J. 517 (F.B.).

Criminal conspiracy.—The offence of criminal conspiracy was unknown to Indian Law except what was contained in S. 121A, I.P.O., Criminal Conspiracy is now made a substantive offence in British India. Conspiracy unlike other offences does not require an intention to do an overt criminal act but only an agreement between persons to do some act and it does not matter whether the act is done or not. This section applies only to prosecutions under S. 120B, I.P.O., and not for abetment by conspiracy punishable under S. 109, I.P.O. § Ran. 95.

Sub-section (2).—The Magistrate has no jurisdiction to take cognizance of the offence of conspiracy until after the order consenting to the institution of the proceedings for that offence was passed by the Local Government. The Magistrate takes cognizance when he framed the charges against the accused and under this sub-section it is only the existence of the order of Government that it is necessary to enable the Court to assume jurisdiction. § C. 155.

196B. In the case of any offence in respect of which the provisions of section 196 or section 196A apply, a District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate may, notwithstanding anything contained in those sections or in any other part of this Code, order a preliminary investigation by a police-officer not being below the rank of Inspector, in which case such police-officer shall have the powers referred to in section 155, sub-section (3).

Preliminary inquiry in certain cases.

This section contemplates a preliminary inquiry by a police-officer not below the rank of an Inspector under the orders of a District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate as the offences involved are of a very serious character, designated in English Law as "high treason," etc.

197. (1) When any person who is a Judge within the meaning of section 19 of the Indian Penal Code, or when any Magistrate, or when any public servant who is not removable from his office save by or with the sanction of a Local Government or some higher authority, is accused of any offence alleged to have been committed by him while acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty, no Court shall take cognizance of such offence except with the previous sanction of the Local Government.

Prosecution of Judges and public servants.

(2) Such Government may determine the person by whom, the manner in which, the offence or offences for which the prosecution of such Judge, Magistrate or public servant is to be conducted, and may specify the Court before which the trial is to be held.

Power of Government as to prosecution.

Amendment.—Sub-section (1) is newly drafted. For the words "as such Judge or public servant of any offence" the words "of any offence alleged to have been committed by him while acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duties" have been substituted with regard to the amendment the Select Committee remarked thus "It has been pointed out to us that difficulties with regard to S. 197 have recently come to light. There are certain public servants who are only removable from office by the Secretary of State for

India and it is unreasonable that they should obtain no protection under the section. In view of S. 4, Cl. (2) of the Code the word 'judge' has to be interpreted according to definition given in S. 19, I.P.O., with the result that Magistrates acting in certain cases under the Code, e.g., when holding inquiries obtain no protection. We have therefore prepared a re-draft of sub-section (1) of S. 197 to meet these difficulties. We have continued the operation of the section, to public servants removable by a Local Government or some authority and have provided that the sanction required for a prosecution will be that of the authority which has power to remove. "When any Judge or public servant is, as such Judge or public servant of any offence no Court shall take cognizance of such offence except with previous sanction. It is proposed to amplify the words with the effect of rendering the section clear reverting rather to the wording of the Code of 1872."—Statement of Objects and Reasons.

Scope and object of the section.—The section is framed in very wide terms and requires that Judges, Magistrates and certain public servants shall not be proceeded against without the sanction of the Competent authority for offences alleged to have been committed by them while acting or purporting to act in their discharge of the official duty. The object is obviously to protect responsible public servants against institution of vexatious criminal proceedings alleged to have been committed by them while acting or purporting to act as public servants. The policy of the Legislature is, to afford protection to public servants, ensure that they are not proceeded against for anything in the discharge of official duties without reasonable cause and if sanction is conferred on the local Government, if they choose to exercise it, complete control over prosecution. There is nothing in these precautions to which the public at large are exempted and consider that the section should be construed as widely as possible. Under the present section which materially differs from the corresponding section of 1882 and 1898 Codes, it will not be necessary to decide the fact of the being a Judge or a public servant as a necessary element in the offence or the offence which could have been committed by a private individual. If it is found that a Magistrate or certain public servants has committed the offence at a time when he was acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty, this will be sufficient for the provisions of this section and sanction referred to herein is necessary before a prosecution. The Legislature has now explicitly reverted to the policy of 1872 because that policy had been nullified by a series of judicial decisions. If it is alleged to have been committed by a public servant while he was actually engaged in the discharge of his official duty, sanction under this section will be required, 52 M. 602 following 9 M. 439 and referring to 52 M. 337, 12 M. 26 C. 852, 17 Cr. L.J. 394=85 Ind. Cas. 826. The object of the section is to prevent vexatious proceedings against public servants and to secure the considered opinion of a superior authority before their prosecution, 31 Bom. L.R. 78. The object being thus is to safeguard against vexatious proceedings being brought against responsible public servants, the section therefore insists that before starting proceedings, the sanction of the superior authorities specified in the section is required. Superior authorities are also empowered when sanctioning prosecution of public servants to specify the person by whom and the manner in which the offence or offences for which prosecution is ordered is to be conducted. There is no mention in this section of any authority. Obviously the intention was to simplify the law regarding sanction under the new Code and the circle of public servants for whose prosecution sanction was required under the previous Code has been narrowed. The section presents no difficulty. The obvious intention of the Legislature is borne in mind. It is no part of the British law to set an official above the common law. If he commits a common law offence he is not allowed to be prosecuted without its sanction for the obvious reason that official action would be beset by private prosecution. Judges would be charged with defamation, policemen with wrongful restraint and distrainers with theft. This of immunity from prosecution without sanction only extends to acts which can be

I.P.O., was held to come within this section, 5 Kan. 128. A Chairman delegata is not protected by this section, Weir 11, 226. No sanction is necessary to prosecute a municipal secretary, 23 Cr. L.J. 750=63 Ind. Cas. 638. A Village-headman in Madras exercising jurisdiction under Regulation XI of 1816 is a Judge, 23 M. 540. A Village-headman who fabricates a false record in a criminal case cannot be properly said to be acting as a Judge so as to require sanction for his prosecution, 32 M. 235, but it was held in (1920) M.W.N. 7=21 Cr. L.J. 233=55 Ind. Cas. 105 distinguishing 32 M. 255 that where a Village-headman in a case pending before him created a false record, viz., a judgment and a calendar he acted as a Judge and sanction was necessary before he could be prosecuted for the offences under Ss. 167, 218 and 469, I.P.O. The new amendment makes this very clear. Similarly no sanction is necessary to prosecute a Village-headman of extortion, 6 M.L.T. 128=11 Cr. L.J. 162=4 Ind. Cas. 1056 but in 52 M. 602 following 9 M. 439 and distinguishing 52 M. 347 and referring to 25 M. 15; 26 M. 837; 33 Ind. Cas. 826, it was held that sanction was necessary to prosecute a Village-headman who was charged with wrongful confinement committed while purporting to act in the discharge of his official duties, and after this well considered decision it is submitted the earlier decisions which took the view that the offence must be one which can be committed only by a Village-headman, etc., as such and not by any individual seem to be of doubtful authority. See the observations in 29 L.W. 17. See also 26 C. 832, as to the exact scope of the provisions of this section. Action taken under this section is more of the nature of an executive than a judicial action, 17 L.W. 226. When it is not alleged that an accused obtained an advantage to himself by acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty as a public servant the case does not fall within this section, 8 Lah. 647.

Not removable from office without sanction of a Local Government or some other authority.—The Chairman of a Union Committee cannot be said to be not removable from office save by the Local Government because it appears that he can be removed under certain circumstances by a Commissioner and consequently no sanction of the Local Government is necessary for his prosecution, 26 Cr. L.J. 1178=83 Ind. Cas. 602. To prosecute a Sub-Overseer of P.W.D. who can be appointed or removed by the Superintending Engineer without reference to Local Government, no sanction is necessary, 12 M.L.T. 231=13 Cr. L.J. 770=17 Ind. Cas. 402. A Village-headman is not a public servant removable from office without the sanction of the Local Government. He may be prosecuted for bribery without sanction but sanction will be necessary if he acts as a Judge in his capacity as a Village Munsif or a Village Magistrate. See 29 L.W. 17; 36 M.L.J. 500=23 L.W. 579, 57 M.L.J. 31=30 L.W. 116=1923 M.W.N. 339. The section as amended refers only to public servants not removable from office without the sanction of local government and would not apply to a receiver appointed by the High Court. There is no provision that leave of the Court should be obtained as a condition precedent before starting a criminal prosecution against such receiver, 52 B. 833 where 45 C. 432 is disapproved. Attestation of a vakalat by a Village-headman is not a judicial function and he does not act as a Judge then, 9 Cr. L. Rev. 395=18 Cr.L.J. 737=36 Ind. Cas. 862.

Before the amendment the power of sanctioning the prosecution of a Village-headman in Madras was vested by G.O. No. 1886 J., dated 9th October, 1874, in the District Magistrate, 17 L.W. 226=24 Cr. L.J. 116=71 Ind. Cas. 234 and similarly the power is delegated to the Board of Revenue to sanction prosecution of Sub-Magistrates, Tahsildars and Deputy Tahsildars (G.O. 12812., dated 29th June, 1891); the Inspector-General of Police and the District Magistrates were empowered (G.O. 1036, J., dated 8th June, 1874, and G.O. 1965, J., dated 25th July, 1874) to sanction the prosecution of Police Inspectors. But under the section as now amended, the Local Government cannot delegate its powers and the delegation of powers before the amendment is of no use whatever now, and cannot be availed of. 23 Bom. L.R. 707=28 Cr.L.J. 534=102 Ind. Cas. 342.

Of any offence.—These words are wide enough to include "abatement" also. See 32 M. 1 at 35. Offence need not be specified in the order of Government with the same precision as is necessary in a charge, 13 C.W.N. 1062=10 Cr. L.J. 463=4 Ind. Cas. 13. See also 12 Cr. L.J. 217=10 Ind. Cas. 166.

Acting or purporting to act in the discharge of public duties—Offences committed by one who happens to be a public servant or not necessarily committed by him as such public servant and unless they are committed in the capacity as a public servant, they must be regarded as acts of individuals, in their private capacity, 13 Cen. Pro. Rep. 126 at 129. It is not enough for a public servant merely to be in an official position which he may abuse. He must act in his official capacity. The section presents difficulty on account of the sense in which 'acting' is understood in this country; 'offence alleged to have been committed while acting in the discharge of his official duty' is interpreted by some as 'any offence committed by him while he was in office'; that interpretation is quite wrong and 'acting' here refers to specific action which composes the offence, 50 M. 734 following [1916] 1 M.W.N. 334=17 Cr. L.J. 168=33 Ind. Cas. 645 See 33 C.W.N. 1058. To attract the provisions of this section, the offence must be committed in dereliction of the duty cast upon the person as a public servant, 29 L.W. 17; 1920 M.W.N. 7. The question whether a person acted or purported to act in the discharge of his official duty is a pure question of fact 3 Lah. 647. Use of public position to insult or annoy others cannot be held to be in the discharge of public duties and no sanction is necessary, 4 L.W. 555; Weir II 221; 17 Cr. L.J. 394; 30 C. 927. Sanction under this section need not be based on legal evidence and the Government acts purely in its executive capacity, 17 L.W. 225=24 Cr. L.J. 116=71 Ind. Cas. 244, no set form of sanction is required under this section, 21 Cr. L.J. 584=57 Ind. Cas. 104. No notice to accused is necessary and it is a matter entirely in the discretion of Government whether such opportunity should be given before sanctioning prosecution, 27 M. 54; the Code does not prescribe any particular form for the sanction; hence the omission to mention the place or time of the alleged offence does not affect its validity, 27 M. 54, no set form of sanction is necessary under this section, 21 Cr. L.J. 760=58 Ind. Cas. 344; 21 Cr. L.J. 584=57 Ind. Cas. 104. The Government in granting sanction need not specify the offences with the same precision as is necessary in a charge, 13 C.W.N. 1062=10 Cr. L.J. 463=4 Ind. Cas. 13; 29 Bom. L.R. 996. There can be no objection to the validity of the sanction granted when the date given in the original had to be altered, on account of a mistake and otherwise there was no vagueness in the sanction, 29 Bom. L.R. 996 at 1001 referring to 16 M. 468; 43 B. 147; 13 C.W.N. 1062; inquiry before granting sanction is departmental and not judicial, 23 M. 223. Power of superior Court or officer to sanction prosecution of a subordinate remains in fact unless expressly limited by Government, 7 M.H.C.R. 58. As a general proposition an official is subordinate to the authority which appointed him and which has the power to dismiss him, 21 Cr. L.J. 760=58 Ind. Cas. 344. It is to be noted that the saving clause of S. 537, infra, does not apply to this section and want of sanction under this section invalidates the whole trial and S. 537, cannot apply, 31 M. 80. It is clear that under this section the sanction is to be obtained prior to the proceedings and the proceedings begun and continued without such sanction is void and this position cannot be contested, 29 Bom. L.R. 707=28 Cr. L.J. 534=102 Ind. Cas. 342 following 42 B. 172. Where sanction of the Local Government is necessary before cognizance is taken by a Magistrate and no such sanction is obtained, the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to take cognizance of the case and in such a case, the High Court has inherent power to interfere with the exercise of jurisdiction by the Magistrate, 51 A. 377. As to power of Government to specify the Court before which the Judge or public servant shall be tried subject to the exercise of the general power of the High Court to transfer criminal case, see S. 526 (7), infra.

Subsection (2).—The Local Government exercising powers conferred by this section is entitled to specify any Court for the trial of a public servant irrespective of the jurisdiction and the Magistrate so specified had power to take cognizance of the offence and he acts illegally in declining to receive the complaint holding that the offence was committed outside the jurisdiction of the High Court to which he is subordinate. 8 Cr. L.J. 70=4 L.B.R. 265.

199. No Court shall take cognizance of an offence under section 497 or section 498 of the Indian Penal Code, except upon a complaint made by the husband of the woman or, in his absence, made with the leave of the Court by some person who had care of such woman on his behalf at the time when such offence was committed :

Provided that, where such husband is under the age of eighteen years, or is an idiot or lunatic, or is from sickness or infirmity unable to make a complaint, some other person may, with the leave of the Court, make a complaint on his behalf.

Amendment.—The words "made with the leave of the Court" in the section and the proviso are newly added; when the husband is absent or is under 18 years or an idiot or lunatic, etc., some other person may complain with the leave of the Court.

Object of the section.—It is true that the law is designed to protect the rights of the husband but that is not the sole aim. The violation of the rights of guardianship is also entitled to its protection. The object of the law is not so much to afford protection to the husband or the guardian as to inflict punishment on those who interfere with the sacred relation of marriage. The restriction in this section is not intended to afford immunity to the offender, but to prevent a person unconnected with the woman from giving publicity to a matter which neither the husband nor guardian is willing to agitate, 17 Cr. L.J. 353 at 354=35 Ind. Cas. 667. The offences of adultery and enticing away a married woman are obviously of a private character and hence the limit on the person by whom initiation of proceedings is allowed, for it would be eminently undesirable that any one should have it in his power to drag into a Court of Justice offences of this sort, and thus guard against the mischief which would otherwise be done, 23 B. 181 at 183. Without a formal complaint from the husband or the care-taker during his absence, a Court is forbidden to take cognizance of these offences and the Legislature has left it entirely to the husband or the care-taker to decide whether he shall bring the matter which affects his honour before a public Court, and trial by the Court may necessarily aggravate the injury he had already suffered by giving publicity to what has occurred. S. 497, I.P.C., deals with adultery and S. 498, I.P.C., with enticing away a married woman. These offences are compoundable by the husband alone. An agent prosecuting under this section is not competent to compound under S. 315, infra, 24 Cr. L.J. 120=71 Ind. Cas. 243; 24 Cr. L.J. 780=74 Ind. Cas. 441.

No Court shall take cognizance except upon a complaint.—The death of a husband after lodging a complaint does not necessarily put an end to the prosecution for adultery, since the section requires only that the prosecution is to be initiated by a formal complaint by him, 4 M.H.C.R. Appx. 55. See also 8 Cr. L.J. 190, where it was held that once the Court gets jurisdiction to inquire into the offence by virtue of a complaint made by the husband, his subsequent death will not divest the Court of its jurisdiction and there cannot be abatement of a criminal prosecution. But when the statement by the husband is not a complaint within this section it is not open to another after the husband's death to revive the proceedings which had been dropped, 5 Cr. L. Rev. 313=85 Cr. L.J. 466=29 Ind. Cas. 93.

The word 'complaint' in this section must be taken as including not only a written complaint but also the examination of the complainant at any rate prior to the issue of process, Ratanlal 584; 43 M.L.J. 543=(1923) M.W.N. 878 which did not follow the view taken in 13 L.W. 695=(1921) M.W.N. 514 to the effect that a sworn statement taken under S. 200 infra cannot be read as part of the complaint to ascertain the specific charges preferred by the complainant. See also (1923) M.W.N. 470. Statement made by the husband in the course of his deposition could not be taken as a complaint as defined in S. 4 (1) (h), supra, within the meaning of this section, 14 Bom. L.R. 141=13 Cr. L.J. 287=14 Ind. Cas. 671. The complaint referred to in this section means a complaint of an offence under S. 493 or S. 499, I.P.C., and not any complaint. Complaint is defined in S. 4 (1) (h) supra and information laid before the police cannot be regarded as a complaint within this section, 30 C. 910; 23 M. 626; 6 A. 96; 11 M. 443; 14 C. 707; 43 M.L.J. 564=16 L.W. 494. The fact that in a charge of rape by the wife the husband appears as a prosecution witness cannot be regarded as the institution of a complaint by him within this section, 5 A. 233; 27 M. 61; 29 C. 415; 2 Cr. L. Rev. 377, or when a conviction for rape is set aside on the ground that it was only a case of adultery the accused cannot be convicted of adultery if no complaint was made by the husband to give jurisdiction to the Court under this section. The objection is not a mere quibble of law because it does not follow that because a husband may wish to punish a person who had committed rape on his wife, will desire to continue proceedings when it turns out that she was a consenting party to the act, 14 Cr. L.J. 284=19 Ind. Cas. 716 following 5 A. 233. A conviction had for an offence under S. 493 I.P.C. without a complaint by the aggrieved person is illegal and cannot be sustained, Weir II, 235; 31 B. 218; where a husband charges his wife with theft of jewels and also alleges that the person to whose house she went with the jewels had enticed her away, and presents a complaint not with the object of getting the Magistrate to take action under S. 493, I.P.C., but simply to coerce the wife to return the jewel, it was held that there was no complaint under this section which could be proceeded with after the death of the husband, 5 Cr. L. Rev. 313=16 Cr. L.J. 466=29 Ind. Cas. 98.

By the husband of the woman.—The intention of the Legislature is to prevent a Magistrate taking cognizance of offences, namely, those connected with marriage, on his own motion or on the complaint of strangers but only on the complaint of the husband or some other person authorized to make the complaint on his behalf. Where a married woman is defamed by imputation of unchastity, her husband is the person aggrieved under this section entitled to prefer a complaint of defamation. 47 M.L.J. 746=20 L.W. 921; 5 Lah. 101 following 14 M. 379 and 25 B. 151 (F.B.).

Or in his absence by some person who had care of the woman.—Primarily the husband is to lodge a complaint for adultery or for enticing, and an exception is made only in the case of a person having the care of the woman during the husband's absence, to complain. If the wife is under the care of the husband at the time of the offence, and the husband does not want that proceeding should be instituted, it is not open to a person, whether he be the father or brother, to institute a complaint. But at the time of the offence if the wife was left under the care of another, the fact that the husband stands by, will not prevent the temporary guardian from preferring the complaint, 17 Cr. L.J. 353 at 364=33 Ind. Cas. 567. Before the amendment when the husband is present and is incapable of complaining, say a minor, a lunatic or an idiot or a paralytic, he cannot be said to be "absent" and another person cannot lodge a complaint, as the terms of this section expressly prohibit such a procedure, but the addition of the new proviso to the section provides for the making of a complaint where the husband of the woman is an incapacitated person through a guardian or other person lawfully entrusted with the care and custody of the person or property of such person. The words "some person who had care of such woman" certainly do not imply that there should be any express delegation of trust by the husband to another before the latter could be competent to file a complaint. The words mean a person who had care of the woman on the husband's behalf during the latter's absence. It may sometimes be absolutely necessary that when the husband is away a complaint should be promptly filed, whether his absence be for a few days or more. There is a probability that unless prompt action is taken, the accused may entirely vanish from the scene with the woman whom he had enticed and it may not be possible to trace their whereabouts. It is also necessary under the amended section for a valid complaint, that the leave of the Court must be expressly given to the complainant and where the proceedings of the Magistrate showed that he accorded such leave, the provisions of the section would be held to be substantially complied with even though such leave was not expressly recorded, 27 Cr. L.J. 415 = 93 Ind. Cas. 78. Unless it is shown that the husband is absent, a father cannot institute proceedings for enticing a married woman and leave of the Court is also necessary for instituting the complaint when the husband is found absent. The fact that the husband was ashamed to go to Court and did not prefer a complaint himself is not absence within the meaning of this section, 28 L.W. (Sh. n.) 14 but where the wife was not under the care of her husband at the time of the offence and the husband knowing what had happened went away and the complaint was filed by the father, without consulting the husband, the latter not being anxious to complain, it was held that the fact that the husband stood by did not prevent the temporary guardian from preferring the complaint, 17 Cr. L.J. 363 = 35 Ind. Cas. 667. The husband must be absent from the place at the time the offence is committed, 9 Cr. L.J. 450. The words 'in his absence' refer to the original entrustment and not to the time when the complaint was made, 17 Cr. L.J. 363 = 35 Ind. Cas. 667.

Proviso.—The proviso newly added allows other persons acting with the leave of the Court on behalf of the husband when he is a minor, an idiot or lunatic or one unable to make a complaint owing to sickness or infirmity, to prefer a complaint. The decision in 23 Cr. L.J. 613 = 68 Ind. Cas. 837 is no longer law.

199A. When in any case falling under section 198 or section 199, the person on whose behalf the complaint is sought to be made is under the age of eighteen years or is a lunatic, and the person applying for leave has not been appointed or declared by competent authority to be the guardian of the person of the said minor or lunatic, and the Court is satisfied that there is a guardian so appointed or declared, notice shall be given to such guardian, and the Court shall, before granting the application, give him a reasonable opportunity of objecting to the granting thereof.

Objection by lawful guardian to complaint by person other than person aggrieved.

This section is new and is enacted to safeguard the rights of guardians legally appointed. When a complaint is filed not by a husband but by some person on account of the latter's minority or incapacity not being his guardian appointed by a competent authority, the Court is bound to give notice of the application, if it is satisfied that there is a guardian already appointed by a competent authority and give such guardian a reasonable opportunity of objecting to the granting of leave to complain by the Court.

CHAPTER XVI.

OF COMPLAINTS TO MAGISTRATES.

Scope of the Chapter.—The object of the procedure prescribed by this Chapter which is entitled "Of Complaints to Magistrates" is the separation of unfounded from substantial cases at the outset, and to prevent innocent persons from being brought into Court and subjected to annoyance on frivolous charges, 37 M. 181 at 183; on receipt of a complaint by a Magistrate under the law four courses are open to him (1) he may order an inquiry under S. 202, infra, (2) he may dismiss the complaint under S. 203, infra, (3) he may issue process to the accused under S. 204, infra, (4) he may postpone the commencement of the proceedings under S. 214, infra, 43 C.L.J. 389 at 391.

200. A Magistrate taking cognizance of an offence on complaint shall at once examine the complainant upon oath, and the substance of the examination shall be reduced to writing and shall be signed by the complainant, and also by the Magistrate :

Provided as follows:—

(a) when the complaint is made in writing, nothing herein contained shall be deemed to require a Magistrate to examine the complainant before transferring the case under section 192;

(aa) when the complaint is made in writing, nothing herein contained shall be deemed to require the examination of a complainant in any case in which the complaint has been made by a Court or by a public servant acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duties ;

(b) where the Magistrate is a Presidency Magistrate, such examination may be on oath or not as the Magistrate in each case thinks fit, and *where the complaint is made in writing need not be reduced to writing ; but the Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, before the matter of the complaint is brought before him, require it to be reduced to writing ;

(c) when the case has been transferred under section 192, and the Magistrate so transferring it has already examined the complainant, the Magistrate to whom it is so transferred shall not be bound to re-examine the complainant.

Amendment.—The opening words "subject to the provisions of S. 476," have now been omitted and proviso (aa) is added allowing a Magistrate to take cognizance on a written com-

Act II of 1926, S. 3.

Object of the section.—The object aimed at by the examination under this section is to ascertain whether there is a prima facie case and to prevent unnecessary issue of process in cases where the examination of the complainant would show that the complaint was really false, frivolous, or vexatious and further proceedings will tend merely to harass accused persons and waste public time, 10 A.L.J. 79=13 Cr. L.J. 704=16 Ind. Cas. 512. When a complaint is in writing and is sufficiently clear it is sufficient compliance with this section if the Magistrate reads over the complaint and asks him to subscribe to it on oath and it is only when it is obscure or vague that the Magistrate is bound to examine the complainant at length for clearly ascertaining the allegations on which it is based, 26 Cr. L.J. 1101=38 Ind. Cas. 189. The examination of the complainant under this section is a valuable safe-guard that the Legislature has provided and must be scrupulously observed and insisted upon. Complaint petitions are not generally drafted by complainants themselves and it is therefore necessary that before action is taken upon written complaints filed in Court, the complainants should be examined on oath, 20 Cr. L.J. 247=49 Ind. Cas. 919 followed in 21 Cr. L.J. 779=58 Ind. Cas. 459. The evident object of

showed that he accorded such leave, the provisions of the section would be held to be substantially complied with even though such leave was not expressly recorded, 27 Cr. L.J. 415 = 93 Ind. Cas. 78. Unless it is shown that the husband is absent, a father cannot institute proceedings for enticing a married woman and leave of the Court is also necessary for instituting the complaint when the husband is found absent. The fact that the husband was ashamed to go to Court and did not prefer a complaint himself is not absence within the meaning of this section, 28 L.W. (Sh. n.) 14 but where the wife was not under the care of her husband at the time of the offence and the husband knowing what had happened went away and the complaint was filed by the father, without consulting the husband, the latter not being anxious to complain, it was held that the fact that the husband stood by did not prevent the temporary guardian from preferring the complaint, 17 Cr. L.J. 363 = 35 Ind. Cas. 667. The husband must be absent from the place at the time the offence is committed, 9 Cr. L.J. 450. The words 'in his absence' refer to the original entrustment and not to the time when the complaint was made, 17 Cr. L.J. 363 = 35 Ind. Cas. 667.

Proviso.—The proviso newly added allows other persons acting with the leave of the Court on behalf of the husband when he is a minor, an idiot or lunatic or one unable to make a complaint owing to sickness or infirmity, to prefer a complaint. The decision in 23 Cr. L.J. 613 = 68 Ind. Cas. 837 is no longer law.

199A. When in any case falling under section 198 or section 199, the person on whose behalf the complaint is sought to be made is under the age of eighteen years or is a lunatic, and the person applying for leave has not been appointed or declared by competent authority to be the guardian of the person of the said minor or lunatic, and the Court is satisfied that there is a guardian so appointed or declared, notice shall be given to such guardian, and the Court shall, before granting the application, give him a reasonable opportunity of objecting to the granting thereof.

Objection by lawful guardian to complaint by person other than person aggrieved.

This section is new and is enacted to safeguard the rights of guardians legally appointed. When a complaint is filed not by a husband but by some person on account of the latter's minority or incapacity not being his guardian appointed by a competent authority, the Court is bound to give notice of the application, if it is satisfied that there is a guardian already appointed by a competent authority and give such guardian a reasonable opportunity of objecting to the granting of leave to complain by the Court.

CHAPTER XVI.

OF COMPLAINTS TO MAGISTRATES.

Scope of the Chapter—The object of the procedure prescribed by this Chapter which is entitled "Of Complaints to Magistrates" is the separation of unfounded from substantial cases at the outset, and to prevent innocent persons from being brought into Court and subjected to annoyance on frivolous charges, 37 M. 181 at 183; on receipt of a complaint by a Magistrate under the law four courses are open to him (1) he may order an inquiry under S. 202, infra, (2) he may dismiss the complaint under S. 203, infra, (3) he may issue process to the accused under S. 201, infra, (4) he may postpone the commencement of the proceedings under S. 214, infra, 49 C.L.J. 388 at 391.

200. A Magistrate taking cognizance of an offence on complaint shall at once examine the complainant upon oath, and the substance of the examination shall be reduced to writing and shall be signed by the complainant, and also by the Magistrate :

Provided as follows :—

(a) when the complaint is made in writing, nothing herein contained shall be deemed to require a Magistrate to examine the complainant before transferring the case under section 192;

(aa) when the complaint is made in writing, nothing herein contained shall be deemed to require the examination of a complainant in any case in which the complaint has been made by a Court or by a public servant acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duties ;

(b) where the Magistrate is a Presidency Magistrate, such examination may be on oath or not as the Magistrate in each case thinks fit, and *where the complaint is made in writing need not be reduced to writing ; but the Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, before the matter of the complaint is brought before him, require it to be reduced to writing ;

(c) when the case has been transferred under section 192, and the Magistrate so transferring it has already examined the complainant, the Magistrate to whom it is so transferred shall not be bound to re-examine the complainant.

Amendment.—The opening words “subject to the provisions of S. 476,” have now been omitted and proviso (aa) is added allowing a Magistrate to take cognizance on a written complaint by a presiding officer of a Court and by a public servant acting, or purporting to act in the execution of his official duties without examining the complainant on oath, thus avoiding possible inconvenience to public officials. The italicised words in proviso (b) were added by Act II of 1926, S. 8.

Object of the section.—The object aimed at by the examination under this section is to ascertain whether there is a prima facie case and to prevent unnecessary issue of process in cases where the examination of the complainant would show that the complaint was really false, frivolous, or vexatious and further proceedings will tend merely to harass accused persons and waste public time, 10 A.L.J. 79=13 Cr. L.J. 704=16 Ind. Cas. 512. When a complaint is in writing and is sufficiently clear it is sufficient compliance with this section if the Magistrate reads over the complaint and asks him to subscribe to it on oath and it is only when it is obscure or vague that the Magistrate is bound to examine the complainant at length for clearly ascertaining the allegations on which it is based, 26 Cr. L.J. 1101=83 Ind. Cas. 189. The examination of the complainant under this section is a valuable safe-guard that the Legislature has provided and must be scrupulously observed and insisted upon. Complaint petitions are not generally drafted by complainants themselves and it is therefore necessary that before action is taken upon written complaints filed in Court, the complainants should be examined on oath, 20 Cr. L.J. 247=49 Ind. Cas. 919 followed in 21 Cr. L.J. 779=58 Ind. Cas. 459. The evident object of getting the substance of the examination of the complainant signed, is to make use of it in case of need as against the complainant's subsequent deposition as a witness for starting against him a prosecution for perjury for making two contradictory statements. The reading over of a deposition of a witness is an essential condition to sustain a prosecution for perjury. But this section merely requires the substance of the complainant's oral examination on oath recorded by the Magistrate, to be signed by him. To hold that the Magistrate should read over the statement recorded by him is importing into section something which would certainly be very desirable especially if the statement is to be ultimately used for contradicting him. The principle underlying S. 860 (1), infra, should be made applicable on grounds of public policy to sworn statements if the accuracy of the record is to be vouchsafed. The provision is not in the section and is in the province of the Legislature 26 Cr. L.J. 1401=89 Ind. Cas. 713.

Taking cognizance of the offence.—The expression "taking cognizance" is not defined in the Code. It means action taken with a view to prosecute an offender for an offence and denotes a stage preliminary to the commencement of an inquiry or trial. A Court may be empowered to take cognizance of an offence and yet not be empowered to "inquire" or "try." S. 201, infra, makes provision for such cases. S. 190, supra, mentions the ordinary ways in which a Magistrate takes cognizance of an offence; where there was only an oral complaint to a Magistrate who did not record the same under this section, nor was there a police-report, nor did the Magistrate profess to act under S. 190 (1) (c), supra, it was held that the Magistrate had not duly taken cognizance of the offence under S. 190, supra, and he had no power to arrest and remand the accused to custody, Weir II, 241. Once a Magistrate takes cognizance of a complaint he ought to proceed under Ss. 202 to 203, infra. He cannot act otherwise than under those sections. If he does not choose to summon the accused he may direct an inquiry under S. 202, infra, but he cannot direct the police to treat the complaint as first information and investigate thereon. There is no provision in the Code justifying such a course, 23 Cr. L.J. 374=103 Ind. Cas. 333.

Shall at once examine the complainant on oath.—The provisions of the Code as to procedure should be strictly complied with. Complaints are very frequently drawn up by ignorant persons or by careless petition writers and the examination of the complainant may and should be of much assistance in eliciting the facts on which the complainant desires the Court to take cognizance and how much of the facts complainant himself has knowledge of, 18 A. 221. Non-observance of the provisions of the Code leads to much confusion and waste of public time, not to speak of putting the parties to unnecessary expense, 37 A. 628. It is imperative that the complainant be examined at once, 13 B. 590 (F.B.); 18 A. 221, 3 B.L.R. (Ap. Cr.) 53; 4 M.H.C.R. 162; 10 A.L.J. 79=13 Cr. L.J. 704=16 Ind. Cas. 513, 10 M.L.T. 120=(1911) 2 M.W.N. 74=12 Cr. L.J. 453=11 Ind. Cas. 999; and the facts that the allegations were fully set out in the written complaint will not absolve the Magistrate from examining the complainant on oath forthwith, 3 C.W.N. 17. But omission to examine a complainant is only an irregularity cured by S. 537 infra, 4 Lah. 359; 1 Han. 517; 43 M.L.J. 710=(1922) M.W.N. 631=16 L.W. 220=23 Cr. L.J. 691=69 Ind. Cas. 371; 30 C. 923; 12 Cr. L.J. 533=12 Ind. Cas. 515; 33 M. 606; 11 M. 443; 13 L.W. 461=25 Cr. L.J. 730=81 Ind. Cas. 218 followed in 55 M.L.J. 715=23 L.W. 621=1928 M.W.N. 1235=30 Cr. L.J. 432=115 Ind. Cas. 527; 30 Cr. L.J. 706=116 Ind. Cas. 722. The person prejudiced by such an irregularity is the complainant and when the case ends in a conviction he has no grievance and the accused cannot in general complain of the irregularity, as the omission to take a sworn statement from the complainant cannot prejudice him. If the complainant is not examined, it must be a matter of evidence to be decided by the Court hearing the case whether the evidence without that of the complainant is sufficient for a conviction, 19 L.W. 461=25 Cr. L.J. 730=31 Ind. Cas. 218; 15 L.W. 220. The object of the provision as to examination of the complainant at once on oath is really to prevent issue of process to accused in cases of frivolous or vexatious complaints. Such examination cannot be regarded as part of the complaint to ascertain what specific charges are preferred by the complainant, 13 L.W. 693=(1922) M.W.N. 353. The words "at once" in this section clearly indicate that a complaint must ordinarily be presented in person; otherwise a Magistrate should be very loath to take cognizance and should not accept the complaint not signed by the alleged complainant and not preferred by a person duly authorized to institute the specific complaint. No process should be issued against accused unless the Magistrate has first examined the complainant and when a yardanashin makes a complaint the Magistrate may take cognizance if satisfied that it was really her complaint by whatever means it reaches him, and he may issue a commission under S. 503, infra, for the examination required by this section, but a Magistrate has no power to issue process to an accused person when a complaint was presented to him by the alleged agent of a yardanashin on her behalf without the complaint being signed by her and without a power-of-attorney filed along with the complaint, 42 C. 19. A complaint which is otherwise proper is not illegal, merely because the person making it has no personal knowledge of the offence committed, 21 Cr. L.J. 346=55 Ind. Cas. 682 but in such a case the Magistrate must satisfy himself fully that a case has been made out for issue of process, 10 C.W.N. 1090. A Presidency Magistrate need not examine the complainant on oath at once; complaints to the Presidency Magistrates are generally made by means of an affidavit or solemn affirmation before the Magistrate himself and so no further examination on oath is necessary. See 35 M. 606. If a complaint is dismissed without examining the complainant under this section, the Magistrate cannot call upon the complainant to show cause why he should not be proceeded against under S. 211, I.P.O. 23 Bom. L.R. 490=27 Cr. L.J. 740=95 Ind. Cas. 68.

Substance of examination shall be reduced to writing.—The Legislature does require that a Magistrate taking cognizance of a complaint shall examine the complainant upon oath and the substance of that examination is by law required to be reduced to writing and that writing must be and was intended to be distinct from the complaint, and merely asking the complainant to swear to the complaint and sign it, is not sufficient compliance with law, 18 A. 221. The examination will certainly be of much assistance in eliciting the actual facts on which the complainant desires the Magistrate to take cognizance and how much of the facts alleged, the complainant knows personally, 18 A. 221.

Shall be signed by complainant.—When the complainant did not sign the examination which was reduced to writing by the Magistrate under this section, it was held that it cannot subsequently be used as evidence of the statement made by the complainant in a prosecution against him for perjury under S. 193, I.P.O., 6 C.W.N. 840.

Proviso (a) was intended to meet decisions like, 9 B.L.R. 146 (F.B.); 8 B.L.R. 19 which held that referring the case to a Subordinate Magistrate for disposal before reducing the examination of complainant to writing was illegal.

Proviso (aa)—This proviso has been newly added allowing a Magistrate to take cognizance of written complaint by the presiding officer of a Court and by a public servant acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duties under Ss. 195 and 476 and 476A, infra, without examining such presiding officer or public servant on oath. This is enacted for the purpose of avoiding inconvenience to public officials, of appearing before Magistrates when exercising their statutory functions. When a police-officer makes a report in writing even in a non-cognizable offence, the Court can take cognizance without examining the police-officer on oath as a complainant, 49 M. 525 (F.B.).

Sub-section (b).—The Municipal Magistrate of Calcutta is a Presidency Magistrate and in cases of complaint made to him under the provisions of the Calcutta Municipal Act, he is required to examine the complainant subject to the provisions of this sub-section and any provision in the Municipal Act must be taken to be subject to the provisions of this sub-section and where the provisions of this sub-section have not been complied with, the conviction and sentence should be set aside, 32 C.W.N. 1091=45 C.L.J. 190=30 Cr. L.J. 231=114 Ind. Cas. 82.

Magistrate may require complaint to be reduced to writing.—A complaint under S. 4 (1) (h), supra, may be oral, but a Presidency Magistrate may require the complaint to be reduced to writing and generally in Presidency towns complaints are made by affidavits, sworn before the Magistrate. The examination referred to in this section by a Presidency

Magistrate is not therefore obligatory, but the Magistrate is not excused from the necessity of placing on record the necessary evidence of complainant's authority to file a complaint, 32 C. 469 at 472. From the wording of this section and the next it is clear that a complaint need not be in writing but can be oral.

201. (1) If the complaint has been made in writing to a Magistrate who is not competent to take cognizance of the case, he shall return the complaint for presentation to the proper Court with an endorsement to that effect.

Procedure by Magistrate not competent to take cognizance of the case.

(2) If the complaint has not been made in writing, such Magistrate shall direct the complainant to the proper Court.

Magistrate not competent to take cognizance.—If a Magistrate is not competent to take cognizance of a case, he shall return the complaint for presentation to the proper court with an endorsement to that effect and he is not entitled to examine the complainant on oath under S. 200, supra, 10 C.W.N. 1086. A Magistrate may not be competent because (1) of his not being empowered under S. 190, supra, or (2) of his not having local jurisdiction or (3) of want of sanction under Ss. 197 to 199, supra, or (4) of any special or local law, or (5) of his being not empowered to try under Sch. II, col. 8 or to commit for trial under S. 206, infra, or (6) of the accused claiming the special privileges of Chapter XXXIII of the Code.

Shall return the complaint.—If a Magistrate on a perusal of the written complaint finds he has no jurisdiction to entertain the complaint, his duty is to return that complaint to be presented to the proper Court, 5 Pat. 477, or he may send the case to the Magistrate or Court competent to try the offence disclosed in the complaint, 17 M.L.J. 559 = 7 Cr. L.J. 6. He need not or rather should not examine the complainant in such a case, 10 C.W.N. 1086.

Sub-section (2).—This sub-section which was introduced in the 1898 Code permits an oral complaint being made. See 1 Ran. 549 at 552.

202. (1) Any Magistrate, on receipt of a complaint of an offence of which he is authorized to take cognizance, or which has been transferred to him under section 192, may, if he thinks fit, for reasons to be recorded in writing,

Postponement for issue of process

postpone the issue of process for compelling the attendance of the person complained against, and either inquire into the case himself or, if he is a Magistrate other than a Magistrate of the third class, direct an inquiry or investigation to be made by any Magistrate subordinate to him, or by a police-officer, or by such other person as he thinks fit, for the purpose of ascertaining the truth or falsehood of the complaint:

*Provided that save where the complaint has been made by a court no such direction shall be made unless the complainant has been examined on oath under the provisions of section 200.*

(b) [Omitted by Act II of 1926, S. 6.]

* Added by Act II of 1926, S. 4.

(2) If any inquiry or investigation under this section is made by a person not being a Magistrate or a police-officer, such person shall exercise all the powers conferred by this Code on an officer in charge of a police-station, except that he shall not have power to arrest without warrant.

(2A) Any Magistrate inquiring into a case under this section may, if he thinks fit, take evidence of witnesses on oath.

(3) This section applies also to the police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay.

Amendment.—Sub-section (1) has been redrafted with a proviso. Sub-section (2) also has been redrafted; Sub section (2-A) is new. Proviso (b) to sub-section (1) has been amended by Act II of 1926 by omitting the same and adding the same to the first portion of the proviso. The following are the principal changes made by the amendment:—

(1) Third class Magistrates have been given power to make preliminary inquiries personally; (2) authority to make a preliminary inquiry has been given in any case in which the Magistrate thinks fit for reasons to be recorded in writing. The only ground contemplated by the present section is if the Magistrate is not satisfied as to the truth of the complaint. This is thought to be undesirable. (3) The words "inquiry or investigation" have been substituted for the expression "previous local investigation" which at present the Magistrate is empowered to order and power is given to take evidence upon oath in the case of such preliminary inquiry. (4) Presidency Magistrates are enabled to act under this section without special authorization.—Statement of Objects and Reasons.

Scope and object of the section.—An inquiry or investigation under this section is designed to afford the Magistrate an opportunity of either confirming or removing such hesitation as he may feel in respect of issuing process against the accused; the nature of the inquiry varies with the circumstances of each case, and it is certainly not contemplated that it should be always exhaustive. Frequently all that is required is the elucidation of some minor point or the summary determination of the sufficiency of the available evidence, but least of all is the inquiry—a preliminary trial of the accused at which he is entitled to adduce his evidence before process can issue upon him. The degree of formality of the proceedings and the width and depth of the inquiry is entirely in the discretion of the Magistrate. The provision is enabling and not obligatory as soon as he has satisfied himself, upon the materials placed before him that process should issue, its object is fulfilled and it is certainly not incumbent on him ordinarily or expedient that he should practically enter upon the trial of the case, 30 Cr. L.J. 551 at 558=116 Ind. Cas. 45. This section applies only to complaints of offences. 'Offence' is defined in S 4 (1) (o), supra. A proceeding under S. 107, supra, cannot be regarded as a complaint of an offence and therefore a Magistrate cannot act under this and S. 203, infra, with regard to a proceeding under S. 107, supra, 29 Cr. L.J. 865=111 Ind. Cas. 450; 23 Cr. L.J. 267=107 Ind. Cas. 603. Similarly an application for maintenance under S. 433, infra, is not a complaint of an offence and the Magistrate is not empowered to send such an application for inquiry and report, 1935 P.R. (Cr. J.) 25=2 Cr. L.J. 421, approved in 23 Cr. L.J. 903=111 Ind. Cas. 657. When a complaint of Court is made by a Civil Court and the records submitted to a Magistrate for inquiry into an alleged offence under S. 476, infra, there would be no room for a preliminary inquiry which is contemplated under this section as the Civil Court when acting under S. 476, infra, forms a judicial opinion on the evidence before it as to the necessity of a prosecution and such complaint of Court cannot be dealt with under this and S. 203, supra, 21 Cr. L.J. 310=55 Ind. Cas. 470 where 16 Cr. L.J. 161=27 Ind. Cas. 545 is followed. The object of the section is to prevent the harassing of innocent persons by an indiscriminate issue of process in cases where there is no sufficient ground for proceeding against them. Unless and until a Magistrate is satisfied that there is in his judgment sufficient ground for proceeding he should not compel the appearance of the accused before him. The inquiry is to be held to enable him to see whether there is sufficient ground, 49 M. 918 (F.B.). Process is not to issue where there exists doubt as to the truth of the complaint, [1921] Pat 31=21 Cr. L.J. 519=55 Ind. Cas. 775. The procedure of calling upon an accused person to render an explanation to enable the Magistrate to decide if he should issue process, has been condemned on several occasions. It is not fair to the accused that he should be called upon to state his defence before the prosecution have laid all their cards on the table. Though there is no obligation on him either to appear or to tender an explanation in the preliminary inquiry, a refusal or failure on his part to attend in answer to a rule nisi issued by a Magistrate is likely to prejudice the mind of the Magistrate and a compliance therewith, to expose him to serious risks, 27 Cr. L.J. 711 at 713=94 Ind. Cas. 903; See 30 C.W.N. 312 where 40 C. 444 is followed. The practice of calling upon the accused why a summons or warrant should not issue against him is, however much advantageous it may be in certain cases, though not illegal, is clearly opposed to the general principles of the Code, and should not be allowed to prevail and must be put an end to. An accused person should not be called upon to disclose his defence unless the Court is satisfied that prima facie case has been made out which he should be called upon to rebut, 43 M. 918 (F.B.) following 47 A. 722 and 49 M. 926. See also 29 Cr. L.J. 39=106 Ind. Cas. 455. The Full Bench ruling has condemned in the strongest terms the practice prevailing in the Presidency Towns of the indiscriminate practice of issuing a notice to show cause why a summons should not issue. The decisions in 5 Bom. L.R. 91 and 28 A. 421, were not accepted as laying down the correct law. Notice to show cause why process should not issue is a mere intimation that the Magistrate intends to take action upon the complaint, but does not amount either to a summons or to an invitation to a party charged to appear or to take any other steps in the matter. Moreover it is not included in the fifth schedule of the Code as one of the forms to be issued by the Court, nor does it appear to be prescribed or contemplated by the Code, 37 M. 181 at 182 approved in 49 M. 913 (F.B.). In Calcutta the learned Chief Justice in 27 C.W.N. 196=36 C. L.J. 414=24 Cr. L.J. 333=72 Ind. Cas. 173, remarked thus on this practice. "The Magistrate did not act in accordance with the law contained in S. 202 and the Sessions Judge was right in saying that the procedure was improper and irregular. I hope this judgment and the judgment in 21 C.W.N. 127=25 C.L.J. 606=17 Cr. L.J. 396=35 Ind. Cas. 528 will be brought to the notice of the Magistrate and they will observe in this respect the plain provisions of the Code." Under the Code a wide discretion is given to a Magistrate with respect to the grant or refusal of process and in the interests of the community generally, it is essential that Magistrates should be vested with an ample discretion in respect of the issue of the process. Except as otherwise provided by statute anybody is entitled to prefer a complaint in a Criminal Court, and in India where the Grand Jury system does not exist as an additional shield to innocent persons against whom unfounded complaints are laid, it is specially necessary that caution and discretion should be used in issuing summons. An accused ought not to be dragged off to answer a charge merely because a complaint has been lodged. "An extensive power is confided in the Justices in their capacity as Justices to be exercised judicially. Discretion means, something to be done according to the rules of reason and justice, not according to private opinion, according to law, and not humour. It is not to be arbitrary and fanciful but legal and regular. It must be exercised within the limits to which an honest man competent in the discharge of his office ought to confine himself." A Magistrate should therefore proceed according to the provisions of the Code and if he is of opinion that a prima facie case is made out, he ought to issue process and cannot refuse to do so merely because he thinks it unlikely that proceedings will result in a conviction. If he does so at that stage it would be guess work and speculation, which he is not permitted to do. It is settled practice that if the Magistrate having followed the procedure laid down in the Code exceeded a judicial discretion as to whether he should issue process or not the superior tribunal will be slow to disturb his order, 53 C. 606; But the Bombay High Court has taken a slightly different view in 52 B. 448 following an earlier decision in 5 Bom. L.R. 91 not accepted as correct in Madras. The Bombay view of what is ordinarily contemplated by this section, is merely a preliminary examination of the complainant and his witnesses or such of them as the Magistrate deems fit to examine in the absence of the accused. But it is going too far to say that the section is limited to an inquiry of that kind and if the Magistrate deems it desirable for his inquiry to give the accused an opportunity of appearing before him and stating what he had to say about the accusation and even accepts and considers documentary evidence which he produces he is committing an illegality. There is a clear distinction between considering whether such a procedure is illegal and whether such procedure is desirable. The undesirability of such a procedure is pointed out in 49 M. 918 (F.B.) and 40 C. 444. The section in wide terms gives power to the Magistrate to inquire into the case himself. The words 'the case' are very wide and if the Magistrate considers that the accused should be given an opportunity of being heard there is nothing in the section itself debarring him from doing so. If the police and even a private person can make inquiry under this section a fortiori a Magistrate making a preliminary inquiry can do so. Therefore there is nothing absolutely illegal in the issue of a notice by the Magistrate to the accused under this section and the Magistrate after his preliminary inquiry should say plainly whether he dismisses the complaint or he thinks that a summons or a warrant is issued to the accused to appear before him. But see 49 C.L.J. 422 where it was held that a Magistrate acts illegally in allowing an accused to appear and cross-examine witnesses at that stage and the illegal act of the Magistrate does not create a right in the accused to appear at every stage. When a man files a complaint and supports it by his oath rendering himself liable to a prosecution if it is false, he is entitled to be believed unless there is some apparent reason for disbelieving him, and to have the person complained against to be brought before the Court and tried, 17 C.W.N. 290; 11 A.L.J. 754=14 Cr. L.J. 493=20 Ind. Cas. 749. It is undesirable that the inquiry should be prolonged by the cross-examination of the complainant's witnesses and hearing arguments and there is no reason either in common sense or in law why the accused should not be present at the inquiry, 26 Cr. L.J. 1394=89 Ind. Cas. 706. But the accused has no right to be present while the Magistrate is holding the inquiry under this section, 43 C.L.J. 422. It may often be a matter of convenience both to allow the accused to be present and to allow any legal adviser to watch the proceedings, but the grant of such a concession by the Magistrate is a mere act of grace and the accused has no innate right to it. Proceedings under this section are not proceedings inter partes but they are instituted and conducted by the Magistrate to enable him to satisfy himself whether there is or not sufficient ground for issuing process and it is not until process is issued, the matter becomes a case, 27 Cr. L.J. 494=93 Ind. Cas. 894. The procedure laid down in this section should be strictly complied with and unless this is done, the order will be illegal, 11 A.L.J. 921=15 Cr. L.J. 21=22 Ind. Cas. 165. This section has application only to a complaint of an offence on which the Magistrate does not deem it fit to issue process, Weir II, 293. Under this section a Magistrate has the option of only one out of two alternatives, vis., either to inquire into the case himself or direct a previous local investigation. But he cannot have recourse to both the alternatives. If a Magistrate having partially inquired into a case, then directs a local investigation he commits an irregularity and if he suffers his mind to be influenced prejudicially to the accused by the results of such local investigation, his proceedings will be vitiated, 44 A. 550. First, there must be a complaint within the meaning of S. 4 (1), (h) supra, which is distinct from information under S. 190 (1), supra, and secondly, the Magistrate authorized to take cognizance thinks fit for reasons to be recorded in writing after examining the complainant to postpone the issue of process for compelling attendance of the accused while he himself inquires into the matter or an investigation is made by another, 37 M. 181 at 183 followed in 49 M. 918 (F.B.); 10 A.L.J. 79=13 Cr. L.J. 704=16 Ind. Cas. 512. Any Magistrate authorized to take cognizance may postpone issue of process. The section as it stood before the amendment permitted only the Chief Presidency Magistrate, Presidency Magistrates authorized by Government in this behalf, and any Magistrate of first or second class, to act under this section. It was rather strange that third-class Magistrate who may be empowered under S. 190, supra, and S. 14 infra, to take cognizance of complaints could not be empowered to act under this section, but now the amendment removes this unnecessary restriction on third-class Magistrates and Presidency Magistrates. The accused person has no locus standi to be present at the preliminary inquiry under this section and to be heard, 29 Cr. L.J. 1059=91 Ind. Cas. 563. The practice of hearing arguments on behalf of the accused in a preliminary inquiry held under this section is not authorized by law and ought to be condemned, 30 C.W.N. 312=28 Cr. L.J. 305=84 Ind. Cas. 449 where 40 C. 444 is followed; see 49 M. 918 (F.B.); 14 C. 131; 40 C 444; 47 A. 722, but see 52 B. 448 following 6 Bom. L.R. 91. All Presidency Magistrates other than the Chief Presidency Magistrate had been invested with powers specified in this section, before the amendment Mad. Cr. Rul. of Pr. Rule 10. This is now unnecessary.

For reasons to be recorded in writing.—The Magistrate is bound to record his reasons, 20 M. 337; 9 A. 83; 1900 A.W.N. 187 and 189; 10 M.L.T. 120=(1911) 2 M.W.N. 74=12 Cr. L.J. 483=11 Ind. Cas. 999; 1902 A.W.N. 195; 23 Cr.L.J. 1394=89 Ind. Cas. 706; 13 Cr. L.J. 749=17 Ind. Cas. 61. Where no reasons are recorded for sending the case for enquiry by the police the procedure adopted is not in accordance with law, 29 Cr. L.J. 958=111 Ind. Cas. 878.

May if he thinks fit postpone.—A Magistrate who holds the investigation under this section has no power to dismiss the complaint under S. 203, infra 18 C.W.N. 95. Before the amendment, the wording was "not satisfied with the truth of the complaint" and this was the only ground contemplated by the section; now wider power is given. If a Magistrate issues process to a set of accused in a case where on the same complaint another set of accused who had been already tried and acquitted, it was held that he acted improperly in issuing process without paying due regard to what had transpired in the earlier proceedings, 30 C.W.N. 546.

The issue of process.—Prosecution of the accused commences with the issue of process after the complaint has been entertained by the Magistrate, 37 M 181 at 183; 38 C. 830. Once process has been issued, subsequent reference for inquiry under this section is illegal, 9 M. 232; 1895 A.W.N. 147; 21 W.R. (Cr.) 44. Before process is issued the accused is not a party to the proceedings under this section and he is not entitled to claim under S. 340, infra, the right to be represented by a pleader. If he happens to be present and represented by a pleader that was not by compulsion of law but of his own free will, 38 C. 880 at 887.

Either inquire into the case himself.—A Magistrate is empowered to hold an inquiry into a complaint of an offence in order to ascertain whether there is sufficient foundation for him to issue process against the person or persons complained against. He may allow the complainant to produce such evidence in support of his complaint as he wished to produce and after a consideration of that evidence come to the conclusion that evidence was so wholly unworthy of credit as to warrant his taking no further action in the matter 28 Cr. L.J. 26=99 Ind. Cas. 58. The inquiry under this section by the Magistrate himself does not necessarily mean an inquiry by examining witnesses or by holding an investigation into the case. It is open to him to investigate into the matter in order to ascertain the truth or falsity of the complaint in any way he thinks proper. There is nothing in law to prevent the Magistrate from looking into the police investigation papers for the purpose of ascertaining the truth or otherwise of the complaint. The inquiry under this section is not limited to any particular form of inquiry upon looking into the police papers he is satisfied that it was not a fit case in which process ought to be issued against the person accused, there is nothing in law preventing the Magistrate from doing so, 1921 Pat. 226=26 Cr. L.J. 129=83 Ind. Cas. 683.

Other than a Magistrate of the third class.—A third-class Magistrate must inquire into the case himself, since he is the lowest grade of Magistrates, as there is no Magistrate subordinate to him. He is also not entitled to direct a police-officer or some other person as he thinks fit, to ascertain the truth or falsehood of the complaint.

Direct an investigation by Subordinate Magistrate or Police Officer.—The word "investigation" is not defined in the Code. It must be taken to have been used in its ordinary sense. The investigation must be into the truth or falsity of the allegation made in the petition of complaint, 19 Cr. L.J. 126=43 Ind. Cas. 414. The word "Local" has been omitted now thereby widening the scope of the investigation. Great caution should be shown in sending, for the investigation by the police, charges against members of that force. Where a District Magistrate sent for inquiry a complaint against an Inspector of Police without giving reasons and without expressing his opinion as to the truth of the complaint, the High Court in Revision sent back the case remarking it would generally be better in such a case if the inquiry be prosecuted by a Magistrate, 20 M. 337. See also 1884 A.W.N. 47; 1902 A.W.N. 195; 9 C.W.N. 199. Where an inquiry has been ordered by a person other than the Magistrate who orders the inquiry he is precluded from holding a second inquiry himself in the absence of the accused, 11 A.L.J. 754=14 Cr. L.J. 493=20 Ind. Cas. 749. Where a Magistrate directs an investigation by the police under this section, the police are bound to make a report to the Magistrate as to the result of their investigation. It is not competent to the Police to send up a charge sheet against the accused stating a specific offence to the Magistrate without submitting the report called by the Magistrate and proceedings started on such a charge sheet is clearly illegal. The original complaint is still on the Magistrate's file 53 B. 339 following 54 C. 303. A reference under this section to the police after the evidence of the complainant has been taken and process issued to the accused is illegal, 9 M. 282. Where the police on investigation had examined witnesses in the course of the investigation, there is nothing in law to prevent the Magistrate from looking into the police papers sent up to him after investigation for the purpose of ascertaining the truth or falsehood of the complaint and a Magistrate will not be acting improperly if upon looking into the investigation papers by the police he was satisfied that the case is a fit one to issue process or for dismissal, (1924) Pat. 226=26 Cr. L.J. 129=83 Ind. Cas. 689. Where a complaint is made against a police-officer, it is improper to direct another police-officer to conduct the investigation; the investigation in such a case should be conducted by a Magistrate, 18 A.L.J. 620=21 Cr. L.J. 416=56 Ind. Cas. 64; 21 Cr. L.J. 621=5 Pat. L.J. 61=57 Ind. Cas. 295; 21 Cr. L.J. 343=55 Ind. Cas. 679; 29 Cr. L.J. 958=111 Ind. Cas. 878; 18 A.L.J. 731; 1921 Pat. 31=21 Cr. L.J. 519=56 Ind. Cas. 776; 21 Cr. L.J. 649=57 Ind. Cas. 665. An opportunity should be given to the complainant to prove his case, 16 C.W.N. 143=13 Cr. L.J. 125=13 Ind. Cas. 781. Where a District Magistrate holding an inquiry under this section has evidence before him which is opposed to the complainant's allegations in his complaint and sworn statement, the complainant should be given an opportunity to meet such evidence and to prove his case, and the order of discharge made without affording such opportunity holding that the accused acted bona fide cannot be sustained, 23 Cr. L.J. 43=106 Ind. Cas. 464.

Such other person as he thinks fit.—An inquiry may be made by any person chosen by the Magistrate and sub-section (2) empowers such person to exercise all the powers of an officer in charge of a police station except the power to arrest without a warrant. An inquiry may be made by a clerk under the Magistrate, 36 C. 72 and a Kanungo can be directed to inquire by the Magistrate, 1 Luck. 259.

Proviso.—Unless a complainant has been duly examined under S. 200, supra, an inquiry under this section cannot be ordered, 12 Cr. L.J. 339=12 Ind. Cas. 515 where 27 C. 921 is followed. A Presidency Magistrate has now to examine the complainant himself and to have his statement on oath or not before he can direct an inquiry under this section. The new sub-section (4) empowers evidence to be taken on oath in the inquiry held under this section by Magistrates, investigation is not defined in the Code, it must be taken in its ordinary meaning, 19 Cr. L.J. 126=43 Ind. Cas. 414. See S. 200, supra, which lays down that ordinarily on presentation of a complaint the Magistrate shall at once examine the complainant upon oath; exception is made in the case of action taken by Courts under S. 476, infra, and a new proviso (aa) is added to S. 200 supra which allows a discretion to Magistrates to dispense with the examination of the presiding officer of a Court or public servant who complains acting in the execution of official duties. By the new amendment, S. 3 of Act II of 1926, Presidency Magistrates need not reduce the examination into writing. When the complaint is already in writing. When the complaint is made by a Court under S. 195, supra this section cannot apply; but when a complaint is made by a public servant, this proviso may apply as complaint of court alone is mentioned herein.

Sub-section (2-A).—This sub-section is new and empowers a Magistrate inquiring into the case to take evidence of witnesses on oath and so the decisions which held that the inquiry is not a judicial one are no longer law, 39 M. 750; 21 M.L.J. 795; 22 B. 936; 32 A. 30, and is in accordance with 35 C 72. A prosecution can be ordered on this basis of the evidence recorded under this section, 24 Cr. L.J. 562 (2)=74 Ind. Cas. 1034 (2).

Revision.—The High Court will not ordinarily interfere with the details of an inquiry or investigation under this section and particularly will not do so on the ground that it was inadequate as the degree of formality of the proceedings and the width and depth of the inquiry is entirely in the discretion of the Magistrate (so long as he confines himself to the simple question of issue of process or the dismissal of the complaint) and the provision is enabling and not obligatory, 33 Cr. L.J. 532 at 556=115 Ind. Cas. 48.

203. The Magistrate before whom a complaint is made or to whom it has been transferred, may dismiss the complaint, if, after considering the statement on oath (if any) of the complainant and the result of the investigation or inquiry (if any)† under section 202*, there is in his judgment no sufficient ground for proceeding. In such case he shall briefly record his reasons for so doing.

Amendment.—For the words "after examining the complaint and considering the result of the investigation (if any) made under S. 202" the words "after considering the statement on oath (if any) of the complainant and the result of any investigation or inquiry under the preceding section" have been substituted. For the words "any investigation" the words "the investigation" has been substituted and after the words "or inquiry" the words "if any" were inserted by Act II of 1926, S. 5.

Scope of the section.—There is no warrant for the proposition that if a complaint is made against an accused person the Magistrate is bound to summon the accused if there is any evidence in support of the complaint, even though the Magistrate finds that evidence unsatisfactory and believes the complaint to be false. In such a case the Magistrate is justified in acting under this section and a Sessions Judge or District Magistrate could not be legally compelled to summon the accused when the Magistrate finds no sufficient grounds for proceeding, 33 Cr. L.J. 631=115 Ind. Cas. 493. This section provides for the dismissal of a complaint on any one of three grounds—(1) If the Magistrate upon the statement made by the complainant reduced to writing under S. 200, supra, finds that no offence has been made out; (2) if the Magistrate distrusts the statement by the complainant; (3) if the Magistrate distrusts the complainant's statement but his distrust is not sufficiently strong to warrant him to act upon it, except upon a further inquiry as provided for in S. 202 supra, 14 C. 141; 13 B. 600, 27 C. 921. See also 9 Bom. L.R. 742=6 Cr. L.J. 83; 13 B. 593; 27 Bom. L.R. 352=26 Cr. L.J. 991=87 Ind. Cas. 527. The Magistrate in all other cases is bound as soon as the complainant is examined to issue process to have the accused person brought before him. This section applies only to cases where there has been no issue of process to the accused and once process is issued there has been a commencement of the proceedings and the complaint cannot be dismissed under this section. The proviso to S. 436, infra, cannot apply to a dismissal under this section. It only applies to the case where an accused person has been discharged. Where no process is issued to the accused at all and he does not appear in Court and the complaint against him is dismissed summarily, the accused person cannot be said to have been discharged. It is only after he has appeared in Court and the evidence against him is found to be insufficient so as to make it unnecessary to call upon him to enter upon his defence that he can be discharged. Before the amendment Courts were unanimous that in the case of the dismissal of complaint under this section notice was not necessary, 35 A. 78; 40 A. 138. The amendment has left those rulings untouched and therefore no notice is necessary when a complaint is dismissed under this section or under S. 204 before further inquiry is ordered, 47 A. 722; 49 M. 918 (F.B.). This section refers only to cases taken cognizance of by a Magistrate. The Magistrate who holds the inquiry under S. 202, supra, is not competent to dismiss the complaint under this section, 18 C.W.N. 95. See also 43 C. 173; 15 A.L.J. 642. An application under S. 107, supra, does not fall within the definition of complaint in S. 4 (1) (h), supra, and therefore this section cannot apply to such a case, 25 Cr. L.J. 89=76 Ind. Cas. 25.

* 'any' altered into 'the' by Act II of 1926, S. 5.

Dismiss the Complaint after examining the complainant.—It is imperative on the Magistrate to examine the complainant on oath and thus give him an opportunity of showing cause against prima facie grounds for distrusting his complaint. He cannot dismiss the complaint under this section without giving the complainant an opportunity to substantiate the allegations in the complaint by producing evidence, 55 C. 1230. The provisions of this and S. 200, supra, are imperative and any dismissal of the complaint without examining the complainant is without jurisdiction, 13 B. 590 (F.B.); 9 C.W.N. 199; 30 C. 923; 33 C. 1; 21 Cr. L.J. 343=55 Ind. Cas. 679. An order dismissing a complaint under this section is clearly unsustainable when the complainant has not been examined at all and there is no valid disposal of the complaint, 48 B. 360, but it is not illegal to dismiss a complaint under this section without examining the complainant on oath when the complainant was not present in Court on any of the dates on which the matter comes before the Magistrate; if the complainant does not choose to be present in Court, he cannot afterwards be heard to say that the case should be sent back for further inquiry on the ground of failure to examine him on oath, 48 C. L.J. 90=29 Cr. L.J. 798=111 Ind. Cas. 126. After examining the complainant on oath, the Magistrate may dismiss the complaint at once or may elect to hold an inquiry under S. 202. If he elects to proceed under S. 202, supra, he is bound to give time to the complainant to produce his witnesses on a particular day fixed by him and if no witnesses are produced on that date, he may dismiss the complaint. A complaint cannot be dismissed on a mere perusal of some documents produced by the accused before the police and by putting certain question to the accused's pleader in an inquiry under S. 202, supra, without examining the complainants' witnesses, 15 C.W.N. 143=13 Cr. L.J. 125=13 Ind. Cas. 781. A Presidency Magistrate may dismiss a complaint without such examination, as verification on oath of the complaint is a sufficient compliance, 35 M. 606; but see the amended S. 200 (b). When a Magistrate disbelieves the complainant's story he is not bound to summon his witnesses and examine them before acting under this section, 14 C. 707; 27 C. 921; 6 C.W.N. 293 at 297; 10 C.W.N. 1086, but when once he had issued summonses to complainant's witnesses he is bound to examine them when tendered by the complainant before dismissing his complaint, 20 M. 388. The conclusion must be arrived at by the Magistrate by the exercise of a discretion based on judicial considerations, 25 M.L.J. 510. A Magistrate is not at liberty to dismiss a complaint merely because the complainant is actuated by malicious feelings in making the complaint nor is it open to him to dismiss it, if the offence complained against appear to have occurred long time ago; there being no limitation prescribed by law for a prosecution for an offence, Ratanlal 549, nor can a Magistrate refuse to entertain a complaint or dismiss it summarily on the ground that if it was entertained, it would tend to bring hundreds of similar complaints and would also stir up old religious feelings, Ratanlal 562. Nor can he dismiss a complaint which he believes to be false by methods not warranted by law but should follow the procedure prescribed by the Code. He is bound to examine the complainant and record a finding that he does not believe the evidence and then only he can dismiss the complaint under this section, 30 Cr. L.J. 2=112 Ind. Cas. 770. See also 27 C. 921 at 924. A dismissal under this section does not amount to an acquittal for the purposes of S. 403, infra. See explanation to S. 403, infra. If a complaint pending before a Magistrate is sent to the District Magistrate with a view to its transfer to some other Court the District Magistrate is seized of the case and has jurisdiction to dismiss the complaint under this section if after examining the record he is of opinion that the complaint was wholly unfounded, 25 Cr. L.J. 355=81 Ind. Cas. 43. A criminal case does not abate on the death of the complainant and therefore a Magistrate cannot dismiss it on that ground, 16 Cr. L.J. 713=30 Ind. Cas. 1001. Where a complaint is dismissed under this section, no award of compensation under S. 250, infra, is allowed as there was no discharge or acquittal, 4 Cr. L.J. 36. This section has no application to a proceeding before a village Magistrate as the provisions of the Code do not apply to proceedings before a village headman except in a very few specific instances. So the dismissal of a complaint by a village headman is not, so far as the Code lays down, any bar to a Sub-Magistrate proceeding with the case on a complaint preferred to him after the dismissal of a previous one for default of appearance by the village Magistrate, 53 M.L.J. 102=28 Cr. L.J. 507=101 Ind. Cas. 891. This section has no application to a case made over for trial and disposal by the District Magistrate to a subordinate Magistrate. The latter Magistrate cannot hold a preliminary inquiry under S. 202 supra or dismiss the complaint under this section and he cannot take action under S. 476, infra, holding that the complaint to be false after dismissing the same, 18 C.W.N. 93=15 Cr. L.J. 70=22 Ind. Cas. 422.

Considering the result of the investigation or inquiry if any under section 202.—The use of the word "any" clearly implies that an investigation or inquiry under S. 202 may or may not be made and it cannot be said, the change in the language of the section by the amendment makes it obligatory on the Court to make an investigation or inquiry. The change is merely verbal and is not a change in substance. This section is not in any way dependent upon the provisions of S. 202, supra, and an investigation or inquiry under the latter section is not a condition precedent to the dismissal of a complaint under this section, 26 Cr. L.J. 921=36 Ind. Cas. 935. A dismissal of a complaint solely on the ground that the Magistrate agrees with the police report is illegal unless such report is made a part of the order, 21 M.L.J. 432=7 M.L.T. 173=11 Cr. L.J. 331=5 Ind. Cas. 928. The inquiry or investigation is for the purpose of ascertaining the truth or falsehood of the complaint. Any report submitted under S. 202 shall form part of the record and is to be considered by the Magistrate before dismissing the complaint, 14 C. 151; 33 C. 1; 13 B. 590 (F.B.).

There is no sufficient ground for proceeding.—The expression "sufficient ground" points conclusively to the fact which the complainant brings to the knowledge of the Magistrate and to his establishing a prima facie trustworthy case against the accused. A Magistrate in dismissing a complaint should not be influenced by considerations altogether apart from the facts which are adduced by the complainant in support of the charge and should not proceed exclusively on what he presumed from the surrounding circumstances to be the motive by which the complainant was actuated in moving the matter. In so doing he failed to exercise the discretionary power of summary dismissal under this section. The motives by which complainants are actuated must necessarily be of the most varied description; any attempt to determine them would open but a wide and speculative field of inquiry. The object of the Code is to provide a machinery for the punishment of offences against the substantive criminal law. Had it been intended that the Magistrate should only proceed to inquire into an alleged offence when the complainant's motives were such as he could approve of, very different language would have been used, 13 B. 590 (F.B.) at 595. In dismissing a complaint under this section a Magistrate has to exercise a discretion based on judicial considerations. That the probable result of proceeding is undesirable or the conduct and motives of complainant are discreditable is irrelevant, 38 M. 512. Where the question relates to the civil rights of parties the complaint may be dismissed, 17 Cr. L.J. 403=35 Ind. Cas. 968. A Magistrate cannot dismiss a complaint on the ground that the complainant had suffered no personal injury and is only a mere tool of another, 13 B. 670. A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to dismiss a complaint under S. 202, I.P.C., on the ground that the case was one in which no jury would convict the person complained against, 23 C.W.N. 372. A Magistrate may dismiss a complaint if after perusing the record he is of opinion that no case of a criminal character is made out against the accused, 6 B.L.R. (Ap. Cr.) 16. Process cannot be refused on the ground that a civil suit may afford a more convenient and appropriate remedy, 9 M.L.T. 332; 17 Cr. L.J. 406=35 Ind. Cas. 906=10 W.R. (Cr.) 40; 8 W.R. (Cr.) 65. Where the Criminal Court entertains a complaint which is purely of a civil nature it undoubtedly countenances the scandalous abuse of its own process, it enormously and unnecessarily increases its own work, it encroaches upon the province of the Civil Court, it deprives the Government of a great deal of its legitimate revenue and last but not least, it deprives itself of its primary function as the vindicator of outraged justice and becomes merely a tool in the hands of the unscrupulous, 2 M.L.T. 10-11 (Jour.); 5 Cr. L.J. 84 (Jour.).

Shall record briefly his reasons.—The provisions of the Code as to procedure ought to be strictly complied with; non-observance of the provisions of the Code leads to much confusion and waste of public time not to speak of involving the parties in unnecessary expense, 37 A. 623. The Magistrate is to record his reasons in writing, 21 C.W.N. 127; 27 C. 921; 15 A.L.J. 642; 40 C. 41; 25 Cr. L.J. 1502=90 Ind. Cas. 159; 16 C.W.N. 885=13 Cr. L.J. 433=15 Ind. Cas. 494; 13 Cr. L.J. 432=15 Ind. Cas. 492. Unless the Magistrate records his reasons for dismissing the complaint under this section it will be impossible for the High Court as a Court of revision to consider under S. 436, infra, whether the discretion vested in the Magistrate under this section had been properly exercised, 14 C. 141 at 145, but a failure to record reasons is at the most an irregularity and will not be interfered with in revision unless a failure of justice has in fact occasioned thereby, 25 M. 546, Weir II, 244, but where a Magistrate dismissed a complaint on account of the delay in filing the complaint and also on the ground that the charge was made from improper motives, held, there were no sufficient grounds for dismissal in the absence of a finding that the complaint was false or unsustainable, 38 M. 512. The Full Bench decision in 29 M. 126 after an elaborate review of all the authorities has held that a Magistrate who had dismissed a complaint under this section is competent without any order of further inquiry by a superior Court to rehear the complaint. The dismissal of a complaint is no bar to the Magistrate re-entertaining a second complaint on the same facts, 21 Cr. L.J. 815=68 Ind. Cas. 68; 21 Cr. L.J. 379=53 Ind. Cas. 839; 21 Cr. L.J. 660=57 Ind. Cas. 820; 18 Cr. L.J. 296=38 Ind. Cas. 329, but a different Magistrate is not entitled to reopen the matter on the presentation of a second complaint to him on the same facts 28 Cr. L.J. 836=102 Ind. Cas. 344 where 22 A. 103; 36 A. 129 are followed. See also 29 Cr. L.J. 1097=112 Ind. Cas. 681, which took the same view following 22 A. 103; 29 A. 7; 36 A. 129; 23 C. 983; 23 Cr. L.J. 737=69 Ind. Cas. 625; 25 Cr. L.J. 57=99 Ind. Cas. 89. It is utterly contrary to sound principles that one Magistrate of co-ordinate jurisdiction should in effect and substance deal with as if it were an appeal or a matter for revision, a complaint which had been already dismissed by a competent tribunal of co-ordinate authority, 29 Cr. L.J. 1097=112 Ind. Cas. 681. See also in this connection 16 Cr. L.J. 814=31 Ind. Cas. 830; 36 A. 53 and 129; 22 A. 106; 27 Cr. L.J. 383=92 Ind. Cas. 895; 28 C. 652 (F.B.); 29 C. 725 (F.B.); 35 A. 78; (but see 23 C. 983; 24 C. 286 and 528; 4 C.W.N. 46 and 28; 24 M. 337, 23 M. 235; 36 A. 129; 26 Cr. L.J. 991=87 Ind. Cas. 527, 16 Cr. L.J. 174=27 Ind. Cas. 558; 35 A. 78; 29 A. 7; 9 A. 85; 5 A.L.J. 137; 3 A.L.J. 562=16 Cr. L.J. 814; 1911 P.R. (Cr. J.) 10 (F.B.); 9 Bom. L.R. 250; 1 B. 64; 3 Pat. L.J. 346, 28 Cr. L.J. 975=102 Ind. Cas. 511, 13 Cr. L.J. 688=25 Ind. Cas. 838; 22 A. 106, 21 A.L.J. 215. Unless there are special reasons a Magistrate will not be acting properly if he entertains a second complaint. There is nothing illegal or ultra vires of a Magistrate reviving a complaint which he himself had dismissed under this section even though the District Magistrate had declined to order further inquiry at the request of the complainant, 35 C. 415. Though no doubt there is no absolute bar to an accused person being put in peril of a fresh trial in respect of the same offence in a case where the first trial has ended in an order of discharge, it is a well-recognized and salutary rule of law, that a Magistrate of co-ordinate jurisdiction should not entertain a fresh complaint in respect of the same offence when it is based on facts which were known to the complainant and on evidence which was available when the first trial was held. A departure from this rule is in effect an assumption by the Magistrate of the powers of the appellate Court and is utterly contrary to sound principles, 30 Cr. L.J. 444=115 Ind. Cas. 309; 29 Cr. L.J. 1097=112 Ind. Cas. 681.

Further inquiry.—S. 436, infra, empowers a further inquiry. That section does not empower a trial which is distinct from an inquiry as defined in S. 4 (1) (k), supra. Further inquiry under S. 436, infra, has been held to mean an inquiry of the same nature as was previously held under S. 202, supra, and cannot include a further inquiry after summoning the accused, 29 Cr. L.J. 372=108 Ind. Cas. 328, following 30 C.W.N. 312=26 Cr. L.J. 305=84 Ind. Cas. 449 and 104 Ind. Cas. 633. When further inquiry is ordered after setting aside the order of dismissal under this section, the Subordinate Magistrate who is to hold the further inquiry cannot immediately summon the accused stating that the District Magistrate had set aside the order of dismissal and directed a further inquiry, 29 Cr. L.J. 572=109 Ind. Cas. 503, but see 29 Cr. L.J. 1059=112 Ind. Cas. 563, where it was held that issue of notice to the accused straightway without taking further evidence is a procedure which is not illegal but very undesirable and the Code evidently intends that further inquiry should be made in order to see whether a notice should not issue i.e. it is still an inquiry under this Chapter, see also 49 C.L.J. 422 at 423-25. When a complaint is dismissed under this section for failure of the complainant to appear and to give a sworn statement, the complainant cannot be heard to complain and ask for a further inquiry and no order for further inquiry should be made in such a case, 38 C.L.J. 90=29 Cr. L.J. 798=111 Ind. Cas. 126. When a complaint is dismissed under this section no notice to accused is necessary before ordering a further inquiry, 47 A. 722; 27 Cr. L.J. 302=92 Ind. Cas. 590; 40 A. 138; 49 M. 918 (F.B.) where 47 A. 722 is followed; 35 A. 78; but when a complaint is dismissed under this section after giving the accused an opportunity of being heard an order for further inquiry should not be made, without giving notice to the accused, 27 C.W.N. 552=23 Cr. L.J. 150=76 Ind. Cas. 236. This is of doubtful authority as there is no provision of law under which a notice can be given to accused before process is issued against him. When further inquiry is ordered into a complaint which had been dismissed under this section, the Magistrate had no option but to summon the accused and cannot again dismiss the complaint under this section, 11 C. W.N. 316.

Revision.—The High Court will refuse to interfere in revision if after making proper inquiry and after satisfying himself the Magistrate finds the dispute is purely of a civil nature and dismisses the complaint, 11 W.R. (Cr.) 54; 9 W.R. (Cr.) 21. But when the discretion is exercised by the Magistrate improperly by dismissing the complaint holding the case was completely for the Civil Court without assigning satisfactory reasons, the High Court will interfere in such a case, 20 W.R. (Cr.) 60.

CHAPTER XVII.

OF THE COMMENCEMENT OF PROCEEDINGS BEFORE MAGISTRATES.

This Chapter is headed 'Commencement of Proceedings before Magistrates'. S. 203, supra, applies only to cases falling under the provisions of Chapter XVI, supra, where there has been no issue of process to the accused person; where an accused person is summoned to appear and answer a charge by a Magistrate, then there is a Commencement of proceedings before the Magistrate within this meaning of the Chapter and once the proceedings are commenced the complaint cannot be dealt with under S. 203, supra, Ratanlal 544. Process cannot be issued against an accused person without first examining the complainant on oath, Weir II, 244.

204. (1) If in the opinion of a Magistrate taking cognizance of an offence there is sufficient ground for proceeding, and the case appears to be one in which, according to the fourth column of the second schedule, a summons should issue in the first instance, he shall issue his summons for the attendance of the accused. If the case appears to be one in which, according to that column a warrant should issue in the first instance, he may issue a warrant, or, if he thinks fit, a summons, for causing the accused to be brought or to appear at a certain time before such Magistrate or (if he has not jurisdiction himself) some other Magistrate having jurisdiction.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect the provisions of section 90. .

(3) When by any law for the time being in force any process-fees or other fees are payable, no process shall be issued until the fees are paid, and, if such fees are not paid within a reasonable time, the Magistrate may dismiss the complaint.

In the opinion of the Magistrate.—The opinion of the Magistrate referred to in this section is his own independent opinion; where an inquiry by the police is held and the result reported to the Magistrate the opinion of the Police Inspector expressed in the report will not warrant the complaint being dealt with otherwise than it would have been if there had been no such report, 4 M.H.C.R. 162. The Magistrate is given a wide discretion to issue process and the section speaks of his opinion. It is not open to a party to contend that the Magistrate exercised jurisdiction vested in him under this section wrongfully, or issued a process on insufficient complaint. If the Magistrate had jurisdiction to issue process the trial would be perfectly regular even if the Magistrate exercised that jurisdiction on insufficient grounds, 16 C.W.N. 1105. A Magistrate has jurisdiction to rescind an order as to the issue of summons under this section and direct a Subordinate Magistrate to hold an inquiry and report under S. 202, supra. An order under this section is not a judgment to which the provisions of S. 369, infra, will be applicable and the Code does not forbid the Magistrate reconsidering his order on sufficient grounds, 39 C.L.J. 329=27 C.W.N. 651=25 Gr. L.J. 464=77 Ind. Cas. 816.

There is sufficient ground for proceeding.—A Magistrate has full power on receipt of a complaint to issue a summons to the accused if he believes the truth of the complaint. If there are good grounds for proceeding, he may issue process at once without making any inquiry beforehand, 21 Cr. L.J. 220=54 Ind. Cas. 1004. The only condition requisite for issue of process is that the complaint and the sworn statement must show sufficient ground for proceeding, 1864 W.R. (Cr.) 33. See also 18 Cr. L.J. 626=39 Ind. Cas. 994. There is nothing illegal in a Magistrate first issuing process for one of the accused named in the complaint and then changing his mind and issuing process for all the accused without taking further evidence before issuing the second process for all the accused, 29 Cr. L.J. 293=107 Ind. Cas. 778. Where the police after investigation made a report to the Magistrate to the effect that the complaint was true and the Magistrate thereupon directed the case to be entered as such, he cannot subsequently decline to enter into a judicial inquiry merely because in his opinion there was no chance of a conviction and no useful purpose would be served by an inquiry, held that the complainant was entitled to be examined under S. 200 supra and to have process issued against the accused and for the attendance of his witnesses, 29 C. 410, 1904 A.W. N. 5; 21 A. 265. In a case in which a prosecution is started by a person in the position of a Government Pleader who has no personal knowledge of the facts, who makes statements on information furnished to him, and who does not disclose the source of his information, it is reasonable that the Court before issuing process should satisfy itself upon proper materials that a case has been made out for issuing process to the accused, 10 C.W.N. 1090. The fact that the complainant did not specifically and in terms accuse any one of an offence under the Penal Code does not affect the question; if the fact as stated in the complaint constituted an offence under the Penal Code, then the Magistrate has jurisdiction to proceed with the case, 25 C. 785. Process should ordinarily issue against all the persons accused and the practice of Magistrates issuing process to some of the accused only when no discrimination is made by the complainant is unwarranted, 4 C.W.N. 560.

May issue a warrant, or, if he thinks fit, a summons.—As to issue of summons the word 'shall' is used in this section. A summons becomes unnecessary when the accused appears of his own accord to answer the charge and insists the charge against him be proceeded with or dismissed, 26 B. 532; 1919 P.R. (Cr. J.) 5. It is not imperative on a Magistrate to issue a warrant in every case shown in the column that a warrant shall issue in the first instance. A wide discretion is given to the Magistrate to substitute a summons for a warrant and he may even for sufficient cause shown recall a warrant already issued and issue a summons instead, 8 Cr. L.J. 187, 14 Cr. L.J. 604—21 Ind. Cas. 476. He may even issue a bailable warrant in a non-bailable case [1911] 2 M.W.N. 452=12 Cr. L.J. 430—11 Ind. Cas. 614. The Magistrate may also dispense with the attendance of the accused under S. 205 infra, whenever he issues a summons though the case is a warrant case, 21 C. 588. A mere notice to the person complained against that a preliminary inquiry will be held in the matter of the complaint does not amount to a summons. Such a notice is neither contemplated by the Code nor is it one of the forms in Sch. V of the Code, 37 M. 181 followed in 49 M. 218 (F.B.)

If he has not Jurisdiction.—These words were introduced for the first time in the Code of 1898. Though the Court is not bound by the complaint and sworn statement recorded in framing the charge or determining jurisdiction but may look into the evidence, it cannot go outside the record and when evidence has yet to be taken it must decide the question of jurisdiction prima facie pending further materials being regularly placed before it on the basis of the complaint and sworn statement, 1908 A.W.N. 115=5 A.L.J. 333=7 Cr. L.J. 394.

Sub-section (3).—This was introduced in the Code of 1898; the Court Fees Act VII of 1870 and the rules made thereunder make provision for the payment of Court fees and process-fees in criminal cases. Under S. 20 of the Court Fees Act, the High Court is to make rules as to the fees chargeable for serving and executing processes issued by all the Courts under its jurisdiction including Criminal Courts, 3 Luck. 563 at 354. No process shall be issued until the prescribed fee is paid and if not paid within a reasonable time the Magistrate may dismiss the complaint. A complainant by omitting to take out a summons cannot keep a case hanging over a man for an indefinite time. The summons is merely a means of procuring attendance, and if the accused appears of his own accord without a summons, he is entitled to require that the complaint shall either be proceeded with, or dismissed. The Magistrate must take care that proceedings are conducted with reasonable expedition as will prevent the parties from being improperly harassed by undue delay, 26 B. 532 at 537. When a complaint is dismissed for failure to comply with this sub-section, a further inquiry may be ordered under S. 436, infra, by the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate. In non-cognizable warrant cases neither complainant nor the accused can be compelled to pay process fees for the summoning of witnesses although the complainant must under this section ordinarily pay process fee for summoning the accused, 27 Cr. L.J. 315=93 Ind. Cas. 79. S. 20 of the Court Fees Act has reference only to fees for processes issued in the case of "offences" and since an order for payment of maintenance under S. 436 infra is not a conviction for an offence, the application cannot be dismissed under this sub-section for failure to comply with an order for payment of process-fees, 16 M. 235.

Or other fee payable.—The payment in respect of diet money and travelling expenses of witnesses fall under the head of 'other fees payable' and the Court has perfect right in a private prosecution to insist upon these fees being paid in advance before processes are issued. S. 514 infra provides for the Local Government to make rules which would permit in certain cases this liability to be transferred to the Crown, 3 Luck. 363 at 365.

Revision.—When neither the complaint nor the evidence for the prosecution disclosed a case against the accused but process had been issued under this section, the High Court can quash the proceedings against the accused, 25 C. 736; 22 C. 131; 23 C. 233; 33 C. 68; 39 M. 561, 20 B. 543, 1899 A.W.N. 212.

Magistrate may dispense with personal attendance of accused.

205. (1) Whenever a Magistrate issues a summons, he may, if he sees reason so to do, dispense with the personal attendance of the accused, and permit him to appear by his pleader.

(2) But the Magistrate inquiring into or trying the case may, in his discretion, at any stage of the proceedings, direct the personal attendance of the accused, and, if necessary, enforce such attendance in manner hereinbefore provided.

Scope of the section.—The provisions of this section should be freely utilised when so much prejudice exists against the appearance of females in public and especially when the law is set in motion to gratify private spite. The mere impression of a Magistrate that certain female accused are not pardanashin is not sufficient reason for refusing to allow them the benefit of this section, 11 Cr. L.J. 197=4 Ind. Cas. 1152. A Court should abstain from compelling a pardanashin woman's appearance in Court unless and until the case against her has reached the stage at which her personal attendance is clearly and legally required in the interests of justice and it is the duty of the Court to see that the machinery of the law is not utilised as a means of satisfying petty spite, 9 Cr. L.J. 153=1 Ind. Cas. 101. This section applies to all cases in which a Magistrate may issue a summons. Although a case may be one in which a warrant may be issued in the first instance, it is not necessary for him to do so. He may under S. 75 (4) supra cancel a warrant issued and substitute a summons. Thus the section applies to all case where the Magistrate in his discretion thinks fit to issue a summons instead of a warrant or cancels a warrant and substitutes in its place a summons, 6 A. 59; 21 C. 588. It does not apply to a case where the accused has been arrested without or after the issue of a warrant, 2 Pat. 793. There is no provision in the Code to proceed against an accused person ex parte. It is only with special permission of the Magistrate that the personal attendance can be dispensed with in cases where the Magistrate issues a summons in the first instance. The power of substituting a summons for a warrant is not to pardanashin ladies only. It should be exercised in the case of all female accused, 14 Cr. L.J. 604=21 Ind. Cas. 476. S. 366 (3) infra provides for the pronouncing of judgment in cases like these in the presence of the pleader where in the case of conviction the sentence is one of fine only. See the new section S. 540A which permits trials being held in the absence of the accused in certain cases.

Issues a summons.—A Magistrate may issue a summons even in a case where a warrant is to be issued. See S. 201 supra. This sub-section applies only to cases in which the Magistrate has issued a summons in the first instance and it does not apply to a case where the accused has been arrested without or after the issue of a warrant. After the accused is produced in Court the whole trial had to take place in his presence and if the accused absconded after charge, the trial cannot be concluded and the conviction had in his absence, 18 Cr. L.J. 975=42 Ind. Cas. 335. If a warrant is issued then he is not entitled to dispense with personal attendance of the accused and permit him to appear by pleader except on the ground of illness. See 2 Pat. 793.

If he sees reason to do so.—The power conferred on a Magistrate to dispense with the personal attendance of the accused is discretionary and in a case where he has in the exercise of that discretion permitted a person to appear by a pleader, the concession so granted ought not to be revoked and a warrant issued to the accused to enforce his attendance, 38 C. L.J. 9=24 Cr. L.J. 902=75 Ind. Cas. 150. The Magistrate is to exercise his discretion in the matter of dispensing with the personal attendance of the accused. The Magistrate place upon record his reasons for refusing an application for permission to appear in Court by a pleader, more particularly when the application is made by a pardanashin lady accused of an offence, 6 A. 59; 21 C. 583; 43 M. 359; 14 Cr. L.J. 272=19 Ind. Cas. 514; 17 C.W.N. 1249=15 Cr. L.J. 291=23 Ind. Cas. 439. But pardanashin ladies are not as of right exempted from personal attendance in Court, when they happen to be complainants, 5 A. 92, and the High Court has the power to set aside an order requiring personal attendance, 5 C.W.N. 119, where a Magistrate refuses to excuse personal attendance of a lady admitted to be a pardah lady on the ground that other ladies of the same class had appeared in Court of their free will, the High Court will interfere with such an order in revision, 28 Cr. L.J. 94 (1)=99 Ind. Cas. 126 (1).

Permit him to appear by pleader.—See S. 340 infra as to the right of accused persons to be defended by pleader. The words 'appear by pleader' are nowhere defined. In ordinary acceptance these words mean 'represented by pleader' that is to say, having a pleader to act and plead. In this section the word 'appear' seems to convey a double meaning seemingly connoting not merely authority to act and plead but also authority to personate the accused but there is nothing to show that the double meaning was intended by the Legislature. It is necessary that some one should be present at the trial to look after the interests of the accused and all that this section provides is that, where the Magistrate sees fit, a person against whom a summons has been issued may be exempted from personal attendance, provided he engages a pleader to attend and see that the proceedings are properly and legally conducted. The law considers that the interests of the accused will be completely safeguarded if his pleader is in attendance. That is all that can be gathered from the provisions of this section. A similar intention is to be gathered from the provisions of S. 361 infra, also 35 C.L.J. 358 at 376=29 Cr. L.J. 49=106 Ind. Cas. 545; when an order under this section has been made dispensing with the personal attendance of the accused and permitting him to appear by pleader, the imperative provisions of S. 342, infra, are complied with when the pleader for the accused is examined on behalf of his client. The section allows the accused to appear by pleader and such appearance involves the performance of all acts which devolve upon the accused in the course of the trial such as answering the examination of the Court under S. 342 infra. When the personal attendance is dispensed with and the accused permitted to appear by pleader there should be no objection to allowing the accused to leave to the pleader to make a statement, if any, on their behalf, under S. 342 infra and such a course would not in any way prejudice the accused and the Magistrate would be acting improperly when he compelled the attendance of the accused for the purpose of examination, 28 Cr. L.J. 226=99 Ind. Cas. 1026. The terms of S. 366(2) infra support this view for it contemplates the absence of the accused up to the stage of judgment and even after that stage when the judgment is one of acquittal or is one of fine. Again the form of summons in Sch. V Form I implies also that the pleader who appears to represent the accused for the purpose of answering the charge and this would include answering questions put by the Magistrate on the case made out by the prosecution or pleading or refusing to plead to a charge under S. 255 infra, 46 C.L.J. 353=29 Cr. L.J. 43=106 Ind. Cas. 545. The discretion under this section is one that should be liberally exercised, 15 Cr. L.J. 272=19 Ind. Cas. 545 following 11 Cr. L.J. 197=4 Ind. Cas. 1152.

May dispense with personal attendance.—In a case where a Magistrate dispenses with the personal attendance of an accused and permits him to appear by a pleader under this section, the Magistrate should note on the record that such permission has been granted and not leave it to mere implication, 53 B. 233, and there should also be on record a clear indication that the person who represents the accused was duly appointed by him. See S. 353, infra, in this connection. The Magistrate cannot dispense with the personal attendance of the complainant but only of accused persons, 5 A. 92. An accused person to whom a summons was issued failed to appear personally but appeared through his mukhtar who requested the Court to dispense with the personal attendance of his client. The Magistrate instituted contempt proceedings against the accused under S. 174, I.P.C., held by the High Court that in case the Magistrate considered personal attendance necessary, he would have fixed a day and informed the mukhtar that if his client did not appear, a warrant should be issued, 27 C. 983, but if no special permission to appear by pleader is given, the presence of the pleader cannot be taken as presence of the accused and the case cannot be proceeded with, 25 W.R. (Cr.) 25 and reasons for refusing leave to appear by pleader, should be given, 5 A. 59 and a Magistrate acts unreasonably in enforcing personal attendance of an invalid accused, 6 C.W.N. 11x. In cases where personal attendance is dispensed with, the Magistrate may take a recognizance bond from the accused to appear either personally or by agent when called upon, 5 B.H.C.R. (Cr. Ca.) 64.

Sub-section (2).—S. 306 (2) infra permits the absence of the accused up to the stage of delivering judgment and even after that stage when the judgment is one of acquittal or one imposing a sentence of fine. This sub section gives power to the Magistrate at any stage to insist on the personal attendance of the accused and if necessary to enforce the attendance of the accused.

CHAPTER XVIII.

OF INQUIRY INTO CASES TRIABLE BY THE COURT OF SESSION OR HIGH COURT.

Object of Preliminary Inquiry.—The object of the law in providing the inquiry shall be held by the Magistrate before the accused has to undergo a trial in the Court of Session seems to be to prevent the commitment of cases in which there is no reasonable ground for conviction. The provision of law is calculated on the one hand, to save the subjects from prolonged anxiety of undergoing trials for offences not brought home to them; and on the other hand, to save the time of the Court of Session from being wasted over cases in which the charge is obviously not supported by such evidence as would justify a conviction, 5 A 161 at 162. A Court of Session cannot take cognizance of any offence unless the accused has been committed to it by a Magistrate. The object of the restriction was presumably to secure, in the case of a person charged with a grave offence, a preliminary inquiry which would afford him an opportunity of becoming acquainted with the circumstances of the offence imputed to him and to enable him to make his defence, 3 M. 351 at 353; 10 B.L.R. 285 at 289. The object of the preliminary inquiry is (1) to prevent charges being tried by Sessions Courts without a prima facie case and (2) to give to the accused full notice of the charge he has to meet. The Magistrate must not lightly take upon himself the duties of the Sessions Court on the one hand but he must not subject the accused to the anxiety and expense of a trial on the other, without giving him an opportunity so long as any reasonable probability exists showing that he should not be tried, 13 Cr. L.J. 877 at 884=17 Ind. Cas. 813.

206. (1) Any Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class, or any Magistrate (not being a Magistrate of the third class) empowered in this behalf by the Local Government, may commit any person for trial to the Court of Session or High Court for any offence triable by such Court.

(2) But, save as herein otherwise provided, no person triable by the Court of Session shall be committed for trial to the High Court.

Amendment.—The words ‘not being a Magistrate of the third class’ have been newly added depriving third class Magistrates of the power to commit.

May commit—By the new amendment third-class Magistrates are incompetent to commit. In Madras, previously all third class Magistrates were empowered to commit. A Magistrate is not bound to commit in every case. A Magistrate who has been invested with power to commit under this section has authority to carry into effect any of the provisions of Chapter XVIII of the Code which relates to cases triable exclusively by the Court of Session and to cases which in the opinion of the Magistrate ought to be tried by such Court and therefore the Magistrate could legally pass an order of discharge, 6 A. 477 at 479. For purposes of commitment, a Subordinate Magistrate, if duly empowered, has equal powers with the District Magistrate who cannot give instruction to the Subordinate Magistrates regarding judicial proceedings, such as commencement of preliminary inquiry or the desirability of committing the accused. The only course open to the District Magistrate, if he wishes to interfere is first to withdraw the case to his own file and deal with it according to law, 8 W.R. (Cr.) 61. If the case is one which a Magistrate is both competent to try and adequately punish he has no discretion to commit the accused to the Court of Session, 13 Cr. L.J. 664=25 Ind. Cas. 923. Although a Magistrate has large powers of discharging the accused he should only exercise it when he is clearly of opinion that the evidence for the prosecution is unworthy of credit. If it is a matter of weighing probabilities, he should be well advised in leaving the case to the Court of Session which alone is empowered to try it, and should not discharge the accused because in his opinion he ought to have the benefit of doubt, 26 A. 534 at 570; 13 A.L.J. 111; 30 Bom. L.R. 639 at 641; 1 Ran. 526; 33 M.L.T. 135=28 Cr. L.J. 120 (1)=99 Ind. Cas. 321 (1); 30 Cr. L.J. 234=114 Ind. Cas. 88; 35 B. 163; 4 Lah. 69; 31 C. 849; 43 M. 874. See also notes under S. 209, infra, at pp. 398-401. In committing cases not exclusively triable by the Court of Session the Magistrates shall exercise a proper discretion and give adequate reasons for their action. When a Magistrate of the first class committed a case of theft to the Court of Session on the ground that the case was connected with another case which he felt bound to commit, the High Court of Bombay set aside the order of commitment as no valid reason was given for departing from the ordinary procedure prescribed by the Code, 15 Bom. L.R. 998=2 Cr. L. Rev. 387. See 1905 A.W.N. 23, where the order of a Magistrate committing a case of criminal trespass under S. 447, I.P.C., was set aside as unsustainable in law. See S. 215, infra, for power to set aside illegal commitments by the High Court. See also 21 A.L.J. 420=25 Cr. L.J. 663=81 Ind. Cas. 153, where it was held that a petty case ought not to be committed to the Court of Session.

Magistrate empowered in this behalf.—Where a commitment is made without jurisdiction, it is void, 11 C.L.R. 53, but when the Magistrate acts with jurisdiction the commitment, e.g. to a wrong Sessions Court, could be set aside only on a point of law by the High Court under S. 215, infra, 35 M. 387. See S. 532, infra, which makes provision for validating irregular commitments made by Magistrates not duly invested with power to commit.

Or to the High Court.—Presidency Magistrates commit direct to the High Court which exercises its original criminal jurisdiction in cases committed to it; when a moffussil Magistrate committed to the High Court, such commitment is not void, because the local Sessions Court has jurisdiction, 42 M. 791. An inquisition drawn up by a Coroner, under Act IV of 1872 has the effect of a valid commitment to the High Court in Calcutta and Bombay, when the High Court has accepted the commitment, 31 C. 1, but the jurisdiction of a Presidency Magistrate is not ousted by the inquisition drawn up by the Coroner, 16 B. 159. The Coroners Act does not apply to Madras.

For any offence triable by such Court.—"Triable" and not "exclusively triable." A Sessions Court can try any offence under the Penal Code, see S. 28, supra, and there is nothing in law prohibiting a Magistrate committing a summons case to the Court of Session. But there are sections like 245 and 254, infra, which limit the Magistrate's power of commitment. See also 42 M. 63, where commitment to a Court of Session of a case which could adequately be punished by the Magistrate was held good, but see the observations in 15 Bom. L.R. 993=2 Cr. L. Rev. 387, as to the committal of cases which Magistrates can try and decide to the already overworked Courts of Session. A case properly triable by a Magistrate cannot be committed to the Court of Session merely because the witnesses for the defence are not in attendance nor for the reason that the Magistrate is going on leave, and it would be inconvenient for his successor to hold a de novo inquiry.

207. The following procedure shall be adopted in inquiries before Magistrates where the case is triable exclusively by a Court of Session or High Court, or, in the opinion of the Magistrate, ought to be tried by such Court.

Procedure in inquiries preparatory to commitment.

In a case in which a Magistrate is competent to try and adequately punish, no discretion is allowed to him under this section to commit to the Court of Session 15 Cr. L.J. 664=25 Ind. Cas. 892.

The Code seems to have been carefully framed with a view to provide that no one shall be committed for trial without his having previously had a fair opportunity of meeting the charge upon which he is to be committed, 10 B.L.R. 285 at 299. The object of the law in providing that the inquiry shall be held by the Magistrate before the accused has to undergo a trial in the Court of Session seems to be to prevent the commitment of cases in which there is no reasonable ground for conviction, 5 A. 161 at 162. The words "ought to be tried" occurring in this and S. 317, infra, must be read with S. 254, infra, and a case which ought to be tried by a Court of Session is one which a Magistrate is not competent to try or is one in which in his opinion an adequate punishment cannot be inflicted by him, 24 C. 429; 4 Bom. L.R. 85; Ratanlal 110. See also 16 B. 590; 11 A.L.J. 439=14 Cr. L.J. 304=19 Ind. Cas. 960. They do not restrict the ground on which a Magistrate should arrive at his opinion as to the want of jurisdiction in himself or to his inability to sentence the accused adequately. If, for instance the Magistrate considers that a complicated question of law arises, or that some connected matter is already before the Sessions Court, or that a trial with a jury or with assessors who may be chosen from experts would be more satisfactory, there is nothing preventing him from committing the case to the Court of Session, 42 M. 83 following 1 M. 289 (F.B.) and 3 C. 495. A commitment so made cannot be quashed by the High Court on the mere ground that the punishment which the Magistrate could have awarded would have been sufficient, 11 A.L.J. 439=14 Cr. L.J. 304=19 Ind. Cas. 960. Where a case is not exclusively triable by the Court of Session but the Magistrate is of opinion that the case ought to be tried by the Court of Session, then he must give reasons for his entertaining that opinion as the order of commitment is a judicial order, 29 Cr. L.J. 612=109 Ind. Cas. 804 following 11 Bom. L.R. 18=9 Cr. L.J. 163=1 Ind. Cas. 104 and 24 C. 429; 1 C.W.N. 414. If from the very beginning the Magistrate is convinced that the case in his opinion ought to be tried by the Court of Session he should forthwith follow the procedure laid down in this Chapter, but if in the course of the proceedings, he is so convinced, he should stay proceedings and then adopt the procedure laid down in this Chapter. The provisions of S. 317, infra, do not override the express provisions of this Chapter, 13 Cr. L.J. 877 at 882=17 Ind. Cas. 813. If a Magistrate decides under this section that the case is one which ought to be tried by a Court of Session then he must adopt the procedure laid down in the chapter and not the procedure prescribed by Chapter XXI and this discretion cannot be limited by the provisions of S. 254, infra, 3 Ran. 42.

208. (1) The Magistrate shall, when the accused appears or is brought before him, proceed to hear the complainant (if any), and take in manner hereinafter provided all such evidence as may be produced in support of the prosecution or in behalf of the accused, or as may be called for by the Magistrate.

Taking of evidence produced.

(2) The accused shall be at liberty to cross-examine the witnesses for the prosecution, and in such case the prosecutor may re-examine them.

(3) If the complainant or officer conducting the prosecution, or the accused, applies to the Magistrate to issue process to compel the attendance of any witness or the production of any document or thing, the Magistrate shall issue such process unless, for reasons to be recorded, he deems it unnecessary to do so.

(4) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to require a Presidency Magistrate to record his reasons.

Scope and object of the section.—Sub-section (1) and sub-section (3) of this section are framed in different terms. By sub-section (1) all defence witnesses that may be produced on behalf of the accused must be examined but where it is necessary to issue process to procure the attendance of such witnesses a discretion is conferred by sub-section (3) on the Magistrate to refuse such an application if he sees fit to do so, recording reasons in writing for his refusal, 31 Bom. L.R. 523. The object of this section is to have the whole of the procurable evidence placed at the trial before the Court of Session and not merely a part of it. For this end a Magistrate is required to make a full and careful inquiry and record all the available evidence before he commits the case to the Court of Session. Sub-section (1) contemplates the production of the evidence by the prosecution or by the accused without the aid of the Magistrate while sub-section (3) contemplates the intervention of the Magistrate to secure the attendance of the witnesses and in regard to this evidence, the Magistrate has a discretion for reasons to be recorded by him to refuse to issue process if he deems it unnecessary to do so. When therefore S. 209, infra, requires the evidence referred to in these sub-sections to be recorded before a charge is drawn up, it does not require the Magistrate to record the evidence of witnesses whom in the exercise of the discretion given by sub-section (3) he has deemed it unnecessary to summon. This procedure appears to be convenient and reasonable whereas the procedure of allowing the accused to wait till the last moment and then require the Magistrate to summon witnesses will lead to undue delay in committing cases. The proceeding before the Magistrate is only an inquiry preliminary to the trial and, while the law in order to avoid unnecessary commitments, is careful to require the Magistrate to examine any witness produced before him by the accused and provides for the Magistrate also summoning and examining defence witnesses before drawing up a charge even gives the Magistrate a discretion under S. 212, infra, to examine defence witness after charge, then cancel the charge and discharge the accused under S. 213, infra. It does not compel the Magistrate to summon and examine defence witnesses after charge or even before charge, if for reasons recorded he deems it unnecessary to do so, 36 M. 321. See also in this connection, 49 M. 978.

When the accused appears or is brought before him.—The accused appears in obedience to a summons issued to him on the day fixed for the inquiry. He is brought before the Magistrate under arrest in pursuance of warrant issued against him. The accused, when his personal attendance is excused can appear by his pleader. See S. 205, supra. But under this section the accused must appear in person. A commitment cannot be made in the absence of the accused. Where a Magistrate recorded the evidence in the absence of the accused and committed the accused for trial to the Court of Session, it was held that his procedure was illegal, Weir II. 259.

Here the complaint is to be made and such evidence as may be produced.—It is laid down in this section that 'the Magistrate shall hear the complainant and take all such evidence as may be produced in support of the prosecution or on behalf of the accused.' This provision is mandatory and cannot be disregarded, 6 Ran. 531. Under S. 190 (1) (c), supra, a Magistrate may take cognizance on his own personal knowledge or suspicion without a formal complaint being made to the police, or to the Magistrate, or there may be a complaint of court in writing, or one by a public servant under Ss. 195, 476 and 476A, infra. In such cases there will be no complainant before the Court and to meet such a case the words "if any" are used in this section.

Take all the evidence produced by prosecution or by accused, etc.—This sub-section contemplates the production of evidence by the prosecution or by the accused without the aid of the Magistrate while sub-section (3) contemplates the intervention of the Magistrate to secure the attendance of the witnesses and in regard to this evidence the Magistrate has a discretion to refuse to issue process for reasons to be recorded by him in writing, 35 M. 321 at 323. It is the duty of the prosecution to bring before the Court as witnesses all persons who are alleged or are known to have knowledge of the facts constituting the offence charged, and the Court is bound to examine them, 10 C. 1070. But the prosecution is not bound to call persons whom they reasonably believe will not speak the truth, 8 C. 121. In every inquiry into a Sessions case the Magistrate is bound before he draws up a charge to take all such evidence as may be produced, (1) in support of the prosecution, (2) on behalf of the accused, (3) as may be called by the Magistrate. If he does not take the evidence, he errs, unless he can justify his procedure, on some such ground as that the evidence of such and such a witness produced is obviously irrelevant, or that because he considers the fact in issue between the parties proved in one or the other way by the evidence already produced, 10 A.L.J. 141 at 145. The section only requires that the Magistrate should hear all the evidence produced before him. The section does not require the summoning of further witnesses on an application made for that purpose on the date on which the commitment was made, 42 C. 608 where 20 A. 264 was followed and 26 A. 177 not followed. A Magistrate is not empowered to frame a charge or to commit until he has taken all such evidence as may be produced on behalf of the accused, 20 A. 264; 26 A. 177. The Magistrate must make his proceedings conform with the provisions of this Chapter and before he wrote and signed a committal order he must carry out the provisions of this chapter which specially provides procedure antecedent to a trial by the Sessions Court or the High Court, 6 Ran. 531 following 13 Cr. L.J. 877 (F.B.)=17 Ind. Cas. 813. A commitment made without examining any of the defence witnesses is bad, 1906 A.W.N. 306=4 Cr. L.J. 432. The provision is mandatory and cannot be disregarded. It is essential that the defence evidence, if tendered, is considered because the Magistrate has got the power to cancel the charge if he is satisfied that there are sufficient grounds for committing the accused under S. 218 (1), infra. The failure to do so is an illegality and not an irregularity, 6 Ran. 531 following 13 Cr. L.J. 877=17 Ind. Cas. 813. This section requires that the commitment should not be made till the Magistrate has heard the complainant and taken all such evidence as may be produced in support of the prosecution or on behalf of the accused. Where the original complaint was one under S. 342, I.P.O., and after hearing the evidence for the prosecution, the Magistrate framed a charge under S. 395, I.P.O., and without asking the accused whether they had any evidence, and rejecting the application of the accused to have some witnesses summoned, committed the accused, it was held that the commitment was illegal and should be set aside, 46 A. 137.

Or as may be called for by Magistrate.—Under S. 212, infra, a Magistrate may in his discretion summon and examine any witness named in the list given by the accused under S. 211, infra.

Sub-section (2); right of cross-examination.—This sub-section was introduced in the Code of 1898 probably on account of the suggestion made in 21 C. 642 to the effect that the provision as to cross-examination contained in the Code of 1872 was omitted in the Code of 1892 perhaps through inadvertence. The accused is at liberty to cross examine the witnesses. From the wording of this section it is clear that the intention of the Code was that as each witness was examined he should be then and there cross-examined, re-examined and allowed to go to his home. The Code has consideration for witnesses and their convenience, but this consideration is not always shared by Magistrates, 10 A.L.J. 144 at 147. This section does not confer on the accused the right of reserving the cross-examination until after all the prosecution witnesses have been examined in chief. Probably the true view is if the Magistrate purporting to exercise a discretion had made an order giving leave to reserve the cross-examination of the prosecution witnesses it would have amounted to nothing more than an irregularity which would not have the effect of vitiating the trial, 14 M.L.T. 532=15 Cr. L.J. 29=22 Ind. Cas. 173. Under this section the accused has no right to reserve cross-examination. There is no provision in this chapter similar to that contained in S. 256 (1), infra, and this fact will show that the right to reserve cross-examination do not exist. The accused must exercise his right of cross examination of the prosecution witnesses after the close of the examination in chief and any refusal to allow cross-examination at the close of the prosecution is no error of law which could entitle the accused to quash the commitment had under S. 215, infra 33 C.W.N. 535. There is no provision in this chapter similar to the special provision relating to the trial of warrant cases under Chapter XXI entitling the accused to postpone the cross-examination of the prosecution witnesses till a certain stage but the Magistrate however, has a discretion to do so in suitable cases. He cannot of course throw obstacles in the exercise of the liberty of an accused to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses and when they were not able to do so on account of their not being furnished with copies of the statements made under S. 162, supra, already applied for and ordered to be given to them, he cannot refuse an adjournment, the accused under such circumstances cannot be based to have waived their right and the Magistrate could not take away the right by noting that the accused refused to cross-examine. He is bound to postpone the trial for enabling the accused to cross-examine after getting copies of the statement under S. 162, supra, 6 Pat. 329. In 36 C. 48 it was held that the provisions of S. 347 infra laying down that the Magistrate shall stop further proceedings when he had made up his mind to commit, is not controlled by the provisions of this section, and once he has made up his mind the Magistrate is not bound to allow the accused an opportunity to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses, and call witnesses for his defence. In that case the accused did not cross-examine the prosecution witnesses immediately after examination-in-chief, but applied to the Magistrate at the close of the prosecution to cross-examine them and to examine defence witnesses and the Magistrate's refusal was held justified under S. 347, infra. But the Madras High Court in 36 M. 321 doubled the view taken in the above case as to the applicability of S. 347, which refers to stoppage of proceedings at a trial. But where a Magistrate after drawing up a charge with a view to commit allowed the accused to cross examine the prosecution witnesses and as a result cancelled the charge it was held that the course taken by the Magistrate was proper, 39 C. 895; 5 C.W.N. 110; 1913 M.W.N. 728=14 M.L.T. 200=14 Cr. L.J. 529=21 Ind. Cas. 129.

Sub-section (3).—It is clear that this sub-section must be read subject to the provisions of S. 204 (3), supra. It is mandatory to the extent that it directs the Magistrate to issue process unless he deems it unnecessary to do for reasons to be recorded. This sub-section must be read with the other provisions of the Code. An essential preliminary before process is issued is the payment of the fees and unless the fees are paid no process is to issue as directed by S. 204 (3), supra. The general rule in private prosecutions is that the complainant is to pay the reasonable expenses of the witnesses although it is open to the Local Government under S. 544, infra, to make rules permitting in certain cases the liability to be transferred to the Crown, 3 Luck. 363.

Officer conducting prosecution.—Under S. 495, infra, a Magistrate inquiring into or trying a case may permit the prosecution to be conducted by any person other than a police-officer whose rank is to be fixed by the Local Government. But no person other than the law officers of the Crown such as the Advocate-General, Standing Counsel, Public Prosecutor, Government Solicitor, etc., or other officers, generally or specially empowered by Government shall be entitled to do so without such permission.

Issue of process for production of evidence.—A Magistrate is bound if the complainant or officer conducting the prosecution of the accused applies to him to issue process to compel the attendance of witnesses, and as a matter of consequence to take evidence produced. Here, there is one exception provided by law; the Magistrate can record reasons showing that it is unnecessary to compel attendance of witnesses in question, and can in such a case decline to issue process, 10 A.L.J. 144 at 145-147.
